

Deuteronomy

A Verse-By-Verse Study

By Pastor Charlie Garrett

Copyright 2022, Emlen S. "Charlie" Garrett. All Rights reserved

SuperiorWord.org

(Rev 1)

CONTENTS

(Hyperlinked: Clicking a reference will take you to that location)

Deuteronomy 1:1-4	(An Eleven Days' Journey)	5
Deuteronomy 1:5-8	(Go in and Possess the Land)	23
Deuteronomy 1:9-25	(At the Door, Ready to Enter)	40
Deuteronomy 1:26-33	(The Goer Before You – HE)	61
Deuteronomy 1:34-46	(Many Days in Kadesh).....	79
Deuteronomy 2:1-12	(You Have Skirted This Mountain Long Enough)	99
Deuteronomy 2:13-23	(From the Midst of the Camp).....	118
Deuteronomy 2:24-37	(The Defeat of Sihon, King of Heshbon)	137
Deuteronomy 3:1-11	(The Defeat of Og, King of Bashan)	157
Deuteronomy 3:12-20	(Until the LORD Has Given Rest)	174
Deuteronomy 3:21-29	(Speak No More to Me of This Matter).....	191
Deuteronomy 4:1	(That You May Live).....	210
Deuteronomy 4:2-7	(For Whatever Reason We May Call Upon Him)	229
Deuteronomy 4:8-14	(That They May Teach Their Children)	249
Deuteronomy 4:15-24	(The Form of the Lord).....	268
Deuteronomy 4:25-31	(Seek the Lord Your God).....	289
Deuteronomy 4:32-40	(There Is No Other)	309
Deuteronomy 4:41-49	(On the East Side of the Jordan).....	328
Deuteronomy 5:1-6	(From Bondage to Bondage)	348
Deuteronomy 5:7-16	(Learning Vicariously - Hopefully!, Part I).....	368
Deuteronomy 5:17-22	(Learning Vicariously - Hopefully!, Part II)	389
Deuteronomy 5:23-33	(Now, Therefore, Why Should We Die?).....	410
Deuteronomy 6:1-5	(The Lord Our God, the Lord is One)	429
Deuteronomy 6:6-15	(Beware, Lest You Forget the Lord)	449
Deuteronomy 6:16-25	(Then It Will Be Righteousness for Us).....	468
Deuteronomy 7:1-8	(Because the Lord Loves You).....	487
Deuteronomy 7:9-16	(The Covenant and the Mercy).....	508
Deuteronomy 7:17-26	(The Great and Awesome God).....	528
Deuteronomy 8:1-9	(Man Shall Not Live by Bread Alone)	549
Deuteronomy 8:10-20	(And You Shall Remember the Lord Your God)	569
Deuteronomy 9:1-6	(Not Because of Your Righteousness)	588
Deuteronomy 9:7-17	(And the Mountain Burned with Fire).....	607
Deuteronomy 9:18-29	(Forty Days and Forty Nights Before the Lord).....	624

Deuteronomy 10:1-11	(Two Tablets of Stone Like the First)	644
Deuteronomy 10:12-22	(He Is Your Praise, and He Is Your God)	664
Deuteronomy 11:1-12	(Until You Came to this Place)	683
Deuteronomy 11:13-21	(Like the Days of the Heavens Above the Earth).....	703
Deuteronomy 11:22-32	(The Blessing and the Curse)	722
Deuteronomy 12:1-7	(The Place Where the Lord Your God Chooses, Part I).....	740
Deuteronomy 12:8-19	(The Place Where the Lord Your God Chooses, Part II)	759
Deuteronomy 12:20-32	(You Shall Not Add to It nor Take Away from It).....	781
Deuteronomy 13:1-5	(You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part I).....	802
Deuteronomy 13:6-18	(You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part II)	822
Deuteronomy 14:1, 2	(Sons of the Lord God)	841
Deuteronomy 14:3-21	(A Holy People to the Lord).....	860
Deuteronomy 14:22-29	(The Tithes of Israel)	879
Deuteronomy 15:1-11	(Ha'Shemitah - The Remission).....	900
Deuteronomy 15:12-23	(The Lord Your God Redeemed You).....	921
Deuteronomy 16:1-8	(A Passover to the Lord your God)	938
Deuteronomy 16:9-12	(You Shall Keep the Feast of Weeks)	957
Deuteronomy 16:13-22	(Observe the Feast of Tabernacles)	973
Deuteronomy 17:1-13	(Shall Be Put to Death the Dead)	992
Deuteronomy 17:14-20	(A King Over Israel).....	1010
Deuteronomy 18:1-8	(The Lord is His Inheritance)	1031
Deuteronomy 18:9-14	(An Abomination to the LORD).....	1050
Deuteronomy 18:15-22	(A Prophet Like Moses)	1068
Deuteronomy 19:1-13	(You Shall Prepare to You the Way).....	1086
Deuteronomy 19:14-21	(The False Witness).....	1104
Deuteronomy 20:1-9	(Conduct for War, Part I).....	1122
Deuteronomy 20:10-20	(Conduct for War, Part II)	1141
Deuteronomy 21:1-9	(And Atonement Shall Be Provided).....	1162
Deuteronomy 21:10-17	(The Rights of Wives in Israel)	1182
Deuteronomy 21:18-23	(He Who Is Hanged Is Accursed of God)	1203
Deuteronomy 22:1-12	(That You May Prolong Your Days).....	1224
Deuteronomy 22:13-21	(I Found That She Was Not a Virgin)	1243
Deuteronomy 22:22-30	(You Shall Put Away the Evil).....	1260
Deuteronomy 23:1-14	(Holy Conduct Before the Lord, Part I).....	1279
Deuteronomy 23:15-25	(Holy Conduct Before the Lord, Part II)	1300
Deuteronomy 24:1-4	(A Certificate of Divorce)	1320

Deuteronomy 24:5-22	(Remember What the Lord your God Did)	1343
Deuteronomy 25:1-10	(A Brother in Israel)	1362
Deuteronomy 25:11-19	(You Shall Not Forget).....	1381
Deuteronomy 26:1-11	(The First of the Fruit).....	1398
Deuteronomy 26:12-19	(The Third Year – The Year of Tithing)	1418
Deuteronomy 27:1-10	(An Altar of Stones)	1437
Deuteronomy 27:11-26	(All the Words of This Law)	1456
Deuteronomy 28:1-14	(The Blessings and the Curses, Part I).....	1477
Deuteronomy 28:15-29	(The Blessings and the Curses, Part II)	1498
Deuteronomy 28:30-37	(The Blessings and the Curses, Part III).....	1519
Deuteronomy 28:38-44	(The Blessings and the Curses, Part IV).....	1540
Deuteronomy 28:45-51	(The Blessings and the Curses, Part V)	1560
Deuteronomy 28:52-61	(The Blessings and the Curses, Part VI).....	1578
Deuteronomy 28:62-68	(The Blessings and the Curses, Part VII)	1598
Deuteronomy 29:1-9	(I Have Led You Forty Years in the Wilderness).....	1618
Deuteronomy 29:10-19	(That He May Establish You Today)	1638
Deuteronomy 29:20-29	(The Secret Things)	1657
Deuteronomy 30:1-10	(The Lord Your God Will Circumcise Your Heart).....	1675
Deuteronomy 30:11-20	(For He Is Your Life)	1694
Deuteronomy 31:1-8	(Then Moses Called Joshua)	1713
Deuteronomy 31:9-13	(So Moses Wrote This Law).....	1731
Deuteronomy 31:14-21	(A Witness for Me Against the Children of Israel)	1748
Deuteronomy 31:22-30	(A Witness Against You)	1768
Deuteronomy 32:1-6	(The Song of Moses, Part I)	1786
Deuteronomy 32:7-14	(The Song of Moses, Part II)	1805
Deuteronomy 32:15-22	(The Song of Moses, Part III).....	1826
Deuteronomy 32:23-33	(The Song of Moses, Part IV).....	1845
Deuteronomy 32:34-43	(The Song of Moses, Part V).....	1865
Deuteronomy 32:44-52	(Because You Did Not Hallow Me).....	1886
Deuteronomy 33:1-5	(The Lord Came From Sinai)	1907
Deuteronomy 33:6-11	(Moses Blesses Israel, Part I)	1925
Deuteronomy 33:12-17	(Moses Blesses Israel, Part II).....	1944
Deuteronomy 33:18-22	(Moses Blesses Israel, Part III).....	1962
Deuteronomy 33:23-29	(Moses Blesses Israel, Part IV)	1979
Deuteronomy 34:1-12	(You Shall Not Cross Over There).....	1996

Deuteronomy 1:1-4 (An Eleven Days' Journey)

Today, we enter into our first sermon from the last book of Moses. Before we go even one more thought, it must be stated that the Law of Moses is not an end in and of itself. It is a part of God's unfolding revelation, which – by itself – is incomplete.

Unfortunately, the Jews as a collective whole, still reject some or all of the further revelation of what He has presented to the world. But equally unfortunately, so have many supposed Christians, who bear that title in name only.

The New Testament clearly reveals that the New Covenant has superseded the Old. It is done, it is obsolete, it is set aside, it is annulled, and it is nailed to the cross. Christ fulfilled it, He called out "It is finished," and He died, thus releasing us from the bondage of the law.

However, this does not mean that the law serves no purpose. In fact, without the law, we wouldn't understand our need for grace. A thousand times a thousand points of theology find their basis in the law as well. And, of the Law of Moses, Deuteronomy holds a very special place. Adam Clarke realized this and penned these words to consider–

"The Book of Deuteronomy and the Epistle to the Hebrews contain the best comment on the nature, design, and use of the law; the former may be considered as an evangelical commentary on the four preceding books, in which the spiritual reference and signification of the different parts of the law are given, and given in such a manner as none could give who had not a clear discovery of the glory which was to be revealed. It may be safely asserted that very few parts of the Old Testament Scriptures can be read with greater profit by the genuine Christian than the Book of Deuteronomy."

Clarke spoke of "the glory which was to be revealed." He certainly is referring to Christ Jesus who not only came under this law, but who also gave forth this law, taught this same law to the people of Israel, and who then died in fulfillment of it.

Without knowing Deuteronomy, we cannot appreciate the life of Jesus Christ, nor can we appreciate the things He said and taught to the people He dwelt amongst. And so, as is right and fitting, we begin our trek today through this marvelous piece of literature known as Deuteronomy.

Text Verse: *“The words of the wise are like goads, and the words of scholars are like well-driven nails, given by one Shepherd. ¹² And further, my son, be admonished by these. Of making many books there is no end, and much study is wearisome to the flesh. ¹³ Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter:
Fear God and keep His commandments, For this is man’s all.
¹⁴ For God will bring every work into judgment,
Including every secret thing,
Whether good or evil.” Ecclesiastes 12:11-14*

I chose these words for our text verse because they speak of goads, used to prod us along into an understanding of what God intends for us. In a few minutes, you will hear about a nice pattern which includes the thought of goads in it. The two fit together so well that it seemed natural to cite Solomon here.

He says that we are to “Fear God and keep His commandments.” Unfortunately, people take verses like that, and others from the New Testament, and they misapply them to the Christian. Such is an error in theology – a serious and eternity-changing error.

We are to understand all things revealed in the Bible in their intended context. In properly understanding God’s dispensations, and in applying verses in the context of those dispensations, we won’t be led down the wrong path concerning what commandments we are to be obedient to, and what it means for us when we fail to do so.

Let us be sure to take the book of Deuteronomy in its intended context. It is a part of the tutoring mankind needs in order to be brought to that marvelous Gift of grace which is found in Jesus Christ our Lord. And believe it or not, that is even revealed in the book of Deuteronomy itself.

The very book which proclaims the laws for Israel, also gives us hints and pictures of its own fulfillment and ending. Marvelous, isn’t it! It’s all to be found in His superior word. And so, let’s turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. An Introduction

The book of Deuteronomy is the fifth book of the Law of Moses and of the Holy Bible. Its Hebrew name is derived from the first words of the book, elleh ha’devarim, which literally means “These are the words.” However, it is generally simply called Devarim, or “Words.”

In Hebrew, the word consists of the letters dalet, beit, resh, yod, and mem which numerically equal 256. This is numerically the same as the Hebrew word, dorbon, or goad, that is a word used by Solomon as he closes out the book of Ecclesiastes, as we saw in our text verse today –

“The words of the wise are like goads, and the words of scholars are like well-driven nails, given by one Shepherd.” Ecclesiastes 12:11

Therefore, we would be wise to use the book of Deuteronomy to goad us into a better understanding of God’s wonderful story of redemption as it points to the Person and work of Christ.

It is also the same numerical value as the name Amariah, or “Yah Said.” As this book is a recounting of the words of the Lord, that is a most apt description of the book’s contents. It is also the numerical value of the phrases l’olam v’ed, or “forever and ever” which is commonly found in Scripture; and hittiv mealelim, or “to make one’s actions good.”

Both of these in Hebrew have a numerical value of 256. The law stands forever and ever as a witness against man, but one’s actions can be made good through the fulfillment of this law by Another, if that imputation is accepted. Christ fulfilled it, and we can be granted His righteousness through an act of faith.

As far as the dating of Deuteronomy, there is dispute as to when this, along with the other 4 books of Moses, was written. However, the conservative and traditional dating can be figured based on when Solomon’s Temple was built. By tracing back from that day as stated in 1 Kings 6:1, which indicates 480 years from the Exodus, we can assert with relative confidence that it was penned in the year 1405 BC.

The Exodus occurred in the year 2514 Anno Mundi. This is now the ending of the fortieth year since the Exodus, as is noted in Deuteronomy 1:3. Therefore, it is recorded in the 11th month of the year 2554 Anno Mundi.

The timeframe for the writing of the book goes from the 1st day of the 11th month of the 40th year (Deuteronomy 1:3) until maybe as late as sometime in the twelfth month. This is certain because at the death of Moses, it says that Israel mourned for him for thirty days (Deuteronomy 34:8). After that, the first recorded date in the book of Joshua is the 10th day of the 1st month of the 41st year.

A period of at least three (or more) days preceded that, as is recorded in Joshua 1 & 2. Therefore, Moses died no later than the 7th day of the 12th month of the 40th year, possibly earlier. As his death is recorded in Deuteronomy, the book took five weeks, or less, to be spoken out and recorded. However, the final note that the people mourned for Moses for thirty days must be added to that to complete the narrative.

The English name for the book is derived from the Greek name given to it from the words deuteros and nomos, or literally, “second law.” This Greek title surely means “a copy” or “a repetition,” rather than the actual etymological sense of “a second law,” meaning something different. The English name then comes from the Latin Vulgate translation out of the Greek which says Deuteronomium.

However, both of these ideas spring from Deuteronomy 17:18. In that verse, the king of Israel is commanded to write down his own copy of this law. There, the Hebrew reads, mishneh ha’torah, meaning a copy or double of the law. The Greek translation of that then says deuteronomion, meaning “this second law,” and thus, “a copy of this law.”

As far as a historical context, the book is given as a reiteration and expansion on the words given by the Lord at Sinai. There are recountings of the events which occurred in the wilderness, and which led the people to their time of punishment for having rejected the Lord. There is also the speaking forth of the commandments of the Lord to the people, imploring them to stand fast on the law and to not deviate from it.

The final four chapters of Deuteronomy include the passing of Moses’ authority from him to Joshua, the next leader of the people of Israel. This is followed by the second Song of Moses, the first having come after the crossing of the Red Sea. And, also found there is the blessing of Moses upon the tribes of Israel. And finally, there is the record of the death of Israel’s great lawgiver upon Mount Nebo, outside of the Land of Promise.

There are, obviously, challenges to the authorship of the book. However, the book ascribes the words to Moses in its first verse. Numerous Old Testament passages ascribe the writings of the books of Moses to Moses, and – more importantly – Jesus cites the words of Deuteronomy and attributes them to Moses. For example, Jesus cites Deuteronomy 24 in this manner –

They said to Him, “Why then did Moses command to give a certificate of divorce, and to put her away?”

⁸ He said to them, “Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, permitted you to divorce your wives, but from the beginning it was not so. ⁹ And I say to you, whoever divorces his wife, except for sexual immorality, and marries another, commits adultery; and whoever marries her who is divorced commits adultery.”

ˆMatthew 19:7-9

One must dismiss the words of the Lord Jesus in order to state that Moses was not the author. In doing so, then, all of His words become suspect. The same is true with Paul, who attributes Deuteronomy to Moses in Romans 10:19, and in 1 Corinthians 9:9. Rather, Moses is unquestionably the author of all five books attributed to him.

The location of the writing of the book is outside of the Land of Promise, in the plains of Moab, just across from Jericho – right where the book of Numbers left off. Here, in that location, Moses makes his heartfelt appeal to the people concerning the law he had received and passed on to them.

Rather than statements of law coming directly from the Lord, the words here are generally commandments and admonitions from Moses concerning that same law. For example, in Leviticus 26, a passage which details the blessings and curses which Israel could expect for adherence to the law, the words are in the first person, from the Lord Himself, “I will.”

However, in the parallel passage found in Deuteronomy 28, they are spoken by Moses in the third person, “The Lord will.” Moses is confirming that what the Lord said will, in fact, come to pass. All of the blessings and joy, and all of the curses and horror, that were spoken out to their fathers still apply, even after they had all perished.

Concerning a redemptive context, Deuteronomy is a part of the Law of Moses. It is a law which has, thus far, been filled with pictures of Christ, including His cross. Malachi 4 will state –

“Remember the Law of Moses, My servant,
Which I commanded him in Horeb for all Israel,
With the statutes and judgments.

⁵ Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet
Before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the LORD.

⁶ And he will turn

The hearts of the fathers to the children,
And the hearts of the children to their fathers,
Lest I come and strike the earth with a curse.” Malachi 4:4-6

The important thing to remember is that the law of Moses anticipated the coming of Messiah. The prophets continued to call out this fact, and through Jeremiah came the promise of a New Covenant. In the call of Malachi to “Remember the Law of Moses,” it was a call to remember what Moses himself anticipated – Messiah. Deuteronomy is no different.

In Deuteronomy 18, Moses anticipated Another who would come in a manner similar to himself, meaning a Prophet who would also be the instrument through which a covenant would be enacted –

“I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their brethren, and will put My words in His mouth, and He shall speak to them all that I command Him. ¹⁹ And it shall be that whoever will not hear My words, which He speaks in My name, I will require it of him.” Deuteronomy 18:18, 19

This is not an unreasonable analysis. Rather, it is exactly what the people of Israel anticipated as they cited the substance of these words when questioning John the Baptist, “Are you the Prophet?” (John 1:21). In other words, Deuteronomy, and the laws contained in it, were anticipatory of Christ.

Paul explains this in Galatians where he notes that the law was a tutor to lead the people of Israel to Christ, the embodiment and fulfillment of this law. The impossibility of the people of Israel to live by the words of Moses is highlighted time and again in Scripture. They – based on the words of Moses – became an object lesson to the people of the world of our desperate need for the righteousness of Christ.

But the Law of Moses itself, and indeed that which is highlighted in Deuteronomy, includes the doctrine of eternal salvation. Corporate Israel, being used as a template for individuals in Christ, is promised to endure despite their infractions of the law. The punishments and curses are inevitable, but the promise of faithfully being kept as a people is highlighted. God will never forsake those whom He has covenanted with.

Although there are several key thoughts and verses in the book, probably the main thought upon which all others hinge is found in Chapter 30 where it says –

“I call heaven and earth as witnesses today against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life, that both you and your descendants may live; ²⁰ that you may love the LORD your God, that you may obey His voice, and that you may cling to Him, for He is your life and the length of your days; and that you may dwell in the land which the LORD swore to your fathers, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give them.” Deuteronomy 30:19, 20

The failure of the people to do what is said there set the tone for all of Israel’s history, and it defines the mercy of the Lord in both preserving Israel, and in sending the Messiah to accomplish that which they could not do.

The first book of Moses, Genesis, looked to the work of God the Father through Christ in creation – directing that creation in the initial process of redemption.

The second book of Moses, Exodus, then looked to the work of God the Son in Christ in the actual redemptive process, mirroring His own work countless times.

The third book of Moses, Leviticus, highlighted the work of the Holy Spirit applying the purification and sanctification of Christ to the people of God.

The fourth book of Moses, Numbers, highlighted the crucified Savior who rose to lead His people in the wilderness of their lives, ever faithful to bring them along the path of life, difficult as it may be, and despite their faithlessness along the way.

This fifth and final book of Moses, will highlight the deeds of the Savior who fulfilled the laws which the people will be unable to meet. The infection is too deep, the sin is too prevalent in them, and without Messiah, there is simply no hope. But five is the number of grace.

Deuteronomy, though being a book of law, something which excludes grace – if taken in the context of Christ Jesus – is a book which literally exudes it. The grace of God is found in the thought that, “I have revealed to you My standard. Your history will bear out the fact that you cannot meet it. And so, I will meet it for you. I offer you the grace of the fulfillment of it in My Son.”

In all five books of Moses, it is Christ, the anticipated Son of God, who is on prominent display. Nothing is more obvious, and in a thousand different ways this should be evident. When the book of Deuteronomy is complete, the Person and work of Jesus Christ will stand as a testimony to God's healing of His people through this law. Not in their accomplishment of it, but in His.

If we were to sum up the book of Deuteronomy with a single thought which carries us from Numbers and then into the continued life of Israel, it would be that "The Lord has given His standard to His people, and despite our failure to meet that standard, the grace of God found in Jesus Christ meets it for us."

And that thought brings us to our final words of this introduction. Though a Prophet was promised by God and anticipated by the people, this is not the highest Christological anticipation and expression to be found in Deuteronomy. Rather, that is found in these words –

"If a man has committed a sin deserving of death, and he is put to death, and you hang him on a tree, ²³ his body shall not remain overnight on the tree, but you shall surely bury him that day, so that you do not defile the land which the LORD your God is giving you as an inheritance; for he who is hanged is accursed of God." Deuteronomy 21:22, 23

Paul cites those words in Galatians and ascribes them to Jesus –

"Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us (for it is written, 'Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree'), ¹⁴ that the blessing of Abraham might come upon the Gentiles in Christ Jesus, that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." Galatians 3:13, 14

The law brings a curse, and Christ fulfilled that law, even becoming a curse for His people. The grace of God is the performance of this law by His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life.

*A new book to study, seeking out its veins of gold
A new adventure as we seek the Lord's face
Thirty-four chapters set before us, ready to unfold
Lessons for all people, in every generation and every place*

*What is in store for us as we begin our trek?
Deuteronomy seems so vast and complicated at this time
Will we have a headache even down to our neck?
Or will the book come to seem glorious and sublime?*

*Open our eyes, O Lord, to what lies ahead
Direct the understanding of our eyes and our heart
This is what we petition; looking to be fed
This is what we ask for, today as we start*

*Show us the riches of Christ in this new book
Be with us as we open it, and for its treasures we look*

II. And Moses Spoke (verses 1-4)

The first four verses of Deuteronomy are a form of introduction, giving information concerning the author, the intended recipient, the location, a detailed record of how they came to be here, a note concerning the state of the recipient – meaning an indictment upon Israel – the dating, and the events which immediately preceded the now-to-be introduced account.

¹These are the words which Moses spoke elleh ha'devarim asher dibber Moshe – “These the words which spoke Moses.” As we saw in the introduction, the second word, devarim, or “words,” is the Hebrew name of the book of Deuteronomy.

What is explicit is that the book claims to contain the very words of Moses, not something penned hundreds of years, or even a millennium later – as is claimed by revisionist “scholars.” Moses spoke out these words, and they were recorded at the time he spoke them out.

Also, the statement, “These are the words,” are used to make an attachment of this book to the previous books. It is a continuation of the narrative which began in Genesis and now moves forward in time.

Moses, or “He who draws out,” pictures Christ who draws out the words of the Father, as He said in John 14:24, “He who does not love Me does not keep My words; and the word which you hear is not Mine but the Father’s who sent Me.”

¹ (con’t) to all Israel

el kal Yisrael – “to all Israel.” The recipient is Israel collectively. Though they may have only been spoken to a scribe who penned them, or to a group of leaders who sat as he spoke, the intent is that they are meant for the ears, understanding, and action of the collective whole.

The importance of this is that despite the punishment of the fathers, all who died in the wilderness with the exception of Joshua and Caleb, the collective whole remained as one and was gathered together before their lawgiver.

As the wilderness wanderings clearly reflected the years of punishment and exile that Israel faced after the coming of Messiah, this is a note of the faithfulness of the Lord to keep Israel collectively united as a people, and to bring them to the point where they will, in fact, collectively enter into God's promised rest.

1 (con't) on this side of the Jordan

b'ever ha'yarden– “in side the Jordan.” The reference, as always, is from Canaan. Therefore, it should read, “on the other side of the Jordan,” or at best “on the side of the Jordan.”

ha'yarden, or “the Descender,” is a picture of Christ who descended from heaven to the lowest parts of the earth – just as the Jordan descends from the snowy heights of Hermon to the salted water of the Dead Sea. In the first verse of the book, there are already anticipatory pictures of Christ for us to taste and appreciate.

1 (con't) in the wilderness,

bamidbar – in the wilderness. Here begins a parenthetical thought. This is not speaking of the area where Moses and Israel now are. Rather, it is speaking of where they have been before getting here. In the Bible, the wilderness signifies an uncultivated area, not specifically a barren desert. It is a place of God's grace and of closeness to God, but it is also a place of testing.

For some, such as Israel, the testing resulted in disobedience. For others, such as when Christ was tested, it is a place of fellowship through obedience. The wilderness and the law are closely connected because it is by law that testing is accomplished.

1 (con't) in the plain opposite Suph, ba'aravah mol suph – in plain opposite Suph. The names which are now mentioned are indeed perplexing. Israel is in the same location where Numbers ended, and yet the description is entirely different. Further, Deuteronomy 4 provides a completely different description of this same spot, saying –

“Now this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel. ⁴⁵ These are the testimonies, the statutes, and the judgments which Moses spoke to the children of Israel after they came out of Egypt, ⁴⁶ on this side of the Jordan, in the valley opposite Beth Peor, in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel defeated after they came out of Egypt.” Deuteronomy 4:44-46

Therefore, the names which are given have two possibilities. The first is that they are unknown locations in the area Israel is now at. Or, they are a summary of what has occurred over the past 38 years.

The latter is certainly correct. As with the term “in the wilderness,” everything here mentioned does not tie in with the location where Moses and Israel are now. Rather, it ties in with where they have been. Thus, it forms a map which is then explained in verse 3.

This may be confusing, but it is showing the results of Israel’s rejection of Christ. The names ask for us to consider them. The word “plain” is aravah, coming from arav, to darken. It is identical with arav, meaning a pledge or surety. The name Suph means, “reed.” However, it comes from the verb suph, signifying to come to an end, or cease. This an abbreviated form which is referring to yam suph, or the Red Sea.

^{1 (con’t)} between Paran, Tophel, Laban, Hazeroth, and Dizahab.

ben paran u-ben tophel, v’lavan, v’khatseroth, v’di zahav – There are two things being said, not one. It reads, “1) between Paran, and 2) between Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Di-Zahav.”

Paran was the first main stop after leaving Sinai, as was recorded in Numbers 10:12. Paran comes from the same root as porah, meaning a branch. But the idea from which it comes is that of ornamentation. That is found in the root of both words, paar, signifying to beautify or glorify. Thus, it means “Glorious.”

It was there, back in that area, that the Lord had deposited His covenant law, a law which Paul calls “glorious” in 2 Corinthians 3. Paran was named in anticipation of Messiah where the Lord would once again deposit a New Covenant in human form in the Person of Jesus Christ.

Tophel is found only here in Scripture. It comes from taphel, meaning whitewash, and thus it conveys the sense of being foolish. In Matthew, Jesus equated the scribes and Pharisees as whitewashed tombs, and in Acts, Paul called the high priest a whitewashed wall. Both give the sense of the law being used as a pretense.

Laban comes from lavan, meaning white, but that comes from a word which signifies a brick, because bricks whiten as they are fired. The word has consistently pictured works.

Hazereth means villages, and it implies a place of many people. It was seen in Numbers 11:35. And finally, Di-Zahab is actually two words which signify “Abounding in Gold.” It is only seen this one time in the Bible. Gold usually gives the imagery of the divine, of the eternal nature of things, and holiness. However, here it carries another signification.

And so, we have six named places which are given to draw a map of the plain which Israel trekked on their way to Canaan, but which is recorded in reverse. Paran, or Glorious, is on one side to their right, and the other locations are on the other side, to their left. All of this is said to be opposite Suph, meaning opposite the Red Sea.

The Red Sea of this verse, and Mount Seir of the next verse, are both stated together in verse 2:1. Therefore, there must be a picture being given.

Before Israel enters the recounting of the law, a recounting of what occurred before they arrived at their current location will take place. “In the wilderness” is speaking of their time after leaving Sinai. The wilderness signifies a place of God’s grace and yet of testing. It is in the plain, a place of pledge or surety. They will reach their goal, even if there is an extended delay before it comes.

It is opposite Suph, the place of ceasing, or the end, which speaks of the end of their bondage in Egypt. Mentioning this was to call to mind recollections of the bondage from which they had been redeemed. And, it is between Paran, or “glorious,” and between “whitewash,” “works,” “villages,” and “abounding in gold.”

Everything looks to the nature of the law and how it is contrasted. On one side is the glory of Christ, who fulfilled the law – signified by entrance into Canaan, and on the other side is the futility of returning to the law instead of towards Christ.

Either one can use the law in a negative way, or in a positive way. If one uses the law as a personal means to an end, as Israel did, then there is only futility. But if one uses the law as a means of learning and having it lead to Christ – who embodies the law – then there will be reward. The law doesn't change either way, but the destiny of the person does, based on how he uses it.

In other words, what the specificity of all of the locations and geographical descriptions is pointing to is the need for Christ, the only One who was able to do the works of the law. It is trust in Him and His works – and only that – which can satisfy.

The final place mentioned, Di-Zahab, or “Abounding in Gold,” is actually the starting point. The locations to the left of Israel work backward in direction, as if Israel is turning from the Lord and back to the law. It takes the reader back to Sinai where the people worshipped the golden calf.

At that time, Moses took the calf, crushed it to powder and threw it into the brook that came down from the mountain. There he made the people drink of the water which bore the sin of their idolatry. Hence, the place was “abounding in gold,” as the name implies.

As one can see, Paran to the right looks to the promise of Christ. While Tophel, Laban, Hazeroth, and Dizahab to the left look to life under the law and apart from Christ. The indictment for rejecting Christ is next seen...

² It is eleven days' journey from Horeb by way of Mount Seir to Kadesh Barnea.

Distances are computed based on how long they take to travel. Here, following the path – which was just described by Moses – under normal conditions, Moses shows that it would take eleven days to go from Horeb, meaning Mt. Sinai, to Kadesh Barnea.

Horeb means “Arid” or “Desert” which, interestingly, is similar to Zion, the mountain of God, which in one sense means “Dry Place.” It is the main name that will be used throughout the book of Deuteronomy. Horeb will be used 9 times, while “Mount Sinai” will be used only once.

The words of this verse may indeed mean that Israel actually only traveled for eleven days in the stops that are recorded in the Numbers account. Kadesh Barnea is the last stop before entering into the Land of Promise on that route.

It is the very spot where the spies returned and gave a bad report, and it is the place where Israel rejected the Lord and they were sentenced to wander until all that generation was dead.

A journey which would normally take eleven days, after which one would step into the Land of Promise, thus, turned into thirty-eight years. The words are recorded by Moses as a caustic indictment upon Israel for their faithlessness in rejecting the Lord. As for the number 11, Bullinger defines it saying –

“If ten is the number which marks the perfection of Divine order, then eleven is an addition to it, subversive of and undoing that order. If twelve is the number which marks the perfection of Divine government, then eleven falls short of it. So that whether we regard it as being $10 + 1$, or $12 - 1$, it is the number which marks, disorder, disorganization, imperfection, and disintegration.” EW Bullinger

If Israel had simply believed the Lord and trusted His word, on the twelfth day, they would have walked into the land and begun to subdue it. And such is true with Israel when they rejected Christ. If they had simply believed the word and received their Savior, they would have entered the promise. Instead, they found 2000 years of disorder, disorganization, imperfection, and disintegration.

As far as the term, derek har Seir, or “way of Mount Seir,” that doesn’t mean they traveled via “Mount Seir,” but rather, “which leads to Mount Seir.” I note that to avoid any confusion because, otherwise, the map of travels would make no sense.

Seir comes from sear, or hair. Hair represents awareness. Man is a cognitive being and Israel should have been aware of both the presence and the power of the Lord, but they rejected both and suffered because of it.

Here, the name Sinai is changed to Horeb, or Khorev. It means “Arid” or “Desert.” Kadesh Barnea is given its full name here. It means “Holy purifying wanderings.”

The people could have been purified and ready for entrance into Canaan, but in their rejection of the Lord, they entered into thirty-eight years of holy purifying wanderings. And all of that time, they were within only a few miles of the inheritance.

One can see that despite the past two thousand years of Israel’s rejection of Christ, they have been, literally, within a step of Him. All that any Jew needed to do was turn and call out and He would have heard.

For Israel by the Jordan, now that those years of wandering were ended, they were to be schooled, once again, in the law which was to be their guide in Canaan.

³ Now it came to pass in the fortieth year,

These words go back to before the parenthetical thought which began in verse 1. Moses is said to have spoken to Israel on the side of the Jordan. After that, came that parenthesis, and now the narrative resumes.

This is an especially notable year for the people, because it was explained to them in advance how long they would be under punishment. That was recorded in Numbers 14:34, 35 –

“According to the number of the days in which you spied out the land, forty days, for each day you shall bear your guilt one year, namely forty years, and you shall know My rejection. ³⁵ I the LORD have spoken this. I will surely do so to all this evil congregation who are gathered together against Me. In this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.”

The Lord graciously counted the first year and two months – from the Exodus and the time at Sinai – into the total. This is also the year that Aaron died, on the 1st day of the 5th month. And, it will be the year of Moses’ death.

^{3 (con’t)} in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month,

This is the Hebrew month Shevet which is in the January/February timeframe. As Israel left Egypt on the 15th day of the first month, the expectation, if Israel is to take the Lord literally – as they should – is that they should pass into Canaan, the Land of Promise, in just about two months from this date. For now, it is said...

^{3 (con’t)} that Moses spoke to the children of Israel according to all that the LORD had given him as commandments to them,

This then begins the formal words which explain the purpose of Deuteronomy, even if those words have not yet begun. Moses will restate and expand upon what was previously instructed.

The words, though from Moses, are divinely inspired, and they both complement what has been received, and they bear the full weight and authority of what was directly spoken by the Lord. Jesus, Paul, and the author of Hebrews all show that the Law of Moses is a unified whole and is to be taken as such. Before entering into that discourse, however, one more point of detail is given. It is that...

⁴ after he had killed Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon,

The “he” here is debated as to whether it is speaking of Moses or the Lord. Either way, the Lord led Moses, Moses led Israel, and Israel was the Lord’s instrument of battle. Therefore, ultimately, it is the Lord who accomplished the feat. This is noted elsewhere as such in Deuteronomy.

It is also repeated by the Gibeonites in Joshua 11, by Nehemiah in Nehemiah 9, and it is stated by the psalmist in Psalm 135 and again in Psalm 136. It is the Lord who provides the victory.

The battle against Sihon is recorded in Numbers 21:21-31. Here, like Numbers 21, it explicitly says that Sihon dwelt in Heshbon. This is important to note because of what it also says there –

“For Heshbon was the city of Sihon king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and had taken all his land from his hand as far as the Arnon.” Numbers 21:26

As noted, when we were in that chapter, Heshbon once belonged to Moab, but it was acquired by Sihon during a battle with them. This included all of the land up to the Arnon itself. Thus, it was not improper for Israel to take possession of that land.

The rule of war is that land lost in a battle which one has initiated is no longer theirs. Instead, it transferred to Sihon, and from Sihon it transferred to Israel. Neither Moab nor Ammon require explanation or payment for this transfer. But this land will become a point of contention at the time of the Judges, and Jephthah will recount what occurred here to defend Israel’s rights to it.

⁴ (fin) and Og king of Bashan, who dwelt at Ashtaroth in Edrei.

The battle against Og is recorded in Numbers 21 as well. The name Edrei refers to the place where Og was slain, not where he lived. That is recorded in Numbers 21 –

“And they turned and went up by the way to Bashan. So Og king of Bashan went out against them, he and all his people, to battle at Edrei. ³⁴ Then the LORD said to Moses, “Do not fear him, for I have delivered him into your hand, with all his people and his land; and you shall do to him as you did to Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon.” ³⁵ So they defeated him, his sons, and all his people, until there was no survivor left him; and they took possession of his land.”

-Numbers 21:33-35

The reason for including these two battles is to show that the Lord, not Moses, is the true leader of Israel. Though Moses will soon be dead, the instructions he is now to give are from the Lord, and the battles which brought them safely to this place were also won by the Lord. These battles will be recounted in the first two chapters.

The Lord led Israel all the way through their time of punishment, preserving them despite their rejection of Him. He then defeated any enemies that could have potentially stopped them from entry into the promise.

No obstacles at all remained, and all they have to do is to listen to the words of the Lord, accept them in light of Christ’s fulfillment of them, and then put the law behind them, signified by the coming death of Moses. From there, they will be prepared to advance through the Descender, meaning Christ, and receive their inheritance.

Though these things are yet future for Israel, they are sure to come about. The book is written, and it shall come to pass. Until then, God has been working out salvation on an individual basis for both Jew and Gentile.

It is offered through what these many types and pictures look forward to – Jesus Christ. It is He who can bring the weary soul to its place of rest, and it is offered through a simple act of faith. In faith we receive His accomplished work, and in faith we will be carried through to our meeting with Him some wonderful day.

As this is so, have faith. Call on Christ and be reconciled to God through Him.

Closing Verse: “For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, ‘Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.’ ¹¹ But that no one is justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for ‘the just shall live by faith.’ ¹² Yet the law is not of faith, but ‘the man who does them shall live by them.’” Galatians 3:10-12

Next Week: Deuteronomy 1:5-8 Something they were to do, but which they rejected out of hand... (Go in and Possess the Land) (2nd Deuteronomy sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

An Eleven Days' Journey

These are the words which Moses spoke to all Israel
On this side of the Jordan (in the wilderness
In the plain opposite Suph
Between Paran, Tophel, Laban, Hazereth, and Dizahab)
-----is where he made his address

It is eleven days journey from Horeb, as we now know
By way of Mount Seir to Kadesh Barnea, is how to go

Now it came to pass in the fortieth year
In the eleventh month, on the month's first day
That Moses spoke to the children of Israel
According to all that the LORD had given him
-----as commandments to them, as to them He did say

After he had killed Sihon king of the Amorites
Who dwelt in Heshbon, and Og king of Bashan, as well
Who dwelt at Ashtaroth in Edrei
On this side of the Jordan in the land of Moab, east of Israel

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 1:5-8 (Go in and Possess the Land)

Today, Moses will begin his words to Israel concerning what lies ahead. He will repeat the words of the Lord saying, “See, I have set the land before you; go in and possess the land which the LORD swore to your fathers—to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—to give to them and their descendants after them.”

The promise lies ahead, but what exactly is the promise? Is it the land of Canaan? Surely, the Lord promised the land, and He swore to them on oath that they would receive it. However, is that the sum of the promise? Or is there more? The land of Canaan is a small piece of land in the middle of a big world filled with land and people. If that was all there was to the promise, it would be a bit lacking.

Rather, other things are promised in Scripture which extend beyond the borders of Canaan. The New Jerusalem, for example, is rather large. My friend Kathleen emailed me a joke concerning it some time ago –

“A man who lives in the New Jerusalem comes home from work and says to his wife, “I had to go to a meeting across town today. Boy am I beat!”

Overlooking any theological errors in that, it still gets the point across. Canaan is about the size of a very small postage stamp on a very large box in comparison to New Jerusalem.

Text Verse: “Remember the Law of Moses, My servant, Which I commanded him in Horeb for all Israel, With the statutes and judgments.” Malachi 4:4

Moses is sitting on one side of the Jordan, and he is compiling words which are to become a part of the Law of Moses. But they are only a part of that law. Malachi speaks of Horeb. That is not where Moses is now. Thus, the words here are an extension of that law, but not the whole law.

Israel was admonished to “Remember the Law of Moses.” What does that mean? Were they expected to exactly follow every precept without fail? Well, yes. But there is more to the Law of Moses than rote observance of the laws, statutes, and judgments contained within it.

We will see this, and we will continue to see this, as we progress through this marvelous book of Law and of Anticipation. Great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Turn and Take Your Journey (verses 5-7)

⁵ On this side of the Jordan in the land of Moab,

Beginning our verses, the immediate thought is given to specify where the narrative is taking place. It is in the same place where the book of Numbers ended, b'ever ha'yarden b'erez moav – “in side the Jordan in land Moab.”

The Christological picture must be presented. Moses is the lawgiver, the land of promise anticipates the place of God's rest – meaning a restored paradise, or – as we say – heaven. The Jordan, or the Descender, pictures Christ who descended from heaven to earth. Moab means “From Father.”

As the lawgiver, representing the law, is outside of the Land of Promise, and as he will remain there, it signifies that the law can only bring one to the Lord Jesus, but one must go through the Lord, who is From Father – meaning He is the Son of God – in order to enter into God's promised rest.

The law, as Paul says in Galatians, is a tool which is given to lead man to Christ –

“Is the law then against the promises of God? Certainly not! For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law. ²² But the Scripture has confined all under sin, that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. ²³ But before faith came, we were kept under guard by the law, kept for the faith which would afterward be revealed. ²⁴ Therefore the law was our tutor to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. ²⁵ But after faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor.”

-Galatians 3:21-25

With this understanding...

⁵ (con't) Moses began

hoil moshe – “ventured Moses.” It is a rather rare word, yaal, having been used only three times so far. When Abraham was speaking to the Lord concerning the destruction of Sodom, knowing that Lot was there and desiring to save his life, he used this word twice. For example, in Genesis 18:27, it said –

“Then Abraham answered and said, ‘Indeed now, I who am but dust and ashes have taken it upon myself to speak to the Lord:’” Genesis 18:27

This word, yaal, comes from a primitive root and gives the sense of undertaking something as an act of volition. Moses has voluntarily begun to speak out his words to the people of Israel. In this, it is specifically...

^{5 (con’t)} to explain this law, saying, beer eth ha’torah ha’zot lemor – “Making distinct the law, the this, saying...” The words are very specific and direct, beginning with a new and rare word, baar. It is a verb meaning to make distinct or plain. It also comes from a primitive root which signifies to dig, and so by analogy it means to engrave.

Figuratively then, it may mean to explain distinctly. However, it is only used two other times, in Deuteronomy 27:8, and in Habakkuk 2:2. Citing those two times will reveal the intent of the word –

“And you shall write very plainly on the stones all the words of this law.”

-Deuteronomy 27:8

“Then the LORD answered me and said:

‘Write the vision

And make it plain on tablets,

That he may run who reads it.’” Habakkuk 2:2

Though it may be that this is simply referring to audible words, distinctly spoken, it is more probable that whether speaking or not, he is very specifically annotating the words of the law. This is what Luke said he was doing in Luke 1:1-4, and it is what Peter said he was doing in 2 Peter 1:15 while writing out his second epistle.

The fact that Moses is making the words distinct indicates that the words already exist. When one inscribes a tablet with words, it is because the words are there already and are simply being transcribed from either another document or from the mind, or so on.

The common scholarly sentiment that is drawn from Moses' words are similar to that of the Pulpit Commentary –

“This exposition of the Law was designed specially for the sake of those who, at the time the Law was first promulgated, either were not born or were incapable of understanding it (Grotius). The expression used by Moses plainly indicates that this book was not intended to furnish a second code of laws different from the former, but simply to explain and enforce what had before been enjoined.” Pulpit Commentary

Though this may be correct to some extent, the fact is that there are many things in Deuteronomy which are not found in the first four books of Moses. Though this may not be a second law, it goes beyond the substance of what has thus far been given.

And further, it is apparent that the first books of Moses were recorded. There are several times where it explicitly says Moses wrote down certain things. Further, the fact that we have the first four books of Moses, and which Jesus and the apostles state are divinely inspired words, it is clear that what is presented in Deuteronomy is more than just an explanation and enforcement of that which had already been given.

Rather, it is both a reiteration and a continuation of the books of Moses. As noted with the use of the word baar, the words already existed, but this does not necessarily mean that they are a repetition of words that are already recorded. Nor can it mean that, merely because of the additions and variations of what will be presented.

Rather, there is an imposition of the will of the Lord upon Moses to write out the words of this book. Moses felt that will, and he ventured to write it out. In other words, this book is given as a true prophetic utterance by the Lord through Moses.

Unlike the countless other times where it says, “And the Lord spoke to Moses saying,” this is a word given not “to” Moses, but “through” Moses. It then may be similar to Genesis, which is clearly ascribed to Moses, but which does not contain the words, “And the Lord spoke to Moses saying.”

What will be presented is in the first person, and yet it is the word of the Lord. Therefore, it is a book of prophecy in its most profound sense as it continues the presentation of the mind of the Lord which began with the words, “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.” This continuation now says...

⁶“The LORD our God

Yehovah elohenu – “Yehovah our God.” The term speaks of the covenant which united Israel with Yehovah. Though they had been under covenant curses for the past many years for disobeying the Lord, they were still the Lord’s people.

The picture of those years, that of Israel’s second exile and the 2000 years of living under the covenant curses, is exactly the same. The Lord never rejected them, as replacement theologians arrogantly state.

Rather, they were, and they are, in union with Yehovah because of the unbreakable covenant promises He made to them. Their violation of the covenant in no way negates His faithfulness to it.

⁶ (con’t) spoke to us in Horeb, saying:

As noted last week, Horeb means “Arid” or “Desert.” The importance of this change of the name from Mt. Sinai to Horeb takes us all the way back to a commentary from Exodus 3. In Deuteronomy 1:1, it mentioned the midbar, or wilderness. Here in this verse it mentions that God dabar, or spoke, to Israel in Horeb.

The word midbar, or desert, is related to the word dabar, or spoke. The term “Mt. Sinai” consistently spoke in picture of the cross of Christ. Israel had rejected Christ’s work and was driven into the midbar, or wilderness. Now, Moses relays what the Lord spoke, or dabar, to Israel all the way back at Horeb, or “Arid.”

With this understanding, we can return to the comments made in Exodus 3. There we noted that Abarim states the following concerning these words –

"These two root-verbs are really quite adjacent in Hebrew thought. Note that the word מדבר (midbar) means wilderness (or desert), and the related verb דבר (dabar) means to speak. When Paul augments Isaiah's spiritual armor, he adds the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God ... Words commonly protrude from one’s mouth, and the mouth is typically a wet place, not a dry place. But it should be noted that the Meribah incident occurred at Horeb (Exodus 17:6), “Behold, I will stand before you there on the rock at Horeb, and you shall strike the rock, and water will come out of it, that the people may drink.” Abarim

As can be seen, Moses used the name Horeb, or “Arid,” in Exodus 17. It may seem curious that the place where God is would be defined this way, but what is it that gives life? Water.

The Word of God proceeds from the wet place, the mouth, and the Word of God is where the water of life issues from. Horeb, the Arid place, is where the water came from the rock. Paul in the New Testament says this about that account –

“...all ate the same spiritual food,⁴ and all drank the same spiritual drink. For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ.”

-1 Corinthians 10:3, 4

The word points to Christ. Israel arrived at Sinai and they rejected Christ. They then went into the midbar, or wilderness, to wander until they would again come to the word. Moses is now relaying the word of the Lord, that very word which speaks of Christ. The instruction is given to lead them to Christ.

As noted by Paul, the law is only a tutor to lead the people to Christ. In finding Christ, they will pass over Jordan and into the inheritance, while Moses, representative of the law, will remain outside of the promise.

After all of this, in short, we can say that Deuteronomy is given to lead the people to what they had missed. The intent of the law is to reveal Jesus. It is not an end in and of itself, but a path to find Christ. Jesus said as much –

“You search the Scriptures, for in them you think you have eternal life; and these are they which testify of Me.⁴⁰ But you are not willing to come to Me that you may have life.” John 5:39, 40

But Jesus was even more direct in His words a moment later. He makes it absolutely clear that not only the Scriptures in general, but Moses in particular, spoke of Him –

“Do not think that I shall accuse you to the Father; there is one who accuses you—Moses, in whom you trust.⁴⁶ For if you believed Moses, you would believe Me; for he wrote about Me.⁴⁷ But if you do not believe his writings, how will you believe My words?” John 5:44-47

This is exactly why Malachi 4:4, our text verse today, said that the people were to remember the law of Moses. They were to consider it, find Christ, and come to Christ. It is also why Malachi said “Horeb” instead of “Mt. Sinai.” They had rejected the cross, they needed to go back to the word which issues from the wet place, while in the dry place, and pay heed to the word which issues forth life.

Understanding this, the book of Deuteronomy is a book which is to be searched out with Christ in mind. If it is, then it will make all the sense in the world. For those who cling to the law as a means to an end, they provide their own path to condemnation. For those who pursue it in light of Christ, they will find salvation.

The words which the Lord told them at Horeb, meaning Mount Sinai were...

⁶ (con't) 'You have dwelt long enough at this mountain.

rav lakem shevet ba'har ha'zeh – “Long enough you have dwelt at the mountain the this.” The words have not been previously seen in Scripture. The Lord said them, but until now, they have not been recorded. Israel arrived in the Wilderness of Sinai at the beginning of the third month of the first year after leaving Egypt. They departed on the 20th day of the 2nd month of the second year. Thus, they were at Sinai a period of 350 days.

Christ had been presented to them in a thousand different ways – in the tabernacle, the sacrificial system, the Feasts of the Lord, and in so many other types and shadows. They had been numbered, ordered, and arranged – prepared as a people for the Lord's purposes. They had been provided with everything necessary which was needed for the fulfillment of the covenant and it was now time to go forward and enter the Land of Promise.

Israel could have left Horeb and entered Canaan, thus entering their rest. And 1500 years later, Israel could have accepted Christ and entered His rest. They were to depart from there and head toward Mount Zion, leaving the law and finding Christ.

This is what the author of Hebrews says. In Hebrews 12, he tells them that believers have not come “to the mountain that may be touched and that burned with fire, and to blackness and darkness and tempest, ¹⁹ and the sound of a trumpet and the voice of words, so that those who heard it begged that the word should not be spoken to them anymore” (vss. 18, 19)

Rather, they had come to Mount Zion. This is what Israel was told to do. It was time to leave the cross and enter the glory...

⁷ Turn and take your journey, and go to the mountains of the Amorites, to all the neighboring places in the plain, in the mountains and in the lowland, in the South and on the seacoast, to the land of the Canaanites and to Lebanon, as far as the great river, the River Euphrates.

Most translations do not adequately translate this verse. It says, “Turn you, and take your journey, and go you mount (it is singular) the Amorite (it is singular), and to all the neighboring (meaning either places or peoples, probably peoples) in the plain, in the mount (it is singular), and in the lowland, and in the South, and on coast the sea, land the Canaanite (it is singular.)”

This is all one thought, explaining the land of Canaan. From there, it then continues with “And the ‘Lebanon,’ as far as the river, the great, the River Euphrates.” In other words, it is the land of Canaan, plus what is beyond it.

The specificity explains the land. The Amorite is used as a catchall name for all of the inhabitants of Canaan. Amorite comes from amar, meaning to utter or say. Therefore, the name signifies being spoken of, and thus “Renowned.”

The various areas include the Aravah, or the plain, the mount signifies the mountainous area, there is the Shephelah or lowland (a place and a word which is new to Scripture), the Negev, or southern area, and the seacoast. It is an overall description of the layout of the land with its varied types of geography.

The additional words which include Lebanon and the Euphrates are given to confirm the promise first made to Abraham in Genesis 15:18 and which was repeated in Exodus 23:31. This is the first use of the name Lebanon in the Bible.

The land of Canaan was meticulously described in Numbers 34, and it did not include this additional designation, nor that of the Euphrates. However, these areas that extend beyond the land itself have been promised and Moses now reconfirms that to the people.

Lebanon means, “Place of Whiteness,” or “White One,” signifying its perpetual snow. It comes from lavan, meaning “white” but which itself comes from levenah, or brick, because bricks turn white when fired. That concept has consistently been used as a picture of works, because bricks are manmade, unlike stones.

Perath, or the Euphrates, means “Fruitfulness,” or “That which makes Fruitful.” Both of these are extensions to what one should expect after coming to Christ. The Land of Promise, Canaan, is obtained by coming to God through Christ.

One is expected to work after coming to Christ, not before. The works are to be an extension of what is received. That is seen, for example, in Colossians 1 –

“For this reason we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to ask that you may be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; ¹⁰ that you may walk worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing Him, being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God.” Colossians 1:9, 10

One can see that Moses is anticipating Christ, and then that which stems from life in Christ. Again, the law is not an end in and of itself. This is why these descriptions, along with these additional locations, are now named.

*By faith you will receive the Promise and by faith you will stand
It is by grace through faith that this comes about
In this, you will enter the heavenly promised land
And without it, you will forever be kept out*

*The Lord is pleased with your faith, small as a mustard seed
Yes, He lets us know that a little bit will do
That simple act is a powerful, mighty creed
With a little bit of faith, God will then see you through*

*Have faith and believe the message you have heard
Believe what God has said and He will accept you
And then cling fastly to His wonderful, precious word
Have faith in God, rest in Him, for He is ever faithful and true*

II. A Heavenly Inheritance (verse 8)

⁸ See, I have set the land before you;

This is immediately speaking of the land of Canaan. The promise was made, and it was for a tract of physical land. However, the promise actually anticipates the true land, meaning the heavenly promise. This will be explained in a minute.

^{8 (con't)} go in and possess the land which the LORD swore to your fathers—

Israel is a people under the Lord, or in a covenant relationship with the Lord, with Moses as their head. They are instructed to go in and possess the land Yehovah swore to their fathers. This means Canaan.

However, it more assuredly speaks of the heavenly inheritance where the Lord will give rest and dwell with His people. This is the purpose of all that has been seen since Genesis 3 when Adam fell, but restoration was promised.

This promise began to take on specificity with Israel's fathers, meaning the following men...

8 (con't) to Abraham, l'avraham – “to Abraham.” This was first promised to Abraham in Genesis 12:7, and it was repeated to him several times after that –

“Then the LORD appeared to Abram and said, “To your descendants I will give this land.” And there he built an altar to the LORD, who had appeared to him.”

-Genesis 12:7

8 (con't) Isaac, l'yitskhaq – “to Isaac.” This was explicitly stated to Isaac in Genesis 26 –

“Then the LORD appeared to him and said: ‘Do not go down to Egypt; live in the land of which I shall tell you. ³ Dwell in this land, and I will be with you and bless you; for to you and your descendants I give all these lands, and I will perform the oath which I swore to Abraham your father. ⁴ And I will make your descendants multiply as the stars of heaven; I will give to your descendants all these lands; and in your seed all the nations of the earth shall be blessed; ⁵ because Abraham obeyed My voice and kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes, and My laws.’” Genesis 26:1-5

8 (con't) and Jacob—

u-l'yaakov – “and to Jacob.” This was first explicitly said to Jacob in Genesis 28 –

“Then he dreamed, and behold, a ladder was set up on the earth, and its top reached to heaven; and there the angels of God were ascending and descending on it.

¹³ And behold, the LORD stood above it and said: ‘I am the LORD God of Abraham your father and the God of Isaac; the land on which you lie I will give to you and your descendants. ¹⁴ Also your descendants shall be as the dust of the earth; you shall spread abroad to the west and the east, to the north and the south; and in you and in your seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed. ¹⁵ Behold, I am with you and will keep you wherever you go, and will bring you back to this land; for I will not leave you until I have done what I have spoken to you.’” Genesis 28:12-15

Each of these three fathers of the people of Israel was given this promise. It then extended to all the sons of Jacob, as Moses next explains...

⁸ (con’t) to give to them and their descendants after them.’

The promise was made, and because it is the word of the Lord, it must come to pass. And so, despite departing the land of Canaan and spending the next 215 years in the land of Egypt, the promise remained. The time finally came when it was to be fulfilled, and the words were spoken out to a man named Moses.

On the sacred mountain, Moses beheld a burning bush, and a voice called forth to Him. When he responded, “Here I am,” the voice then spoke forth what is now being repeated by Moses –

“Then He said, ‘Do not draw near this place. Take your sandals off your feet, for the place where you stand is holy ground.’ ⁶ Moreover He said, ‘I am the God of your father—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.’ And Moses hid his face, for he was afraid to look upon God.

⁷ And the LORD said: ‘I have surely seen the oppression of My people who are in Egypt, and have heard their cry because of their taskmasters, for I know their sorrows. ⁸ So I have come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up from that land to a good and large land, to a land flowing with milk and honey, to the place of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites.’” Exodus 3:5-8

The promise was then renewed to Moses in Exodus 6 –

“And God spoke to Moses and said to him: ‘I am the LORD. ³ I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, as God Almighty, but by My name LORD I was not known to them. ⁴ I have also established My covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, in which they were strangers.’”

-Exodus 6:2-4

From there, the Lord continued to promise this, time and again, in Exodus and Leviticus. In Numbers, the people were prepared for entrance based on those repeated promises, but in Numbers 14, the first note of the giving of the land to Israel isn't by the Lord. Rather it is by Joshua and Caleb, pleading with the people to not accept the bad report which they had heard from the other ten spies.

The people did reject the promise though, and the Lord thus rejected them. In their rejection, they were punished. These things will be seen and reviewed in the verses ahead in Deuteronomy. However, before we get to them, it must be understood that though this is immediately and literally speaking of Canaan the land, there is more to it than that.

The promise extends beyond the physical and into the spiritual. The land of Canaan was, and it is, only a steppingstone on the way to true glory.

We know this because of what is said first of Abraham in Hebrews 11. There the author explains that the physical land in which Abraham dwelt, and which was promised to him and his seed, was only a picture of something better; something permanent –

“By faith Abraham obeyed when he was called to go out to the place which he would receive as an inheritance. And he went out, not knowing where he was going. ⁹ By faith he dwelt in the land of promise as in a foreign country, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; ¹⁰ for he waited for the city which has foundations, whose builder and maker is God.”

-Hebrews 11:8-10

This, however, could be taken as a form of hyperbole, speaking of the promise of the actual land of Canaan in a superlative way. After all, the land was promised to be given actually to his descendants after him, but not to him personally.

However, this would be an incorrect assumption. After those words, it continues to speak of Sarah for two verses, relaying that she who was barren had finally bore a child through an act of faith. From there, Hebrews then says –

“These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them, embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. ¹⁴ For those who say such things declare plainly that they seek a homeland. ¹⁵ And truly if they had called to mind that country from which they had come out, they would have had opportunity to return. ¹⁶ But now they desire a better, that is, a heavenly country. Therefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for He has prepared a city for them.” Hebrews 11:13-16

The author of Hebrews, while speaking of Abraham and Sarah, then backs up to those mentioned before them in his letter – to Abel, Enoch, and Noah – including them in this as well. But to them, nothing was said of the land of Canaan.

There was only the remembrance of Eden, the hope of the promise after the fall, and the anticipation of restoration and rest, of which Canaan was to be a type. These people could not have been seeking Canaan as a homeland because Canaan, as a land, did not even yet exist.

Abel and Enoch were before the Flood of Noah, but more importantly, Canaan is the grandson of Noah. The land which bears his name only bore his name sometime after he was born and after he settled it. Therefore, the promise of Canaan is more than just the promise of a piece of land.

To further explain this, the author of Hebrews then returns to Abraham and speaks of his offering up Isaac, the very son through whom the promise was to continue. But in his words, the author then explains the importance of this –

“By faith Abraham, when he was tested, offered up Isaac, and he who had received the promises offered up his only begotten son, ¹⁸ of whom it was said, “In Isaac your seed shall be called,” ¹⁹ concluding that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead, from which he also received him in a figurative sense.” Hebrews 11:17-19

From there, the author continues with the stream of human existence, specially marked out by the Lord, as people of faith who believed the promises of the Lord.

He speaks of Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph. Concerning Joseph, it is in regard to his bones – having faith that God would give the land to Israel, and so he – knowing this would be true – gave instructions concerning his bones. They were to be taken back to the land when the promise was realized.

However, it was an act of faith which anticipated more than just the act of carrying his bones back. Faith in the word of the Lord means faith in all of the word of the Lord. Joseph’s faith in the promise for Israel is inclusive of the promise of Messiah.

The Lord spoke of Messiah long before He spoke of the land of Canaan. It was, then, to be understood that the promise of Canaan was to be a promise of Messiah to come. The land, as well as the line, are intricately united in the thought put forth in Scripture in relation to Messiah.

The promise of Messiah is made. The line of Messiah is named and refined throughout the generations. The land is then promised to the line from which Messiah would come. Therefore, obtaining the land by this people of Messiah is as weighty as is the naming and continuance of the line from which Messiah would come.

However, because of these things, and as deflating it may be for Israel the people, who are now back in the land of Israel, neither they, nor the land is the center of attention. Abraham is said to have looked forward to the promise of a city in a heavenly country. That is not the land of Canaan, and it is not obtainable apart from the coming of Messiah.

The same is true with the others mentioned – Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph, and even of Moses who is next named and discussed in detail. And who is then further mentioned collectively with all of Israel when it says, “By faith they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land, whereas the Egyptians, attempting to do so, were drowned” (Hebrews 11:29).

The whole congregation demonstrated faith, and by faith they were collectively saved. From there, and as we will see in the coming verses of Deuteronomy, they will collectively lack faith, and they will collectively be punished.

However, individually two had faith and they were kept through that time of punishment – Joshua and Caleb. They will enter the land of Messiah along with the collective people of Messiah.

But even then, there is a lack for Israel. The author goes on to speak of the walls of Jericho collapsing, the faith of a Gentile harlot named Rahab, and then of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah, and of David and Samuel and the prophets.

Indeed, he goes on to speak in generalities because the list was getting too long. As he says, “time would fail me to tell.” Of all of these people, he notes that even though they had entered Canaan and been people of faith while in Canaan, Canaan was not the end of the story, nor were they the end of the story.

Instead, he speaks of them – all of these multitudes who had lived in Canaan and who had lived lives of faith in Canaan – as understanding that the land was not the goal, nor was it the true promise. In his final words of this magnificent passage of Scripture, he sums up his thoughts by saying –

“And all these, having obtained a good testimony through faith, did not receive the promise, ⁴⁰ God having provided something better for us, that they should not be made perfect apart from us.” Hebrews 11:39, 40

Canaan cannot be the promise, because they neither entered their rest – as he noted in earlier chapters of Hebrews – nor did they receive the promise, despite having lived in the land which has been, and continues to be, promised in the ongoing narrative.

If they lived in Canaan, the land promised to them, and yet they did not receive the promise, then the promise is not Canaan. As this is so, then Canaan is simply a promised step towards the promise. And therefore, the promise is restoration of that which was lost, and that promise is found in the One who can restore man to that promise.

The Garden of Eden was a place. Likewise, heaven is a place. A place, however, is defined by what is in that place. In both, Eden and Heaven, the place is defined by the presence of the Lord. That is the promise, and the promise is only realized by coming to God through Christ.

He is the Hope of what is ahead, He is the Way upon which one travels to arrive at that Hope. He is the Door through which one obtains access to that place. And He is the Presence which fills that long-anticipated place.

In understanding this, we will be able to understand the book of Deuteronomy. It is a book filled with laws, commandments, statutes, and judgments. It is a book filled with blessings and curses. But it is a book which is not an end in and of itself, nor is the law of Moses a book of restoration, except in its fulfillment as found in Christ.

Where will you hang your hat as we continue through this book? Will it be on observance of the laws, or will it be by resting in Christ? Moses will not enter the promise because the law must die outside of the promise.

Only through the death of Christ will we die to the law. And that will only happen if we are in Christ who fulfilled, and then died under, that law. He died for us outside of the Promise so that He can then bring us into that same Promise when He brings us back to Himself.

Closing Verse: “For what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God did by sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, on account of sin: He condemned sin in the flesh, ⁴ that the righteous requirement of the law might be fulfilled in us who do not walk according to the flesh but according to the Spirit.” Romans 4:3, 4

Next Week: Deuteronomy 1:9-25 Will they go through, or will Israel be the great dissenter?... (At the Door, Ready to Enter) (3rd Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Go in and Possess the Land

Moses began to explain this law, saying
The LORD our God spoke to us in Horeb, saying:
‘You have dwelt long enough at this mountain
To them He was so relaying

Turn and take your journey
And go to the mountains of the Amorites, so do understand
To all the neighboring places in the plain
In the mountains and in the lowland

In the South and on the seacoast
To the land of the Canaanites and to Lebanon, so shall it be

As far as the great river, the River Euphrates
Pay heed now to these words from Me

See, I have set the land before you Go in and possess the land which swore to your fathers the LORD
To Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob
To give to them and their descendants after them
----- according to His word

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 1:9-25 (At the Door, Ready to Enter)

Deuteronomy 1 has thus far been a marvelous presentation of Christ and what God would do through Him. This continues to be true in the verses ahead today.

God has selected various words, through Moses, to convey to us a panorama of what has previously been much more minutely detailed. And yet, there are obvious changes from the original narrative, some insertions, and many exclusions.

In this, it becomes an obvious point of theological doom for the small-minded people who willingly look to identify the books of Moses, and indeed even various portions, verses, or words, as having come from one source or another, rather than from Moses.

This is an easy way out of doing the hard work of trying to determine why God made those changes, and of what significance they are. But the funny thing is that as easy as it is to take this path, scholars then go and spend countless hours, even entire careers, working on not pursuing the original God-centered path.

In fact, many of them have spent a lot more effort on this futile endeavor than they ever would have if they had simply taken the word at face value and searched it out from that perspective.

Text Verse: *“The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul;
The testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple.” Psalm 19:7*

The psalmist says, “The testimony of the Lord is sure.” He said this because he was sure concerning the testimony of the Lord. One will either be sure of the Lord’s word and pursue it from that perspective, or he will have no faith in the word of the Lord and pursue it from that perspective.

The changes in the accounts previously seen and of those in Deuteronomy, rather than showing that they are later additions, clearly demonstrate that they are original. Nobody who would later write another narrative would have made such obviously varied details, nor would they have left out so much of the already provided detail.

The stories mesh harmoniously, and yet they simply give different information that was needed or is now needed, and nothing else. This is the same situation that arises between the three synoptic gospels. They provide exactly what is needed and nothing else.

But such as this will never satisfy the naysayer. If the accounts in those gospels were identical, they would be called forgeries because of that. If there is any perceived difference between them, they will be called forgeries because of that.

One must come to this word looking for truth, and he must do so looking for Christ. When these two thoughts unite, then a right understanding of why things are the way they are becomes evident.

And so, let us do this, as we do each week. Let us search for God's truth in the passage before us, and let us search for God's Messiah there as well. Such wonderful treasures are to be found in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. How Can I Alone Bear Your Problems? (verses 9-18)

⁹“And I spoke to you at that time, saying:

Moses uses the word amar, or said, rather than the more common dabar, or spoke. The use of this word implies the need for cooperation rather than a direct word for something to be carried out. With this thought in mind, the next words make more sense...

^{9 (con't)} ‘I alone am not able to bear you.

This is as much an appeal for help as it is a statement of fact. If a person is walking on a long hike, and he says to those with him, “I am not able to carry this load anymore,” he is implying to the others that he wants their help in carrying it.

It is important to note that Moses' words here bring about the recollection of two distinct events in his time of leading Israel. The reason this is important is that his words now are actually only recorded after their time at Horeb, as they marched from Sinai to Canaan.

However, the words are not necessarily chronological but in an arrangement of thought. And that thought began while at Horeb. The first event was actually a suggestion from Jethro which occurred at Horeb in Exodus 18 –

“And so it was, on the next day, that Moses sat to judge the people; and the people stood before Moses from morning until evening. ¹⁴ So when Moses’ father-in-law saw all that he did for the people, he said, ‘What is this thing that you are doing for the people? Why do you alone sit, and all the people stand before you from morning until evening?’” Exodus 18:13, 14

After saying this, he gave advice to Moses concerning sharing the responsibility of decisions of lesser importance with selected men in a top-down pyramid fashion. Moses took his advice and a great burden was taken off of his shoulders.

Although not specifically stated in Exodus 18, it is certain that Moses spoke to the elders at that time of his intentions because of what was suggested by Jethro and which was then approved by the Lord. As it came to be according to the Lord’s will, Moses then conveyed that to the people.

Secondly, and more directly recorded, however, was Moses’ appeal to the Lord while at Taberah. It is a continuation of the relieving of the burden on Moses which began at Horeb –

“Then Moses heard the people weeping throughout their families, everyone at the door of his tent; and the anger of the LORD was greatly aroused; Moses also was displeased. ¹¹ So Moses said to the LORD, ‘Why have You afflicted Your servant? And why have I not found favor in Your sight, that You have laid the burden of all these people on me? ¹² Did I conceive all these people? Did I beget them, that You should say to me, “Carry them in your bosom, as a guardian carries a nursing child,” to the land which You swore to their fathers? ¹³ Where am I to get meat to give to all these people? For they weep all over me, saying, “Give us meat, that we may eat.” ¹⁴ I am not able to bear all these people alone, because the burden is too heavy for me. ¹⁵ If You treat me like this, please kill me here and now—if I have found favor in Your sight—and do not let me see my wretchedness!” Numbers 11:10-15

At that time, the Lord had Moses gather together seventy elders of Israel, and He took of the Spirit that was on Moses and put the same upon them. In this, they were able to share the overall burden of leadership in a different way.

Rather than a top-down structure, it was one which consisted more in mutual cooperation, and which extended laterally at the top. This was conveyed to these chosen men, and they were given a sign that what was proposed had come to pass because, as is recorded –

“Then the LORD came down in the cloud, and spoke to him, and took of the Spirit that was upon him, and placed the same upon the seventy elders; and it happened, when the Spirit rested upon them, that they prophesied, although they never did so again.” Numbers 11:25

Before going on, let us consider what is being presented. Verse 2 showed what a short journey Israel had to make in order to enter into the Land of Promise – just eleven days. However, it then noted that they are now in their fortieth year since leaving Egypt.

In verses 5-8, the instructions for leaving Horeb and entering into the Land are given, including a brief description of the land. With that came the promise that the land stood before them, the land sworn to their fathers. All they needed to do was go up and receive what was promised.

In verse 9, authority was given to the people. It was not Moses alone who bore it, but people at all levels, meaning tens of thousands of people who were in authority over thousands, hundreds, and tens.

And further, there were seventy at the very top who also possessed the same Spirit that was on Moses. Understanding this, and keeping it at the forefront of our minds, Moses next says to them...

¹⁰ The LORD your God has multiplied you, and here you are today, as the stars of heaven in multitude.

This verse recalls the promises of the Lord that were stated all the way back in Genesis. First, he made this promise twice to Abraham. He first did so in Genesis 15 –

“Then He brought him outside and said, ‘Look now toward heaven, and count the stars if you are able to number them.’ And He said to him, ‘So shall your descendants be.’” Genesis 15:5

He restated the promise when Abraham obediently took Isaac up Mt. Moriah to offer him as a burnt offering –

“Then the Angel of the LORD called to Abraham a second time out of heaven, ¹⁶ and said: ‘By Myself I have sworn, says the LORD, because you have done this thing, and have not withheld your son, your only son— ¹⁷ blessing I will bless you, and multiplying I will multiply your descendants as the stars of the heaven and as the sand which is on the seashore; and your descendants shall possess the gate of their enemies.’” Genesis 22:15-17

The Lord then confirmed the promise to Isaac –

“Then the LORD appeared to him and said: ‘Do not go down to Egypt; live in the land of which I shall tell you. ³ Dwell in this land, and I will be with you and bless you; for to you and your descendants I give all these lands, and I will perform the oath which I swore to Abraham your father. ⁴ And I will make your descendants multiply as the stars of heaven; I will give to your descendants all these lands; and in your seed all the nations of the earth shall be blessed; ⁵ because Abraham obeyed My voice and kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes, and My laws.’” Genesis 26:2-5

Finally, using a similar expression, the sand on the seashore, it is seen that the promise continued through Jacob –

“Then Jacob said, ‘O God of my father Abraham and God of my father Isaac, the LORD who said to me, “Return to your country and to your family, and I will deal well with you”: ¹⁰ I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies and of all the truth which You have shown Your servant; for I crossed over this Jordan with my staff, and now I have become two companies. ¹¹ Deliver me, I pray, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau; for I fear him, lest he come and attack me and the mother with the children. ¹² For You said, “I will surely treat you well, and make your descendants as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.’”” Genesis 32:9-12

Despite their time of bondage in Egypt, the Lord had faithfully remembered His covenant promises to the patriarchs, and He had fulfilled His words to them through maintaining Israel, increasing them, and then bringing them out of Egypt and towards the Land of Promise.

Moses’ words say, kekokve ha’shemayim larov – “as the stars in the heavens in multitude.” He chose this expression because it cannot be considered hyperbole. At any given time, the human eye cannot see more than three to five thousand stars. But Israel numbered over six hundred thousand fighting men, plus many others.

Moses is reminding the people that the Lord had not only been faithful, but that he had given them both the leadership necessary to take them into the land, and He had given them the numbers to make this possible. With that thought in mind, he next says...

¹¹ May the LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times more numerous than you are,

After noting that the Lord had accomplished what He said He would do, Moses next calls for an even greater blessing upon the people. This is not something that was previously said. Rather, it is a parenthetical thought inserted by Moses into his ongoing narrative before he continues with his discourse.

The reason he is saying this now is because of what he has already said in verse 9, and what he will repeat again in verse 12. He acknowledges that he cannot bear the people, and thus such a magnificent increase in the people of Israel would be because they had a true leader, the God of their fathers, Yehovah. It is a spoken prayer for great multiplication – even beyond the promises already fulfilled in the people who sat before him. And further...

¹¹ (con't) and bless you as He has promised you!

The words are in the same order as were spoken to Abraham in Genesis 12:2. There the Lord said –

“Get out of your country,
From your family
And from your father’s house,
To a land that I will show you.
² I will make you a great nation;
I will bless you
And make your name great;
And you shall be a blessing.
³ I will bless those who bless you,
And I will curse him who curses you;
And in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed.” Genesis 12:1-3

In other words, the blessing is not limited to numbers in physical increase, but it transcends that. The blessing is spiritual in nature. There are many nations which have become great in number, but they lack the blessing of the Lord.

Abraham would become great in number, but he – meaning his descendants – would also possess the spiritual blessing. This is what Moses now again petitions the same Lord, Yehovah, for.

They had the numbers, but they had also been under punishment for rejecting the Lord. He is preparing them for entry into the land and he is calling for their physical increase to be accompanied by the promised spiritual increase. With that parenthetical thought now uttered, he continues with the narrative of what brought them to this point...

¹² How can I alone bear your problems and your burdens and your complaints?

Moses now continues with his narrative, recalling the words of verse 9 where he said he alone was not able to bear the people. It wasn't just that there was a great multitude that he could not handle, but that the people put their difficulties upon him.

He describes these difficulties as problems, burdens, and complaints. The word translated as "problems" here is a new and rare word, torakh. It is found only here and in Isaiah 1:14, coming from a verb, tarakh which is only found in Job 37:11. There it speaks of the clouds being saturated with water. One can think of being filled to a maximum capacity, and thus under a weight which cannot be physically tolerated.

And so, what we have here are the three things which were weighing down on Moses. The word torakh describes the people themselves. They are of a capacity that Moses cannot physically bear himself.

The massa, or burdens, speaks of the people's own burdens which they heaped upon Moses. And the riv, or complaints are the people's quarrels between themselves, between themselves and Moses, and the between themselves and the Lord.

Moses felt these various negative aspects of the people and their lives in himself. And so, a remedy was spoken out...

¹³ Choose wise, understanding, and knowledgeable men

The word “choose” is acceptable. The Hebrew says, “Give to you.” The people were to give themselves men who would lead from among themselves. One would be expected to only give himself something which is good, and that is what Moses intended for them to do as a collective group.

As we saw earlier, in Exodus 18, Jethro made his recommendation to Moses. There he also highlighted various aspects of the men to be selected. He said that they should, “select from all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness.”

Jethro looked more to the moral aspects of the men to be selected. Moses speaks here of the administrative or technical aspects of the men. They are to be khakam, or wise. That is a person who already possesses knowledge and then takes that knowledge and applies it in an appropriate manner.

They are to be bin, or understanding, meaning that they can discern a matter, perceive what is appropriate to the situation, and then apply the wisdom they possess to ensure the proper goal is met. And they are to be yada, or knowing. This is experiential knowledge of a matter in order to be able to relay that knowledge on to others as each situation calls for. These men were to be...

13 (con’t) from among your tribes,

There are two particular words which are most often translated as “tribes” in the books of Moses. One is matteh. The other is shevet. They both signify a type of staff or rod, and both come from roots signifying to branch off.

Though very similar in intent, matteh looks more to a genealogical stem and branch, whereas shevet looks to a political one. The first is never used in Deuteronomy, while the latter, shevet, is seen eighteen times.

Moses understands that the genealogical records of Israel have been set. The people have been counted, and the families have been identified and detailed. What he is concerned about is preparing the people for entrance into Canaan, and so his words focus on the political aspect of tribal division. In providing him with a list of such people for these political bodies, Moses says...

13 (con’t) and I will make them heads over you.’

In giving to themselves such people, Moses would then appoint them to be leaders. It would be self-defeating to choose men who were unqualified, and so Moses trusted that those selected would meet the qualifications. Obviously, the idea went over well...

¹⁴ And you answered me and said, ‘The thing which you have told us to do is good.’

This has never been stated before in the ongoing narrative, and so the reason for including the words may not seem apparent, but it is the same reason for everything that has been said, and everything that will be said, all the way through the rest of the chapter.

Nothing was forced upon the people, they agreed to everything that was said, and the blame for all that occurred which brought them under punishment rests solely with them. Here, they agreed with their own mouths to the structure which would govern them.

When the people rebelled against the Lord, it was their leaders, who they agreed to and appointed, who failed to step in and lead the people as they should have. We are, as at all times, being shown typological pictures of Israel’s rejection of Jesus.

It is the leaders who are focused on throughout the gospels and into the epistles. In the leader’s rejection of their responsibilities, all of the people collectively suffered. This is because all of Israel agreed to the very structure of government under which they lived.

¹⁵ So I took the heads of your tribes, wise and knowledgeable men, and made them heads over you, leaders of thousands, leaders of hundreds, leaders of fifties, leaders of tens, and officers for your tribes.

This corresponds to Exodus 18:25. As suggested by Moses, as authorized by the Lord, and as accepted by the people, Moses made the appointments. In this, two designations are made – sare and shoterim – rulers and officers. The word shoter comes from a root signifying “to write,” and thus it would be a scribe. By implication, it speaks of a type of magistrate. Why is this important?

It is because the same types of people were still leading Israel at the time of Jesus, the scribes and Pharisees fill the same type of offices that had been filled at the beginning.

Though the Pharisees were more to be considered a religious sect they, along with the Sadducees, were considered as leaders to the people. But they failed to submit to the Lord, just as these now-appointed leaders failed to do so.

¹⁶ “Then I commanded your judges at that time, saying, ‘Hear the cases between your brethren, and judge righteously between a man and his brother or the stranger who is with him.

Moses now speaks out his words of command which begin with “Hear.” One must listen before he can judge. It is as important for the judge to open his ear to hear a case as it is for him to keep his hand closed from any bribe which may affect his judgment.

And their judgment was to be fairly made between a man and his brother – without partiality, even to a man and a stranger, meaning anyone who dwelt among Israel, but who was not of Israel. Justice was to be blind to the man, or the state of the man. Further...

¹⁷ You shall not show partiality in judgment; you shall hear the small as well as the great;

The Hebrew essentially reads, “You shall not recognize faces.” When two come forward to present their cases, it was to be as if they had masks on so that neither could be recognized.

The precept is substantially repeated in Exodus 23:2 and Leviticus 19:15. Whether poor or wealthy, whether unknown or well-known, or for any other such reason, the judges were to remain impartial. But this is one of the reasons that Jesus rebuked the scribes and Pharisees in Matthew 23. They devoured the houses of the lowly widows simply because they could.

^{17 (con’t)} you shall not be afraid in any man’s presence,

Here it basically says, “you shall not be afraid from the face of any man.” It doesn’t matter how important he is, how influential he is, how big and scary he is, or for any other reason. The judgment was to be made without fear...

^{17 (con’t)} for the judgment is God’s.

The idea here is that of complete surrender of one's judgment in such matters because the one judging is answerable to God. The general idea of this thought, though under a different context, is well expressed by the words found in Hebrews 13:6 –

“The Lord is my helper; I will not fear. What can man do to me?”

The failing of the rulers at Jesus' time concerning this very idea is expressed in John 12:42, 43 –

“Nevertheless even among the rulers many believed in Him, but because of the Pharisees they did not confess Him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue; ⁴³ for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.”

There was a greater fear of what man could do than what God was sure to do. In this, the rulers failed the people, and the people came under the collective punishment promised in the word.

¹⁷ (con't) The case that is too hard for you, bring to me, and I will hear it.'

This is what Jesus said to the people. They brought matters up which were difficult. Even the leaders challenged Jesus. And when this occurred, he would lead them right back to Moses, such as in Mark 10:3 when the subject of divorce came about. His first response was, “What did Moses command you?”

Also, in His parable of the rich man and Lazarus, he said that those whom Lazarus appealed for should hear Moses and the prophets, further telling him that “if they do not hear Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rise from the dead.”

Moses was to be the ultimate authority for the decisions to be rendered. When something from the law needed clarification, even at the time of Jesus, they were to go to those who were responsible for the law. This is recorded in Matthew 23 –

“The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat. ³ Therefore whatever they tell you to observe, that observe and do, but do not do according to their works; for they say, and do not do.” Matthew 23:2, 3

¹⁸ And I commanded you at that time all the things which you should do.

This encompasses everything passed on to the people after the initial giving of the Ten Commandments. After that awesome display, it then said –

“Then they said to Moses, ‘You speak with us, and we will hear; but let not God speak with us, lest we die.’” Exodus 20:19

His words now cover from that time, all the way through their almost year-long stay at the mountain. After this comes our next thought...

*We are on our way to the Promised Land
Taking our leave and heading out
It is a place of beauty and glory, so we understand
To the Lord our God, we shall raise a shout*

*Here we are at the Door, ready to enter in
We are ready to take possession of what is promised to us
Restoration and paradise are about to begin
But what is this? Who is this Jesus?*

*He claims that He is the Way
How can that be? We demand a sign!
If He will do for us the thing that we say
Only then will we our faith towards Him align*

*Here we are at the Door, ready to enter in
But is there some other way for our restoration to begin?...*

II. The LORD Your God Has Set the Land Before You (verses 19-25)

¹⁹ “So we departed from Horeb,

This was recorded in Numbers 10 –

“Now it came to pass on the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud was taken up from above the tabernacle of the Testimony.”

-Numbers 10:11

It is from this point that the thought of verse 2 is to be remembered. Israel was led by the Lord, they had leaders chosen from among themselves, and Kadesh Barnea was an eleven-day journey away. In just eleven days, they were set to begin their entrance into the Land of Promise. That means they should have arrived at that point on the first day of the third month of the second year. Until then...

19 (con't) and went through all that great and terrible wilderness which you saw on the way to the mountains of the Amorites,

The term ha'gadol, or "the great," speaks of the vastness of the area. It stretches so far that it is an eleven-day journey. The term ha'nora, or "the terrible," speaks of that which is fearful or awesome. The location is so barren and dry that it cannot be plowed and planted. It is a vast wasteland leading to a land of abundance and promise.

One can imagine it comparable to the span of human existence, apart from Christ. There is a vastness to it which extends from the fall until the millennium. And is a terrible existence when compared to that which lies ahead for those of promise.

As we saw in the first Deuteronomy sermon, eleven is the number which marks disorder, disorganization, imperfection, and disintegration. The description given by Moses now beautifully expresses that state for humanity in life apart from Christ.

It is horrible, even to the thought of death, to which this place extended – both before their arrival at Kadesh at several key points where they complained against the Lord – and to after their rejection of the Lord when they were turned back into it to die apart from the promise.

19 (con't) as the LORD our God had commanded us.

As a people, they had been redeemed from Egypt. Despite the horrid state of what lay ahead, He would be with them, and He would deliver them. And so, He commanded their departure as is recorded in Numbers 10 –

“So they started out for the first time according to the command of the LORD by the hand of Moses.” Numbers 10:13

19 (con't) Then we came to Kadesh Barnea.

The name Kadesh Barnea, or "Holy Purifying Wanderings," was not used until Numbers 32, when there was a possible second turning of the people. Before that, it was only known as Kadesh, or “Holy.” Moses uses the full name now to remind them that their disobedience is what brought about their punishment.

The wanderings they had to go through came after, not before, their arrival at the doorstep of Canaan. It is they, because of their own rejection of the Lord, who were not purified to enter the promise, and so they were turned away.

Moses’ words have been, and continue to be, carefully selected to show Israel that what had befallen them was solely their own fault. As this entire account pictures Israel’s rejection of Christ, it is – whether it sounds cold or not – showing them that the misery of the past two thousand years has been a self-inflicted wound. They had been led throughout their history to the Promise, meaning Christ...

²⁰ And I said to you, ‘You have come to the mountains of the Amorites, which the LORD our God is giving us.

Moses presented to Israel the Land of Promise – “Here it is! You have come to the land which the Lord our God is giving us!” And Moses also presented to Israel the Man of Promise – “Here He is! You have come to the One which the Lord our God gave to us.”

As has been the case each time they are mentioned in this chapter, the name “Amorite” is singular in the Hebrew. It is also prefixed by an article – “The Amorite.” The name signifies, “The Renowned,” and so one can see that it is a typological reference to the Lord. “You have been brought to the Mount of the Renowned,” the One spoken of and who possesses the land.

It is this which is promised to Israel. A dwelling with the Lord. And it is this which Israel turned away from, even though Moses implored them to enter...

²¹ Look, the LORD your God has set the land before you;

The Lord led Israel to the doorstep of Canaan. He set it before them as a gracious offering. And the Lord led Israel to the Door, which is Christ. They were at the threshold, given as a gracious Offering. Moses spoke to them, imploring them to enter Canaan, and Moses, through the law, implored them to enter... “Go!”

²¹ (con’t) go up and possess it, as the LORD God of your fathers has spoken to you;

Here Moses recalls the word of the Lord God. This was stated many times between Exodus and Numbers. One example is –

“So I have come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up from that land to a good and large land, to a land flowing with milk and honey, to the place of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites.” Exodus 3:8

Likewise, the Lord God of their fathers spoke many times of possessing the promise, meaning Christ and His kingdom. Jesus confirms this in John 5 –

“You search the Scriptures, for in them you think you have eternal life; and these are they which testify of Me.” John 5:39

The Scriptures are literally filled with hints of the coming Messiah. His manifestation to the people of Israel was as obvious as Israel’s arrival at the threshold of Canaan. “Go, take possession!” ...

²¹ (con’t) do not fear or be discouraged.’

al tira v’al tekhat – “not do fear, and not be discouraged.” The words are a close reflection of John 14:27 –

“Peace I leave with you, My peace I give to you; not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.”

The themes repeat because the Lord is trying to wake His people up to His word, His promises, and the reliability of who He is in relation to them. In trusting in the Lord, there is to be no fear, and there is to be nothing which can allow one to be discouraged. Israel, however, took another path, starting with the next words...

²² “And every one of you came near to me

Moses is speaking to those of the congregation sitting on the side of the Jordan, waiting to enter. All of the those who came before him at that time are now dead, and yet, he says, va’tigrevun elay kulekhem – “and came near to me all of you.”

The leaders speak for the people, and the nation is a collective whole. Thus, the idea conveyed to Moses represents the desire of the collective, and it speaks of all at any time. What the leaders did is as if the people now have done.

^{22 (con't)} and said, 'Let us send men before us, and let them search out the land for us,

Taking the original account together with this one, there is an order to what occurred. The idea was given by the people to Moses. From there, he took it to the Lord for the Lord's approval. The Lord gave them what they wanted, meaning He allowed them free will to choose their own path.

The only reason for such a request is personal fear and trepidation. It is a display of unbelief. The Lord had proven Himself countless times up to this point. He had promised what the land would be like and that the land would be delivered to Israel. Upon entry, their satisfaction would be assured.

But again, a parallel is seen in the leaders of Israel. The Lord, through the law, had led Israel directly to Messiah, and Messiah held the promises which lay ahead. But instead of accepting Him at face value, they asked for more. They directly challenged Him in this, just as Israel is directly challenging the Lord now –

“Then the Pharisees and Sadducees came, and testing Him asked that He would show them a sign from heaven.” Matthew 16:1

The Land of Promise lay ahead, and Israel asked for proofs. The Messiah stood before them, and Israel asked for proofs. But heaven is received by faith, not by demand. Christ's answer to them was, “A wicked and adulterous generation seeks after a sign, and no sign shall be given to it except the sign of the prophet Jonah” (16:4). And the sign of Jonah was given to them – a year for a day.

Jonah prophesied that Nineveh would be destroyed in forty days, and Jerusalem was destroyed forty years later. Israel failed to believe, and they were under punishment for forty years in the wilderness – a year for each day the spies were gone.

^{22 (con't)} and bring back word to us of the way by which we should go up, and of the cities into which we shall come.'

The spies, instead of bringing these things back as requested, brought back a bad report. The way is given –

“I am the way, the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through Me.” John 14:6

And the city which is promised is described. The New Testament tells us what the spies should have provided. The gospel and its promises, however, must be accepted, by faith.

²³ “The plan pleased me well;

The Hebrew reads, va'yitav b'enyay ha'davar – “And was good in my eyes the word.” Moses had no problem showing them what delights lay ahead because he knew that the Lord could deliver.

And, in fact, the law does tell of what lies ahead. Interspersed throughout the Old Testament are descriptions of what God promises in glory. Those who came to Jesus asked for more though. He was unwilling because they already had the word of the Lord which told them all they needed to know, and they had the further miracles that He had already accomplished throughout Israel. They simply failed to accept what their eyes saw and what the Lord promised to them.

²³ (con't) so I took twelve of your men, one man from each tribe.

Just as Jesus designated twelve apostles. The twelve spies were selected to provide details for the people to understand the nature of the glory which lay ahead. The twelve apostles were selected for the same reason. Did Israel accept the positive words of the spies? Did Israel accept the positive words of the apostles?

²⁴ And they departed and went up into the mountains,

It more literally reads, “And they turned and went up into the mountain.” “Mountain” is singular. In understanding the typology, one cannot help but see a hint of what the author of Hebrews says –

“But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, ²³ to the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven, to God the Judge of all, to the spirits of just men made perfect, ²⁴ to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaks better things than that of Abel.” Hebrews 12:22-25

The spies were to see the Land of Promise and describe it to the people. The apostles say that those who come to Christ, the true Promise have come to Mount Zion. They have come to JESUS.

²⁴ (con't) and came to the Valley of Eshcol, and spied it out.

Here, almost all of the details and locations of the journey of Numbers 13 are ignored. The account focuses solely on the Valley of Eschol, the last place noted in the Numbers 13 account. He could have chosen any point among the journeys, but his words single out the Valley of Eshcol. And so, nakhal eshkol, or the Valley of Eshcol, must be again explained.

The word nakhal signifies a wadi where water would flow through during the seasons of rain. That word comes from nakhal meaning, "to take possession," or "inherit." Eshcol means "cluster." But that comes from the word eshek, meaning testicle.

As we learned then, this pictured Christ's work. Once having been accepted, He took possession of that which proceeds from the spot where man is generated from. In other words, it is a picture of the overriding of original sin in man.

Sin transfers from father to child. The semen, which is generated in man, is what transfers that sin. Christ has, through His work, taken possession of that in all who move from Adam to Him. It is the realization of the kingdom for His people through this act.

This, however, as we will see again, was rejected by Israel, just as Israel, at the word of the spies who went into the Valley of Eshcol, had rejected the promises of the Lord. Moses is giving us a recounting of what brought them to the disaster that followed. That, in turn, is given to show Israel today what brought about their own punishment when they rejected Christ and His work.

^{*25} (fin) They also took some of the fruit of the land in their hands and brought it down to us; and they brought back word to us, saying, 'It is a good land which the LORD our God is giving us.'

This final verse leaves out many of the details from Numbers 13. It is given as a sufficient contrast between the attitude of the people and of the location that they had just trudged through. The land was a great and terrible wilderness, and yet the Lord led them through it. Canaan is a good land with abundant fruit, and it is certain that the Lord could bring them into it.

Further, they acknowledge now that it is not just a good land, but one which Yehovah Elohenu or, Yehovah our God, was giving to them. Thus, to enter is completely and solely, based on an act of faith in the capability, reliability, and grace of the Lord.

If one cannot see that as reflected in the gospel of Christ Jesus, he is not looking very hard. The Lord has already led us through the great and terrible wilderness of our lives. He has promised that He will conduct us into the Promise. And, He has offered it to us by grace. It is not something we can earn apart from Him. It is His, and therefore it must be received as a gift, based on faith.

The Lord our God, Yehovah Elohenu, has done everything necessary to bring us to Himself through the Person and work of Christ. It is now up to each one of us, individually, to accept what He has done, and to enter into the inheritance. It is that simple, and it is waiting for you to do so.

Closing Verse: *“Thus says the LORD, your Redeemer,
The Holy One of Israel:
“I am the LORD your God,
Who teaches you to profit,
Who leads you by the way you should go.” Isaiah 48:17*

Next Week: Deuteronomy 1:26-33 Shall we trust Him? I say, “Yes, certainly!” (The Goer Before You – HE) (4th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

At the Door, Ready to Enter

And I spoke to you at that time, saying:
‘I alone am not able to bear you, so I did conclude
The LORD your God has multiplied you, and here you are today
As the stars of heaven in multitude

May the LORD God of your fathers
Make you a thousand times more numerous than you are
----- you, His saints

And bless you as He has promised you
How can I alone bear your problems and your burdens
----- and your complaints?

Choose wise, understanding, and knowledgeable men
From among your tribes, and I will make them heads over you
And you answered me and said,
'The thing is good which you have told us to do

So I took the heads of your tribes
Wise and knowledgeable men, and made them heads over you
Leaders of thousands, leaders of hundreds, leaders of fifties
Leaders of tens, and officers for your tribes too

"Then I commanded your judges at that time, saying Hear the cases between your brethren, so you are to do
And judge righteously, as I am relaying
Between a man and his brother or the stranger who is with him too

You shall not show partiality in judgment
You shall hear the small as well as the great
You shall not be afraid in any man's presence
For the judgment is God's, so to you I state

The case that is too hard for you, bring to me
And I will hear it and judge accordingly

And at that time I commanded you
All the things which you should do

"So we departed from Horeb, and went through
All that great and terrible wilderness which you saw on the way
To the mountains of the Amorites, as the LORD our God
----- had commanded us
Then we came to Kadesh Barnea, on that fateful day

And I said to you, 'You have come
----- to the mountains of the Amorites
Which the LORD our God is giving us

----- that land is now in our sights

Look, the LORD your God has set the land before you Go up and possess it; yes, be encouraged
As the LORD God of your fathers has spoken to you
Do not fear or be discouraged

“And every one of you came near to me and said
‘Let us send men before us, and let them for us search out the land
And bring back word to us of the way by which we should go up
And of the cities into which we shall come
----- so it shall be properly planned

“The plan pleased me well
So I took twelve of your men, one man from each tribe
----- was made a scout
And they departed and went up into the mountains
And came to the Valley of Eshcol, and spied it out

They also took some of the fruit of the land in their hands
And brought it down to us, that was a tasty plus
And they brought back word to us, saying
‘It is a good land which the LORD our God is giving us

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 1:26-33 (The Goer Before You – HE)

When we come to a passage like the one before us, there are certainly several things we might think, “Well, yeah, that would upset the Lord.” There is rebellion, there is impudence, there is accusation, there is cowardice, and there is unbelief.

All in all, in eight verses, Israel could be accused of quite a few offenses against the Lord. The psalmist goes further though. In recounting this very incident, he adds in contempt, complaint, and willful ignorance. Further, he also acknowledges their unbelief.

For which of these should Israel receive their just punishment? There is one which is more offensive to Him than any other because it is a sin which simply cannot be overcome by God who does not force His will upon His people.

Text Verse: *Then they despised the pleasant land;
They did not believe His word,
²⁵ But complained in their tents,
And did not heed the voice of the LORD.
²⁶ Therefore He raised His hand in an oath against them,
To overthrow them in the wilderness,
²⁷ To overthrow their descendants among the nations,
And to scatter them in the lands. Psalm 106:24-27*

It’s interesting that the psalmist ties the actions of this wicked generation in with the “overthrow of their descendants among the nations,” and that He would “scatter them in the lands.” Nothing of this occurred in the books of Moses.

Rather, after their time of punishment while wandering in the wilderness, He brought them across Jordan and into Canaan. They lived there for many hundreds of years before they were exiled. From there, he brought them back to the land for many more hundreds of years before they were exiled again.

And yet, He speaks of the actions of the people at this time in their history as a reason for the scattering of them those many hundreds of years later. What is this thing, this ongoing thing, which brought them such trouble and disaster throughout their history?

It is spoken of in our verses today. In fact, it is specifically mentioned by Moses by the use of a participle in verse 32. We’ll be there in a due time, but in short, of all of the sins of Israel – both active and ongoing – there is one thing, above all else, which brought about their many woes.

Unfortunately, it is the same sin which permeates their society today, and because Israel is a corporate entity, Israel is corporately affected by it. That will continue into the tribulation period, and it will only be resolved when they are so broken as a people that they have nowhere else to turn.

In their stubborn obstinacy throughout the years, their greatest sin – and the sin which has brought about many, many terrible woes – is the seemingly minor (and yet immensely huge) sin of... unbelief. As Joseph Benson says of this sin –

“...no sin will ruin us but unbelief, which is a sin against the remedy, and therefore without remedy.” Joseph Benson

One cannot obtain a remedy for an ill if he refuses to accept the remedy. It is the consistent, continuous, and ongoing problem for the people of Israel, and it is the same for much of the world’s population to this day – unbelief. This is a truth which is to be found in His superior word. And so, let’s turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Where Can We Go Up? (verses 26-28)

²⁶ “Nevertheless you would not go up,

v’lo avitem laalot – “And no you would go up.” The spies had gone out, they had acknowledged that the land was good which the Lord had promised, and they had all of the previous experiential knowledge of the capabilities of the Lord – from the signs, to the plagues upon Egypt, to the parting of the Red Sea. They had been given manna and quail.

On and on, He had proven Himself to them. There was no good or reasonable excuse for not simply going in and possessing the land which lay before them. And, as we have seen since Moses came to the burning bush on Sinai, all of these signs and wonders pointed to Christ.

Everything that has been recorded was there to alert the people to the fact that Messiah was coming, and that who He is and what He would do was already revealed to them through these types and pictures. This is no stretch of the intent of the passage. Rather, it is exactly what Jesus Himself said, using the same words –

“Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets, and stones those who are sent to her! How often I would have gathered your children together, even as a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you would not!” Matthew 23:37 (WEB)

The people failed to “go up” and receive Him. They had all the necessary information...

²⁶ (con’t) but rebelled against the command of the LORD your God;

va’tamru eth pi Yehovah elohekem – “and rebelled against the mouth of Yehovah your God.” The Lord did not “command” the people to go up. Instead, He promised to go before them. The implication is that they would believe Him and His promises and willingly follow His lead.

The action of the people was a direct attack against the spoken word, or mouth, of Yehovah. He had promised the people a land of milk and honey, and He had promised that His Angel would go before them and cut off their enemies.

This was explicitly repeated by Moses in verse 21 where He said, “Look, the LORD your God has set the land before you; go up and possess it, as the LORD God of your fathers has spoken to you; do not fear or be discouraged.” That then follows after the words of Joshua and Caleb in Numbers 14 where they said –

“Only do not rebel against the LORD, nor fear the people of the land, for they are our bread; their protection has departed from them, and the LORD is with us. Do not fear them.” Numbers 14:9

There is a difference in words translated as “rebel” between here and that of Numbers 14. There, Joshua and Caleb used the word marad, but here Moses uses the word marah. The second word, marah, signifies “to make bitter.”

The difference is that the word used by Joshua and Caleb is in the context of breaking a covenant. In essence, “Do not break covenant faithfulness with the Lord.” However, Moses now essentially says, “You brought a state of bitterness to the mouth of the Lord.”

These minute and often almost imperceptible changes of carefully chosen wording open up the narrative so that we can see the full import of what is being relayed. The covenant was broken by the people, it was bitter to the mouth of the Lord, and the resulting covenant punishments would come upon the people. For now, Moses continues the narrative...

²⁷ and you complained in your tents,

Here is a new and rare word, ragan. It signifies “to grumble.” It is only used three times. The second use is in Psalm 106:25 (our text verse), and it refers to this same account. The last time it will be seen, in Isaiah 29:24, it refers to a time when the people will finally gain wisdom and learn proper doctrine.

For now, Moses lays the fault directly on the people there before him. “You complained.” He doesn’t say, “Your fathers complained.” They are the same group of people with the same propensities as their fathers. The complaining in their tents refers back to Numbers 14:1, where the people held a pity party –

“So all the congregation lifted up their voices and cried, and the people wept that night.” Numbers 14:1

If you close your eyes, you can almost hear the moaning throughout the camp. The tents’ walls would resonate with the sound of an entire camp of people whining about how bad their existence had suddenly become. But worse is the content of their words...

²⁷ (con’t) and said, ‘Because the LORD hates us, He has brought us out of the land of Egypt to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.

It is the strongest expression found concerning the attitude of the people, expanding upon what was said in Numbers 14. They actually brought an indictment against the Lord, accusing Him of hating them, and because of this He purposely brought them out of Egypt, so that He could have the Amorite destroy them.

It is almost a play on words. The name Amorite essentially means “Renowned.” Here, they accuse the Lord of using these renowned people to wipe out their name so that nothing is left of it. Further, Egypt signifies “Double Distress.”

In this, they are saying they were taken from a place of great distress just to be destroyed in a worse place. The accusations against the Lord are the highest marks of contempt.

²⁸ Where can we go up?

To go up implies entry into the Promised Land. It is always considered an ascension to a higher place when entering Canaan, then Jerusalem, and then the temple, and even into the rooms of the temple, culminating in arrival at the Most Holy place.

The picture of failing to accept Jesus, the way of restoration to God in heaven, is obvious. The words are chosen to show hints of the rejection of Christ by Israel after He accomplished His work, granting them access to restoration with God.

²⁸ (con't) Our brethren have discouraged our hearts,

Here they use the word masas, signifying “to melt.” Further, the word “heart” is singular akhenu hemasu eth l’vavenu – “our brothers have melted our heart.” It is a collective heart of the people which is referred to. The contrast to the state of Christ on the cross is then seen. From Psalm 22 –

“I am poured out like water,
And all My bones are out of joint;
My heart is like wax;
It has melted within Me.” Psalm 22:14

The people’s collective heart melted from fear, not trusting in the Lord. Whereas Christ’s heart melted from full trust in the Lord, not fearing the ordeal He faced, but rather petitioning the Lord for deliverance. Israel on the other hand only saw the state of the foe...

²⁸ (con't) saying, “The people are greater and taller than we;

There is no article before the word. It is an exclamation of awe – “People greater and taller than we.” The word greater speaks of the number of them. But the spies had also told the people of the immense size of some of the inhabitants using the term anshe midot, or “men of measures.”

It is a way of saying they were twice as tall as normal men. Even if it is true that there were men of great size living in the land, the implication is that this is the state of all of them. It is a great exaggeration.

The people were just like any others, but with some exceptions. However, in their cowardice, they magnified the lie in order to stop the heart of even the most trusting soul in regard to the word of the Lord. And more...

28 (con't) the cities are great and fortified up to heaven;

Again, there is no article before “cities,” and the word “heavens” is plural – “the heavens.” The words are of awe and fear – “...cities, great and fortified, up to the heavens.” It is a hyperbolic statement that goes all the way back to Genesis 11 where the people determined to build a tower “whose top is in the heavens.”

The idea is that those in Canaan were like gods, dwelling in inaccessible strongholds which cannot be defeated. It is undoubtedly the Lord’s intent, as revealed through the author of Hebrews, to show that the work of Christ is contrasted, directly, to this statement of the people here in Numbers and Deuteronomy.

In Hebrews 7, speaking of the priesthood of Christ, and in His mediatorial role which grants His people access to God in heaven, he says, “For such a High Priest was fitting for us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and has become higher than the heavens” (Hebrews 7:26). Paul then uses this notion of Christ’s capabilities, now accessible to God’s people, to explain our abilities now in Christ –

“For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal but mighty in God for pulling down strongholds, ⁵ casting down arguments and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ, ⁶ and being ready to punish all disobedience when your obedience is fulfilled.” 2 Corinthians 10:4-6

What Israel was to face in a physical realm is equated directly to what the church faces in a spiritual realm. Where Israel failed to trust the Lord, we are asked to be resolute in trusting Him. The foes we face are far greater, but through Christ, we can indeed prevail.

28 (con't) moreover we have seen the sons of the Anakim there.”

Again, the article is left off and the clause begins with a superlative, v'gam bene anaqim rainu sham – “And moreover, sons Anakim we have seen there.” It is as if this is the epitome of the dangers. “Yes, there are many and huge people. And yes, there are great and fortified cities reaching to the heavens. But even more, this! These fellows are to be feared even more than the rest!”

Anakim comes from anaq, meaning “neck.” Thus, the Anakim are a clan of people known for their unusual long or thick necks, or the adornments on their necks. In stating the name, it shows that their reputation went ahead of them.

There was no need for further explanation. The name itself drew fear from those who heard it spoken. In this, their reputation is elevated to a position greater than even that of the giant, fortified cities already described.

In Numbers 13:22, it was seen that they were associated with the Egyptians. In this, they presented a fearful challenge to Israel. They had left Egypt and the Egyptians behind, but these people are probably a force allied with Egypt through their ancestry, and they will be eager to destroy the people who had destroyed their families at the Red Sea.

But the thinking is confused, because it was the Lord who had destroyed all of the Egyptians at the Red Sea. To fear a group of people such as this, when the Lord had already proven His capabilities, was dismissive of the greatness He had already displayed. What is ironic, is that Moses takes these words of cowardice, and he appropriates them in chapter 9, saying –

“Hear, O Israel: You are to cross over the Jordan today, and go in to dispossess nations greater and mightier than yourself, cities great and fortified up to heaven, ²a people great and tall, the descendants of the Anakim, whom you know, and of whom you heard it said, ‘Who can stand before the descendants of Anak?’” Deuteronomy 9:1, 2

Moses takes their words and turns them around to make the point to the people who are about to enter Canaan that even if it seems like the obstacles are so great, the Lord is far greater. But he was consistent in this, even when they first were set to enter...

*Woe to us, for we shall die
And woe to us that it shall come to pass
There is no hope in the Lord; no need to try
Through this great chasm, we cannot pass*

*We might as well go back from where we came Living there was better than we have it now
We are going to die, either way, just the same
We might as well live it up there; some way, somehow*

*Oh! My people, if you know already that you are going to die
Then why not trust Me and take the path that I provide
Is it not better to simply believe? Give it a try!
Just have faith, and I will be your Guide*

II. Yet, For All That! (verses 29-33)

²⁹ “Then I said to you, ‘Do not be terrified, or afraid of them.

Here is a new word, arats. It signifies being in fearful awe, and thus terrified. Moses supplements that with another word with a similar meaning showing how truly terrified the people were.

What Moses now says, through the next few verses, was not recorded in Numbers 14. All it says is that Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before the assembly. Putting the two accounts together shows that what is now stated was while they were there humbling themselves in that way.

However, the words now are a repeat of what was said to the people before they had sent out the spies. In verse 21, which we looked at last week, he had already told them to go possess the land and to not fear or be discouraged.

However, in verse 22, they asked first for men to go before them. These men, meaning the spies, had gone before them. Based on their report, it is obvious what would be the outcome. Despite this, Moses’ words were of confident assurance. There was no need to be in any type of fear because of...

³⁰ The LORD your God, who goes before you,

In the Hebrew there is a strong emphatic form used by Moses, Yehovah elohekem ha’holek liphnekem hu – “Yehovah your God the Goer before you, HE.” It was Moses’ way of recalling to their minds what He had already done.

HE had gone before them. HE had taken them through the Red Sea. HE had brought water out of the rock, provided manna each morning, gave quail when desired, and so on. This same God who tended to them before, was THE GOER before them and He would continue to do so...

³⁰ (con't) He will fight for you,

As background to these words, Moses called to their memory the events which came about after they departed from Egypt. At that time, Israel found themselves in a fearful position. As it said in Exodus 14:10-12 –

“And when Pharaoh drew near, the children of Israel lifted their eyes, and behold, the Egyptians marched after them. So they were very afraid, and the children of Israel cried out to the LORD. ¹¹ Then they said to Moses, “Because there were no graves in Egypt, have you taken us away to die in the wilderness? Why have you so dealt with us, to bring us up out of Egypt? ¹² *Is this not the word that we told you in Egypt, saying, ‘Let us alone that we may serve the Egyptians’? For it would have been better for us to serve the Egyptians than that we should die in the wilderness.”*

After their cries of terror, it then said –

“And Moses said to the people, ‘Do not be afraid. Stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which He will accomplish for you today. For the Egyptians whom you see today, you shall see again no more forever. ¹⁴ The LORD will fight for you, and you shall hold your peace.’” Exodus 14:13, 14

This is the same thing that Moses now again conveys to them. The Lord is their God, He is the One who goes before them, and it is He would will fight for them. The battle is decided, and the victory is already attained, if they will simply believe and act. Just as when He redeemed them, so He will follow through and deliver them...

³⁰ (con't) according to all He did for you in Egypt

Egypt was the enemy, they were in hot pursuit, and the people had nowhere to flee to. And yet, the Lord acted, and He delivered. The event was just a year earlier, and it ended more than two hundred years of waiting, many of them in hard bondage and labor. Of that affliction, they had been personally freed by the Lord.

Now this same group of people stood at the door of Canaan. It was they who had been hemmed in on the shores of the Red Sea. The warriors were coming, the battle would be engaged, but the people of the Lord did not have to lift a finger in the process.

All they had to do was, by faith, step between the walls of water on the dry ground and pass through the sea. In doing so, the Lord would be at their head, guiding them, and the Lord would be their rearguard, protecting them. They did, and – by faith – they passed through the sea and to safety on the other shore.

But Moses adds in another note for them to consider. They were not blind and needing to be led by the hand from a foe they could not see or perceive. Rather, the events which occurred did so, as Moses says...

³⁰ (con't) before your eyes,

The events occurred, they were accomplished solely by the Lord, and He had done it right before their eyes. It wasn't a story that had been passed down from one generation to the next, embellishing the account as the years passed.

Their eyes beheld the events, and they personally participated in them through a simple act of faith. Moses said this as an appeal. The people were to favor their past experiences, in regard to the power of the Lord, over the current dismal report of the spies about a matter which had not even been beheld by their same eyes.

“You have seen what came about! And this... this is nothing in comparison to what has been. Have faith! Trust in the Lord! It is He who will deliver!” But even that was not the end of the Lord's tender care for them – by a longshot. Rather, Moses continued to remind the people, as he humbled himself on his face before them, of the other tender acts of the Lord...

³¹ and in the wilderness where you saw how the LORD your God carried you,

This is not speaking of the time of the wilderness wanderings after turning from Canaan. This is speaking of the journey from the Red Sea to Mt. Sinai. It is a general repeat of the words of the Lord in Exodus 19, after the people had arrived at the sacred mountain –

“And Moses went up to God, and the LORD called to him from the mountain, saying, ‘Thus you shall say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel: ⁴ ‘You have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I bore you on eagles’ wings and brought you to Myself.’” Exodus 19:4

Moses is remembering that and reminding the people of it. They had been without water, and the Lord provided water. They had been without rest, and the Lord gave them the Sabbath. They had been without food, and the Lord gave them manna. They had been attacked by Amalek, and the Lord defeated them before Israel.

On and on, every step of the way, the Lord tended to Israel, carrying them upon Himself as they approached the sacred mountain that He had promised they would come to.

One can look at the entire history of Israel. They had been redeemed from Egypt. They had been brought out of the nations and into their own land. Throughout all of their years, they complained and moaned and turned away from the Lord, and yet the Lord kept them as a unique possession.

And eventually, He brought them to the Promise. Christ came, they saw Him, and they interacted with Him. He promised them Himself, the true Manna. He offered of Himself, the true Rock from which the water flowed.

He said that He would give them rest from their weary labors if they only came to Him. He even called the law up to the sacred mountain where He reminded the people of these things when that same law was nailed to the cross. He bore Israel through the wilderness of their years...

³¹ (con’t) as a man carries his son,

In Isaiah 46, the Lord makes a contrast between His care for Israel and how a man cares for his dead idols. Speaking to them about His care for them, He says –

“Listen to Me, O house of Jacob,
And all the remnant of the house of Israel,
Who have been upheld by Me from birth,
Who have been carried from the womb:
⁴ Even to your old age, I am He,
And even to gray hairs I will carry you!
I have made, and I will bear;
Even I will carry, and will deliver you.” Isaiah 46:3, 4

And of how man treats his dead idols, He then says –

“To whom will you liken Me, and make Me equal
And compare Me, that we should be alike?

⁶They lavish gold out of the bag,
And weigh silver on the scales;
They hire a goldsmith, and he makes it a god;
They prostrate themselves, yes, they worship.

⁷They bear it on the shoulder, they carry it
And set it in its place, and it stands;
From its place it shall not move.
Though one cries out to it, yet it cannot answer
Nor save him out of his trouble.” Isaiah 46:5-7

This is the same thought, though less refined in some ways, that Moses presented to the people. Moses is asking the people to remember His care for them, how He carried them, even as a Father carries His son, bearing them upon Himself.

But in not trusting the Lord who had carried them, they were placing their trust either in themselves, or in something, or someone, who had no power to deliver them.

The Lord had proven Himself reliable throughout their walk to Sinai. He had proven Himself reliable at Sinai. And, further, he had brought them right to the doorstep of promise...

³¹ (con't) in all the way that you went until you came to this place.'

The words, “until you came to this place,” mean Kadesh in the Wilderness of Paran, where they camped and waited for, and received, the report from the spies. From Egypt to Canaan, the Lord had carried them.

Now, even after the bad report, they were petitioned to trust the Lord, have faith in His abilities, capabilities, and promises, and to step – by faith – into the promised possession.

Here is Israel, sitting on the banks of the Jordan in Moab, and being given a recounting of what occurred, and what brought them to 38 years of disaster and death in the wilderness. In preparation for them to trust the Lord and to enter the promise, Moses will give them the most comforting of words to hold fast to. It is a word similar to what he had spoken to their fathers there in Kadesh –

“The eternal God is your refuge,
And underneath are the everlasting arms;
He will thrust out the enemy from before you,
And will say, ‘Destroy!’” Deuteronomy 33:27

Again, and after having gone through the Numbers sermons, we don’t need to go back and review all the details of how what occurred was given to point to Israel’s rejection of Christ. We know this and we know the consequences of it.

Suffice it to say that God brought Israel out for Himself. He brought them through the wilderness of the years leading up to Christ. He gave them every hint of who He would be, what He would do, and how He would do it – even if only in type and shadow.

From there, He brought them through the cross and directly to the promised inheritance. All they needed to do was to believe, nothing more. If so, entry into the true Land of Promise would be theirs...

³² Yet, for all that,

u-vadavar hazeh – “And in the word, the this.” The structure of the words, and the inclusion of a strong pause mark, known as an athnakh, calls for a paraphrase to grasp the meaning, “And yet, despite all that, and as incredible as it may seem...”

There is a note of utter astonishment at what he is about to say. It is as if Moses has laid the entire presentation out before them from his first appearance to the people in Egypt, through the plagues, through the Exodus, through the wilderness, through almost a year at Sinai – never without the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night – through the giving of the law, the construction of the tabernacle, the ordination of the priesthood, the acceptance of the priesthood in a display of fire from heaven, in the organization of the people around the sanctuary, in the march to Canaan, and in ten thousand details which came about in between these magnificent events, and which were accompanied by the daily giving of enough manna to feed a company of well over a million people... “And yet, despite all of that, and as incredible as it may seem...”

³² (con’t) you did not believe the LORD your God,

The sin of unbelief is laid at the feet of the people there listening to Moses. And his words contain a participle which indicates ongoing, even permanent, unbelief, “You still were not believing.”

It doesn't matter that his audience was underage at that time and that it was actually their fathers before them – all of whom had now died, minus Moses, Joshua, and Caleb. Moses tells those before him that they did not believe, and the condition persisted. Israel is a collective whole, and the guilt of the congregation is imputed to the whole, even if believing individuals (such as Joshua and Caleb) are excepted from the overall program.

The typology is not to be missed. God had brought Israel out, He had brought them through the law, through the prophets, through the feasts, and through the types and pictures of the coming Messiah. He brought them through the birth of the King, through the confirmation of that by the Magi, through the young Boy who astonished those at the temple, through the miracle at Cana in Galilee, through the healing of lepers, through the restoration of sight to the blind, through the sinless Life which they beheld, through the raising of the widow's son, and the raising of Lazarus. He had brought them through the events of Palm Sunday, through the passion of His Christ, through the cross and burial, and through the resurrection and ascension of the Lord, and in ten thousand details which came about in between these magnificent events... “And yet, despite all of that, and as incredible as it may seem...”

“You still were not believing the Lord your God...”

³³ who went in the way before you

ha'holekh liphnekem ba'derek – “The Goer before you in the way.” What is Moses speaking of? The way to the promise – the inheritance. He is speaking of the way to the land where the Lord's people would dwell. In order to go to that place, the Lord went the way to that place first. One cannot reach the promise without first taking the way to it.

And if the Lord took that way, then that way is the same that His people would take. In other words, what Moses says here is repeated by Jesus in John 14:2, “I go to prepare a place for you.”

Christ spoke of the true Land of Promise – the inheritance. He was speaking of the way to the land where His people will dwell. In order to go to that place, He had to go the way to that place first. And in so going, He made the way clear.

This is because He is not only the GOER, but He is the WAY. Nothing about what lies ahead can be separated from who the Lord is. Understanding the connection, Moses continues by saying to them that the Lord went in the way before them...

33 (con't) to search out a place for you to pitch your tents,

The Lord led the way in order for the people to follow. The ultimate destination was Canaan, the Land of Promise. The people were led, every step of the way, even to the threshold of the land, by the Lord. The path was clear, the steps forward were set, and all the people had to do was simply believe and press on.

This is an obvious statement reminding the people that they had asked for the spies to be sent. This was not the Lord's decision, but rather He approved of their request. But it was an unnecessary part of what the Lord was doing. He was going to prepare a place for them. He had gone first, and He had provided the way. Again, "I go to prepare a place for you."

33 (con't) to show you the way you should go,

The Lord went first so that His people would know how to arrive at the location He had determined for them. They need do nothing but follow the way which He determined in advance. The march of Israel, and the Lord's going forth before them was not because the Lord needed to discover something unknown to Him, but to provide a picture of what He was going to do in Christ –

"Thomas said to Him, 'Lord, we do not know where You are going, and how can we know the way?'"

⁶Jesus said to him, 'I am the way, the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through Me.'" John 14:5, 6

The way was to be set, it was to be fixed, and the inheritance was not to be obtained in any other way than at the determination of the Lord. But the way was marked out in such a way that for any who desired to take it, it could be taken...

33 (fin) in the fire by night and in the cloud by day.

The fire and the cloud were visible manifestations of the invisible God. The Lord made His presence known so that the people would know He was among them. All they had to do was to accept the Lord's word at face value, believe that same word, and enter into the promise by following the visible manifestation He provided.

But even with all of those evidences, Israel failed to simply believe. They didn't believe the Lord at Kadesh in the Wilderness of Paran, and they didn't believe the Lord Jesus as He revealed His glory to them when He came to dwell among them – He, the visible manifestation of the invisible God.

As Joseph Benson says, and as we partially cited in our opening, "...their disbelief of that promise which was typical of gospel grace; to signify that no sin will ruin us but unbelief, which is a sin against the remedy, and therefore without remedy."

This is confirmed in Scripture by the author of Hebrews who refers to this very passage while making his case for the people to let go of their unbelief and to come to Christ for the true rest which these types and shadows only anticipated, as seen in Hebrews 3:16-19 –

"For who, having heard, rebelled? Indeed, was it not all who came out of Egypt, led by Moses? ¹⁷ Now with whom was He angry forty years? Was it not with those who sinned, whose corpses fell in the wilderness? ¹⁸ And to whom did He swear that they would not enter His rest, but to those who did not obey? ¹⁹ So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief."

Moses, through this discourse, diligently set about to impress upon the minds of the people that the fault of not entering the promise, not obtaining the inheritance, and not receiving the promised rest was entirely their own fault, and the guilt of their actions rested solely upon them.

The author of Hebrews then shows that the fault of the people, and of every evil that has come upon them for the past two thousand years, is entirely of their own making, and the guilt of their actions rests solely upon them.

The Lord provided everything necessary for them to enter, and yet they did not enter in because of unbelief. May that not be said of us here today.

Rather, through a simple act of faith, for Jew or for Gentile, the author of Hebrews clearly and unambiguously states the result with the words, "For we who have believed do enter that rest.” Look to the cross, understand what it means to you as a person, and by a simple act of faith receive the good news of Jesus Christ. Be reconciled to God and enter into the promised rest.

Closing Verse: “Let not your heart be troubled; you believe in God, believe also in Me. ² In My Father’s house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. ³ And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to Myself; that where I am, there you may be also. ⁴ And where I go you know, and the way you know.”

⁵ Thomas said to Him, “Lord, we do not know where You are going, and how can we know the way?”

⁶ Jesus said to him, “I am the way, the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through Me.” John 14:1-6

Next Week: It is Christ who for us, the victory He did win... (He Brought Us out From There That He Might Bring Us In) (Resurrection Day Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Goer Before You – HE

“Nevertheless you would not go up
But rebelled against the command of the LORD your God
And you complained in your tents, and said
Words which were tragically flawed

“Because the LORD hates us, He has brought us out of the land
Of Egypt to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us
Where can we go up?
That day you all made a terrible fuss

Our brethren have discouraged our hearts, saying
“The people are greater and taller than we, so we are aware
The cities are great and fortified up to heaven
Moreover we have seen the sons of the Anakim there

“Then I said to you, ‘Do not be terrified, or afraid of them
The LORD your God, who goes before you, He will fight for you
According to all He did for you in Egypt before your eyes
And in the wilderness, so also He did do

Where you saw how the LORD your God carried you
As a man carries his son, in all the way that you went
Until you came to this place
Upon you all that care He lovingly spent

Yet, for all that, you did not believe the LORD your God
Who before you to search out a place went in the way
For you to pitch your tents, to show you the way you should go
In the fire by night and in the cloud by day

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 1:34-46 (Many Days in Kadesh)

Deuteronomy opened just where Numbers left off, right on the banks of the Jordan, opposite Jericho, while still in Moab. In relation to prophetic events which that pictures, it looks to Israel – the people Israel – finally ready to enter into their long-withheld inheritance.

Thus, it is a book which is perfectly suited for the day and age in which we live. The recounting of the events from Israel's previous time on the doorstep of entry is to remind them of what got them into the pickle they were in. That comes down to one key thought – a lack of faith in what the Lord promised, and in His provision for obtaining that promise.

Israel, the people, are again united and back in the land, but despite this, they have not entered into their rest. Only a fool would look at the world and think they had. Therefore, they are being prepared for entry into it, just as Israel was being prepared for entry into it with Moses' final words to them.

But even though Moses' words are words of law, it is not the law which will allow them to enter that precious and blessed Rest of God...

Text Verse: *“What shall we say then? That Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness of faith;³¹ but Israel, pursuing the law of righteousness, has not attained to the law of righteousness.³² Why? Because they did not seek it by faith, but as it were, by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumbling stone.³³ As it is written:
‘Behold, I lay in Zion a stumbling stone and rock of offense,
And whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame.’” Romans 9:30-33*

Today, as with the last passage we looked at, we are seeing a review of what occurred in Numbers 14. Israel failed to have faith in the Lord, and Israel went about seeking to obtain their inheritance under their own power. This is a futile endeavor indeed.

And yet, it is a common theme found among many denominations. The question is, “What thing must I do to be pleasing to God.” Seventh Day Adventists say you must observe the Sabbath, and they observe various dietary restrictions, and so on.

Hebrew Roots adherents go with the Sabbath and dietary restrictions, and they add in the Feasts of the Lord and a host of other pick and choose laws from the Law of Moses.

The Church of Christ mandates water baptism... but it has to be done in the Church of Christ. We could go on and on with the man-made laws and or pick and choose precepts from the Bible for numerous other cults and sects. But in the end, only one thing is needed.

That one thing is so simple, so seemingly insignificant, that Paul calls it a stumbling block. A stumbling block is something that you don't even notice. You just trip right over it. All that God asks of you to be right with Him is to accept His simple gospel of peace. Nothing more. Israel missed it, and it cost them greatly.

Let us hold fast to this precious gospel, and let us never deviate from it. It is the central point of theology when it comes to the salvation of the human soul, and it is found right in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. He Shall Cause Israel to Inherit It (verses 34-40)

³⁴ “And the LORD heard the sound of your words, v'yishma Yehovah eth qol divrekem – “And heard Yehovah the voice of your words.” It is an interesting phrase which is only seen again in this manner in Deuteronomy 5:28. As this is so, one should stop and look at why it is spoken in this way. This verse is an obvious reference to Numbers 14:1 –

“So all the congregation lifted up their voices and cried, and the people wept that night.” Numbers 14:1

This was speaking of the faithless people who heard the report of the spies, failed to have a trust in or fear of God, and who turned their hearts away from Him and back toward Egypt. However, Deuteronomy 5:28 is speaking of an entirely different account. There it says –

“Then the LORD heard the voice of your words when you spoke to me, and the LORD said to me: ‘I have heard the voice of the words of this people which they have spoken to you. They are right in all that they have spoken.’”

-Deuteronomy 5:28

This event was just after the giving of the Ten Commandments. At that time, the people said –

“Now all the people witnessed the thunderings, the lightning flashes, the sound of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking; and when the people saw it, they trembled and stood afar off. ¹⁹ Then they said to Moses, ‘You speak with us, and we will hear; but let not God speak with us, lest we die.’” Exodus 20:18, 19

One can see the complete contrast between the two accounts. In Exodus, the people had a fear of the Lord, they understood His power and majesty, and they asked Moses to be the one to stand between them and the Lord, knowing that His glory was too great for them as a people to interact with.

Despite this, just a year later, the people had lifted up their voices and wept, fearing the miniscule inhabitants of Canaan more than the great and awesome Lord who led them. The pillar and the cloud were still there – right there – with them. The manna came daily. The rock brought forth water for them. The promises had been given, and yet the people failed to simply believe and trust. Thus, Yehovah heard the voice of their words...

³⁴ (con’t) and was angry,

v’yiqsoph – “And was angry.” The word qatsaph comes from a primitive root meaning “to crack off.” Thus, it figuratively means to burst forth in rage. The Lord was furious at them. They had spoken what was right concerning His majestic power while at Sinai, and yet from that time on, they had constantly needled Him, rejecting His presence every step of the way.

Now, while literally one step away from Canaan, they needled Him again, failing to trust that the same power which was able to part the Red Sea, and the same power that spoke in thundering majesty from the top of Sinai, was able to uphold His promises for them to subdue the enemies which were like fleas before Him in Canaan. Surely He was furious...

³⁴ (con’t) and took an oath, saying,

v’yishava lemor – “And swore, saying.” The word is shava, coming from a primitive root signifying “to be complete.” It is used as a denominative from the word sheva, or seven. Thus, when swearing, a person is said to seven himself. In other words, it is as if he has made his declaration seven times.

The Lord's word is its own oath, and so when He spoke, it was a firm and decided declaration that would certainly come to pass...

³⁵ 'Surely not one of these men of this evil generation shall see

Most translations miss the poignant nature of the words. They are very direct. A literal translation would be, "If! Shall see one of the men, the these, the generation, the evil, the this." A suitable paraphrase would be, "Surely not one of these men – this evil generation – shall see."

The entire body of people is collectively lumped together as one evil generation. Only later will exceptions be noted, thus demonstrating the horrendous nature of the collective body.

^{35 (con't)} that good land

ha'arets ha'tovah – "the land, the good." Whereas the people are one giant body of evil, the land which they are now to be denied is purposefully contrasted to them. They are the evil; it is the good. None of them shall partake of that which was set aside for them.

One can, quite clearly, see Jesus' parable of the great supper in Luke 14 reflected here. When speaking of the kingdom, one of those with Jesus said to Him, "Blessed is he who shall eat bread in the kingdom of God!"

In response, Jesus spoke a parable about a man who gave a great supper and invited many to join him. All of the people made excuses as to why they couldn't come to the banquet. In response, Jesus exclaimed, "For I say to you that none of those men who were invited shall taste my supper" (Luke 14:24).

The types and shadows of the past hauntingly called out for the people at Jesus' time to pay heed. The land was prepared for Israel, and later the kingdom was prepared for them. But they failed to accept the Lord's provision for the things...

^{35 (con't)} of which I swore to give to your fathers,

Here, the word shava, or swear, is again used. Thus, a contrast is set forth. The oath had been made, and thus it must come about. However, Moses said in verse 34 that the Lord made an oath against these people. That also must come about. But the later oath cannot negate the previous oath.

This is a point that must not be missed. The oath was made, and it must be performed. This oath is made, and it will be performed. But what was previously spoken will still surely come about. The land will come to Israel, and the kingdom will come to Israel. But there will be a delay in both.

For now, the oath which Moses refers to was spoken in Numbers 14:28, 29 –

“Say to them, ‘As I live,’ says the LORD, ‘just as you have spoken in My hearing, so I will do to you: ²⁹The carcasses of you who have complained against Me shall fall in this wilderness, all of you who were numbered, according to your entire number, from twenty years old and above.’”

This is later referred to by the psalmist –

“Then they despised the pleasant land;
They did not believe His word,
²⁵ But complained in their tents,
And did not heed the voice of the LORD.
²⁶ Therefore He raised His hand in an oath against them,
To overthrow them in the wilderness.” Psalm 106:24-26

It is also referred to in Psalm 95, a psalm which is then referred to and minutely analyzed in the book of Hebrews –

“For He is our God,
And we are the people of His pasture,
And the sheep of His hand.
Today, if you will hear His voice:
⁸ “Do not harden your hearts, as in the rebellion,
As in the day of trial in the wilderness,
⁹ When your fathers tested Me;
They tried Me, though they saw My work.
¹⁰ For forty years I was grieved with that generation,
And said, ‘It is a people who go astray in their hearts,
And they do not know My ways.’
¹¹ So I swore in My wrath,
‘They shall not enter My rest.’” Psalm 95:7-11

In Hebrews, the author – speaking to the collective body of Israel – refers to their having been denied entry, but that it would someday come to pass. But he also notes that those individuals who had believed in the Lord Jesus had, in fact, entered their rest. Even before the cross, there was this separation of views about Jesus. This is reflected in the gospel of John –

“Then many of the Jews who had come to Mary, and had seen the things Jesus did, believed in Him. ⁴⁶ But some of them went away to the Pharisees and told them the things Jesus did. ⁴⁷ Then the chief priests and the Pharisees gathered a council and said, ‘What shall we do? For this Man works many signs. ⁴⁸ If we let Him alone like this, everyone will believe in Him, and the Romans will come and take away both our place and nation.’” John 11:45-48

There were those who feared the Romans, and there were those who believed. And at Moses’ time, there were those who feared the Canaanites, and there were those who believed the Lord and His promises. That is reflected in what Moses will next say –

³⁶ except Caleb the son of Jephunneh;

Here, as in Numbers 14:24, Caleb is singled out, being named first and apart from Joshua. Moses uses a new word, zulah, to identify him. It signifies “except,” or “besides.” Caleb, if you remember, means “Dog.” In Numbers, he was identified as the Kennizite.

Though of the tribe of Judah, his Gentile ancestry was thus highlighted to make a picture. Dogs are unclean animals. With his name and his ancestry taken together, he forms a picture of the Gentile people who demonstrated faith in the Lord while the Jews collectively rejected Him.

His father’s name, Yephunneh, or “He will be beheld,” anticipated the fact that Christ would be beheld by the Gentiles even when He was rejected by the Jews. Of Caleb in relation to the promise, it then says...

³⁶ (con’t) he shall see it,

Caleb, picturing the Gentile believer, is set in total contrast to those of verse 35. The entire congregation is an evil generation, but Caleb is set apart from them because of His belief and faith in the Lord.

He is singled out first because he fills the typology of what would come during the Gentile-led church age. It is those who the Jews consider “dogs,” meaning Gentiles, that would inherit the lead role in this dispensation. While Israel was under punishment for not heeding the Lord, Caleb obtained the promise.

Caleb is promised entry into Canaan; Gentile Christians are promised entrance into the heavenly kingdom. It must be remembered that Caleb remained in the wilderness for the forty years, but his time was one of promise leading to entry into Canaan – something which will now occur.

Israel collectively retained the promise as well, as will be seen in the coming verses. The collective group, made up of individuals, was cursed, leading to their deaths. Understanding the typology leads to understanding what has happened and continues to happen with Israel, even today.

For individual Israelites, some bear the promise and some do not. For those who do, the time here is simply in anticipation of entering what God promised. Caleb possessed that promise; all who trust in Christ do so as well.

³⁶ (con't) and to him and his children I am giving the land on which he walked,

Caleb anticipates the Gentiles who believed in Christ. But it was not just a group who believed and then the generation ended. Rather, the Gentiles fully followed after the Lord, and they assumed the lead role in the church age – one generation to the next. Each received the promise of inheriting the land on which their father walked.

This was spoken of by Paul, right at the end of Acts –

“Therefore let it be known to you that the salvation of God has been sent to the Gentiles, and they will hear it!” Acts 28:28

Paul then further explains this in Romans 11:25 –

“For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own opinion, that blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in.”

While Israel was set aside due to unbelief, the Gentiles were brought in and have continued filling the typology of Caleb...

36 (con't) because he wholly followed the LORD.'

yaan asher mille akhare Yehovah – “because which he fully followed Yehovah.” Though nobody translates it as such, this should be an independent clause, not part of the quote of the Lord. The quote should end with, “I am giving the land on which he walked.”

The reason for this is that the words are a close repeat of Numbers 14:24 where the Lord is speaking. There, it said v'male akhare – “and has fully followed after.” Here, it says, mile akhare Yehovah – “fully followed after Yehovah.” It is now Moses repeating the thought that the Lord had spoken in Numbers, and so he adds in the name of the Lord to show this.

Being certain of this, and not wanting to simply pass over it without really seeing if it is an independent clause or not, I asked Sergio in Israel to tell me his thoughts. They are long and detailed, but I am going to include them in their entirety so that you can see how thorough he is when considering the Word of God and, thus, how carefully and thoroughly we should evaluate it –

~~~~~

“The Hebrew text does not have quotation marks, so to be able to know where the quote begins and where it ends one would use context, cantillation marks, or the space gaps in the ancient manuscripts.

It seems like your proposition makes the most sense from a contextual perspective. However, to see if such interpretation is possible from a technical perspective, I went “digging” into the Qumran scrolls. (notice Sergio’s pun!)

The most ancient manuscripts we have of Deuteronomy are the Dead Sea scrolls. There are over 70 fragments of the book of Deuteronomy, found in 11 different caves, and dating back to the 1st century BC. However, despite having such a vast number of partial fragments of the book of Deuteronomy, they are mostly copies that were discarded by the scribes because they had at least one small defect.

And so, we have all these copies but almost all of them are missing the first chapter. In my opinion, it is because in the first chapter they must have still had great focus and attention to details, and so only a few mistakes were made as they were copying the first chapter. As a result, only a handful of scrolls were discarded. This isn’t looking good for our quest.

But the situation gets even tougher. There is only ONE scroll that has the verse you are looking for, verse 36. This scroll is coded as 4Q35 (4 stands for the 4th Qumran cave, and the 35 stands for the 35th manuscript that was found in the cave). The scroll that was found there was in pretty bad shape as it dates back to the 1st century BC, so we only have partial fragments of this chapter (see attached images). After digging through 44 fragments, I was finally able to find Verse 36. But unfortunately, this fragment is incomplete. So, we can't really see if there's a space gap. All this hard work and we're still left with a mystery!

So, I moved on to the more modern manuscript, the Masoretic text which dates back to the 9th century, to see if we can find any clues there. And Wallah! In the Masoretic Text, the sentence "because he wholly followed the Lord," has a Hebrew cantillation mark, called Zakef Gadol, on the word "because." This mark functions as a separator between two segments of a verse. So, it appears that the Masoretic Text possibly agrees with this interpretation. It is quite possible that the words "because he wholly followed the Lord" were not part of the words which the Lord spoke but part of Moses' explanation.

~~~~~

Hopefully, you can now partially appreciate how much work it can be to evaluate a single portion of a single sentence that not a single scholar or translation seemed to care about, but which I and Sergio were determined to see through for your better understanding of God's precious word.

Caleb pursued the Lord, and the Lord's ways, step by step, in faith. He simply trusted the Lord's promise and defended his position by saying, "Let us go up at once and take possession, for we are well able to overcome it" (13:30). He did not waiver in his resolve even when the rest of the people turned against the Lord.

³⁷ The LORD was also angry with me for your sakes, saying, 'Even you shall not go in there.

Verses 37 & 38 are stated here to relay why there needs to be a change in the leadership before the people can enter the promise. In it is a new word, anaph, translated as "angry." It comes from a primitive root signifying "to breath hard," and thus it signifies being enraged. At first, it seems highly curious that Moses would add this note in here.

The people were sentenced to die in the wilderness based on their disbelief in Numbers 14. However, the event which brought about the downfall of Moses and Aaron didn't occur until Numbers 20, where it was in the first month of either the third year of their travels, or the first month of the 40th year. We logically defended why it was the 3rd year at that time.

Regardless of that, though, it was a considerable time after the events of Numbers 14 – either many months or many years. And yet Moses seems to place it in conjunction with the people’s faithless turning from the Lord.

Further, it was Moses’ own fault that this punishment was laid upon him. He and Aaron were told to speak to the rock before the eyes of the people and water would flow out. But the word was disobeyed, Moses struck the rock twice, and he failed to believe the Lord and hallow Him in the eyes of the people.

So why is Moses stating this in conjunction with the people’s rebellion and as if he is passing the buck to them concerning his own faults? It is because it was the fault of the people, indirectly.

The word Moses uses here, which is translated as “for your sakes,” is galal. It signifies “on account of.” It comes from the verb galal which means to roll. Thus, this speaks of a circumstance as if rolled around.

In other words, if the people simply trusted the Lord, obeyed His word, and went into the land, the entire congregation would have been in Canaan, not at Kadesh. There would have been no need for Moses to lose his temper with them and strike the rock.

But the circumstances rolled around, bringing him to the point where those events occurred. The fault was immediately his, but the blame still rested upon Israel because of what occurred at this time. This is why he includes this circumstance here now. It is also seen in the words of Psalm 106 –

“They angered Him also at the waters of strife,
So that it went ill with Moses on account of them;
³³ Because they rebelled against His Spirit,
So that he spoke rashly with his lips.” Psalm 106:32, 33

³⁸ Joshua the son of Nun, who stands before you, he shall go in there.

Just as the people could not enter except Caleb, so the leader could not enter. But the people would not be left without leadership. Joshua also demonstrated faith, and he too would enter – assuming the mantle of responsibility from Moses before that occurred.

Joshua means “The Lord is Salvation.” He is identified as the son of Nun, or “To propagate” or “Increase.” He pictures those faithful Jews who would receive the inheritance in Christ. Naming his father, Nun, shows that the Lord, would propagate, or increase His offspring. Moses, representing the law, would die outside of the promise. Joshua, then anticipates faith in Christ who then would bring the people into the promise. Through the death of the law comes entry into the inheritance, pictured by Joshua.

³⁸ (con’t) Encourage him, for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

khazeq ki hu yankhilenah eth Yisrael – “Strengthen, for he shall cause to inherit it Israel.” One can see Jesus all over this. Paul says in 1 Corinthians 15:56 that “The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law.”

Moses sinned and had to die outside of the promise, but Joshua, or “The Lord is Salvation,” will be strengthened by Moses, the law. In Christ’s death under the law, the inheritance is obtained for those who die to the law through Christ.

³⁹ Moreover your little ones and your children, who you say will be victims, who today have no knowledge of good and evil, they shall go in there; to them I will give it, and they shall possess it.

The Lord continues the thought. The people were held accountable for their failure to believe, but another generation will be brought in, and they will possess the inheritance. For Israel in the wilderness, he says that their children would do so.

However, the typology calls for more than just little ones and children. The reason for this is that the sentence was on all twenty and above. Though the term “no knowledge of good and evil” is given as a general statement in contrast to the adults, it cannot actually be said that those nineteen and younger have no knowledge of good and evil. That is an inherited knowledge of all people.

It is the same term, tov va’rah, that goes back to the early Genesis account. Paul says that by the law is the knowledge of sin. Thus, in type, those who will enter are those who are not under law. In other words, in type, this speaks of those who have come to God through Christ and who are thus – as Paul says – “not under law but under grace.”

It is such a generation as this who will be given the inheritance, and they will possess it. The typology is clearly evident. Only after the law has died can the promised inheritance be possessed, and that can only come through faith. For those who fail to believe...

⁴⁰ But as for you, turn and take your journey into the wilderness by the Way of the Red Sea.

This is found in the second half of Numbers 14:25. The people were warned that the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley which lay before them. It was a warning because the Lord had determined to not lead them into the land.

Therefore, if they went, they would go alone and face the enemy alone. Instead, they were told to move out into the wilderness by the Way of the Red Sea.

As there are fingers of the Red Sea on both sides of Sinai, it could mean either direction, if the intent was west, it would have been ironic that they were being told to go in the general direction they had wanted to go when they rebelled, meaning back to Egypt.

Either way, it was away from Canaan and toward the sea. But in another ironic turn, they rebelled against this command in order to do on their own what they had just failed to do with the Lord leading them...

*It is an evil generation that has rejected Me
They failed to simply take Me at My word
They are as stubborn as the mule. How can it be?
If only they would pay heed to what they have heard*

*But their ears are closed, and their eyes are made dim
They will not pay heed to the thing that I say
“Who is the Lord? What care do we have for Him?”
Oh, Israel! Why must it be this way?*

*If you will just come to Me, I would heal you Here I am with my arms open wide
My hands and feet have been pierced through
And the spear has gone deep into my side*

Come to Me, Oh Israel
When you do, from then on, all things will go well

II. From Seir to Hormah (verses 41-46)

⁴¹ “Then you answered and said to me,

Moses emphatically states his words to them, vataanu vatomeru elay – “and you answered, and you said to me. He is showing that they were the initiators of another rebellion, and that he had nothing to do with what occurred.

^{41 (con’t)} ‘We have sinned against the LORD;

khatanu l’Yehovah – “We have sinned against Yehovah.” It is a true statement. The people had sinned through cowardly unbelief. That will next be complemented with the sin of disobedient presumption...

^{41 (con’t)} we will go up and fight, anakhnu naaleh v’nilkhamnu – “we will go up and we will fight.” There is no inclusion of the Lord in these words. To them, it is a battle that they alone will fight and prove themselves worthy of claiming the promise. It is a classic picture of those who attempt to earn salvation, and thus heaven, through their own efforts.

This is especially so for those who do so under the guise of obedience to the Law of Moses. They rejected God’s offer of Christ, and they then fall back on the commands of the law in an attempt to prove their own merit. This is exactly seen in the next words...

^{41 (con’t)} just as the LORD our God commanded us.’

No! The land is an inheritance. An inheritance cannot be earned. Further, the Lord consistently said to the people that He would give them the land. It is He who would lead the battles. He never commanded them to fight apart from His presence.

The picture of Israel attempting to merit God’s inheritance through the law is perfectly seen here. And this is no different than any others who do the same today – Jew or Gentile – relying on the commands of the law to obtain what God offers apart from the law.

⁴¹ (con't) And when everyone of you had girded on his weapons of war, you were ready to go up into the mountain.

Here is a word found only here in Scripture, hun. It signifies, "to be easy." Rather than "you were ready to go up," it should say something akin to, "and you thought it would be easy to go up." This is certain because of what will come in the next verse. But it is also evident from the typology.

People who pursue the law think it is easy to earn God's favor through the law. They look at their own actions, with their own weapons of war, as the assured ticket to obtaining the promise. This is exactly taught by Paul in Ephesians 6 –

"For we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this age, against spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places.¹³ Therefore take up the whole armor of God, that you may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand."

-Ephesians 6:12, 13

Only through the Lord and the weapons He has provided can man stand in the battle, and only through Him can man prevail. For Israel, their actions provided us with these typological truths.

⁴² "And the LORD said to me, 'Tell them, "Do not go up nor fight, for I am not among you; lest you be defeated before your enemies."

This verse corresponds directly to Numbers 14:42. The Lord would not go with them into battle. If the Lord was among them, their victory in battle would be guaranteed. Without Him, their own defeat was certain. Such is true with salvation. With the Lord, heaven is guaranteed, but without Him, only death and destruction await.

⁴³ So I spoke to you; yet you would not listen,

Moses conveyed the word of the Lord to the people. It is the sin of willful disobedience. The Lord spoke, Moses conveyed the word, and the people ignored the word. It is just what Paul speaks of in Galatians and elsewhere. He rebuked those of the circumcision for attempting to merit God's favor through the law. But they refused to listen...

⁴³ (con't) but rebelled against the command of the LORD,

Here, as in verse 26, it says, va'tamru eth pi Yehovah, "and rebelled against the mouth of Yehovah." The Lord spoke forth his word, and yet the people rebelled against it. However, as in verse 26, the word is marah, or rebelled.

The word marah comes from a root meaning, "to make bitter." Thus, we can get the mental picture of, "You brought a state of bitterness to the mouth of the Lord." That is then highlighted by the next clause...

43 (con't) and presumptuously went up into the mountain.

The word translated as presumptuously is zud. It signifies to boil or seethe. The people didn't just bitterly rebel, but they did so in a boil. One can almost see a pot of bitter herbs being brought to a boil which is then presented to the Lord. The taste would be nauseous and revolting.

This is exactly the type of attitude those who pursue the law bring to God's presence. It is precisely what Paul speaks of in Romans 8 concerning those who attempt to walk according to the flesh, meaning who use the law as a means of justification –

"For those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. ⁵ For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. ⁷ Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be. ⁸ So then, those who are in the flesh cannot please God." Romans 8:4-8

44 And the Amorites who dwelt in that mountain came out against you

The word says, "the Amorite." It is speaking of the people group as a whole. In Numbers 14, however, it said, "Then the Amalekites and the Canaanites who dwelt in that mountain came down and attacked them."

Here, the general term for all of the dwellers of Canaan is used. Amorite comes from amar, meaning to utter or say. Therefore, the name signifies being spoken of, and thus "Renowned." Next, interestingly, it says...

44 (con't) and chased you as bees do,

Here, the devorah, or bee, is introduced. It is the same as the name Deborah. The word comes from the verb davar, or “to speak,” and it is the root of the noun “speech,” or “word.” Just as words are spoken in an orderly motion, so are the movements of bees.

What is interesting, is that the word Amorite comes from “to utter,” or “to say,” and bee comes from “to speak.” The picture should be clear. The Lord is using this to form a picture of His word. For example, bees produce honey, something that is equated to the words of the Lord.

Those who convey the word, and the word itself, speak against those who attempt to find justification for themselves apart from the Lord. The result of such is...

⁴⁴ (con't) and drove you back from Seir to Hormah.

This is also something not recorded in Numbers 14. There it says, “and drove them back as far as Hormah.” Seir was never mentioned. The word Seir comes from sear, or hair, which signifies awareness. Man is a sentient being, he has awareness, in particular, an awareness of sin due to the law.

Hormah, or Kharemah, comes from the word kharam, it means to make accursed, or utterly destroy. Thus, it means “Destruction.” Again, the picture follows logically. Man, with an awareness of sin, but who attempts to be justified apart from the righteousness of Christ, is accursed and is to be destroyed.

Paul speaks of this in Galatians 1 in regard to those who attempt to pervert the gospel of Christ, particularly by reinserting the law –

“But even if we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel to you than what we have preached to you, let him be accursed. ⁹ As we have said before, so now I say again, if anyone preaches any other gospel to you than what you have received, let him be accursed.” Galatians 1:8, 9

⁴⁵ Then you returned and wept before the LORD, but the LORD would not listen to your voice nor give ear to you.

The people of Israel rejected the Lord’s promise and provision concerning entrance into Canaan, and they were banished to the wilderness. In this, they wept before the Lord, but He paid no attention.

Likewise, and sadly, the people of Israel rejected the Lord's promise and provision concerning entry into His promised rest through the Person and work of Christ. They were banished among the nations and have wept consistently for a return to the promise.

For 2000 years, the proclamation has been, "Next year in Jerusalem." But the Lord would not listen to their voice, nor would He give ear to them. The pattern was given so that the people would see, open their eyes and their hearts to Christ, and be healed. But the healing would not come...

⁴⁶ "So you remained in Kadesh many days, according to the days that you spent there."

Here, a statement of fact is made. The people of Israel remained in Kadesh "many days." The amount of speculation on how long they were in Kadesh is long, and the commentaries vary immensely. But what needs to be understood is that Kadesh is where the spies went out from and returned to.

It is also the last place that Israel was before beginning their trek back towards Canaan. Despite all the places that they are recorded as having trekked to during their time in the wilderness, the location of Kadesh is thus given to sum up the entire period of living in the wilderness.

The meaning of Kadesh is simply, "Holy." As much as being a central point of reference for all of their time in the wilderness, then, it is also given to make a theological point concerning Israel. Despite being under punishment, despite being banned from entry into the promise, and despite the death of all of the people who rebelled, Israel was still set apart as "holy."

The Lord made a covenant with Israel, and their faithlessness in no way negates His faithfulness. Though they were, in and of themselves, unholy the Lord maintained them as "holy" for His own sovereign redemptive purposes.

Their trek back to Canaan, as we previously saw, and as we will see again in the review of their historical events in the chapters to come, anticipates their trek back to the Lord and to being brought into the covenant promises found in Jesus Christ.

The lesson of what we have seen – for Israel and for us – is that we cannot come to God apart from the merits which are found in Jesus Christ. No obtaining of the inheritance is to be found in the Law of Moses, or in our futile attempts to be justified under that law through our own efforts.

This is the purpose of the story we have seen, and it is a truth which continues on throughout all of the Old Testament and even into the New. God has presented us with His final, full, and finished plan of salvation, and it is one which is solely dependent on the merits of Jesus Christ, and Him alone, for our justification before Him. Let us hold fast to this truth, and let us rest in the grace of God which comes through Him.

Closing Verse: “But God forbid that I should boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world has been crucified to me, and I to the world. ¹⁵ For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision avails anything, but a new creation.”

-Galatians 6:14, 15

Next Week: Deuteronomy 2:1-12 It’s been a long walk and the times have been rough... (You Have Skirted This Mountain Long Enough) (6th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Many Days in Kadesh

And the LORD heard the sound of your words
And was angry, and took an oath, saying
‘Surely not one of these men of this evil generation Shall see that good land of which I swore to give to your fathers
-----so to you I am relaying

Except Caleb the son of Jephunneh
He shall see it, and to him and his children, so stands my word
I am giving the land on which he walked
Because he wholly followed the LORD

The LORD was also angry with me for your sakes, saying ‘Even you shall not go in there, so to you I submit Joshua the son of Nun, who stands before you, he shall go in there
Encourage him, for he shall cause Israel to inherit it

'Moreover your little ones and your children
Who you say will be victims, when you disbelieved and quit
Who today have no knowledge of good and evil
They shall go in there; to them I will give it
-----and they shall possess it

But as for you, turn and take your journey
Into the wilderness by the Way of the Red Sea

"Then you answered and said to me
'We have sinned against the LORD; we will go up and fight
Just as the LORD our God commanded us
We will show those folks our strength and might

And when everyone of you had girded on his weapons of war
You were ready to go up into the mountain
----- the Lord's word you did ignore

"And the LORD said to me, 'Tell them, "Do not go up nor fight
For I am not among you; lest you be defeated before your enemies
-----yes, in their very sight

So I spoke to you; yet you would not listen
But rebelled against the command of the LORD
And presumptuously went up into the mountain
Not paying heed to His word

And the Amorites who dwelt in that mountain
Came out against you and chased you as bees do
And drove you back from Seir to Hormah
Then you returned and wept before the LORD, but the LORD
-----would not listen to your voice nor give ear to you

So you remained many days in Kadesh is where
According to the days that you spent there

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard

Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 2:1-12 (You Have Skirted This Mountain Long Enough)

As Moses continues to recount the events of Israel's past, since leaving Mount Horeb, he turns now to the ending of their time of punishment. In this, other than a single verse which speaks of "many days," he skips over all of the events of the past thirty-eight years of Israel's existence.

They were simply wasted years of waiting for a promise that was sure to come, but not for any of those who were under the sentence. They had to be taken out of the way while the years passed by in unrecorded silence.

The memory of the events would live on with the people, but the importance of them to the greater plan of redemption is not worth mentioning. And yet, within the words of today's verses is the simply stated note that during all of that time, the Lord had continued to bless the people and look over them.

It is a note of grace that should not have been unexpected. The Lord promised that even in their punishment, He would preserve them. And He was faithful to do so.

Text Verse: "Let your conduct be without covetousness; be content with such things as you have. For He Himself has said, "I will never leave you nor forsake you." ⁶ So we may boldly say:

'The LORD is my helper; I will not fear.

What can man do to me?" Hebrews 13:5, 6

One of the most common communications I get is that of people who wonder if the Lord has forgotten them. I'm talking about saved believers. If those same people would heed the story of Israel's history, they might not feel any less troubled in their affliction, but they would certainly feel less troubled in their convictions.

In other words, things may be so tough that they truly consume your joy, but they should never be so tough that you question if the Lord is there with you in your trials. The lesson of Israel is the lesson of the believer. They are a template for us to look at and see the faithfulness of God in all situations.

Here we are, adopted sons and daughters of God because of the giving of His Son for us. If God continued to tend to Israel, even when they have turned their back on that, do you honestly believe He has, or He even could, neglect you? May we never consider it!

Have faith, and trust in the Lord, even when the whole world has collapsed around you. He is there, and your situation is not out of His control. He has allowed it in your life for His own reasons, and I assure you, they are good reasons. Be sure of this. It is another truthful lesson that we can find in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Descendants of Esau (verses 1-7)

¹“Then we turned and journeyed

This is exactly what the Lord had told Israel to do before their willful act of disobedience of turning to fight those in Canaan. They were told this in Numbers 14:25. Moses repeated that in Deuteronomy 1:40 –

“But as for you, turn and take your journey into the wilderness by the Way of the Red Sea.” Deuteronomy 1:40

They had failed to trust that the Lord could deliver them, but when they came under sentence for that sin, they then added the sin of presumption and went to accomplish the deed themselves. The pattern was set, and it followed in the coming of Christ.

The people had failed to believe God's provision as found in Christ, and they came under the sentence of God's punishment. However, instead of accepting this, they added in their own attempt to obtain the promise apart from Christ.

They codified Jewish law through the Talmud, and they relied on their own deeds known as teshuvah and mitsvot – repentance and supposed obedience to their law – in a futile attempt to restore themselves to God.

However, that system can never restore man to God. The law was incapable of doing so. Adding in their own deeds could only make it worse. The people were, and are, defeated. They were turned away from the promise...

¹ (con't) into the wilderness

As was explained in Chapter 1, in the Bible the wilderness signifies an uncultivated area, not specifically a barren desert. It is a place of God's grace and of closeness to God, but it is also a place of testing.

For some, such as Israel, the testing resulted in disobedience. For others, such as when Christ was tested, it is a place of fellowship through obedience. The wilderness and the law are closely connected because it is by law that testing is accomplished.

Israel, under Moses, turned into the wilderness in exile and for the execution of their punishment based on their disobedience. Israel after Christ's work, and still under the law, were turned into the wilderness in exile for the execution of their punishment based on the very law that Christ had fulfilled.

They rejected Him, and so the punishments of the law (Leviticus 26) were the stated remedy to someday lead them back to Him. This turning into the wilderness was...

^{1 (con't)} of the Way of the Red Sea,

In being told to take their leave of the Land of Promise, by turning into the wilderness in the Way of the Red Sea, an ominous hint of doom can be seen. In Hebrew, the Red Sea is yam suph, or "Sea of the Ending." The sea is a place of confusion and turmoil. It is, as in Daniel, a picture of the confusion of the nations of the world –

"I saw in my vision by night, and behold, the four winds of heaven were stirring up the Great Sea." Daniel 7:2

In Revelation, this is said of such things –

"Now I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away. Also there was no more sea." Revelation 21:1

The word suph, comes from a verb meaning to cease, or end. That comes from a primitive root which means to end or perish. The people were sentenced to perish, and the path which they were to take signified exactly that.

The people of Israel were told they were to perish and here they are on the Way to the Red Sea. The people of Israel rejected Christ, and they were set to perish among the chaotic nations of the world. The exile would not be short, and the people would suffer because of their failure to simply believe the Lord. In Numbers 14:35, the Lord said, "In this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die."

And in John 8:24, the Lord said –

“Therefore I said to you that you will die in your sins; for if you do not believe that I am He, you will die in your sins.”

1 (con’t) as the LORD spoke to me,

Israel was given the choice of believing the Lord – who is the fulfillment of the law – and live, or failing to believe and die by the curse of the law. They unwisely chose the latter, and so the Lord spoke to them of exile, punishment, and perishing in death. Thus...

1 (con’t) and we skirted Mount Seir for many days.

va’nasav eth har seir yamim rabim – “And we went around Mount Seir days many.” This is the first time this statement is made. However, it is given as a statement of fact. The implication is that they simply compassed about the mountain for the entire time they were dying off in the wilderness.

The term “many days” is indefinite. It simply means “all of the time that we were in this particular situation.” This then encompassed a period of thirty-eight years – from the time that they departed the border of Canaan, until the time they began their trek, once again, toward Canaan.

These words here beg us to revisit the symbolism. Mountains in the Bible have various meanings, but ultimately, they picture forms of government. There is, in Isaiah, the mountain of the Lord. Babylon, in Jeremiah 51, is called the “destroying mountain.”

Here we have Mount Seir, which has been what Israel has circled for an extended period during her exile. The meaning of the name Seir comes from the same as sear, or hair. Thus, it is Mount Hairy, or Mount Shaggy.

The appearance of Seir is that of a hairy mountain because of the many low bushes that cover it. But, as has been seen many times, hair in the Bible pictures awareness, particularly awareness of sin. For example, the sa’iyir or hairy goat is that which was given for sin in Leviticus.

Hair was first seen in Genesis 25:25 where it noted the birth of Esau. There it said, “He was like a hairy garment all over; so they called his name Esau.” He was given as a picture of Adam, the man that was made, and who had an awareness.

This is particularly so because of sin. In his sin the Lord said of the man, “Behold, the man has become like one of Us, to know good and evil” (Genesis 3:22). Jacob, on the other hand, was specifically noted as being smooth, implying not hairy. That was seen later in Genesis 27:11 saying, “Look, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth-skinned man.”

Jacob pictured Christ, the man without sin. Thus, encircling har seir, or Mount Seir – meaning “Mount Hairy” – is the fulfillment of Jesus’ words to Israel, exactly as He had spoken in John 8:24, “Therefore I said to you that you will die in your sins; for if you do not believe that I am He, you will die in your sins.”

Israel’s exile was not under the government of Christ, which they had rejected, but under the government of man under sin – the law. Moses is recounting a true narrative of Israel’s wanderings, but he is also prophetically laying out the future of Israel after the coming of Christ.

The introduction of this note now concerning the wilderness, the Way of the Red Sea, and Mount Seir is astonishingly and sadly seen in the history of Israel since Christ’s coming.

²“And the LORD spoke to me, saying:

v’yomer Yehovah elay lemor – “And Yehovah said to me, saying.” As has been explained before, the word davar, or spoke is similar to, but not the same as, amar, or said. The first conveys the idea of instruction to be followed. The second includes a broader thought of participation by the one being instructed. That is the case here...

³‘You have skirted this mountain long enough;

The words are similar to Deuteronomy 1:6 – “The Lord our God spoke to us in Horeb, saying: ‘You have dwelt long enough at this mountain.’” Mount Horeb is Mount Sinai. It was where the law was given. In Galatians 4, Paul explicitly shows that Sinai pictures the law and the place of the law which is the earthly Jerusalem –

“Tell me, you who desire to be under the law, do you not hear the law? ²² For it is written that Abraham had two sons: the one by a bondwoman, the other by a freewoman. ²³ But he who was of the bondwoman was born according to the flesh, and he of the freewoman through promise, ²⁴ which things are symbolic. For these are the two covenants: the one from Mount Sinai which gives birth to bondage, which is Hagar— ²⁵ for this Hagar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, and corresponds to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children— ²⁶ but the Jerusalem above is free, which is the mother of us all.”

Galatians 4:21-26

The idea we can get from these statements of Deuteronomy 1 and 2 is first, “You have been under the law long enough. Turn and head towards the promise in Christ.” And then after they rejected Him, “You have been under punishment for rejecting the Lord long enough. Therefore...”

³ (con’t) turn northward.

penu lakem tsaphonah – “turn you northward.” The noun tsaphon, or north, comes from the verb tsaphan, meaning to hide by covering over, treasure up, conceal, and so on. That which has been hidden away and treasured up for Israel is now to be pursued.

It is an event which has, in its truest sense, begun for them in recent years. Israel is gaining an awareness of Christ, even if the number of them is small at this point. However, they, as a whole, will come to know Him in His fullness when He is finally revealed to them. The words here anticipate that day.

⁴ And command the people, saying, “You are about to pass through the territory of your brethren, the descendants of Esau, who live in Seir;

The narrative here seems confusing when put side by side with the same account in Numbers 20. In fact, it seems like there is a standing contradiction. There it said –

Please let us pass through your country. We will not pass through fields or vineyards, nor will we drink water from wells; we will go along the King’s Highway; we will not turn aside to the right hand or to the left until we have passed through your territory.”

¹⁸ Then Edom said to him, “You shall not pass through my land, lest I come out against you with the sword.”

¹⁹ So the children of Israel said to him, “We will go by the Highway, and if I or my livestock drink any of your water, then I will pay for it; let me only pass through on foot, nothing more.”

²⁰ Then he said, “You shall not pass through.” So Edom came out against them with many men and with a strong hand. ²¹ Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his territory; so Israel turned away from him. -Numbers 20:17-21

It says, they weren't allowed to go through Edom, but here it at first seems that this wasn't so. However, in the account from Numbers, Moses said in verse 17, "Let us pass through your country." In that, he first used the term b'artsekha, or "your land."

Edom refused that request. Later, in that verse, he uses the word gebulekha, or "your border." However, Edom told them to take a hike. And so, they did. The words here in Deuteronomy are after the fact. The Lord says, atem oberim bigbul akhekem – "You are about to pass over the border of your brothers."

It says nothing of the land, only the border. Thus, Israel – instead of continuing on through Edom – turned back and skirted the border of Edom, not attempting to breach the borders of the land. This is seen later in Judges 11 –

"And they went along through the wilderness and bypassed the land of Edom and the land of Moab, came to the east side of the land of Moab, and encamped on the other side of the Arnon. But they did not enter the border of Moab, for the Arnon was the border of Moab." Judges 11:18

The perceived difficulties of such passages are often because of translational errors, or because the narrative is so widely disbursed throughout the pages of Scripture. In the end, there is nothing contradictory here.

Rather, Israel while heading towards Canaan, first petitioned Edom to pass through, Edom refused, Israel turned back and the Lord told them they were going to skirt their land and not to pester them, and they did just that. The reason for the coming words of verse 5 is because...

^{4 (con't)} and they will be afraid of you.

This was prophesied in the Song of Moses from Exodus 15 –

"Then the chiefs of Edom will be dismayed;
The mighty men of Moab,
Trembling will take hold of them;
All the inhabitants of Canaan will melt away." Exodus 15:15

The people of Edom would have heard of the Lord's deliverance of Israel. Even though it was quite a few years earlier, that would still be a story frequently repeated by the people. The people who would encounter them later would be afraid of their coming and act in a hostile manner towards them. This is exactly what occurred, and so the Lord said...

⁴ (con't) Therefore watch yourselves carefully.

v'nishmartem meod – “And watch yourselves exceedingly.” The slightest provocation was bound to turn into a very large problem, and so all of the people were told to conduct themselves accordingly. They had already been warned away. If they could not follow the eastern borders of Edom, they would be forced to return back into the wilderness. And so...

⁵ Do not meddle with them,

Here is a new word translated as “meddle,” garah. It signifies to stir up. It comes from a primitive root meaning to grate, and thus it figuratively means to anger. In Daniel, it is translated as “mobilize” or “wage war,” and that may be the sense here.

The verb is in the reflexive form, and so it means to excite oneself against another. Israel was not to provoke Esau, and they were not to make any threatening actions against them...

⁵ (con't) for I will not give you any of their land,

The division is to be complete. What has been given to Esau is to remain theirs. Israel is on a trek elsewhere and none of those who are going there will remain behind to occupy the land of Edom...

⁵ (con't) no, not so much as one footstep,

The Hebrew is more expressive, ad midrakh kaph ragel – “not as much as a tread of the sole of a foot.” This is another new word, found only here in Scripture, midrakh, or “foot place.” It comes from the verb darakh, to tread the foot.

The people of Israel were not to be given a single place for a foot to tread from Edom. Later, Edom and Israel will be back and forth in war, so it must be that the account here is given to fit certain typology.

⁵ (con't) because I have given Mount Seir to Esau as a possession.

Again, a new word is found here, translated as “possession.” It is yerushshah. The word comes from yarash, signifying to inherit or take possession. Thus, it speaks of an inheritance.

Mount Seir, standing as representative of the land of the Edomites, is given to them. It is their possession as a right. It is not Israel’s inheritance. Here in verses 4 and 5 are a picture of the land given to man. The name Esau is derived from the verb asah, to do, or make. It is the word used in Genesis 1:26 when God said –

“Let Us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness; let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, over the birds of the air, and over the cattle, over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creeps on the earth.”

-Genesis 1:26

Thus, Esau pictures the made man, Adam. The Lord said that He has given har seir, “Mount Hairy,” meaning the government of awareness – the world, to Esau, meaning Adam. The picture is accurately described in Psalm 115 –

“The heaven, even the heavens, are the LORD’s;
But the earth He has given to the children of men.” Psalm 115:16

Man has been given the earth to dwell on. However, there are certain men who are given more. Just as the heavens are the Lord’s, so the Lord’s redeemed are given a heavenly inheritance –

“But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, ⁵ even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), ⁶ and raised us up together, and made us sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus.” Ephesians 2:4-6

This is but one example of such references to the heavenly anticipation and of the heavenly inheritance spoken of as belonging to those in Christ. Israel has been under punishment, but the Lord promised that after that time, they would be brought into Canaan, the Land of Promise.

It would be contradictory to give the land of Adam, meaning the earth, to the redeemed of the Lord. The stress in the words of this verse are to note – without any doubt – that the inheritance of the Lord’s people is not a land of the consciousness of sin, but a land where sin is no longer imputed.

The whole thought of these verses is well summed up in these words from Hebrews 9 –

“...how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, cleanse your conscience from dead works to serve the living God? ¹⁵ And for this reason He is the Mediator of the new covenant, by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions under the first covenant, that those who are called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance.” Hebrews 9:14, 15

The conscience of sin (dead works) is cleansed in Christ. Thus, Israel is being prepared in type here in Deuteronomy to be redeemed from the transgressions of the first covenant, meaning the Law of Moses, brought into the New Covenant – the Christ covenant – and in this, they will receive the eternal inheritance, heaven.

This is why the stress is seen concerning the possession of Esau. The ironic part is that while Israel was under punishment for rejecting Christ, the Gentiles were grafted into the commonwealth of Israel, but eventually Israel will be brought back into right standing with God through Christ, receiving the benefits of the commonwealth that they had missed for so long.

⁶You shall buy food from them with money, that you may eat;

There is something to be said for the life that God’s people now live, and it is reflected in this verse here. Though there is the promise of a heavenly inheritance, there is also the reality of the earthly life we live.

Jesus spoke of it in His high priestly prayer, noting that those who are His remain in this world but are not of this world. Paul speaks of such things, noting that we can use the things of this world, but they are temporary and passing away.

This is not a stretch of the analysis. The last time the word for “buy food” was used was back in Genesis where the brothers of Joseph were sent to Egypt to buy grain. The word is shavar and comes from shever, cracked grain, rather than bar, or purified grain.

Following the details of the use of the words in Genesis showed a spiritual application. What is bought here is temporary and only sustains the body temporarily. That a spiritual picture is being made is even more evident in the next words...

^{6 (con’t)} and you shall also buy water from them with money, that you may drink.

The word for “buy” here is a completely new, different, and rare word, karah. It is associated with the word karah, meaning to open or dig. In other words, it is probably saying that if a well is dug, silver would need to be paid for the water obtained from it.

The idea here is that in this life, there is work involved in what we obtain, and what we obtain is temporary. Israel is passing by the land of Edom, but along the way, they must purchase what they need and partake of what the land of Edom offers. Someday, they will enter the Promise and partake of what is everlasting. That is reflected in the words of Isaiah –

“Ho! Everyone who thirsts,
Come to the waters;
And you who have no money,
Come, buy and eat.
Yes, come, buy wine and milk
Without money and without price.” Isaiah 55:1

It’s also seen in its ultimate sense in Revelation, saying, “And the Spirit and the bride say, ‘Come!’ And let him who hears say, ‘Come!’ And let him who thirsts come. Whoever desires, let him take the water of life freely” (Revelation 22:17).

⁷“For the LORD your God has blessed you in all the work of your hand.

Despite being in the wilderness, Israel was not without work. They had artisans and craftsmen who exquisitely built the sanctuary – wood crafters, goldsmiths, stoneworkers (gemstones), workers in linen, incense, and so on. None of these skills would be wasted, and even more, they would have been used, perfected, and passed on to the next generations.

These things could easily have been traded or sold on caravan routes. They also had livestock which would have multiplied abundantly over the previous years. With the Lord’s blessing, even though they didn’t deserve it for rejecting Him, their wealth would have increased notably, and that was after having plundered the Egyptians when they left.

Likewise, Israel in exile around the world has continued to receive the Lord’s blessing. Anywhere you go in the world, you will find well-established and wealthy Jews – whether they deserve it or not. They have the finest skills, and quite often, their names reflect that – Neil Diamond, Joel Goldsmith, Adam Silver, and so on.

The words here beautifully reflect the state of Israel as it is closing in on its meeting with destiny. It is Yehovah, despite their failure to acknowledge Him, who has so blessed them. Further...

7 (con't) He knows your trudging through this great wilderness.

The sense of the word yada, or “know,” here is that of tending to and watching. The Lord watched over Israel as they continued their walk through the long duration and the vast wilderness. His presence never left them, despite the sentence which lay over them for their rejection of Him.

Only one who isn't looking, or who isn't willing to look at Israel throughout the past two thousand years, can deny the parallel. The Lord has punished them, but he has also watched over them to preserve them, as He promised.

7 (con't) These forty years the LORD your God has been with you;

The number forty in Scripture signifies “a period of probation, trial, and chastisement” (Bullinger). Israel received all three of these – from Egypt all the way through until where they are, and where they are heading.

Forty “is the product of 5 and 8, and points to the action of grace (5), leading to and ending in revival and renewal (8).” This is exactly what is seen here in Deuteronomy, and what is pictured in Israel's return from their time of punishment and exile. Through all of it, the Lord acknowledges that it is He who has been with them, tending to them, and preserving them so that...

7 (con't) you have lacked nothing.”

lo khasarta davar – “No have you lacked a word.” The word davar, or word, by implication, means a thing, or a matter. This is true for Israel in the wilderness. The Lord kept them, and they had no lack.

However, I would suggest that for the typology of what this pictures, it asks for us to retain the original sense. Despite being in exile, Israel never lacked the word. Wherever they have gone, the word has been available to them. It is they who disregarded it, but the word has always been there with Israel waiting for them to return to it and find what they had missed.

*You have skirted this mountain long enough
Your time of testing has come to an end
Though the past has been difficult and rough Into the Land of Promise, you I will send*

*And it is yours because the battle is already won
There is nothing for you to do but to trust and believe
All has been accomplished by My dear Son
Because of Him, you I will never forsake and never leave*

*Trust in Him and the promise is opened to you
The victory is assured, so do not fear at all
There is nothing more that you need to do
Only upon My Son, you must call*

II. The Descendants of Lot (verses 8-12)

⁸“And when we passed beyond our brethren, the descendants of Esau who dwell in Seir, away from the road of the plain, away from Elath and Ezion Geber, we turned and passed by way of the Wilderness of Moab.

Israel’s travels, after having been refused travel through Edom, took them south to Elath, the very tip of where Israel ends on the Red Sea today. They then went a few miles south and east to Ezion Geber which is in Jordan today. From there, they turned north, went around Edom’s land, and passed through by way of the wilderness of Moab.

The plain, or aravah, comes from arav, meaning to grow dark. That is the same as arav, meaning a pledge, as in a covering with a texture. In the giving of a pledge, there is – in a sense – an intermingling of two into one. Israel is being united again with the Lord and away from the sentence they have been under.

Elath comes from ayil, meaning a ram, and thus one thinks of a protrusion. Hence Elath means “Trees” because they protrude up. But ayil also comes from ul, meaning strength. One can think of the strength found in trees, leading to that idea. Without being dogmatic about this, does it signify that Israel is being strengthened for their final reconciliation with the Lord? Such may be the picture.

Ezion is derived from atseh, the backbone. Geber speaks of a man. Thus, Ezion Geber is literally “Backbone of a Man.” As the backbone is the foundation of man, one could logically assume that this means, “Foundation of a Man.”

The foundation of a man is what he was created from and for. When man gets away from contemplating those things, the Lord works to redirect him so that there will be reconciliation. This was the purpose of Israel’s exile.

Even though those in exile were destroyed along the way, the purpose of the exile was to bring the body of people back to Him in a restored relationship.

⁹Then the LORD said to me, ‘Do not harass Moab, nor contend with them in battle, for I will not give you any of their land as a possession, because I have given Ar to the descendants of Lot as a possession.’”

The word translated as “harass” comes from a root meaning to cramp. Thus, this is speaking of besieging Moab. Israel is instructed to not besiege them nor face them in war. Moab means “From Father.” Ar simply means “City.” It is used to speak of the entire land possessed by Moab. And Lot, who hasn’t been seen since Genesis 19, means “Covering,” as if enveloping something.

Without being dogmatic about this picture, my supposition is that this is speaking of Gentile believers. They are “From Father,” they are a gathering of people, as reflected in a city, and the naming of Lot would signify the covering they possess. It is a difficult verse, but this at least sounds correct. Especially because Paul speaks of the saved in Romans 4:7 as having their sins covered.

Despite this, one reason for sparing Moab is because, eventually, a family of Bethlehem would move to Moab during a famine. There, a woman named Ruth would marry into it. From there, and through circumstance, she came into the line of David which eventually leads to the Messiah, Jesus.

¹⁰(The Emim had dwelt there in times past, a people as great and numerous and tall as the Anakim.

Now is introduced a parenthetical thought which will take us to the end of our verses today. This land of Moab was once dwelt in by the Emim. The word is the plural of emah, or terror. Thus, these are “The Terrors.”

They are noted for their greatness, their numbers, and their height – thus they were terrifying to those who came into contact with them. They were noted at the time of Abraham in Genesis 14, but they were eventually destroyed, and the descendants of Lot filled their land.

They are further described as being as tall as the Anakim. As seen in Numbers, anaq, means “neck.” Thus, they were noted either for their necks – being very long or very thick – or for the adornments they wore on their necks.

I would assume that listing them here now is not without purpose. Israel, thirty-eight years earlier, had swooned at the thought of facing the inhabitants of Canaan –

“We are not able to go up against the people, for they are stronger than we.”³² And they gave the children of Israel a bad report of the land which they had spied out, saying, “The land through which we have gone as spies is a land that devours its inhabitants, and all the people whom we saw in it are men of great stature.”³³ There we saw the giants (the descendants of Anak came from the giants); and we were like grasshoppers in our own sight, and so we were in their sight.” Numbers 13:31-33

But if the Emim, who were so great, so numerous, and so tall – even as tall as those doods – could be defeated, then so could the Anakim. As Joshua and Caleb said of them, “...they are our bread.”

For Israel to find this out is a way of bolstering their confidence, in advance, to prepare them for their entry into Canaan. And so, the narrative continues...

¹¹ They were also regarded as giants, like the Anakim, but the Moabites call them Emim.

“Giants,” or Rephaim, comes from a word meaning to sink down or relax. This is similar to the Nephilim. That comes from naphal, meaning to fall. However, Rephaim could also come from a word meaning “to heal.” If so, then it indicates that their size came from being invigorated in some way, probably through special inbreeding.

What this is telling Israel is that the Emim were of the same origins as the Anakim. The Emim got wiped out and were no longer a threat. As this happened by non-whopping people, then Israel was fully capable of whooping up on the whopping ones – the Anakim. But as more encouragement, we continue on...

¹² The Horites formerly dwelt in Seir, but the descendants of Esau dispossessed them and destroyed them from before them, and dwelt in their place,

Here is another group seen in Genesis 14, and who are again seen later mentioned in Genesis 36, ha'khorim, or the Horites. The word comes from chor, meaning a hole or a cave. Thus, these people were troglodytes.

Whether these were large people or not is not stated. With this group being listed within the genealogy of Esau as living in the land, Esau went in and assimilated with them to some extent, but as a people they died out. The point, once again, is that cave dwellers would be hard to drive out, and yet Esau was able to dispossess and destroy them.

This knowledge was sure to strengthen Israel in their determination to follow suit and wipe out the inhabitants of Canaan. With that thought, we read...

¹² (fin) just as Israel did to the land of their possession which the LORD gave them.)

The words here are in the past tense. Three possibilities have been suggested.

- 1) It is spoken as an accomplished fact, even though it is future.
- 2) It is a later insertion by a scribe or,
- 3) this is speaking of the land east of the Jordan which had already been won in battle. This is explicitly stated in Deuteronomy 3.

The third option is certainly what is correct. The note would be pointless if it was a later insertion. Speaking of it in the future is unnecessary in relation to the names of the people who have just been mentioned, and so it is simply a note from Moses giving encouragement to the people to not lose heart as their fathers had.

Rather, they were to trust the Lord and receive their inheritance. And this is a noteworthy place to end the verses. It was the Lord who directed the events of these nations, as He Himself had said. "I have given the land to the descendants of Esau," and "I have given the land to the descendants of Lot."

He had further won the battles over Midian, Sihon, and Og for Israel. This parenthetical insert is prophetically given, then, to reassure Israel of today that He has already won the battles for them. He has sent Christ, Christ has defeated the foes, and all they need to do is – by faith – receive that, trusting in His provision.

The Land of Promise is not unobtainable, but it cannot come through works of the law. It must come by faith in the Lord. He has proven this is true. And so, like Israel of today, we also must simply trust in Him. The battle is not for us to win, nor can it be so.

Christ fulfilled the law for us. Christ lived the sinless life we simply cannot live. And, Christ has covered us with His covering. We must trust that, and keep trusting that, with each step – from salvation to glory – it is the Lord’s battle to win. We are merely temporarily passing through to a land already prepared for us.

Closing Verse: “I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are on the ground, by My great power and by My outstretched arm, and have given it to whom it seemed proper to Me.” Jeremiah 27:5

Next Week: Deuteronomy 2:13-23 They marched until all the rebels were gone. This was the date stamp... (From the Midst of the Camp) (7th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

You Have Skirted This Mountain Long Enough

Then we turned and journeyed
Into the wilderness of the Way of the Red Sea
And we skirted Mount Seir for many days
As the LORD spoke to me

And the LORD spoke to me, saying:
These words He was then relaying

“You have skirted this mountain long enough
Turn northward; time to see some new stuff

And command the people, saying
“You are about to pass through the territory of your brethren
-----the descendants of Esau, who live in Seir
And they will be afraid of you
Therefore watch yourselves carefully, so that they will not fear

Do not meddle with them
For I will not give you any of their land
No, not so much as one footstep
Because I have given Mount Seir to Esau as a possession
-----please understand

You shall buy food from them with money
That you may eat, so you shall do
And you shall also buy water from them with money
That you may drink. Pay heed to what I am telling you

For the LORD your God has blessed you
-----in all the work of your hand
He knows your trudging through this great wilderness
These forty years the LORD your God has been with you
You have lacked nothing. What you needed you did possess

“And when we passed beyond our brethren
The descendants of Esau who dwell in Seir
Away from the road of the plain
Away from Elath and Ezion Geber...

We turned and passed by way
Of the Wilderness of Moab on that day

Then the LORD said to me
‘Do not harass Moab, nor contend with them in battle
-----against them make no aggression
For I will not give you as a possession any of their land
Because I have given Ar to the descendants of Lot as a possession

(The Emim had dwelt there in times past
A people as great and numerous and tall as the Anakim
They were also regarded as giants, like the Anakim
But the Moabites call them Emim

The Horites formerly dwelt in Seir, but the descendants
-----of Esau dispossessed them
And destroyed them from before them by the sword

And dwelt in their place, just as Israel did
To the land of their possession which gave them the LORD)

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 2:13-23 (From the Midst of the Camp)

Three times in just three verses, the narrative today notes that the generation of the men of war was consumed and had perished. And yet, in all three of these verses, it adds on a qualifier. Twice it says, “from the midst of the camp;” once “from among the people.”

What is the Lord conveying to us with that thought? I’ll let you wait until we get there to explain it, but maybe you can guess in advance simply by thinking of the typology of what is being pictured.

Or, maybe you can put it together based on what the rest of the verses say about the nations which are noted as being destroyed in the other verses of our passage. Or, maybe you can put it together by thinking of the fate of those nations which did the destroying.

What is the common denominator between them, and what is the contrast between them and Israel? As you read the word, think on such things. Compare them to the rest of the word, and to what occurs in redemptive history as well, and you can usually piece such things together.

Text Verse: *“Every word of God is pure;
He is a shield to those who put their trust in Him.
⁶Do not add to His words,
Lest He rebuke you, and you be found a liar. Proverbs 30:5, 6*

It’s a good set of words for our text verse for several reasons, but particularly for the words “He is a shield to those who put their trust in Him.” As long as Israel trusted the Lord, Israel was unstoppable. But as soon as they failed to trust Him, or when they trusted in another god, which is no god at all, they would quickly be crushed by their foes.

Israel is given to us as an example to live by and learn from. Sometimes, those lessons apply to us individually, and sometimes they apply to us in a more general sense, but they all have meaning. In following the history of Israel, and by comparing it to what Scripture says about them, one can form a plan for his own walk in this life, even if it is just one big broad plan – “The Lord has spoken, and I will obey the Lord.”

If you go no further than that, you will be far better off than most of the Christians in the world today. Just simply heed His word and obey it... in context of course. If you do these things, you will do well. But you cannot do those things unless you... Anyone? Yes, unless you know His word.

Pay heed to His word after you learn His word. God's directives for you are all to be found in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Just As the Lord Had Sworn to Them (verses 13-16)

¹³ “Now rise and cross over the Valley of the Zered.’

Moses now recounts a momentous event in the life of Israel. In this, he begins with these words, atah qumu v'ivru lakem eth nakhal zared – “Now rise and cross over Valley Zared.” The word nakhal signifies a wadi where water would flow through during the seasons of rain. That word comes from nakhal meaning, “to take possession,” or “inherit.” Zared comes from an unused root meaning to be exuberant in growth of foliage.

This location was first mentioned in Numbers 21:12. Israel had gone from Oboth, to Ije Abarim which is in the wilderness east of Moab, and then they camped in this valley. After camping there, Moses was specifically told to rise and cross over the Valley of Zered. In obedience to that, it next says...

¹³ (con't) So we crossed over the Valley of the Zered.

va'naabor eth nakhal zered – “And crossed over Valley Zered.” It is obviously an important point in their travels. How rare it is to record the command of the Lord and then for the execution of that to be immediately and specifically stated again in this fashion.

The direct command, followed by the immediate obedience, is not unexpected. But the stress in the word of recording both, one right after the other, asks us to consider the event. It is either the beginning of something extremely important, or the ending of something of particular note, or it is both.

Based on the next words, at least the second option is certainly true. A milestone has been reached which is marked out for Israel to remember in the crossing of the Valley of Zered...

¹⁴ And the time we took to come from Kadesh Barnea until we crossed over the Valley of the Zered was thirty-eight years,

Deuteronomy 1:2 notes the arrival at Kadesh Barnea, saying, "It is eleven days' journey from Horeb by way of Mount Seir to Kadesh Barnea." This was the detail given to show that Israel had left Sinai (here called Horeb), and they had an 11-day walk to Kadesh Barnea. From that short walk, they had been offered Canaan, meaning the Land of Promise. All they had to do was go in and receive it.

The Lord promised to go before them, and He promised that it would be their possession. But, as we saw, this did not come about. Immediately after recording the fact that it was an 11-day journey, the next verse said –

"Now it came to pass in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spoke to the children of Israel according to all that the LORD had given him as commandments to them," Deuteronomy 1:3

Something had happened which caused an extended delay in Israel's entering and receiving the promise. They failed to simply believe the Lord and trust His offer. From there, Deuteronomy 1 gave all of the details of that corporate failure of them to simply believe, trust, and receive. The chapter ended with these words –

"So you remained in Kadesh many days, according to the days that you spent there." Deuteronomy 1:46

Without going on, one can do an approximate guess concerning the math based on what has been presented so far. Israel left Egypt and eventually arrived at Sinai (Horeb). Israel departed there, as it says in Numbers 10:11, "on the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year." Moses spoke to Israel the words of Deuteronomy, as it says in Deuteronomy 1:3, "in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month."

The fortieth year, minus the second year, would make 38 years, exactly as noted in this verse. The eleventh month, minus the second month, would make 9 months. Understanding this, the crossing of the Valley of Zered happened sometime before this point – sometime before the passing of the 38 years and 9 months when Moses spoke out these words to the people. That specific timeframe was...

14 (con't) until all the generation of the men of war was consumed

This is exactly what the Lord has promised them, first in Numbers 14:26-30, and then as was repeated in an abbreviated form in Deuteronomy 1:34-38 –

“And the LORD heard the sound of your words, and was angry, and took an oath, saying, ³⁵ ‘Surely not one of these men of this evil generation shall see that good land of which I swore to give to your fathers, ³⁶ except Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him and his children I am giving the land on which he walked, because he wholly followed the LORD.’ ³⁷ The LORD was also angry with me for your sakes, saying, ‘Even you shall not go in there. ³⁸ Joshua the son of Nun, who stands before you, he shall go in there. Encourage him, for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.”

It cannot go without note at this time, that Peter uses the same terminology as is used here when speaking to Israel about their rejection of Christ in Acts 2 –

Then Peter said to them, “Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. ³⁹ For the promise is to you and to your children, and to all who are afar off, as many as the Lord our God will call.”

⁴⁰ And with many other words he testified and exhorted them, saying, “Be saved from this perverse generation.” Acts 2:38-40

Moses called them an evil generation; Peter called them a perverse generation. Both words speak of the moral state of the people of that generation.

Further, and more directly, the author of Hebrews uses this same account from their past, and he equates it directly to their rejection of Jesus their Messiah –

Therefore, as the Holy Spirit says:

“Today, if you will hear His voice,

⁸ Do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion,

In the day of trial in the wilderness,

⁹ Where your fathers tested Me, tried Me,

And saw My works forty years.

¹⁰ Therefore I was angry with that generation,
And said, 'They always go astray in their heart,
And they have not known My ways.'

¹¹ So I swore in My wrath,
'They shall not enter My rest.'" Hebrews 3:7-11

The entire congregation of men of war was set to die outside of the Land of Promise with the exception of those few (meaning Joshua and Caleb) who simply believed.

The same was to be true for Israel at the coming of Jesus. None of those who failed to believe in the Messiah would be brought into the inheritance and God's rest. Rather it would only be those few who would, by faith, accept and believe. Think of this account of Israel's past as we continue the letter to the Hebrews –

Beware, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God; ¹³ but exhort one another daily, while it is called "Today," lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. ¹⁴ For we have become partakers of Christ if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast to the end, ¹⁵ while it is said:

"Today, if you will hear His voice,
Do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion."

¹⁶ For who, having heard, rebelled? Indeed, was it not all who came out of Egypt, led by Moses? ¹⁷ Now with whom was He angry forty years? Was it not with those who sinned, whose corpses fell in the wilderness? ¹⁸ And to whom did He swear that they would not enter His rest, but to those who did not obey? ¹⁹ So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief. Hebrews 3:12-19

None who failed to believe entered the inheritance, not one. Only Joshua and Caleb, who trusted the Lord, could enter. This thought is then summed up in the first verses of Hebrews 4 –

"Therefore, since a promise remains of entering His rest, let us fear lest any of you seem to have come short of it. ² For indeed the gospel was preached to us as well as to them; but the word which they heard did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in those who heard it. ³ For we who have believed do enter that rest..."

-Hebrews 4:1-3

The Bible is so abundantly clear on this. Israel's rejection of the Lord's provision was simply a lack of faith. In that rejection, they died outside of the promise. That was typologically given to us to see Israel's rejection of the Lord's provision in Christ.

Their rejection of Him means that they die outside of the promise. They shall never enter His rest, meaning what God has prepared for His people since man's expulsion from Eden. But for those who simply believed, they do enter that rest. It is in the present tense, indicative mood in the Greek – believe and enter, and it is real and certain.

Despite this rejection of the people, Israel, and despite their banishment from entry into the promise, there is a truth which is inescapable based on Moses' next words...

14 (con't) from the midst of the camp,

The people who rejected the Lord were consumed from the midst of the camp. What does that imply? Without even giving it a second worth of thought, it tells us that there is a camp, and that the camp continues on.

God did not destroy Israel completely. Rather, He maintained them as a people, carefully protecting them from either separating into individual clans and spreading out from one another into different people groups, or from being destroyed as a people, thus ending their nation and culture.

Rather, the camp continued through the wilderness, and Israel continued throughout the many generations since their rejection of Christ. The camp remained. These things happened to them. While the camp continued, those who rejected them were consumed...

14 (con't) just as the LORD had sworn to them.

This goes right back to the words of Deuteronomy 1:34, 35 which was cited earlier. As it said –

“And the LORD heard the sound of your words, and was angry, and took an oath, saying, ³⁵ ‘Surely not one of these men of this evil generation shall see that good land of which I swore to give to your fathers...’”

The Lord took an oath, and as He swore, so He fulfilled. And this fulfillment wasn't a passive waiting around for time to accomplish its work, as is seen in the next words...

¹⁵ For indeed the hand of the LORD was against them,

In the previous verse, the word tamam was used. It was translated as "consumed." It means to come to an end or to finish a matter. Here, it shows that this was actively accomplished by the Lord. His hand was against them as they wandered.

It could be that some tried to escape the camp, leaving the body and heading for some people group around them. If so, He may have sent a lion to destroy them. Or, the person may have come to a camp and been killed by those he came to seek refuge with. Further, he may have sent disease into the camp.

We can only speculate, but the deaths of this generation were complete in scope and number, and they served the purpose of bringing to an end those who had seen the Lord's glory and who failed to believe.

This is exactly what happened to those of Israel who were exiled after rejecting Christ. They may have tried to hide who they were, or they may have tried to leave their collective body, but the Lord searched them out and pursued them relentlessly, just as He promised He would in Leviticus 26.

What Israel faced can only be blamed on Israel. They were warned in advance, they were given the opportunity to believe the Lord. They failed to do so. And, the Lord pursued them, even to the ends of the earth. And yet, the same thought of God's sure punishment is mingled with His unending grace, as is seen in the next words...

^{15 (con't)} to destroy them from the midst of the camp until they were consumed.

Here, he says that the Lord was against them to hamam, or destroy them. The word signifies to put in commotion or throw into confusion. By implication then, it means to destroy. This is what the Lord did to Egypt as Israel crossed through the Red Sea. He threw them into confusion, resulting in their destruction.

Likewise, this was the active hand of the Lord against Israel, until they had come to their end. And yet, the camp remained. The grace of maintaining Israel, even as He destroyed Israel, served a purpose. It was to show Israel, and indeed all peoples of the earth – His holy character.

He had promised to forever keep Israel, and He kept them through the wilderness. Likewise, He had promised to keep Israel, and He has kept them throughout their exile –

“Therefore say to the house of Israel, ‘Thus says the Lord GOD: “I do not do this for your sake, O house of Israel, but for My holy name’s sake, which you have profaned among the nations wherever you went. ²³ And I will sanctify My great name, which has been profaned among the nations, which you have profaned in their midst; and the nations shall know that I am the LORD,” says the Lord GOD, “when I am hallowed in you before their eyes. ²⁴ For I will take you from among the nations, gather you out of all countries, and bring you into your own land. ²⁵ Then I will sprinkle clean water on you, and you shall be clean; I will cleanse you from all your filthiness and from all your idols. ²⁶ I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you; I will take the heart of stone out of your flesh and give you a heart of flesh. ²⁷ I will put My Spirit within you and cause you to walk in My statutes, and you will keep My judgments and do them. ²⁸ Then you shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; you shall be My people, and I will be your God. ²⁹ I will deliver you from all your uncleannesses. I will call for the grain and multiply it, and bring no famine upon you. ³⁰ And I will multiply the fruit of your trees and the increase of your fields, so that you need never again bear the reproach of famine among the nations. ³¹ Then you will remember your evil ways and your deeds that were not good; and you will loathe yourselves in your own sight, for your iniquities and your abominations. ³² Not for your sake do I do this,” says the Lord GOD, “let it be known to you. Be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel!” Ezekiel 36:22-32

Replacement theology fails because it does not take into account the nature of God, the unconditional nature of His spoken word, or the surety of His covenantal promises.

Israel rejected the Lord Jesus, but God did not reject Israel collectively. Instead, He rejected them individually while maintaining them. The camp remains. And because it both remained and remains, there is a time for the punishment to end. For Israel in the wilderness, that time was to end in the crossing of the Valley of Zered.

As we saw, the word translated as “valley,” nakhal, comes from nakhal meaning, “to take possession,” or “inherit.” Zered comes from an unused root meaning to be exuberant in growth of foliage. The significance of the place is that for Israel, abundant life is once again ready to be possessed.

*A whole generation had perished along the way
But the journey brought them back to the land again
Before them lay the prospect of a new day
Behind them lay the bodies of that generation of men*

*In going forward they were to have faith in the Lord
They were to trust, unlike that generation of men
He would give them the land, according to His word
Because He had brought them back to the land again*

*Faithful and True is the God of Israel
Though He destroyed them to the last unfaithful of those men
He also preserved them for the story to tell
That He had faithfully brought them back to the land again*

II. Just as He Had Done (verses 16-23)

¹⁶ “So it was, when all the men of war had finally perished from among the people,

Maybe Moses was thinking of the events recorded in this verse when He penned these words of Psalm 90 –

“For we have been consumed by Your anger,
And by Your wrath we are terrified.

⁸You have set our iniquities before You,
Our secret sins in the light of Your countenance.

⁹For all our days have passed away in Your wrath;
We finish our years like a sigh.” Psalm 90:7-9

In the previous two verses, it said, the men of war were destroyed from the midst of the camp. Here it says they were destroyed from among the people. The word ha’am, or “the people,” is singular. It speaks of the collective whole.

The camp remained, because the people remained. The generation had perished, but the generations continue. Israel remains. Praise God for His faithfulness. Israel remains.

¹⁷ that the LORD spoke to me, saying:

The Lord set a time and a location, along with the event (meaning the final death of the disobedient generation) to speak out words of a new direction and purpose for Moses, and thus for Israel. He begins that new direction with...

¹⁸ ‘This day you are to cross over at Ar, the boundary of Moab.

The words are explaining the crossing of the Valley of Zered. It is the border of Moab, and the location is by Ar, the city of Moab. Or, it could be as in verse 9 where Ar, the city, is representative of the land of Moab. In that case, it is saying that by crossing the river, they are in the land of Moab, regardless of the actual location of the city.

The latter seems more likely, because it then skips over anymore mention of Moab and goes directly to Ammon. The Lord has already taken care of his words of warning concerning Moab in verse 2:9, and so there is no need to repeat that again. Thus, he next continues with...

¹⁹ And when you come near the people of Ammon,

Lot had a child through each of his own daughters. The account is found in Genesis 19:36-38 –

“Thus both the daughters of Lot were with child by their father. ³⁷ The firstborn bore a son and called his name Moab; he is the father of the Moabites to this day. ³⁸ And the younger, she also bore a son and called his name Ben-Ammi; he is the father of the people of Ammon to this day.”

The people of Ammon are descended from Ben-Ammi, or “Son of My People.” The name Ammon comes from am, meaning “people,” or im, meaning “with.” And so, it means either “A People” or maybe “Kinsmen.” The name is derived from this incestuous relationship, just as Moab, or “From Father,” is. Of them, like Moab, the Lord says...

¹⁹ (con’t) do not harass them or meddle with them,

Here, the Lord uses the same words as He did concerning Moab in verse 2:9. In essence, the words mean that they are not to besiege them in their cities or fortifications, and they are not to stir up trouble with them in order to provoke them to war...

¹⁹ (con’t) for I will not give you any of the land of the people of Ammon as a possession,

Again, this follows on in thought with the words of verse 2:9 which concerned Moab, which said, “for I will not give you any of their land as a possession.” And the same reason is then given for this command...

¹⁹ (con’t) because I have given it to the descendants of Lot as a possession.”

The land of Ammon is where the descendants of Ben-Ammi settled. It became their possession, and they dwelt in it. Israel was to leave this land alone, and to leave the inhabitants of the land alone as well. They were not allowed to cause any damage or harm to them, and this is for a specific, yet somewhat hidden reason.

As with verse 2:9, without being dogmatic about a typological picture, it again looks to what God would do in Gentile believers. Ammon descends from Ben-Ammi, or Son of My People. Citing Hosea, Paul speaks of the Lord’s people in Romans 9 –

“I will call them My people, who were not My people,
And her beloved, who was not beloved.”

²⁶ “And it shall come to pass in the place where it was said to them,

‘You are not My people,’

There they shall be called sons of the living God.” Romans 9:25, 26

Israel of the future is to accept God’s chosen Gentiles, and they are not to harm them, even when they are again God’s chosen instrument for revealing Himself to the world.

The picture fits, especially because of the naming of Lot which, as we saw then, means “Covering.” The Lord has called them His people and thus they are covered as such.

But despite this, and again like for that of Moab, there is a more immediate reason for sparing Ammon as a people. Like Moab, they too will come into the line of Christ Jesus. Moab did through Ruth. But some generations later, this is said of Rehoboam, the son of Solomon –

“And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. Rehoboam was forty-one years old when he became king. He reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put His name there. His mother’s name was Naamah, an Ammonitess.” 1 Kings 14:21

From that marriage came the next king of Israel, Abijam (Abijah), and through him, eventually came the Messiah, our Lord Jesus. Thus, the family of Lot – all of them – are in the genealogy of Jesus.

He, his wife, his two daughters, and their two sons are all in this perfectly structured genealogy which was to usher in the Messiah of the world. The story of Lot and his daughters in the cave is one of the most misunderstood of the Bible. It is there for a reason, but not the reason that most people ascribe to it.

Of this land, like that of the land of Moab, a parenthetical thought is now introduced...

²⁰ (That was also regarded as a land of giants;

Here, we have the same translational problem as verse 2:11. The word “giants” is misleading. The Hebrew says Rephaim. The fact that they may be large is irrelevant.

As we saw, Rephaim comes from a word meaning to sink down or relax. This is similar to the Nephilim. That comes from naphal, meaning to fall. However, Rephaim could also come from the word meaning “to heal.”

The land of Ammon was called a land of Rephaim. This would be akin to saying, the land of Florida is the land of the Seminoles. They are the original inhabitants of the land. The name isn't so much given based on their size, but on their clan, even if their size is part of the equation. The thought continues with...

²⁰ (con't) giants formerly dwelt there.

It should say, “Rephaim formerly dwelt there.” This is the same as “Seminoles Indians formerly dwelt there.” The thought goes on...

²⁰ (con't) But the Ammonites call them Zamzummim,

Rather than identifying them by their clan, the people of Ammon gave these people their own name. The name is believed to come from zamam, meaning to consider, purpose, or devise – often in a bad way, but not always. Thus, these are maybe “The Schemers.”

The inclusion of this clause is to identify the group based on their attributes rather than their clan. This would not be unlike calling the Seminoles, “The Unconquered People,” because they eluded capture by the US Army in the 19th century.

Again, as before, by bringing in this subject matter, it is to show Israel, even before entering into Canaan, that just as these tribes who were closely related to them – Edom, Moab, and Ammon – could subdue their enemies, so Israel should not fear that they too could subdue the inhabitants of Canaan.

This continues to be seen with the next words...

²¹ a people as great and numerous and tall as the Anakim.

Like what was said of the Emim in verse 2:11, they are noted for their greatness, their numbers, and their height – thus they were terrifying to those who came into contact with them. It is also possible that, like the Emim, they were noted at the time of Abraham in Genesis 14. There, a group known as the Zuzim is recorded. It may be an abbreviated form of their name.

If this is so, the Rephaim, the Emim, and the Zamzummim are all ethnically related. No matter what, they were eventually destroyed, and the descendants of Lot filled their land.

Bringing in their similarity to the Anakim is again a note intended to bolster Israel as they entered Canaan. The Anakim still dwelt there, and if the Ammonites could wipe out the Zamzummim, Israel could wipe out the Anakim. There should be complete confidence for them in the battle ahead. This is especially so because of the next words...

²¹ (con't) But the LORD destroyed them before them,

Here, it is specifically stated that it is the Lord, meaning Yehovah, who destroyed the people before them. It is not that the Edomites, Moabites, or the Ammonites were the principal force behind the destruction of these people, but that they were the weapon the Lord wielded to destroy them.

This thought is seen in the setting up of kings in Daniel 2, and of the building up and destroying of nations in Jeremiah 18 and elsewhere. In Jeremiah, it says –

“The instant I speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, to pull down, and to destroy it,⁸ if that nation against whom I have spoken turns from its evil, I will relent of the disaster that I thought to bring upon it.⁹ And the instant I speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it,¹⁰ if it does evil in My sight so that it does not obey My voice, then I will relent concerning the good with which I said I would benefit it. Jeremiah 18:7-10

This is the confidence-boosting thought that is now given to Israel. They will be the instrument of destruction against His enemies. The victory is assured, because the battle belongs to the Lord, just as for those in Ammon...

21 (con't) and they dispossessed them and dwelt in their place, va'yirashum va'yeshevu takhtam – literally, “and disinherited them, and sat under them.” To sit is to dwell or reside and to come under another is to replace them. Ammon, because of the Lord’s destruction of these people, took possession of their land...

22 just as He had done for the descendants of Esau, who dwelt in Seir, when He destroyed the Horites from before them.

This has not been stated before. In verse 2:12, it said that “Esau dispossessed them and destroyed them” as in the coming clause. However, here it ascribes that to having been accomplished by the Lord, as is seen in the word ka'asher, or “just as.” The Lord was the principal cause, and Esau was the instrumental cause.

This could almost be inferred from the words of verse 2:12 which continue by saying that Esau dispossessed and destroyed them “just as Israel did to the land of their possession which the Lord gave them.” The Lord gave the land of their possession to Israel, but He also did so for the descendants of Esau and Ammon. For each...

22 (con't) They dispossessed them and dwelt in their place, even to this day.

There is a time when the Ammonites and Edomites were overthrown to the point where their names died out. From a biblical perspective, only the lands which they dwelt in still bear their names. The peoples were either killed or assimilated into other people groups.

For the Edomites, surprisingly, it was into the nation of Israel. That is recorded by the Jewish historian Flavius Josephus who says that about 129 BC John Hyrcanus –

“...subdued all the Idumeans; and permitted them to stay in that country, if they would circumcise their genitals, and make use of the laws of the Jews; and they were so desirous of living in the country of their forefathers, that they submitted to the use of circumcision, and of the rest of the Jewish ways of living; at which time therefore this befell them, that they were hereafter no other than Jews.” Antiquities, Book 13 Chapter 9 Section 1

At the time of the Deuteronomy narrative, however, Esau dwelt in the land of their possession because the Lord so determined it to be. Likewise, and to even further bolster Israel’s confidence that it is the Lord who establishes and destroys nations, the verses today speak of the destruction of another people group on the other side of the land of Canaan...

²³ And the Avim, who dwelt in villages as far as Gaza—

The meaning of Avim is hard to pin down. It is related to a word meaning to bend or twist, but also a distortion or ruin, or even perversity or moral evil. Because no definitive name is given, I will venture out on a limb and call them the Mischief-makers, but that shouldn’t be used as a definition to dogmatically pass on to others.

Whatever their name actually means, this group of people lived on the other side of Canaan, along the coast where Gaza is today. The name Gaza, or as it is said in Hebrew Azzah, comes from the word az, or strong, and that is its meaning, Strong.

It seems that nothing has changed in 3500 +/- years, because there are still mischief-makers in that stronghold. However, those known as the Avim were overthrown by, as it says...

²³ (fin) the Capthorim, who came from Capthor, destroyed them and dwelt in their place.)

This group of people is identified in Genesis 10:14. These people descended from Ham through Mitsraim, meaning the founder of Egypt. The meaning of Capthor is extremely hard to pin down. But, because these people will become very prominent in Scripture in the coming books, a short explanation of them from Abraim is worthy of note –

“Through the prophet Amos, YHWH declared that he brought up the Philistines from Caphtor, and through Jeremiah that the Philistines emerged as a separate derivative culture from a remnant of Caphtor.

At that time this remnant of Caphtor appears to have been concentrated on an island (the noun יֶרֶק, 'i refers to a coast region: coast, capes and islands off the coast). Most commentators seem to favor Crete as the last stronghold of the Caphtorim, which would make the Philistines displaced survivors of the Minoan culture. The Minoans had maintained a highly advanced civilization from the 4th millennium BCE, which had absorbed much of Egypt's culture and which in turn had radiated its own identity to the Greek and Canaan coasts. After a series of natural calamities and attacks by Hittites and probably others, the Minoan culture began to decline halfway the 2nd millennium BCE. Around 1200 BCE, the Minoan culture had been eradicated from the island.

It seems reasonable to expect that certain Minoan refugees began to seek refuge with their old business partners. Right around the time that the Minoan culture came to an end, Egyptian records begin to make mention of the Philistines in their realm, and the distinct Philistine identity may very well have come about when waves of late-Minoan refugees overwhelmed native Canaanite tribes.” Abarim

It is this group of people, probably from the Minoan culture, who came into the land of Canaan and destroyed the Avim. However, Joshua 13:3 records some of them still living in the land at that time, having been assimilated into what become known as the Philistines.

The point of this verse, like that of the others previously given, is that it was the Lord who directed the nations, and it is He who rules over the nations. Ultimately, it is He who decides when a nation, people group, or culture is to be expanded or ended.

As He had done this on both sides of the land of Canaan, He is the One who would ensure that the land of Canaan itself would be brought under Israel’s hand according to His promise. The only time this would not be the case is when Israel failed to obey Him.

If such should occur, He would redirect His purposes according to their behavior. This is seen, explicitly, in the book of Judges –

“Then the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel; and He said, “Because this nation has transgressed My covenant which I commanded their fathers, and has not heeded My voice, ²¹ I also will no longer drive out before them any of the nations which Joshua left when he died, ²² so that through them I may test Israel, whether they will keep the ways of the LORD, to walk in them as their fathers kept them, or not.” Judges 2:20-22

But Israel had been warned of exactly this thing. Joshua, an old man and ready to die, warned them of this—

“Therefore take careful heed to yourselves, that you love the LORD your God. ¹² Or else, if indeed you do go back, and cling to the remnant of these nations—these that remain among you—and make marriages with them, and go in to them and they to you, ¹³ know for certain that the LORD your God will no longer drive out these nations from before you. But they shall be snares and traps to you, and scourges on your sides and thorns in your eyes, until you perish from this good land which the LORD your God has given you.” Joshua 23:11-13

As we close, we must then consider what is going on in today’s verses. Israel had disobeyed the Lord. They had gone into exile in the wilderness, and they were destroyed – entirely – for having failed to believe the Lord. And yet, in their utter destruction – meaning those who had not believed – they were also preserved.

However, the nations that the Lord chose to destroy – and with whom He had made no covenant – were destroyed and not preserved. And those nations whom he had used to destroy those same nations, such as Edom, Moab, and Ammon, were eventually destroyed and not preserved.

What is the difference between them and Israel? It comes down to one thing alone. It is not Israel’s goodness. It is not Israel’s intelligence, wisdom, power, ability, or righteousness – they lacked all of these things in abundance.

It is because the Lord spoke, and in His speaking, He cannot lie. He further solidified His spoken word in a covenant, and in that covenant, He laid His honor on the line. The other nations were destroyed and perished, Israel was destroyed, and yet preserved. Israel stands and Israel shall stand – not because of their own goodness, but because of the faithful and tender mercies of the covenant-keeping Lord.

The same good and kind God who watches over Israel also watches over those who have come to Him through the giving of His Son. The covenant has been made, and God can no more betray those who come to Him than He could betray Israel.

The word is an everlasting surety that He is God, that He is faithful, and that His people are secure in Him. The lesson today is that in Christ you stand, and in Christ you shall stand – to the glory of God the Father.

Closing Verse: “Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. They indeed say, ‘Our bones are dry, our hope is lost, and we ourselves are cut off!’¹² Therefore prophesy and say to them, ‘Thus says the Lord God: “Behold, O My people, I will open your graves and cause you to come up from your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel.¹³ Then you shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O My people, and brought you up from your graves.¹⁴ I will put My Spirit in you, and you shall live, and I will place you in your own land. Then you shall know that I, the LORD, have spoken it and performed it,” says the LORD.” Ezekiel 37:13-16

Next Week: Deuteronomy 2:24-37 The tales of valor could go on and on... (The Defeat of Sihon, King of Heshbon) (8th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

From the Midst of the Camp

“Now rise and cross over the Valley of the Zered
So we crossed over the Valley of the Zered, as the LORD said

And the time we took to come from Kadesh Barnea
Until we crossed over the Valley of the Zered
Was thirty-eight years, until all the generation of the men of war
Was consumed from the midst of the camp
-----just as the LORD had sworn to them; just as He said

For indeed, was against them the hand of the LORD
To destroy them from the midst of the camp
-----until they were consumed, according to His word

“So it was, when all the men of war
Had finally perished from among the people; when it came to be That the LORD spoke to me, saying:

This day you are to cross over at Ar, Moab's boundary

And when you come near the people of Ammon
Do not harass them or meddle with them; use no such aggression
For I will not give you as a possession any of the land
-----of the people of Ammon
Because I have given it to the descendants of Lot as a possession

(That was also regarded as a land of giants
Giants formerly dwelt there, with giants the place did teem
But the Ammonites call them Zamzummim
A people as great and numerous and tall as the Anakim

But the LORD destroyed them before their face
And they dispossessed them and dwelt in their place

Just as He had done for the descendants of Esau
Who dwelt in Seir; as the record does say
When He destroyed the Horites from before them
They dispossessed them and dwelt in their place, even to this day

And the Avim, who dwelt in villages as far as Gaza
-----such was the case
The Caphtorim, who came from Caphtor, destroyed them
-----and dwelt in their place

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 2:24-37 (The Defeat of Sihon, King of Heshbon)

The account here is parallel to that found in Numbers 21. The two really have to be taken together to get a full view of what is going on. And for the most part, that is what will be presented. When something needs to be compared to, or aligned with, the earlier story of Sihon, it will be laid out for you in that way.

Here we have a real battle that actually took place about 3400 years ago. And yet, it anticipates another actual battle that hasn't even happened yet in human history. But along with that is the fact that these stories have parallels to our own battles in life.

I'm not one to make extended moral applications out of these passages, but it just cannot be overlooked that there are spiritual and moral parallels to what occurs in our own lives. For example, Israel is going to battle against a foe. It is a foe who is on the offensive in this particular battle, and Israel will respond to his aggression as it comes.

Once attacked though, we are not only assured the victory, as Israel was, but we are also able to go on out on our own offensive engagements, just as Israel was. We are the Lord's people, and we have been provided both defensive and offensive weapons, and we have the ability to destroy what the enemy has built...

Text Verse: For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal but mighty in God for pulling down strongholds, ⁵ casting down arguments and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ, ⁶ and being ready to punish all disobedience when your obedience is fulfilled.

-2 Corinthians 10:4-6

Paul speaks of pulling down strongholds. That is an offensive type of warfare. He also speaks of casting down arguments and every high thing that exalts itself. Those, likewise, are offensive maneuvers.

What Israel does in these verses in a physical realm very well mirrors the things we are to do as outlined by Paul. As I said, moral and spiritual applications of such things aren't my main focus, but they do have their place.

In any given passage from the Old Testament, one can often find one of four main uses for it: a literal and historical account, a moral application, a prophetic application, and a pictorial application – meaning something that pictures something else.

As you read the Bible, it is always interesting to think on how these all fit into whatever you are reading, but you also have to be careful to not over-spiritualize things in the process. Unless what you are looking at is actually and accurately revealed in another way, it is best to not simply make stuff up. That is counter-productive and can lead people down unhealthy paths very quickly.

In all things, be sure the word is carefully handled, and you will do well. For today, we have some rather interesting prophetic and pictorial things that we will be looking into. Such interesting things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. This Day I Will Begin (verses 24-26)

The words here are the continued words of the Lord which began in verse 18. Moses has been quoting Him since then.

²⁴ “Rise, take your journey, and cross over the River Arnon.

As noted in Numbers 21, the Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites. Upon entering this area, the final trek before leading into Canaan is seen.

The name Arnon comes from ranan. It signifies to give a jubilant, ringing cry, and thus rejoicing. Therefore, this is the Roaring Stream. Upon crossing this river, they are no longer in a land which the Lord intends to be left alone. The inhabitants of the land they will now encounter are those noted to Abraham over four hundred years earlier –

“Now when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram; and behold, horror and great darkness fell upon him. ¹³ Then He said to Abram: “Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. ¹⁴ And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. ¹⁵ Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. ¹⁶ But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.” Genesis 15:12-16

Abraham was promised the land of Canaan, a land where Amorites also dwelt. However, the Lord was not yet ready for them to be dispossessed. They had not done enough evil to justify their extermination.

But the Lord knew that by the end of these four hundred years, their iniquity would be so great that they would need to be destroyed. Therefore, the promise to Abraham was delayed until that time.

Some look at the extermination of these people as a brutal and unjust act by the Hebrew people, but they fail to see that the Lord treated Israel in exactly the same manner. For example, when Israel's iniquity had become so great, there was eventually nothing else that could be done but allow their destruction and exile –

And the LORD God of their fathers sent warnings to them by His messengers, rising up early and sending them, because He had compassion on His people and on His dwelling place. ¹⁶ But they mocked the messengers of God, despised His words, and scoffed at His prophets, until the wrath of the LORD arose against His people, till there was no remedy.

¹⁷ Therefore He brought against them the king of the Chaldeans, who killed their young men with the sword in the house of their sanctuary, and had no compassion on young man or virgin, on the aged or the weak; He gave them all into his hand. ¹⁸ And all the articles from the house of God, great and small, the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king and of his leaders, all these he took to Babylon. ¹⁹ Then they burned the house of God, broke down the wall of Jerusalem, burned all its palaces with fire, and destroyed all its precious possessions. ²⁰ And those who escaped from the sword he carried away to Babylon, where they became servants to him and his sons until the rule of the kingdom of Persia, ²¹ to fulfill the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her Sabbaths. As long as she lay desolate she kept Sabbath, to fulfill seventy years. 2 Chronicles 36:15-21

The only difference between the extermination of the Amorites and the destruction of Israel is that the Lord had made a covenant with Abraham, and He had made a covenant with Israel.

Despite their conduct, which was as bad and often worse than those they dispossessed, the Lord kept His covenant promises to them. No such covenant was made with the Amorites however...

^{24 (con't)} Look, I have given into your hand Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land.

The narrative will be filled in later as to what will bring about the coming battle. For now, Moses states the words as a fact. The land is given into Israel's hand. Unfortunately for these Amorites, and unlike the others whom Israel has already encountered, there was no word of protection from the Lord for these people.

The name Sihon, or Sikhon, was introduced in Numbers 21:21. He is actually referred to many times in the Old Testament, even as late as the time of Jeremiah. This is because his name is directly associated with the land he rules. We do the same today when we might say, "This is the land of Chief Red Cloud."

Sihon's name comes from a root which signifies "to sweep away," or "to strike down." Thus, his name may signify anything from "Tempestuous" to "Warrior."

He is defined further as melekh kheshvon ha'emori, or "king of Heshbon the Amorite." The word kheshvon, comes from kheshav. It is a word which signifies to consider, calculate, or devise. Therefore, it signifies an explanation of things, or "Intelligence."

Amorite comes from amar, meaning to utter or say. Therefore, the name signifies being spoken of, and thus "Renowned." The idea with the combination of his name, title, and location, is that despite his greatness as a warrior, despite the intelligence of the foe, and despite the renown of the people, Israel is assured victory.

As He says, "I have given." The king, meaning he and all the people and the land, is given as a possession. The time of the iniquity of the Amorites is full, and Israel is to be used as the instrument of the Lord's judgment against them.

One cannot find fault in the Lord, who is the Creator, and thus sovereign over His creation. He had mercy on this group of people for four hundred years, and in that time their iniquity grew to the point where there was no other remedy than their destruction. Therefore, Israel is told to...

²⁴ (con't) Begin to possess it, and engage him in battle.

In verse 2:5, the word garah, or "engage," was first used. It signifies to stir up, coming from a primitive root meaning to grate, and thus it figuratively means to anger. Here, it means to excite oneself against another.

It has been used three times to prohibit Israel from stirring up a fight. In 2:5, they were prohibited from stirring up a fight with the descendants of Esau. In 2:9, it was then seen that they were not to stir up a fight with the descendants of Moab. And in 2:19, they were then told to not stir up a fight with the sons of Ammon.

Now, it is used for the fourth and last time in the books of Moses to do exactly the opposite. They are to actively garah, or engage, the Amorites in battle for the purpose of possessing what will be dispossessed by Sihon. But there is further reason for conducting this battle which is outside of Canaan proper...

²⁵ This day I will begin to put the dread and fear of you upon the nations under the whole heaven,

The reason for stating this now, rather than after the events of the actual account, which begin in verse 26, is to set the stage for Israel's victories in relation to the nations of the world. It makes the fact more poignant by telling what will result, even before stating what will lead to this intended outcome.

Israel is promised that a dread and fear of them will affect the nations under the "whole heavens" (the word is plural in the Hebrew). Some scholars take this as hyperbole, but what occurs here still applies today.

God's covenant with Israel, their campaign for the land of promise – both outside and within the borders of Canaan – and their continued existence, literally permeates the entire world. Just because the event recorded here occurred thousands of years ago, it doesn't mean that it has any less value than it did then.

Rather, because the history of Israel is recorded, and because the covenant of God with them is contained within their historical record (meaning Scripture), this word – in fact – has gone out to all nations under the whole heavens. It is both geographically and temporally a true statement to all...

^{25 (con't)} who shall hear the report of you, and shall tremble and be in anguish because of you.'

v'ragezu v'khalu mipanekha – "and shall tremble and be in anguish because of you." The first word, ragaz, was used in Exodus 15 after Israel had passed through the Red Sea –

"The people will hear and be afraid;

Sorrow will take hold of the inhabitants of Philistia." Exodus 15:14

The second word is khul. It signifies to whirl or dance, and thus by implication to writhe. It is used when waiting because there is this sense of anxiety or writhing when one waits. It is used also when a woman gives birth. There is travail and pain in the process. One can then think of the nations whirling and writhing as if waiting in anguish for a terrible outcome.

The idea, then, is that Israel is the Lord's possession. It is through Israel that the Lord is glorified. Those who are in fear of Israel are so because they understand that it is the Lord who accomplishes His feats through them.

So, it is logical to ask – “As recorded in the Bible, did all of the nations tremble because of Israel?” No. What about in their history and even today? Do all of the nations tremble because of Israel? No. And so, is this a failed statement?

The answer is “No.” It obviously speaks of those people and nations who understand that Israel is the Lord's possession, and who accept that the Lord is God. This is the purpose of keeping Israel for all these millennia. Eventually, the nations will come to understand not only that the Lord is Israel's God, but that the Lord is God. This is what is referred to in Ezekiel –

“And I will sanctify My great name, which has been profaned among the nations, which you have profaned in their midst; and the nations shall know that I am the LORD,” says the Lord GOD, “when I am hallowed in you before their eyes.”
-Ezekiel 36:23

Here in Deuteronomy, the Lord says He will “begin” this process. In Ezekiel, it speaks of a time when the Lord will continue this process – something that is happening in our lifetime. Someday, the completion of this process will be realized, and all of the world will see that not only is the Lord Israel's God, but that the Lord is, in fact, God. With that understood, the details of how this is to come about are now set to be reviewed...

*I have given you the victory, and the battle is won
All you need to do is to engage the enemy
The outcome is assured, and the fight is done
Just step forward in faith, and this you will see*

*The fear of you will be upon all who hear
And none shall be able to stand against you Whether the enemy is afar or near*

Just step forward in faith; it's all you need to do

*The victory is assured because of Jesus My Son
In Him, the battle is won; surely the battle is through Trust in Him and the fight is done
Just step forward in faith; it's all you need to do*

II. A Hardened Spirit and an Obstinate Heart (verse 26-37)

The words now go from those of the Lord to those of Moses. He will fill in the details concerning what the Lord had just spoken.

²⁶ “And I sent messengers

In Numbers 21:21 it says, “And Israel sent messengers.” That was the narrative form of the account. Moses is now recounting it from his perspective. As the leader, he directed messengers to go forth...

^{26 (con't)} from the Wilderness of Kedemoth to Sihon king of Heshbon, with words of peace, saying,

The “Wilderness of Kedemoth” has never been mentioned before. The name comes from qedem, or east. However, qedem also speaks of that which is before, because the sun rises in the east. Therefore, the location means “Ancient Times,” “Antiquity,” or “Beginnings.”

It is from this newly stated location that Moses sent messengers to Sihon. And with them they carried words of peace. Israel has already been told to destroy all the inhabitants of Canaan. That was stated explicitly in Numbers 33 –

“Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: ‘When you have crossed the Jordan into the land of Canaan, ⁵² then you shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, destroy all their engraved stones, destroy all their molded images, and demolish all their high places; ⁵³ you shall dispossess the inhabitants of the land and dwell in it, for I have given you the land to possess.’”

-Numbers 33:51-53

Sihon is not in Canaan, and therefore he was exempt from this directive. Therefore, Moses’ messengers extended words of peace from him, just as they were extended to the descendants of Esau and of Lot. Therefore, the fate of Sihon will be his own fault. For now, Moses' words of peace are...

27 'Let me pass through your land;

The words are identical to Numbers 21:22. Israel had asked because Moses had asked. He petitioned the king through his messengers to simply pass through the land, but with the following guarantees...

27 (con't) I will keep strictly to the road, and I will turn neither to the right nor to the left.

In Numbers 21, it said "we." Here it is spoken in the first person, "I will keep," and "I will turn." Moses gave his personal guarantee on behalf of the people. Further, he gives a strong emphasis by saying, baderek baderek elek – "by the way, by the way, I will walk." He further defines that as, lo asur yamin u-semol – "no I will turn right and left."

Sihon is given the same strong sureties that were given to Edom, as was stated in Numbers 20 –

"Please let us pass through your country. We will not pass through fields or vineyards, nor will we drink water from wells; we will go along the King's Highway; we will not turn aside to the right hand or to the left until we have passed through your territory." Numbers 20:17

At that time, however, Edom refused passage to Israel, and so Israel turned and took another route. Eventually, as we will see, some of those in Edom did allow them a certain amount of passage through their land. For now, and with Sihon, Moses continues...

28 You shall sell me food for money, that I may eat, and give me water for money, that I may drink; only let me pass through on foot,

The offer is the same as that for Edom. The offer is to pay with silver for anything that is eaten or for any water that they obtain from wells or springs. They further note that they are passing through on foot. In this, there is no mobilized army. Any animals would be led, not ridden on. The sureties are that there will be peace and complete compliance with the stated words.

²⁹ just as the descendants of Esau who dwell in Seir and the Moabites who dwell in Ar did for me,

The words here appear contradictory to both the earlier record in Numbers concerning Edom, and also a later note concerning Moab. First, after their petition to Edom, the response from the king of Edom was –

“You shall not pass through my land, lest I come out against you with the sword.”
-Numbers 20:18

Also, later in Deuteronomy, we will read this concerning Moab –

“An Ammonite or Moabite shall not enter the assembly of the LORD; even to the tenth generation none of his descendants shall enter the assembly of the LORD forever, ⁴ because they did not meet you with bread and water on the road when you came out of Egypt.” Deuteronomy 23:3, 4

The first thing to consider is that this is a continuing narrative, and the second statement is contained in the same book that the verse we are looking at now is in. It would be ridiculous to think that Moses would write one thing and then to contradict himself with his own words.

To resolve this, we can note first that the words here do not specifically apply to traveling through Edom, which was denied by them, but rather to the willingness of Edom and Moab to sell food and water to them as Israel traveled around their borders.

Secondly, in regard to Moab, the word Moses uses in Deuteronomy 23 is qadam. It signifies to come before or to meet. It would imply a hospitable meeting. The descendants of Lot may have been willing to allow Israel to skirt their borders, and they may have even sold them food and water for silver, but they did not voluntarily tend to their needs.

As their forefathers, Abraham and Lot, were related by blood, this was an especially unfriendly act. Thus, Moses codified it into the law that they should not be allowed into the assembly of the Lord for their lack of fraternal care for Israel.

And finally, Moses’ words here do not mention the king of any of these peoples. He simply notes that the people of the land sold them food and drink. Therefore, there is no contradiction in what Moses says now to anything which, at first, appears contradictory elsewhere. Understanding that, he now says...

29 (con't) until I cross the Jordan to the land which the LORD our God is giving us.'

Moses is obviously speaking for Israel, and not merely of himself. He already knows that he will not pass over Jordan and into Canaan. Therefore, his words – though in the first person – are spoken of concerning Israel collectively.

Despite this, the words are actually a continued note of surety to Sihon. If the Lord their God is giving them the land west of the Jordan, and as Sihon is east of the Jordan, then the Lord has not granted Sihon's land to Israel. The words are actually a careful note of security for Sihon to consider. Despite these guarantees...

30 "But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass through,

The word here is different than that used in Numbers 21. There it said that Sihon would not nathan, or "give," passage to Israel. Here it says he is not abah, or willing, to allow passage. The change is purposeful in order to set up the next words...

30 (con't) for the LORD your God hardened his spirit

Here is a verse which is similar to that of Exodus concerning Pharaoh, and which uses the same word, qashah, or harden –

"And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt." Exodus 7:3

The word signifies to be hard, harsh, or severe. Moses says that the Lord made his spirit hard. But further...

30 (con't) and made his heart obstinate,

The word here is amets. It signifies to be strong, bold, and courageous. It is the same word used later by Moses when he tells Israel to be strong and courageous. Likewise, the Lord says the same thing to Joshua to encourage him once Moses dies.

Rather than saying his heart is obstinate, I would say something like "strengthened," or "encouraged." The obvious question to consider, just as with Pharaoh in Exodus, is, "Did the Lord actively harden his spirit and encourage his heart, meaning purposefully override Sihon's nature and thus bring the change about?"

The answer is, "No." Sihon saw how Israel had traveled around Edom and Moab, not through them. Thus, it was obvious that they had not granted access to Israel through their lands. Sihon would have seen the passivity of Israel in this, and so he assumed they were unable to fight in such a battle. The same is true with Ammon as was seen in verse 2:19.

The trek to Canaan could have been immensely shorter if they had gone through their lands, but they didn't. Therefore, Sihon's spirit was passively hardened, and his heart was passively encouraged. Further, as an Amorite, he was kin to the Amorites on the other side of the Jordan.

Therefore, his spirit would have been hardened against Israel because of this as well. The very fact that Moses said to him that it was "the land which the Lord our God is giving us," would bring exactly the opposite effect that it was supposedly intended to.

"We don't want your land, because Canaan is given to us," became in Sihon's mind, "The land the Lord our God is giving us is the land that the Amorite's gods will be expelled from." The hardening was passive, and yet it was completely effective. This is so...

³⁰ (con't) that He might deliver him into your hand, as it is this day.

The word is l'maan. We simply say, "so" or "that," but it signifies "to an end purpose." The process of doing the things that have been done was purposeful. Nothing was left to chance, and Sihon's reaction to it was assured. And yet, and despite this, Sihon is solely to blame for what occurred. Based on this...

³¹ "And the LORD said to me, 'See, I have begun to give Sihon and his land over to you.

The Lord, having directed all things to meet a determined outcome, now states that outcome which has been derived from His divine causality. "I have begun to give" signifies that it is done. The initiation of the process has begun, and the hardening and the encouraging have met their intended goal. Therefore...

³¹ (con't) Begin to possess it, that you may inherit his land.'

As in verse 24, it is an imperative. “You are to take this action.” However, in verse 24, it shows how it will come about. In this verse, the stated outcome is given. This is seen by putting the two side by side –

Begin to possess it, and engage him in battle.

Begin to possess it, that you may inherit his land.

The same word, yarash, is used in both verses, but it is repeated in the second one. It speaks of inheritance. In other words, one could say, “Begin to inherit it, that you may inherit his land.” The battle is merely a steppingstone on a path that leads to a guaranteed outcome. Because the land is an inheritance, it belongs to Israel.

³² Then Sihon and all his people came out against us to fight at Jahaz.

The name, Jahaz, or yahatz, comes from a root meaning “to stamp.” Thus, it signifies, “Trodden Down.” The name of the place is probably derived from what occurred during the battle. At this location, the Amorites were trodden down, and thus Israel gave the location its name as a memorial of what occurred.

It is Sihon who initiates the action. Israel has not moved from the wilderness, as is seen from the Numbers account –

“But Sihon would not allow Israel to pass through his territory. So Sihon gathered all his people together and went out against Israel in the wilderness, and he came to Jahaz and fought against Israel.” Numbers 21:23

Israel had peacefully petitioned Sihon, and they had remained encamped at their place of petition. Therefore, Sihon is to blame for the aggression, and any land lost in battle, by default, will belong to Israel. And the outcome is...

³³ And the LORD our God delivered him over to us;

The Lord is given the credit as the principal cause. He is ultimately responsible for the victory, and without Him, the victory would not have come about. Sihon was delivered to Israel by the Lord so that Israel could accomplish the Lord’s purposes, as is next stated...

³³ (con’t) so we defeated him, his sons, and all his people.

Israel is the instrumental cause of Sihon's defeat. Because the Lord delivered him, so Israel was enabled to defeat him. And the victory was complete. As it says, "him, his sons, and all his people."

At times in the Hebrew, there is a difference between the written text and that which is read. This is the case here. The written text says, "his son." That margin note, however, says, "his sons." Either way, whether one son or more died in the battle, even if he had more sons it makes no real difference. This is because...

³⁴ We took all his cities at that time,

Verse 31 said that "Sihon and all his people came out against us." The implication is "all the fighting men." In doing this, he left open the possibility of total defeat. In such a case, there would be no battle-capable men to defend the cities. Thus, Israel would have been able to take all of the cities with relative ease. Sihon's overconfidence left his people in a very bad state...

^{34 (con't)} and we utterly destroyed the men, women, and little ones of every city; we left none remaining.

The word translated as "utterly destroyed" is kharam. It comes from a primitive root signifying to devote to religious uses. In such a case, it signifies a devotion to God, meaning that nothing would be spared, but all would be devoted to the Lord. In this, the implication is that the slaying of these people is by divine direction.

As He is the judge of all souls, and as all things belong to Him, what Israel does here with the extermination of even who we would call "innocents" in a regular war, cannot be considered either murder or some type of war crime.

As the Lord is God, and because Israel is the Lord's arm of judgment, their actions are wholly acceptable. But this cannot be said in any other scenario. As there is only one God, then all other gods are false. Thus, the actions of those who randomly take innocent life cannot be condoned, even while the actions of Israel – as directed by the Lord, cannot be condemned.

Despite the mandate for kharam of the people, however, the cities were not destroyed. And more...

³⁵ We took only the livestock as plunder for ourselves, with the spoil of the cities which we took.

The act of kharam, at times, extends to all things, including the livestock and the spoil of the cities. This is the case, for example, with Jericho. Nothing was to be taken from it. This is true at other times, such as with the Amalekites as is recorded in 1 Samuel 15.

The decision was the Lord's, and each instance is based upon His will, not the desires of the people. Therefore, the act of kharam is as much a test of obedience to Israel as it is a point of authority of the Lord over Israel. Israel devoted to the Lord that which the Lord determined to be devoted, and they were also provided for from their battles according to the decision of the Lord.

³⁶ From Aroer, which is on the bank of the River Arnon, and from the city that is in the ravine, as far as Gilead, Aroer means "Stripped," "Bare," or "Naked." It is noted as being on the bank of the Arnon. It rested on the north bank of the Arnon River. The next boundary is noted as a city in the ravine. That is probably Ar of Moab which is noted in Numbers 21:15.

By naming Aroer and not naming Ar, it is showing that Aroer at least partially belonged to Israel, while Ar, though forming a border, still belonged to Moab. The middle of the river itself, however, is the border between the two lands. From that border, all of the land was taken "as far as Gilead."

In the Hebrew, there is an article before Gilead. It says, "the Gilead," and thus it surely speaks of Mount Gilead. The name Gilead means "Perpetual Fountain." All of the land and all of the cities within the land were taken. As it says...

³⁶ (con't) there was not one city too strong for us;

Here is a new word, sagav. It comes from a primitive root meaning "to be lofty," and thus inaccessible. Therefore, it is better translated as "not one city was too high for us." We could paraphrase that by saying, "No city was out of our reach."

It is this word that brought to mind the text verse today where Paul spoke of "every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God." Moses is rejoicing in his words over a physical conflict that took place. Paul's words rejoice over the spiritual equivalent which we face as believers.

Both are obstacles on the road to the Land of Promise, and both are only defeated in one way. For the church today, and for Israel of the past that is...

³⁶ (con't) the LORD our God delivered all to us.

Though we are given weapons of war – be they physical or spiritual – apart from God, there can be no victory. But with Him, all strongholds will be cast down, and every high thing is brought low. It is He who ultimately delivers the enemy and grants His people the victory.

^{*37} (fin) Only you did not go near the land of the people of Ammon—anywhere along the River Jabbok, or to the cities of the mountains, or wherever the LORD our God had forbidden us.

The Jabbok, or yaboq, means “Pouring Out.” It is the designated border of the land. In this, is another note of obedience by Israel. They refrained from securing any land that belonged to Ammon, the descendants of Lot. Here it says, “along the River Jabbok.”

The Jabbok was the border between the two lands, and so Israel stopped at that point. However, in Joshua 13, it will say this concerning the inheritance of land given to Gad –

“Their territory was Jazer, and all the cities of Gilead, and half the land of the Ammonites as far as Aroer, which is before Rabbah.” Joshua 13:25

This land comes into dispute in Judges 11. However, that was land which was won in battle by Sihon. When Israel defeated Sihon, that land became a part of Israel’s possession. Ammon lost their claim to it when it was lost to Sihon.

Everything else which still belonged to Ammon at that time was left to them as the Lord commanded as was all other land prohibited by the Lord. The borders remained set by the Lord alone.

*The spoil is yours with the battle over and done
The enemy is destroyed, and you can now rest
You trusted in Christ Jesus, My precious Son
You had faith in Him, and you passed the test*

*In this battle, you have the victory
And the spoil is there, waiting for you*

*The rewards of heaven are yours, heaped up aplenty
Because you trusted in Jesus who is Faithful and True*

*Great are You, O God! And greatly are You to be praised
We honor You for all You have done
With hearts of joy and voices loudly raised
We worship You through Christ Jesus Your Son*

III. Prophetic Pictures

The subject of Sihon has already been presented in Numbers 21. There, it was seen that he prefigured the antichrist. His name means Warrior, something identified with the antichrist. He is here called the king of Heshbon, or Intelligence.

His destruction here in a physical battle is equated to what Paul says of such things in a spiritual sense in 1 Corinthians –

“For the message of the cross is foolishness to those who are perishing, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God. ¹⁹ For it is written:
‘I will destroy the wisdom of the wise; the intelligence of the intelligent I will frustrate.’” 1 Corinthians 1:18, 19 (NIV)

The antichrist is the king of that which is opposed to God. There is the wisdom of God and there is that which is opposed to Him, meaning false wisdom.

The first notable thing is that Moses sent his message from Kedemoth, or “Ancient Times.” That is reflective of the word of the Lord, issuing forth from eternity itself. The Lord uses qedem, the root of Qedemoth in this manner in Isaiah –

Remember the former things of old,
For I am God, and there is no other;
I am God, and there is none like Me,
¹⁰ Declaring the end from the beginning,
And from ancient times things that are not yet done,
Saying, ‘My counsel shall stand,
And I will do all My pleasure.’” Isaiah 46:9, 10

It is a note of surety that what the Lord has ordained will come to pass. As we saw, despite it being a request for passage through the land, the request was actually the means of hardening Sihon's heart to effect the purposes of the Lord. That is exactly what has been purposed for the antichrist from the very beginning.

And so, Israel proposes to go through his land to the Land of Promise, exactly what will happen in Israel's future. But that is denied by him. However, as we saw, the Lord purposed for this to come about. The spirit of the antichrist, and thus the antichrist, must be destroyed, and the Lord purposed that it will come to pass.

As we saw in Numbers, and is repeated here, the place of the battle is at Jahaz which means Trodden Down. This is what will happen to Jerusalem as is noted in Revelation 19. The holy city will be trodden underfoot.

However, Israel will prevail in the end and they will take possession of Sihon's land. What belonged to the antichrist and his master, the devil, is regained for Israel. At that time, it says that they have inherited the land from the Aroer on the Arnon to the Jabbok and even as far as the Gilead.

Aroer, means "Stripped," "Bare," or "Naked." That is referring to the state of all things before the Lord –

"For the word of God is living and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the division of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. ¹³ And there is no creature hidden from His sight, but all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him to whom we must give account." Hebrews 4:12, 13

Arnon comes from ranan, which signifies to give a jubilant, ringing cry, and thus rejoicing. The yaboq, or Jabbok, means, "Pouring out." There is a pouring out of God's favor – love, grace, mercy and the like – even the Holy Spirit – on Israel. But there is also a pouring out of God's wrath on the antichrist.

And Gilead, or Perpetual Fountain, speaks of the state of Israel from that point on. They will have the Perpetual Fountain of God flowing forth for them, from that time on.

The narrative today is both in line with the account in Numbers 21, and it also expands on it, adding in new details through new names and places. It is a note of confirmation that God's promises to Israel will not fail, and though they must face this foe in the end times, the Lord will be with them, bring them through what is coming, and bring them to the place that He promised their fathers thousands of years before.

The faithfulness of God to Israel is the surest sign of the faithfulness of God to us in Christ. He made a covenant with Israel which he has never forsaken, and which He will never forsake.

And, in the giving of the New Covenant in Christ, the same reliable surety is found for us. God can be trusted to follow through with His promises, even when we fall short. Have confidence in this, and trust that what God has promised in Christ will be brought to its happy conclusion.

Closing Verse: *“Trust in the LORD, and do good;
Dwell in the land, and feed on His faithfulness.*

*⁴Delight yourself also in the LORD,
And He shall give you the desires of your heart.” Psalm 37:3, 4*

Next Week: Deuteronomy 3:1-11 Another foe, another battle, someone to whoop up on... (The Defeat of Og King of Bashan) (9th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Defeat of Sihon, King of Heshbon

“Rise, take your journey, and cross over the River Arnon
Look, I have given into your hand
Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land
Begin to possess it, and engage him in battle, his defeat will be grand

This day I will begin to put the dread and fear of you
Upon the nations under the whole heaven, so I shall do
Who shall hear the report of you
And shall tremble and be in anguish because of you

And I sent messengers from the Wilderness of Kedemoth
To Sihon king of Heshbon, with words of peace, saying
Let me pass through your land; I will keep strictly to the road
And I will turn neither to the right nor to the left, so I was relaying

You shall sell me food for money, that I may eat
And give me water for money, that I may drink
Only let me pass through on foot
That's my proposition, what do you think?

Just as the descendants of Esau
Who dwell in Seir and the Moabites who dwell in Ar did for me
Until I cross the Jordan to the land
Which the LORD our God is giving us, this is my plea

“But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass through
For the LORD your God his spirit hardened like clay
And made his heart obstinate
That He might deliver him into your hand, as it is this day

“And the LORD said to me
See, I have begun to give Sihon and his land over to you Begin to possess it
That you may inherit his land, so you shall do

Then Sihon and all his people came out Against us to fight at Jahaz, this he did do
And the LORD our God delivered him over to us
So we defeated him, his sons, and all his people too

We took all his cities at that time
And we utterly destroyed (the victory we were gaining)
The men, women, and little ones of every city
We left none remaining

We took only the livestock as plunder for ourselves
With the spoil of the cities which we took
From Aroer, which is on the bank of the River Arnon
And from the city that is in the ravine; that is in the brook

As far as Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us
The LORD our God delivered all to us, we had no fuss

Only you did not go near the land of the people of Ammon—

Anywhere along the River Jabbok, you did not trod
Or to the cities of the mountains
Or wherever had forbidden us the LORD our God

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 3:1-11 (The Defeat of Og, King of Bashan)

At times, I have to stop and wonder if the passage I'm evaluating for you is being given proper treatment concerning the pictorial or typological patterns that I am making. I have to ask, "Does this really fit, or am I simply making things fit what I want it to say.

This was especially true for me in the Numbers 21 sermon where Sihon and Og were first described in Israel's victory over them. I really stressed as to whether the typology was correct or not. At other times, the typology has seemed so clear that it is hard to miss. It simply jumps off the page and announces itself.

One good example of that is the typology of the Jordan picturing Christ. The Jordan flows from Mt. Hermon to the Salt, or Dead, Sea. In order for Israel (or indeed anyone) to enter the Land of Promise, it must be through the Jordan, or Christ.

The picture is so obvious, and everything associated with it is so certain, that it doesn't really require any stress as to whether it is right or not. And yet, each time I have typed up some picture of it – meaning Hermon, the Jordan, the Dead Sea, and so on, I still have to ask myself if what I have been certain about is actually certain.

Presenting something inaccurate means presenting faulty theology. And presenting faulty theology will lead to faulty doctrine. And that leads to unstable Christians who have a part of their walk (maybe more than a part of it) on unstable footing. And each unstable step will lead one a little further off the proper path.

Text Verse: "A mountain of God is the mountain of Bashan; A mountain of many peaks is the mountain of Bashan." Psalm 68:15

Until typing this sermon, I had never stopped to evaluate the name Hermon. Despite assuming the typology, I hadn't actually checked it out fully. That actually troubles me thinking about it now. But the patterns seemed so obvious that knowing the actual meaning of Hermon never even came to mind.

However, the mountain is first introduced into the biblical narrative in today's passage. Because of this, it became necessary to determine its meaning. Thankfully, and with a giant retroactive sigh of relief, it actually fits the typology of everything that you have been taught concerning it, the Jordan, the Dead Sea, and so on.

If it didn't, the typology of at least half a dozen sermons, or more, would have to be reconsidered, all because I never checked the meaning of the name of a single mountain. But this will be true a thousand more times as we continue through Scripture.

It is impossible to anticipate everything that will arise in Scripture in regard to such things. The fabric is too intricate, and the weaving is too complicated to be able to guess all that the Lord has put in His word for us. So far so good though. The patterns have fit, the typology has matched, and the story continues to unfold so beautifully.

What a treasure God has given us in this marvelous gift we call the Holy Bible. Yes, great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Do Not Fear Him (Verses 1-11)

Chapter 2 ended with the defeat of Sihon, king of Heshbon. Israel is being prepared for their crossing of the Jordan and into the promise. That prophetically looked forward to the destruction of the antichrist, something which must come about at the time of Israel's acknowledgment of Jesus as their true Fountain of hope.

But, as we saw in the Numbers' sermons, there were two foes to be defeated. The second of them is ahead of them on their trek to the promise. After defeating Sihon, Israel was in a place which made entrance into Canaan possible.

However, with Og and his people holding the northern portion of Gilead and also all of the Bashan, it would be unwise to leave him untouched. In type and picture, the same is true for Israel of today. There are two foes who must be removed before they will pass into the knowledge of Christ and into the heavenly inheritance.

Chapter 3 begins with the details concerning this second foe...

¹“Then we turned and went up the road to Bashan;

va'nepheh va'naal derek ha'bashan – “And we turned, and we ascended the road to the Bashan.” The verse begins with the simple word “And.” it is a continuation of the narrative, despite the chapter divisions later imposed on the text.

Further, the words of the verse are the exact same as Numbers 21:33, except that there it is in the third person plural (they) instead of the first person plural (we). Moses is exactly recounting the narrative as it was previously given, but from a personal perspective.

As is consistent, there is an article in front of Bashan. It says, “the Bashan.” The name signifies something like the “Place of fertile soil.” Israel was making its ascent to this spot...

^{1 (con't)} and Og king of Bashan came out against us, va'yetsa og melekh ha'bashan liqratenu – “and came out Og king of the Bashan against us.” The king of this entire fertile place brings himself against Israel.

Here, as in Numbers 21, Og is said to be king of the Bashan. His name comes from uggah, which is a round baked cake. That comes from ug, to bake. The picture we see is one set in opposition to Israel.

Obviously, he then is to be destroyed. The uggah, or baked cake, is seen seven times in the Bible. It is that which nourishes and sustains life. One can see that in denying Israel access to this fertile place, and standing in opposition to them, a picture is made which will be more fully developed.

For now, not only does the king not come out as if he was a friend, but rather, because he will stand against Israel, it will be...

^{1 (con't)} he and all his people,

hu v'kal ammo – “he and all his people.” Based on the size of the Bashan, one can assume that it was a very large force. They gathered from the entire area of the Bashan in order to destroy them, knowing already that Israel had destroyed Sihon.

As this was so, they would not only have whatever weapons they previously possessed, but they would have accumulated those of Sihon's army, they would be battle-hardened from the recent fighting, and they would be extremely confident in their capability to fight the next foe that came before them. Thus, Og mustered “all his people.” He could do no less. He then came...

^{1 (con't)} to battle at Edrei.

la'milkhama Edrei – “to battle at Edrei.” Og led his entire force out to meet Israel at Edrei. Edrei means something like “Mighty.” Despite the name, implying the great force which has arisen against Israel, the Lord was shown to be more powerful. At that time, He had good news for His people...

² And the LORD said to me, ‘Do not fear him,

The words are almost an exact repeat of Numbers 21:24. Again, the only difference is that it is in the first person here rather than the third person of Numbers 21.

It would be reasonable for an army to fear such a foe. The description of his physical size, which is coming in the verses ahead, along with an army which consists of all of his people throughout the Bashan, and in an area filled with strongly defended cities, one might expect fear and trepidation on the part of Israel. But the Lord told them that it should be otherwise...

^{2 (con't)} for I have delivered him and all his people and his land into your hand;

The outcome is assured, and the Lord conveys it in that way, ki b'yadekha nathati, “for into your hand I have given.” All Israel has to do is engage the enemy. The Lord has worked out the details, in advance, for them to find complete victory. In defeating the army, they are then to complete the task by also destroying it entirely...

^{2 (con't)} you shall do to him as you did to Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon.'

Israel did not just defeat Sihon, they destroyed him and his entire army to the last man. None were to be spared so that there could be no remnant to later make a claim against the land. And, just as was promised, it also came about – both from the Lord's assurance, and from Israel's obedience...

³ “So the LORD our God also delivered into our hands Og king of Bashan, with all his people, and we attacked him until he had no survivors remaining.

The verse here is similar in thought to Numbers 21:35, but it is worded quite differently. It is, again, in the first person instead of the third person. Also, in Numbers it said, “So they defeated him,” meaning Israel defeated Og. However, here the credit is given to the Lord first – “So the Lord our God also delivered.” Only after that are Israel's actions then mentioned.

Further, in Numbers it mentioned the sons of Og. Here, that is left out. Rather, it simply states that there were no survivors remaining. The victory was complete because the Lord so ordained it, and Israel complied with the Lord's directives. This was not only true with the army itself, but of all of Og's kingdom...

⁴ And we took all his cities at that time;

Og ruled over an entire area, filled with cities. The area, not being very large, and with no access to the sea, would seem to not be fit for many cities, and yet throughout the years, it has been noted by those who visit the area that there are an exceedingly large number of ruins there. Israel, after destroying all of the men in the battle, went about taking those cities they left behind, and Moses says...

⁴ (con't) there was not a city which we did not take from them:

Despite the difficult terrain, and the description of the cities yet to come, Israel was able to take and possess every single one of them. In total, they numbered...

⁴ (con't) sixty cities,

In his book, The Giant Cities of Bashan, dating to 1867, Josias Porter notes the size of the area and that there were the remains of at least sixty walled cities and a great number of unwalled towns still there. To this day, one can go on Google maps and view them from a satellite view.

Therefore, the account stands as not only possible, but factual. Israel took over these cities after exterminating the inhabitants. These are next noted as being in...

⁴ (con't) all the region of Argob,

Here is a new word translated as "region," khevel. It signifies a cord, rope, or measuring line. It comes from khaval, meaning to wind tightly, as a rope is wound. As it is a measuring line, it speaks of a region, as if it is measured off.

Another new word is the place itself, Argov. That comes from regev meaning a clod of the earth. Thus, the name means, "Stony" "Rough," or "Rugged." This is the same place referred to as Trachonitis, meaning "the rugged (or stony) region" in Luke 3:1.

This location, Argov, will be found only here in Deuteronomy 3 and in 1 Kings 4, when speaking of this same location and which mentions these same sixty cities which were captured and remained in continuous use at the time of Solomon. The entire location is then further defined as...

⁴ (con't) the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

There is a progression of thought in this one verse which appears to be an inked celebration of what occurred. First, it states what occurred in the positive and in the singular, “And we took all his cities.”

Then, it next states it in the negative, and in the plural, “there was not a city which we did not take from them. It then sings out, “sixty cities!” After that, it mentions the region in which this occurred, “all the region of Argob.” And then it resoundingly shouts out the final glory of the victory, once again speaking of the singular person, “the kingdom of Og in Bashan.”

Next, to show the exemplary nature of the victory, the cities themselves are described...

⁵ All these cities were fortified with high walls, gates, and bars,

The sixty main cities are described as if by an eyewitness, which Moses surely was. He is recounting the state of the towns for posterity to know the greatness of the victory, and to give assurances to Israel that any such fortifications in Canaan will be equally conquerable.

In this, he uses a word, gaboah, meaning “high” which hasn’t been seen since Genesis 7. There, during the Flood of Noah, it said –

“And the waters prevailed exceedingly on the earth, and all the high hills under the whole heaven were covered.” Genesis 7:19

The word signifies high and exalted. Further, the Hebrew reads, “gates and a bar.” Each city would have two doors which would form a gate, and then a large bar would go through holders on the doors to form an almost impenetrable wall.

Despite this, and despite the other fortifications, Israel – because of the Lord’s hand being with them – was able to conquer them. Nothing was too high for them to attain. They conquered all sixty...

⁵ (con't) besides a great many rural towns

This is a new word, perazi, or hamlets. These would be little towns, maybe surrounded by any rocks cleared from fields, or with low walls to keep in livestock, but not used as protective walls.

The houses would probably be centrally located with the fields outside of any stone borders. Each of these would have had numerous livestock and probably sizeable stores of food when they were taken over. And, as it says, there were many of them. Of all of these cities and towns, Moses says...

⁶ And we utterly destroyed them, as we did to Sihon king of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children of every city.

The translation does not give the sense of the Hebrew. Instead of “the men, women, and children,” it says, “utterly destroying men, the women, and the children.” It thus provides an emphasis that is missed by the translation. The women and the children were not exempt from the destruction.

As this is so, the words require further explanation. In Deuteronomy 2, concerning Sihon’s kingdom, it said –

“We took all his cities at that time, and we utterly destroyed the men, women, and little ones of every city; we left none remaining. ³⁵ We took only the livestock as plunder for ourselves, with the spoil of the cities which we took.”

-Deuteronomy 2:34

Both there and here, the word kharam, or devoted to destruction, is used. It signifies that the devotion was required by the Lord, and the obedience of the people was followed through with according to the Lord’s word. We also saw this in last week’s sermon.

Though it seems overly brutal to our sensibilities, that is irrelevant to what the Lord determines. He creates, and He can dispense with His creation in whatever way He finds appropriate. As these are Amorites, they had been given the full measure of time to seek the Lord, as He conveyed to Abraham –

“Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. ¹⁶But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.” Genesis 15:15, 16

The destruction of the Amorites was ordained for when their iniquity had reached full measure. That time had come, and Israel become the instrument in the Lord’s hand to accomplish His judgment upon them. Despite the kharam of the people, the Lord allowed the property and belongings to be spared...

⁷ But all the livestock and the spoil of the cities we took as booty for ourselves.

Like last week with Sihon, at the allowance of the Lord, all the possessions of the people were not set apart as kharam. This would have been no small amount of livestock and agricultural goods, along with whatever else the people possessed.

At times, such things were set apart for destruction. When that was mandated and not followed through with, the anger of the Lord would then turn against Israel. They were never exempt from the same punishments as the people they encountered, with the exception of being kept as a people because of the Lord’s covenant with them.

In the end, obedience to the word of the Lord is that which is highlighted as the highest importance throughout Scripture.

⁸ “And at that time we took the land from the hand of the two kings of the Amorites who were on this side of the Jordan, from the River Arnon to Mount Hermon

Here is a summary statement of all of the land which was taken by Israel from these two kings. It is stated as going from the River Arnon all the way to Mount Hermon.

As we have seen in earlier passages, Arnon comes from ranan, which signifies to give a jubilant, ringing cry, and thus Rejoicing.

Hermon, or Khermon, is introduced here, and it will be seen using this name 13 times. The word comes from the same verb used in verse 6, kharam. It speaks of designating something to the afterlife (like the people here were), to the thing that is designated in this way, or keeping that thing for something sacred. It is the same idea as the word harem that bears the same meaning.

Thus, Khermon means Sacred. As it is the name of a mountain, it is “Sacred Mountain.” It is a fitting description of heaven, from which the Jordan, or the Descender, flows from. One can see the marvelous picture here of the land of Bashan, the Place of Fertile Soil.

At one end is Rejoicing, and at the other is the Sacred Mountain, and flowing alongside it is the Descender. Here is a picture of life with Christ in view.

There is rejoicing, there is the fertile soil of the word, there is the coming of Christ from the Sacred Mountain, meaning heaven, and descending to earth. If one simply crosses over Jordan (the Descender), meaning going through Christ, there is access to the Land of Promise.

With that typology understood, the narrative continues...

⁹ (the Sidonians call Hermon Sirion, and the Amorites call it Senir),

Here the Sidonians are introduced. Their name comes from Tsidon, or Sidon, which means “Fishing” or “Fishery.” The Sidonians called the mountain Sirion, or “Sheeted with Snow,” while the Amorites called it Senir, which is believed to mean “Glittering Breastplate of Ice.” It will be given another name, Sion, in Deuteronomy 4:48. That is probably a shortened form of Sirion.

The reason for including these words appears to be as a historical and geographical note. The mountain forms a natural boundary between several nations, and so the names are given as clarification now for when they will be used elsewhere, both in Israel’s history, and in Scripture itself.

Sirion will be mentioned again in Psalm 29:6, and Senir will be used in 1 Chronicles, the Song of Solomon, and Ezekiel. The KJV will mistakenly use the word Sion in Psalm 65:1 when speaking of Zion, thus adding another error to its translation.

With the borders designated as the Arnon and Mount Hermon, another general description is seen with the words...

¹⁰ all the cities of the plain,

Here is a new word, mishor. It signifies an even place, like a plain. It is then figuratively used at times to speak of uprightness and justice.

¹⁰ (con't) all Gilead, and all Bashan,

Both words are actually prefixed by an article, “the Gilead,” and “the Bashan.” Thus, they refer to locations, not cities. Gilead means “The Perpetual Fountain.” Bashan, as we saw, means “Place of Fertile Soil.”

¹⁰ (con't) as far as Salcah and Edrei,

Salcah is first seen here, and it means “Walking.” Edrei means “Mighty.” These are both...

¹⁰ (con't) cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

These cities would be those furthest out in the regional areas, and so they stand as representative of the border regions of what was previously the kingdom of Og in Bashan. He is especially highlighted because of his genealogical relationship to another group who are again brought into the narrative...

¹¹ “For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of the giants.

Again, as was seen in Chapter 2, the word is Rephaim. It is speaking of the exceptional size of the people from which he came. Their large size was probably the product of special inbreeding. This would seem most likely because there is a Rephaite in 2 Samuel 21 with six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot.

That is a particular genetic defect or hereditary syndrome known as polydactyly. Og was the last of them in this area, not everywhere, as they appear again in Canaan, and of whom the Anakim were associated. What their great size is actually attributable to is not stated in Scripture, but it is not from sleeping with angels. These were normal humans who were genetically larger than others. Of Og, the following is provided...

¹¹ (con't) Indeed his bedstead was an iron bedstead.

There is a great deal of speculation on what is being said. Some translate it directly as is given here. He has an iron bestead with the given dimensions. Others say that this is speaking of his sarcophagus, a distinct possibility. Other suggestions have been made concerning both the material and what it is fashioned into.

The word itself is eres. It comes from an unused root meaning “to arch.” It is translated as couch or bed throughout the Old Testament. If it is a couch, and as he was a king, it very well could be speaking of a large covered place where he sat as a throne. Charles Ellicott writes of such a throne that was discovered in his time and which was close to the same dimensions.

¹¹ (con’t) (Is it not in Rabbah of the people of Ammon?)

Rabbah, or Rabath, is now introduced into Scripture here. It comes from the verb ravav, meaning to become many or much. Thus, Rabbah means “Great City.” What appears to be the case is that the Ammonites either captured this in a previous battle, they got it from Israel after Sihon’s death and took it to their country, or something similar to that.

However they got it, it became a piece of war spoil so noteworthy that it is recorded here, showing that it was well known to exist and a point of somewhat awe or pride on the part of those who possessed it. The reason for it being so noteworthy becomes obvious from our final words of the day...

^{*11} (fin) Nine cubits is its length and four cubits its width, according to the standard cubit.

Understanding that this may or may not be a bedstead, it does not mean that Og was thirteen feet tall. It is simply referring to whatever he sat, lay, or reclined on was. He was obviously a big guy, and he had big things around him.

The point is that he was defeated in battle, and therefore size was not the main factor in winning such a war – the Lord is. As an interesting note, the dimensions are specifically given in Scripture, and so we are asked to look at the numbers for clarity.

Of the number 9, EW Bullinger says that “...It is akin to the number six, six being the sum of its factors ($3 \times 3 = 9$, and $3 + 3 = 6$), and is thus significant of the end of man, and the summation of all man’s works. Nine is, therefore, the number of finality or judgment.”

And then, of the number 4, Bullinger says, “It is the number of things that have a beginning, of things that are made, of material things, and matter itself. It is the number of material completeness. Hence it is the world number, and especially the ‘city’ number.”

It is rather incredible that the two numbers fit so well with the finality and judgment of Og and his kingdom, and that the bed ended in Rabbah, or “Great City.”

For now, in Deuteronomy, Israel trusted the Lord, the Lord delivered His enemies into their hands, and they were able to defeat them because of this.

*We bear the shield and by faith head in
We gird ourselves with truth as we seek the reward
We have a helmet of salvation for the battle to win
And in our hand, we carry the Spirit’s sword*

*Yes, the word of God is the instrument by which we fight
And prayer is the line to our side’s Head
Upon our feet is the gospel of peace, as is right
And we have prevailed in the battle; the enemy lies dead*

*The spoil is piled high from the battle of which we fought
There is great reward for those who entered the fight
On behalf of the Lord, the battle was wrought
And the rewards piled high are a beautiful sight*

II. Types and Pictures

As we saw in the Numbers 21 sermon, and which is given more detail in this passage, Og is typical of the False Prophet of Revelation. He is the king of the Bashan, his name coming from uggah, which is a round baked cake. That comes from ug, to bake. He is set in opposition to Israel.

The uggah is that which nourishes and sustains life. In denying Israel access to Bashan, the fertile place, he – as typical of the False Prophet – denies the people of God the truth and nourishment of the word. The battle of Israel against him was at Edrei which signifies “Mighty.” Despite the mighty place chosen for this final battle, it is the Lord, through Israel, who defeats Og. It is even possible that the place was named because of the battle.

The region of the Argob is first mentioned here. It means, “Stony.” It also stands in opposition to the people, and it is something that must be defeated. If you remember, there was great highlight in the verse where the Argob was mentioned, focusing on the sixty cities as if they were the heart of the area.

Those obstacles would reflect the condition of the hearts of the people before coming to Christ – an act signified by passing through the Jordan. Such a condition of the people is actually prophesied about by Ezekiel –

Then I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within them, and take the stony heart out of their flesh, and give them a heart of flesh, ²⁰ that they may walk in My statutes and keep My judgments and do them; and they shall be My people, and I will be their God. Ezekiel 11:19

The Lord even repeats this thought in Ezekiel 36:26.

After noting the victory of the battle, it then noted the scope of both campaigns – against Sihon and against Og. They conquered all the foes on the side of the Jordan. They were the last foes to conquer before they were set to cross over. Likewise, both the Antichrist and the False Prophet will be destroyed before Israel enters the true Land of Promise.

The scope of defeating both these foes included from the Arnon to Mount Hermon. From “Rejoicing” to the “Sacred Mountain.” It pictures a complete victory with heaven as the furthest border. It then noted all the cities of the plain. That introduced the word mishor. A word figuratively used to speak of uprightness and justice.

The condition of the people has gone from wandering in the wilderness of disobedience to possessing the habitation of uprightness. Next, it mentioned “the Gilead,” and “the Bashan.” They now possess “The Perpetual Fountain,” meaning access to the Spirit, and the “Place of Fertile Soil,” meaning the truth of the word.

Also, the account notes the extent of those locations as being as far as Salcah and Edrei. Salcah is first seen here, and it means “Walking.” Edrei means “Mighty.” Both of these anticipate the state of a person at any given time. One can walk in the flesh or walk in the Lord. One can pursue his own might, or he can pursue the might of the Lord.

In possessing the land through the defeat of the two final foes, Israel is thus walking in the land of the Lord and in the strength of the Lord.

Finally, what is really most noteworthy is the connection between the dimensions of the bedstead that were recorded and a connection to that of Mystery Babylon, of which the False Prophet is so obviously connected to.

The number 9 is the number of finality or judgment. The number 4 is the city number. Og found his finality and judgment and his bed was taken to Rabbah, the Great City. Mystery Babylon is likewise called the “great city” again and again in Revelation 17 & 18.

It, and the false prophet, like this foe of Israel, will find both finality and judgment. The patterns are wonderfully placed within Scripture to show us, in advance, clues of what lies yet ahead in redemptive history.

The review of Moses concerning the events of those two battles – with Sihon and Og – is to remind Israel that it is the Lord who brought them to where they now stand, and it is the Lord who offers them the final step in their long and meandering existence as a people.

In this chapter, he will continue to describe this land in the verses ahead, he will speak of the rest offered to them on the other side of the Jordan, and he will then note his desire to cross over the Jordan with Israel, followed by the fact that he cannot do so.

The entire chapter is one which speaks of a promise which cannot be earned through the law, and it is through the law that the Antichrist and the False Prophet will make their deal with Israel, as is recorded in Daniel 9.

The law stands against Israel, except as the law is fulfilled in Christ. This is what the Gentiles learned and accepted two thousand years ago, and this is what Israel as a collective has yet to realize. The law must die outside of the promise.

Unfortunately, it is the law, not the grace of God in Christ, which has risen in the hearts of so many people again and again throughout the ages. It is the constant failing of human existence to simply trust God and to instead attempt to earn His favor through personal merit.

Israel fought these battles, but the victory was found in the Lord, not in their effort. We either have fought or will fight the same battle, but it must be a battle of faith in what He can do, not in what we can do. The spirit of Antichrist, and the teaching of false prophets, exists in the world today.

Together, they deny the Son. When we deny the Son, we deny the Father. When we receive the Son, we are adopted as sons by the Father. Israel is being prepared for her meeting with destiny, and each of us has our own meeting to face. Let us receive the Son and His fulfillment of that which stands against us, meaning the Law, and let us trust in the grace of God found in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Closing Verse: *“One generation shall praise Your works to another,
And shall declare Your mighty acts.*

*⁵I will meditate on the glorious splendor of Your majesty,
And on Your wondrous works.*

*⁶Men shall speak of the might of Your awesome acts,
And I will declare Your greatness.*

*⁷They shall utter the memory of Your great goodness,
And shall sing of Your righteousness.” Psalm 145:4-7*

Next Week: Deuteronomy 3:12-20 You are being given a great and lengthy test... (Until the Lord Has Given Rest) (10th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Defeat of Og, King of Bashan

“Then we turned and went up the road to Bashan
And Og king of Bashan came out against us
He and all his people, to battle at Edrei
He was making a royal fuss

And the LORD said to me, ‘Do not fear him
For I have delivered him and all his people
-----and his land into your hand
You shall do to him as you did to Sihon king of the Amorites
Who dwelt at Heshbon; you shall do as I have planned

“So the LORD our God also delivered
Into our hands Og king of Bashan
With all his people, and we attacked him
Until he had no survivors remaining; until his people were gone

And we took all his cities at that time

There was not a city which we did not take
From them: sixty cities, all the region of Argob
The kingdom of Og in Bashan was destroyed in our wake

All these cities were fortified
With high walls, gates, and bars also Besides a great many rural towns
Our enemies we did swallow

And we utterly destroyed them
As we did to Sihon king of Heshbon; showing no pity Utterly destroying the men, women
And children of every city

But all the livestock and the spoil – yes, all the looty
Of the cities we took for ourselves as booty

“And at that time, we took the land from the hand
Of the two kings of the Amorites, as they were known
Who were on this side of the Jordan
From the River Arnon to Mount Hermon

The Sidonians call Hermon Sirion
And the Amorites call it Senir – so it was known

All the cities of the plain
All Gilead, and all Bashan too
As far as Salcah and Edrei
Cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan we cut through

“For only Og king of Bashan remained
Of the remnant of the giants, as they are known
Indeed his bedstead was an iron bedstead
(Is it not in Rabbah of the people of Ammon?)

Nine cubits is its length and its width cubits four According to the standard cubit; pretty big, for sure

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word

Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 3:12-20 (Until the LORD Has Given Rest)

The words of this passage speak of possessing land, the division of the land, and the possession of other land by the rest of Israel at a future point. However, there is a difference between the land given to those on one side of the Jordan and those on the other.

It's not really apparent at first, but the difference is there. We will see that especially as we look over the final three verses of our passage today. In fact, it is so hard to notice this on a cursory, or even on a very close reading, that our minds tend to skip right over the subtlety of what is being conveyed.

It is, however, something that is reflected in the words of Paul to the Ephesians in a roundabout way. He is speaking to the Gentiles, but what he says pertains to what is tucked away back here in Deuteronomy. His words of Ephesians 2 form our text verse today...

Text Verse: "Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision by what is called the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands—¹² that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world.¹³ But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near by the blood of Christ." Ephesians 2:11-13

Paul speaks of the covenants of promise. But more exactly, the Greek reads, diathēkōn tēs epangelias, "the covenants of the promise." The word covenants is plural, while the promise is singular. The law is not of promise, and the inheritance is not of the law. Paul explains that in Galatians 3.

Therefore, the covenants of the promise, though maybe inclusive of the law, are not directed by the law. The law is simply a covenant which leads to the promise, hopefully, for those under it. I say "hopefully" because Paul also explains that the law was simply given as tutor to lead people to Christ. It does not, however, automatically do so.

In fact, the law is one of the greatest hindrances to a relationship with Christ if it is used as a means of earning God's favor through personal merit, something which excludes grace. The law is supposed to show us that we need grace, not that we can obtain favor through it.

This same thought is seen in our verses today. As I said, it is so well hidden in there that it will take a marvelous little pattern, an unusual literary form, to draw out what is actually being conveyed.

Such interesting things as different types of literary forms are used by God to teach us wonderful lessons right out of His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Land East of Canaan (verses 12-17)

¹² “And this land, which we possessed at that time,

The words of Moses now return to the thought left off in verse 3:10, where verse 11 was a descriptive insert. From 3:8-10, it spoke of the conquest, and now it speaks of the result of that conquest. The division of the land which was won in battle is now described.

It says they “possessed” the land. The word speaks of an inheritance. Up until this point in Chapter 3, Moses has used two words lakad and laqakh, saying they “took,” and they “captured” the lands. Now it says yarash. It is the result of the seizing of the land. It has become an inheritance.

These two Amorite kings were disinherited from the land, and Israel took possession of it, thus it became the inheritance of Israel, to be passed on from then on.

That was originally recorded in great detail in Numbers 32. Reuben and Gad came forward to petition Moses for the land because of its suitability for livestock, and they had a great deal of livestock. After obtaining assurances from them that they would assist Israel in securing their own possessions, Moses agreed to grant them this land. That grant extends...

¹² (con't) from Aroer, which is by the River Arnon,

As has been seen, Aroer means “Stripped,” “Bare,” or “Naked.” The noun meaning “river,” is nakhal, and it implies a wadi which flows during the times of rain. The word is from the verb nakhal which speaks of obtaining as an inheritance or possession.

Arnon comes from ranan, which signifies to give a jubilant, ringing cry, and thus “Rejoicing.” From that point, and with the Arnon as the boundary...

12 (con’t) and half the mountains of Gilead and its cities,

As elsewhere, the Hebrew is singular, mountain, and Gilead is prefixed by an article, “the Gilead.” Gilead means, “Perpetual Fountain.” Included in this tract of land were the many cities which had been conquered by Israel.

Other than any damage incurred while being besieged, they remained intact. Thus, they were to profit off the labors of those they defeated in battle. All these...

12 (con’t) I gave to the Reubenites and the Gadites.

All of this is the southern area of the land conquered by Israel outside of Canaan proper. This was specifically recorded in Numbers 32:33, along with a separate inheritance –

“So Moses gave to the children of Gad, to the children of Reuben, and to half the tribe of Manasseh the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with its cities within the borders, the cities of the surrounding country.” Numbers 32:33

It is the half tribe of Manasseh, spoken of there, that Moses now recounts the details concerning their grant...

13 The rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, the kingdom of Og,

This is the northern portion of the land which was conquered. It included everything remaining of the Gilead and also all of the Bashan, or Place of Fertile Soil. Moses describes that as, “the kingdom of Og.” He was disinherited from the land and Israel received the land for an inheritance, Moses specifically says...

13 (con’t) I gave to half the tribe of Manasseh.

The reason for this land grant was explained in Numbers 32 –

“And the children of Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead and took it, and dispossessed the Amorites who were in it. ⁴⁰ So Moses gave Gilead to Machir the son of Manasseh, and he dwelt in it. ⁴¹ Also Jair the son of Manasseh went and took its small towns, and called them Havoth Jair. ⁴² Then Nobah went and took Kenath and its villages, and he called it Nobah, after his own name.”

-Numbers 32:39-42

That region is next further described by Moses...

¹³ (con't) (All the region of Argob, with all Bashan, was called the land of the giants.

As we saw in the previous sermon, Argob means, “Stony.” The words of this clause are difficult. The word translated as “region” was introduced in verse 3:4. It speaks of a measuring cord which would be used to define a specific parcel of land.

Thus, “region of the Argob,” is not different from “all Bashan,” but it is the same thing. This is certain, because the word Argob is prefixed by an article in this verse. Therefore, a literal translation would say, “All of the region of the Argob, namely all the Bashan – the that was called ‘land of Rephaim.’” It is a descriptive record of what had been, and which now belonged to the tribe of Manasseh.

The Rephaim – the great and tall race of people – were subdued by Israel outside of Canaan. Therefore, the battles inside of Canaan would not be the difficult task their fathers claimed it would be a generation earlier. By faith in the Lord, the possession would be theirs.

¹⁴ Jair the son of Manasseh took all the region of Argob,

These words are an expansion of what we just read a moment ago from Numbers 32. Jair, or Yair, means, “He Enlightens.” It is he who is specifically given credit for having defeated the entire region known as Argob. This region is then explained as reaching...

¹⁴ (con't) as far as the border of the Geshurites and the Maachathites,

The name Geshur comes from an unused root meaning to join. Thus, it may mean “Bridge.” They may have been located at a spot which forded, or bridged, the Jordan. Maakah comes from a verb which means to press or squeeze. Thus the name signifies “Oppression.” These people groups would border the land given to Manasseh. Jair took the region...

¹⁴ (con't) and called Bashan after his own name, Havoth Jair, to this day.)

The difficulty of the previous verse seems to be taken away in this verse. And a new difficulty is introduced. First, the region known as Argob is the same as the Bashan. It is this entire region that Jair called after himself, Havoth Jair.

The word Khavoth is the plural of the name Khavah, or “Life.” It is the same name as Khavah, or Eve, Adam’s wife. It is often translated as “the towns of Jair,” probably because a town or city is where the bustle of life occurs. Thus, we could paraphrase this as the “Livings of Jair.”

Secondly, the new difficulty is that the words, “unto this day,” are claimed by numerous scholars to indicate that this is a later insertion into Deuteronomy. There is no reason to assume this.

Though it may seem odd for Moses to say this only a few months after the land was subdued, it is as simple as saying, “He called the cities he defeated by this name, and I have now formally given him the land, and the name shall remain according to his decision.” The same expression ad hayom ha’zeh, has already been used in verse 2:22, and there is no reason to assume that was an insertion.

¹⁵ “Also I gave Gilead to Machir.

This was cited from Numbers 32 when we looked at verse 13. Machir is specifically given Gilead. Machir means something like “Salesman.” To him is given the Gilead, or “the Perpetual Fountain.”

Machir is named here, even though he is dead. He was the firstborn son of Manasseh (Joshua 17:1) through his Syrian concubine (1 Chronicles 7:14), and he stood as representative of Manasseh on this side of the Jordan. Thus, the northern half of Gilead was given to him.

In these words, we have a marvelous picture of Israel’s conversion, which is still ahead in redemptive history.

Jair – He Enlightens; Manasseh – He Shall Forget; Argob – Stony; Bashan – Place of Fertile Soil; Havoth Jair – Livings of He Enlightens; and Gilead – Perpetual Fountain.

Christ, or He Enlightens, the Son of He Shall Forget – speaking of forgetting the sins of Israel, shall have victory over the Stony hearts of Israel (Ezekiel 36:26) in the Place of Fertile Soil (signifying their readiness to receive Christ), and will afterward call them the “Livings of He Enlightens.” They will dwell in the illumination of Christ, and they will possess the Perpetual Fountain – the water of Life that will forever issue forth from the throne of God.

There is no reason to assume this is stretching the picture. The names are set, they are given, and they perfectly fit the typology of what has thus far been presented in the Numbers, and now Deuteronomy, account. Next, as was seen in verse 3:12 and which is now expanded on here, Moses says...

¹⁶ And to the Reubenites and the Gadites I gave from Gilead

This is the northern border of the land of Reuben and Gad. Where the land of Machir the son of Manasseh ended, is where the land of Reuben and Gad would begin. That would extend south to...

¹⁶ (con't) as far as the River Arnon, the middle of the river as the border,

There is minute and almost tedious specificity here, adding to what has already been stated. It speaks of the middle of the River Arnon, something which seems almost superfluous, but the reason for this is what was said in verse 2:36 –

“From Aroer, which is on the bank of the River Arnon, and from the city that is in the ravine, as far as Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us; the LORD our God delivered all to us.” Deuteronomy 2:36

Because this city of the Moabites was located in the middle of the ravine, Moses is saying that the land, even to the middle of the river, belongs to Israel, but it does not include the whole river and ravine. Israel was given no land of the Moabites, and this is now confirmed by Moses.

This is the southern border of their land, and it is based on a wadi which flows down from the mountains of Moab to the west and ends at about the middle of the Dead Sea just across from En Gedi. So far, the northern and southern borders have been named, and the western border is obviously the Jordan and the Dead Sea. All of this land then extended...

¹⁶ (con't) as far as the River Jabbok, the border of the people of Ammon;

The Jabbok River flows north and south for some distance and eventually flows west. This river, today known as the Zarqa River in Jordan, was to be the border between the Ammonites and Reuben and Gad.

There are water rights on two sides of this land grant – between Israel and both Moab and Ammon. But with a city in the very ravine of one of the borders, the specificity of this verse had to be stated. Instead of being either superfluous or a later addition, it is an absolutely necessary part of the words of Moses.

17 the plain also, with the Jordan as the border

The aravah, or plain is the flat land that ran on the eastern side of the Jordan River. The plain, right up to the Jordan, belonged to them, but the Jordan itself is the border of their land, with Canaan on the other side. Next, it says...

17 (con't) from Chinnereth

Chinnereth is the Sea of Galilee. The name Kinereth comes from kinor, meaning a type of harp. The reason for the name is the shape of the sea, which looks like a particular type of harp when viewed from above. This would be the northwest corner of their land. That western border would then extend from there southwards...

17 (con't) as far as the east side of the Sea of the Arabah (the Salt Sea),

This is the western border as it extends southward. It would go all the way down, along the Jordan, and end about halfway down the Sea of the Arabah, meaning the Salt Sea where it would terminate at the middle of the Arnon River...

17 (con't) below the slopes of Pisgah.

Here is a new word, ashedah, translated here as “slopes.” The word comes from eshed, signifying a foundation or a bed, but that comes from a word signifying an outpouring. Therefore, it means either springs or slopes.

Pisgah, or ha'pisgah, meaning “the Pisgah,” signifies a cleft. It is a high area where there is a cleft in the mountain. Because of this, the word “slopes” seems to make more sense than “springs.” It is this spot, Pisgah, which is on Mount Nebo, from which Moses will survey the land of Canaan before he dies.

*Oh, weary soul, there is a fountain of Life waiting for you
If you will just come to Him and receive the Gift
There are nail-scarred hands of the One, Faithful and True
And in taking them, your spirit He will lift*

*It is He who descended from heaven to give us life
He walked among us and provided the way
No more enmity with God; no more strife
In coming to Him, there dawns a new day*

*After His walk, He died on Calvary's tree
And descended to the lowest parts, our debt to pay
By God's power, He was raised – justification for you and for me
And now, through Him, we are provided the Way*

II. Unpacking a Mystery (verses 18-20)

¹⁸ “Then I commanded you at that time, saying: ‘The LORD your God has given you this land to possess.

The words of these next three verses are very precise and speak in a rather remarkable way of promises, possession, and performance. But they are almost mysterious when looked at and considered carefully. While typing up this sermon, I realized there is a decidedly chiasmic structure to these next three verses –

Deuteronomy 3:18-20 – Much Livestock
A Chiasm of Contrasts (23 March 2020)

- a. “Then I commanded you at that time, saying (Moses’ command)
- b. ‘The LORD your God has given you this land to possess (east of Jordan)
- c. All you men of valor shall cross over armed before your brethren, the children of Israel (prepared for battle)
- d. But your wives, your little ones, and your livestock (needing security)
 - x. (I know that you have much livestock)
 - d. shall stay in your cities which I have given you (given security)
 - c. until the LORD has given rest to your brethren as to you (given rest)
- b. and they also possess the land which the LORD your God is giving them beyond the Jordan (west of Jordan)

- a. Then each of you may return to his possession which I have given you (Moses' command)

With the division of the land east of the Jordan settled, Moses now recalls the agreement made in Numbers 32 concerning the land which has been divided up as mentioned here. This division, despite being settled according to set boundaries, will actually only take full effect after Canaan is subdued and with these tribes having participated in that 7-year conquest.

A clue to the mystery presented in these verses is actually the first words of them, "Then I commanded you at that time, saying." It is Moses who commanded. Moses is the lawgiver, and thus he represents the law.

Understanding that, the words, "The Lord your God has given you this land to possess," are conditional. That is based on what was stated in Numbers 32:29, 30 –

"And Moses said to them: 'If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben cross over the Jordan with you, every man armed for battle before the LORD, and the land is subdued before you, then you shall give them the land of Gilead as a possession.³⁰ But if they do not cross over armed with you, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.'"

In Numbers 32, English translations say, "all your armed men," or "every man." But the Hebrew does not say this. Instead, the Hebrew was carefully hyphenated and said, "every-armed." That precise wording was necessary to show that not all men would go.

Rather, only every man that was to go would be armed. Moses was specific, because otherwise, after he died, a dispute could arise that he intended for every man to go, thus leaving the women and children to build and defend the cities. It would immediately force these tribes to give up this land grant.

Instead, though, some would stay while others will go to battle. After the faithful service of these men, drawn off from the whole, they would then have earned their right to return and possess, with their brothers, the homes and lands which had been tended to during their time of war. Those very specific words are now qualified by Moses...

¹⁸ (con't) All you men of valor shall cross over armed before your brethren, the children of Israel.

The order of the Hebrew is more specific. It says, “drawn off, you shall cross over before your brothers – the sons of Israel – all men of valor.” Actually, only a portion of the men crossed over, about forty thousand out of almost one hundred and eleven thousand. They would be drawn off from the whole.

Further, these who are drawn off were to be bene kayil, or “sons of valor.” The army would be selected based on several requirements. Here, it is specifically noted concerning their willingness and ability to wage war. This will be more specifically defined, however, later in Deuteronomy 20.

When we get there, we will see several reasons for being exempt from warfare including this from Deuteronomy 20:8 –

“What man is there who is fearful and fainthearted? Let him go and return to his house, lest the heart of his brethren faint like his heart.”

No cowardly person was to serve in the army because when he turned and fled, it was bound to be that another, and then another, and then another would follow suit. Just as bravery leads to bravery, so cowardice leads to cowardice. Therefore, only the men of valor were to go. And more...

¹⁹ But your wives, your little ones, and your livestock

Rather than saying, “A portion of your men, your wives, and your little ones,” Moses leaves off those men who would not join in the battles. Instead, he only notes the wives, little ones, and livestock.

The word taph, or little ones, normally means small children. They are those who require protection. Here, he is certainly extending it to any who are defenseless. It could be that by using these three examples of helplessness, he is truly looking to cut out any who were cowards. If they were to be included among those three groups, they were certainly not wanted in the battles for Canaan.

As men rotated in and out of the battle, it would be a note for the men to remember and willingly volunteer to join the forces in Canaan rather than be left out during the entire campaign and face the shame of having failed to join in the conquest. This is especially so because of what was originally said to the leaders of these two tribes when they proposed receiving their inheritance outside of Canaan –

“And Moses said to the children of Gad and to the children of Reuben: ‘Shall your brethren go to war while you sit here? ⁷ Now why will you discourage the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD has given them? ⁸ Thus your fathers did when I sent them away from Kadesh Barnea to see the land. ... And look! You have risen in your fathers’ place, a brood of sinful men, to increase still more the fierce anger of the LORD against Israel. ¹⁵ For if you turn away from following Him, He will once again leave them in the wilderness, and you will destroy all these people.” Numbers 32:6-8 & 14, 15

The implication at that time was that they were a bunch of cowards. Once that issue was resolved, and with that still on Moses’ mind, one can see why he is so specific in his words now. And that underlying tone continues with the following words...

¹⁹ (con’t) (I know that you have much livestock)

When these tribes came forward to make their initial proposal, there was a heavy stress on the word miqneh, or livestock. It set the tone for the entire passage to be understood. They had a lot of livestock and they used that as their excuse to stay in the land east of the Jordan –

“Now the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of livestock; and when they saw the land of Jazer and the land of Gilead, that indeed the region was a place for livestock, ² the children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spoke to Moses, to Eleazar the priest, and to the leaders of the congregation, saying, ³“Ataroth, Dibon, Jazer, Nimrah, Heshbon, Elealeh, Shebam, Nebo, and Beon, ⁴ the country which the LORD defeated before the congregation of Israel, is a land for livestock, and your servants have livestock.” Numbers 32:1-4

With that memory still fresh on his mind, Moses recalls their words and returns them to their ears. How he conveys his words isn’t known. It could have been in a comical way, as if the whole misunderstanding was cleared up and he was jokingly stating it, “I know you have much livestock!”

Or, it could be that he really thought they were cowards and so he is subtly reminding them of it – “I know you have much livestock...”

If the latter is correct – and it seems likely based on his inclusion of this now – then his note concerning the wives, children, and livestock were to forever remain a pricking reminder in their minds that they needed to man up and conduct themselves as such henceforth.

This is especially so, because the chiasm centers on the idea of their livestock. It appears to be an emphasis that is to be taken to heart and remembered as a point of shame which should spur them on to act with bravery in the battles to come. Either way, of the defenseless ones, Moses says that they...

19 (con't) shall stay in your cities which I have given you,

Again, the words are conditional. Moses has only given them the cities if they fulfill the commitment they had promised before the Lord. There would be a sufficient number of people to have all of the land cared for, protected, and for rotation of troops in and out of battle. All they needed to do was act in accord with the promise.

In verse 18, it said, "The Lord your God has given you this land to possess." Now Moses says, "your cities which I have given you." The word of Moses is the word of law. Unless his words were directed through him by the Lord, it would be a wholly inappropriate statement to make.

But rather than inappropriate, one can see the uniting of the word of the Lord with the spoken word of Moses, the prophet of the Lord. The thought concerning the conditional nature of Moses' words is next brought to the forefront...

20 until the LORD has given rest

The word "until" is given to remind them that they were under obligation to participate in the campaign to the end. However, it is also a note of surety that it will happen. The words, "until the Lord," can only mean that the Lord has purposed and thus it will come to pass.

And more, the thought continues with "until the Lord has given rest." Not only will the endeavor come to pass, but it will end with a set result. The Lord will give nuakh, or rest, as the completion of the campaign that is yet to begin. And that state of rest will be...

20 (con't) to your brethren as to you,

They had received their inheritance, and with their inheritance, they had received their rest. However, the men of war were to not rest until the other tribes of Israel were also given the same. That is next noted with the words...

20 (con't) and they also possess the land

Here, the word yaresh, or to inherit, is again used, as it was in verses 12 & 18. Canaan is their inheritance, and when it is subdued, they will have their rest in the land. The thoughts are united as one. Possessing the land is to possess the inheritance, and possessing the inheritance is to obtain the rest.

For all of the other tribes, Moses says that their rest would come from possessing the land...

20 (con't) which the LORD your God is giving them beyond the Jordan.

There is a unity of thought in the words of these verses. It said both in verse 18 and here, "the Lord your God." However, in verse 20 it said, "until the Lord has given rest to your brethren." Their Lord is also the Lord of those on the other side of Jordan.

And again, in verse 3:8, it spoke of defeating the enemies b'ever ha'yarden, or "in side the Jordan," while speaking of the eastern side. In this verse it again says, b'ever ha'yarden, or "in side the Jordan," while speaking of the western side. The Lord is the Lord of both sides, and He is the Lord of both groups.

There is one Israel on the side of the Jordan, regardless of which side it is, and the inheritance for each side is given to both by the Lord. For those on the eastern side, once those in Canaan had obtained their possession...

20 (con't) Then each of you may return to his possession

The conditional nature of the promise is again seen in these words. The inheritance is granted, but only through obedience to the word. For those on the other side, no such note is stated. All it says is that if they cross the Jordan, the Lord will give them the land to possess. The inheritance is assured by simply faithfully trusting in the Lord.

For those who are to receive their inheritance east of Canaan, they must follow the command of Moses. In their obedience to his word, they may then each return to his possession...

*20 (fin) which I have given you.'

Again, it is Moses who says that he has given the possession to them. In verse 18, it said the Lord had given them rest, but it was through Moses that this came about. After the Land of Promise was subdued, they returned to where they had settled. That is recorded in Joshua 22, and it again says that Moses gave them the land –

“Then Joshua called the Reubenites, the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, ² and said to them: ‘You have kept all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded you, and have obeyed my voice in all that I commanded you. ³ You have not left your brethren these many days, up to this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the LORD your God. ⁴ And now the LORD your God has given rest to your brethren, as He promised them; now therefore, return and go to your tents and to the land of your possession, which Moses the servant of the LORD gave you on the other side of the Jordan.’”

-Joshua 22:1-4

What this is certainly telling us is that man has been given an inheritance from the Lord – all men, including and particularly Israel. But one inheritance is of the law, and one is of the promise. One is earthly, and one is heavenly.

Only those of promise – whether Jew or Gentile – will receive the Lord’s inheritance, meaning the heavenly inheritance. This is why there is the stress on Moses being the one to give the inheritance to those outside of the Land of Promise. They had to earn their inheritance, and it is only an earthly one.

However, those destined for the Land of Promise are granted it through simply believing the Lord and trusting in His work to receive what is offered. The chiasm which spans these last three verses clearly shows us this.

What is it that you are looking for? If it is livestock and worldly wealth, you will have to earn that. But if it is a heavenly inheritance, then you must receive it by faith in the Lord. The two stand in opposition to one another.

Israel is Israel. They are the same group on either side of the Jordan, but only some of Israel will inherit the promise. And for those Gentiles who come to the Lord by faith, they are brought into the commonwealth of Israel to receive the same heavenly inheritance that Israel – the Israel of God – will receive.

The verses are clearly laid out for us to see this, and we must pay heed to what we have seen and heard today. You can be granted an inheritance through law and be separate from the inheritance of the Lord. Or, you can cross the Jordan, come through Christ, and receive the Land of Promise by a simple act of faith.

Choose wisely, and be sure to choose quickly. Life is a passing vapor, and then it is gone. Come to Christ and receive that which is already waiting for those who are willing to do so.

Closing Verse: “Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as of many, but as of one, ‘And to your Seed,’ who is Christ. ¹⁷ And this I say, that the law, which was four hundred and thirty years later, cannot annul the covenant that was confirmed before by God in Christ, that it should make the promise of no effect. ¹⁸ For if the inheritance is of the law, it is no longer of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise.” Galatians 3:16-18

Next Week: Deuteronomy 3:21-29 I’m getting tired of this chatter.. (Speak No More to Me of This Matter) (11th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Until the Lord Has Given Rest

“And this land, which we possessed at that time
From Aroer, which is by the River Arnon, and all its sites
And half the mountains of Gilead and its cities
I gave to the Reubenites and the Gadites

The rest of Gilead, and all Bashan
The kingdom of Og, I gave to half the tribe of Manasseh
All the region of Argob, with all Bashan
Was called the land of the giants; so the people did say

Jair the son of Manasseh took all the region of Argob
As far as the border of the Geshurites and the Maachathites
-----yes, in the direction that way

And called Bashan after his own name
Havoth Jair, to this day

“Also I gave Gilead to Machir
Lots of land for sheep to shear

And to the Reubenites and the Gadites I gave
From Gilead as far as the River Arnon
The middle of the river as the border, as far as the River Jabbok
The border of the people of Ammon

The plain also, with the Jordan as the border
From Chinnereth as far as the east side
Of the Sea of the Arabah (the Salt Sea)
Below the slopes of Pisgah; a land spacious and wide

“Then I commanded you at that time, saying:
‘The LORD your God has given you this land to possess
-----so to you I tell
All you men of valor shall cross over armed Before your brethren, the children of Israel

But your wives, your little ones, and your livestock
(I know that you have much livestock) – yes, it is true
Shall stay in your cities which I have given you
Until the LORD has given rest to your brethren as to you

And they also possess the land
Which the LORD your God is giving them beyond the Jordan
-----Yes, when they do
Then each of you may return to his possession
Which I have given you

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone

We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 3:21-29 (Speak No More to Me of This Matter)

Last week, we saw a short chiasm which helped us determine what was going on in the passage that was set before us. In today's passage, another chiasm starts, and it will continue about halfway through Chapter 4. We'll lay it out now and then you can contemplate it as we go through the verses.

Deuteronomy 3:25-4:22 - Call upon Him.
Israel's Instruction (11/07)

- a 3:25 Moses wants to cross Jordan
- b 3:26 Lord angry with Moses
- c 3:27 "Lift your eyes toward the west, the north, the south, and the east."
- d 4:3, 4 Example of apostasy (idolatry)
- e 4:5 Taught statutes and judgments
- f 4:6 Be careful to observe them (judgments)
- g 4:7 Great nation
- x 4:7 Call upon Him
- g 4:8 Great nation
- f 4:9 Diligently keep yourself (judgments)
- e 4:10-14 Taught statutes and judgments.
- d 4:15-18 Warning of apostasy (idolatry)
- c 4:19 "Lift your eyes to heaven."
- b 4:21 Lord angry with Moses
- a 4:22 Moses must not cross over the Jordan

Chiasms are not only interesting curiosities, but they serve various purposes as well. They can help us to more fully understand a passage. They can reveal a central point which the Lord wants us to focus on. They demonstrate that a wisdom and purpose is behind what is written, and that the passage isn't merely a hodge-podge of disconnected ideas. And so on.

Another thing they do is to demonstrate that what is written came from a single source, not from varying authors at varying times. This is especially important to remember when reading commentaries by supposed scholars who say things like, "This verse was added many years later," or "This was definitely not written by Moses." Humbug.

The reason for this is that most of these chiasms have only been found in recent years. Thus, it demonstrates that what is there was original all along. We have a sure word in the Word of God.

Text Verse: “The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul;

The testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple;

⁸*The statutes of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart;*

The commandment of the LORD is pure, enlightening the eyes;

⁹*The fear of the LORD is clean, enduring forever;*

The judgments of the LORD are true and righteous altogether.” Psalm 19:7-9

The psalmist said that the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. A lot of supposedly wise scholars are actually very simple. And a lot of people who read the law are as well, because they don't read it as it was intended to be read – meaning as an anticipatory step on the way to Christ.

An online member of the church, Paul Steiner, posted one time, “Cure your lobotomy with Deuteronomy.”

Even the simple can be made wise through understanding the law, and even someone who is dull enough to seemingly have been lobotomized – like many Bible scholars – will benefit from what the law presents, if... if it is taken in regard to the whole body of Scripture.

As I have said to you, many times, the law is not an end in and of itself. Rather, it is a steppingstone on the path to God's final, full, and finished revelation of Himself in the Person and work of Jesus Christ.

The Lord asks us to look to the law as a way of learning of our need for Jesus. If we can do that, we will be in the sweet spot. And so, that is what we will do again today. You see, He is the embodiment of this law, and He is what this law anticipates.

We shall see this for sure as we open and contemplate the verses set before us. We can cure our lobotomy as we continue through Deuteronomy. Yes, great hints of Christ are to be found in His superior word. And so, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. From Kings to Kingdoms (verses 21 & 22)

²¹ “And I commanded Joshua at that time, saying,

In the previous passages, Moses recounted the defeat of Sihon, king of Heshbon and Og, king of Bashan. After that, we were presented last week with a recounting of the division of the lands east of the Jordan, and the instructions to the people concerning their responsibilities in helping subdue the lands west of Jordan.

Only in the completion of that campaign, could they truly be considered as acceptably possessing the lands to the east of the Jordan. As Moses finished his words to them, he said, “Then each of you may return to his possession which I have given you.”

With that understood, Moses now turns his direction to what lies ahead, across the Jordan. He knows already that he will not cross Jordan. He will repeat, in just a couple of verses, the substance of that. But before he does, he introduces Joshua into the narrative.

Joshua has been mentioned only once so far in Deuteronomy. In Chapter 1, it said –

Joshua the son of Nun, who stands before you, he shall go in there. Encourage him, for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

³⁹ ‘Moreover your little ones and your children, who you say will be victims, who today have no knowledge of good and evil, they shall go in there; to them I will give it, and they shall possess it. ⁴⁰ But as for you, turn and take your journey into the wilderness by the Way of the Red Sea.’ Deuteronomy 1:38-40

A word of encouragement and a fuller explanation of the details concerning Moses not crossing the Jordan are now given. This is necessary for several reasons. First, it is to again confirm that Joshua is the chosen person designated to lead Israel, and it is to provide typology concerning the law in relation to the work of Christ.

Concerning his words to Joshua, he now recounts them...

²¹ (con’t) ‘Your eyes have seen all that the LORD your God has done to these two kings;

enekha ha’root – “your eyes, the seeing.” It is not past tense, but rather present. We would say, “your eyes that are seeing.” Of this, Charles Ellicott says, it “may also serve to remind us of the fact, that though the Law was given by Moses, no eye saw its full breadth and grasp until it came into the hand of Jesus, the antitype of Joshua.”

The redemptive plan is set, it is unfolding, and those under the law were participants in that plan. So, it is true with us today. Our eyes are seeing the passing of redemptive history as it winds towards the next dispensation in time, and which will ultimately lead us to whatever eternal state the Lord has prepared for His people.

The words here have not been recorded before, and so they must be inserted into the narrative that has previously been given in Numbers 27. Because there is an active sense to the words in the Hebrew, what occurred in the battle which is now past is only a part of the ongoing narrative of the life and times of Israel.

What happened to Sihon and Og was a part of that narrative, and the land that they once possessed is a part of it as well. But more, Joshua’s eyes will continue seeing the effects of what has happened in relation to what will continue to happen. It is as if time is a movie that can be beheld until it reaches its end.

For Joshua at that time, his eyes were seeing what the Lord was doing through the defeat of Sihon and Og. Thus, surely...

^{21 (con’t)} so will the LORD do to all the kingdoms through which you pass.

The Lord’s past performance is the principal indicator of the surety of what will come about in the future. Just as He defeated these two great kings, so He will do to any and all of the kingdoms which were yet to be engaged in battle.

The boundaries of the land had already been detailed in Numbers 34. If the boundaries were specified, even before they crossed the Jordan and into the land, then it means that the Lord had already gone before them to determine what would be theirs.

As there were kings and kingdoms within those borders, it means the Lord had already granted them into Israel’s hands. If someone bought a piece of property with specific borders, say a lot for selling cars, it would make no sense to say, “This land is yours, but all of the cars on the lot have to remain where they are. You have no right to them or to remove them.”

Rather, with the grant of the land comes full right to the land and to that which is on the land. Because the borders of the promised inheritance have been named, then what is in that inheritance has also been granted – fully and completely – to Israel. Joshua is being encouraged by this thought.

Moses will repeat this to Israel shortly before he closes out the book of Deuteronomy. In Chapter 31, it says –

“The LORD your God Himself crosses over before you; He will destroy these nations from before you, and you shall dispossess them. Joshua himself crosses over before you, just as the LORD has said. ⁴ And the LORD will do to them as He did to Sihon and Og, the kings of the Amorites and their land, when He destroyed them. ⁵ The LORD will give them over to you, that you may do to them according to every commandment which I have commanded you. ⁶ Be strong and of good courage, do not fear nor be afraid of them; for the LORD your God, He is the One who goes with you. He will not leave you nor forsake you.” Deuteronomy 31:3-6

The ongoing and unfolding plan which God has set in motion will come to pass. The foes are already defeated as far as the Lord is concerned. As Moses understood this, so Joshua was to understand it as well. Therefore, he continues...

²² You must not fear them, lo tiraum – “You (all) must not fear them.” The previous verse was spoken to Joshua alone, but now the words are in the plural, and it is thus an address to all who will be under Joshua. Israel, though having a leader, is a collective whole. Where Joshua leads, Israel must follow, and they must do so without fear...

²² (con’t) for the LORD your God Himself fights for you.’

The words are in an emphatic form, “For the Lord your God, HE, fights for you.” Again, the words are second person, plural. They are directed to the entire congregation under Joshua, but who is himself under the Lord.

Though Israel will, in fact, be in the battles, it is the Lord who would be the unseen Force behind the victories. But it is also true that He would stand against them if they failed to obediently follow Him. This will be seen just after the battle of Jericho.

As long as Israel was properly aligned with the Lord, the Lord would be with Joshua, and thus with Israel. This will be repeated again by Moses later in Deuteronomy –

“Then He inaugurated Joshua the son of Nun, and said, ‘Be strong and of good courage; for you shall bring the children of Israel into the land of which I swore to them, and I will be with you.’” Deuteronomy 31:23

It can be seen that Israel and the Lord, and what happens between them, are completely interconnected. The Lord has a plan which is set, and which will come to pass, but that plan includes all of the obedience and victory which Israel displays, and it also includes all of the disobedience and defeat that Israel receives.

The connection between the two is based on the covenant which exists between the two. They are inseparable because the word of the Lord, and the promises of the Lord, reflect who He is. Even if Israel violates her side of the covenant, that in no way negates the Lord’s faithfulness to it.

For those who fail to understand this, they become enmeshed in a world of irresponsible theology which claims the rights to the covenant promises of God even at the exclusion of Israel – the very group to whom the covenant promises were made.

Until those covenant promises are fulfilled, and until Israel enters the New Covenant in Christ, the Lord will continue to work in and through this otherwise disobedient nation. In the end, His plans and purposes for them as a collective whole will be realized.

*You are great, and mighty are your deeds
You have done things more marvelous than we can tell
Out of You comes beauty, and from You wisdom proceeds Trusting in You will keep us from the very pit of hell*

*You have made everything beautiful in its own way
You have blessed the earth with abundance for us
You bring forth the sun, day unto day
And You brought forth for us Your Son, Jesus*

*Great are You, O God, and greatly are You to be praised
And we shall forever seek after You
With arms stretched out and with our voices raised
We love You, our God – You are ever Faithful and True*

II. The Prayer of Moses (verses 23-29)

²³ “Then I pleaded with the LORD

va’eth-khanan el Yehovah. The word is khanan, and it signifies to be gracious or show favor. Correctly, it would be translated, “And I entreated for grace unto Yehovah.” Grace is getting what you do not deserve, and Moses did not deserve the favor he was asking for, having disobeyed the Lord at the waters of Meribah at Kadesh.

However, it is worded as it is for a specific theological purpose as well. Moses pictures the law. The law and grace are mutually exclusive. If one is under law, he is not under grace. And if one is under grace, he is not under law. The law, petitioning for grace, is a petition which cannot be granted.

²³ (con’t) at that time,

This exchange most probably fits between Numbers 27:13 and 14, where it says –

Now the LORD said to Moses: “Go up into this Mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given to the children of Israel. ¹³ And when you have seen it, you also shall be gathered to your people, as Aaron your brother was gathered. ¹⁴ For in the Wilderness of Zin, during the strife of the congregation, you rebelled against My command to hallow Me at the waters before their eyes.”
(These are the waters of Meribah, at Kadesh in the Wilderness of Zin.)

Insert Moses prayer into the chronology here.

¹⁵ Then Moses spoke to the LORD, saying: ¹⁶ “Let the LORD, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation, ¹⁷ who may go out before them and go in before them, who may lead them out and bring them in, that the congregation of the LORD may not be like sheep which have no shepherd.” Numbers 27:15-17

What seems likely is that the Lord told Moses that he was to see the land and then be gathered to his people. Moses, hoping for the grace of being allowed to cross over, and seeing to the end that which he had begun, petitions the Lord. The Lord denied his request, and so Moses knowing the decision was set and fixed, petitions for a competent leader to replace him...

²³ (con’t) saying:

Here is contained the second of only two times Moses petitions something specifically for himself from the Lord. There are many times he begged for the people, and there are times when he asked for relief from the burdens laid upon him. However, this is a petition for something additional to be granted, rather than being taken away.

The first was in Exodus 33, and it is tied into this request in a slightly hidden way. In Exodus 33, we saw this –

And he said, “Please, show me Your glory.”

¹⁹ Then He said, “I will make all My goodness pass before you, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before you. I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.” ²⁰ But He said, “You cannot see My face; for no man shall see Me, and live.” Exodus 33:18-20

The same word Moses used in this verse, khanan, was used twice by the Lord in that exchange in Exodus. “I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious.” Moses, remembering that now, petitions the Lord based on His own acknowledgment of His graciousness, hoping that he will receive it from Him.

However, to maintain the typology, the request must be refused. Moses, the man of Law, anticipates all who are under law. If that is where they choose to hang their hat, then they are excluded from what Moses will now petition the Lord for. This is exactly what John penned in the very first chapter of his gospel –

“And of His fullness we have all received, and grace for grace. ¹⁷ For the law was given through Moses, but grace and truth came through Jesus Christ. ¹⁸ No one has seen God at any time. The only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, He has declared Him.” John 1:16-18

Just a moment before writing those words, John had written –

“And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.” John 1:14

The glory that Moses asked to see, he was denied, and the grace that he now petitions for will also be denied. The law and those under the law have no part or portion with those who receive the gift of God found in the grace of Jesus Christ.

Moses, not seeing the end from the beginning, and not understanding the typology which he was fulfilling for God's unfolding story of redemption, now makes his petition for grace...

²⁴ 'O Lord God,

Moses says, Adonai Yehovah – “My Lord Yehovah.” It is the first time the expression has been used since Genesis 15, during the time of Abraham. It is a personal, but formal touch to carefully introduce the petition. It also, quite clearly, dispels the myth that the Hebrews of old never pronounced the divine name. They did, and they did so because it is His name.

²⁴ (con't) You have begun to show Your servant Your greatness and Your mighty hand,

The words now are not limited to the conquering of the two kings east of the Jordan, but they are inclusive of everything that has occurred since he first stood before the burning bush and the divine name was revealed to him. The Lord at that time said –

“I have surely seen the oppression of My people who are in Egypt, and have heard their cry because of their taskmasters, for I know their sorrows. ⁸ So I have come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up from that land to a good and large land, to a land flowing with milk and honey, to the place of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites.” Exodus 3:7, 8

The Lord had promised two things: 1) to bring them out from Egypt, and 2) to bring them into Canaan. Thus, the Lord had only begun to show Moses His greatness and His mighty hand. Only when they had been given rest would the process be considered complete. But Moses knew that it would, in fact, be completed...

²⁴ (con't) for what god is there in heaven or on earth who can do anything like Your works and Your mighty deeds?

Moses' mind reaches back almost forty full years to what he had written after being brought through the waters of the Red Sea –

“Who is like You, O LORD, among the gods?
Who is like You, glorious in holiness,
Fearful in praises, doing wonders?” Exodus 15:11

He is not acknowledging the actual existence of any other gods, but that the nations of the world simply believed there are other gods, worshipping false gods as such. The question is rhetorical, and it demands a negative response – “Though there are other gods to the mind of man, truly there is no other god.”

The sentiment is found elsewhere in the Old Testament –

“Among the gods there is none like You, O Lord;
Nor are there any works like Your works.

⁹ All nations whom You have made
Shall come and worship before You, O Lord,
And shall glorify Your name.

¹⁰ For You are great, and do wondrous things;
You alone are God.” Psalm 86:8-10

It is also found in the New –

“Therefore concerning the eating of things offered to idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is no other God but one. ⁵ For even if there are so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth (as there are many gods and many lords), ⁶ yet for us there is one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and through whom we live.” 1 Corinthians 8:4-6

²⁵ I pray, let me cross over

The chiasm which we noted in our opening comments begins with this verse and it will continue all the way through verse 22 of the next chapter. Moses desires to cross over...

²⁵ (con't) and see the good land

ha'arets ha'tovah – “the land, the good.” It speaks of the entire land of which the boundaries were delineated in great detail in Numbers 34.

Moses knew as much of the land as any person who had never actually been there. He had received the Genesis account from the Lord and had probably read it through many times in the years of wandering in the wilderness.

Further, he had the account of the spies who had gone forth about 38 years earlier, and that account had likewise been put into writing. It would have been read from time to time as one would pick up a cherished book and read it again and again.

From the descriptions he had received, he knew the land was good indeed, and he desired to see it himself – that beautiful land...

²⁵ (con't) beyond the Jordan,

b'ever ha'yarden – “in side, the Jordan.” The meaning is to be determined from the context, and the context is the side which he was not currently in. He was on one side of the Descender, and he desired to cross over to the other side.

One can see the yearning of the law to receive the promise in Christ, the true Descender, but the law cannot do so. Only Christ, who embodies the law, can allow for one to cross over. Man, under law and apart from Christ, cannot obtain the inheritance.

²⁵ (con't) those pleasant mountains,

ha'har ha'tov ha'zeh – “the mountain (it is singular) the good the this.” Moses looked to the land itself as the promise, and he desired to see that which God had promised. He didn't understand that the land itself only looked forward to a greater Promise. But the words speak of that Promise.

In coming to Christ (symbolized by crossing the Jordan), one comes to the Mount where Christ dwells. Moses goes from the general to the specific first speaking of the good land, and then the good mountain.

The good mount is the place where the ark of the covenant will rest, but that mount represents the city in which it rests, and that – in turn – represents the whole land and its inhabitants. That is seen in the words of Hebrews 12 –

“But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels,²³ to the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven, to God the Judge of all, to the spirits of just men made perfect,²⁴ to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaks better things than that of Abel.” Hebrews 12:22-24

Moses is thinking of geographical locations, but the Lord is using his words to connect us to greater spiritual truths. In coming to Christ, one comes to Mount Zion.

²⁵ (con't) and Lebanon.'

v'ha'levanon – “and the Lebanon.” This is the same phrase used in Deuteronomy 1:7. Lebanon means “Place of Whiteness,” coming from a word which signifies a brick, because bricks whiten as they are fired. Thus, it signifies works.

But as was seen in Chapter 1, this doesn't picture works for salvation, but works which stem from salvation. One does not work in order to merit God's favor. Rather one's works are acceptable only after having received His grace. Paul explains that in Colossians 1 where those who have believed in Christ will then be fruitful in every good work.

Moses desires to see the glory, but as a picture of the Law, it cannot be so...

²⁶ “But the LORD was angry with me on your account,

This appears similar to what was said in verse 1:37 –

“The LORD was also angry with me for your sakes.”

However, a completely different word, translated as “angry,” is used. In Chapter 1, the word was anaph. Here it is the same word used in the last verse, translated as “cross over,” avar. It appears to be a play on words, “Let me cross over, over the Jordan, but the Lord crossed over me.”

Also, a different word is used concerning the blame. In Chapter 1, “on your account” came from a word signifying a rolling motion, as if the deeds of the people rolled around and ended up harming Moses. However, here the word is maan, which speaks of purpose or intent.

One cannot help but seeing the work of the Lord here. The law cannot bring one to the inheritance, and so the Lord crossed over the law (pictured by Moses) for the sake of His people.

He was born under the law, He lived out the law, and He died in fulfillment of the law – thus crossing over it for us. As it says, “on your account,” meaning, because of their sins. It was with the purpose or intent of the people that he did this.

²⁶ (con’t) and would not listen to me.

The Lord will not listen to those who live under the law. Rather, He hears the word of faith. This is exactly what Paul speaks of in Romans 10 –

For Moses writes about the righteousness which is of the law, “The man who does those things shall live by them.” ⁶ But the righteousness of faith speaks in this way, “Do not say in your heart, ‘Who will ascend into heaven?’” (that is, to bring Christ down from above) ⁷ or, “‘Who will descend into the abyss?’” (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead). ⁸ But what does it say? “The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart” (that is, the word of faith which we preach): ⁹ that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved. Romans 10:5-9

The Lord only hears the law when it is in relation to its fulfillment in Christ Jesus. It is a word of faith, and that alone, which brings one into the Promise of God...

²⁶ (con’t) So the LORD said to me: ‘Enough of that!’

The Lord says, rav lakh – “much to.” It is similar to what was said in Numbers 16 when the Levites accused Moses and Aaron of taking too much upon themselves. Moses then repeated the same words back to the Levites, showing that they had gone too far in their grab for power.

The Lord is saying that Moses could only go so far and no further. He had seen enough of what the Lord was doing, and the matter was settled. Again, one can see that the law can only take one to the promise, but it cannot get them into the promise. Only Christ can take one the rest of the way.

²⁶ (con’t) Speak no more to Me of this matter.

It is a perfect picture of what Paul writes concerning the law –

“Now we know that whatever the law says, it says to those who are under the law, that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God. ²⁰ Therefore by the deeds of the law no flesh will be justified in His sight, for by the law is the knowledge of sin.” Romans 3:19, 20

Those under the law cannot speak of entering the promise. The law only provides a knowledge of sin, but not how to correct that sin.

²⁷ Go up to the top of Pisgah, aleh rosh ha'pisgah – “Go up to the top of the Pisgah.” Pisgah signifies a cleft. Thus, it is The Cleft. It comes from the word pasag, meaning to pass between. That, in turn, comes from a root signifying to cut up. Thus, pasag figuratively means, “to consider” or “to contemplate.” This is a spot where Moses could pass through to view the land, but only from a distance...

²⁷ (con't) and lift your eyes toward the west, the north, the south, and the east;

The directions are given based on the layout of the land that he views, not based on the position where he is standing. The directions are:

- 1) yamah, “westward,” but meaning seaward, and signifying the Mediterranean Sea. The word yam, or sea, comes from a root meaning “to roar.” Thus, it signifies the direction from which the roaring of the Mediterranean waves comes.
- 2) v'tsaphonah, “and northward,” signifying the hidden, or dark direction, because in the northern hemisphere, the north is the last area to receive the sunlight.
- 3) v'temanah, “and southward,” signifying to the right, and thus demonstrating that the south is right in relation to one standing in the land looking east. It is from the perspective of where the Lord would dwell in Canaan, not from where Moses stood.
- 4) u-mizrakhah, “and eastward, signifying the direction from which the sun rises, to which Moses’ back would be facing.

²⁷ (con't) behold it with your eyes, for you shall not cross over this Jordan.

The thought of this verse is precisely stated by the author of Hebrews. He describes those who lived by faith before the coming of Christ, saying –

“These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them, embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.” Hebrews 11:13

Moses was the man of law, but he was also one who lived by faith. To maintain the typology of those who came before Christ, even if living in faith, Moses was allowed to see the promise from afar off, but he was not allowed to cross over the Jordan. The law can have no inheritance in the promise. The typology must be maintained. That typology, however, continues after Moses...

²⁸ But command Joshua, and encourage him and strengthen him;

Joshua means “The Lord is Salvation.” In this picture, he is typical of Jesus the Man. The law cannot pass over the Jordan, but a Man must cross over in order to bring the people in. However, Moses is told to encourage and strengthen him.

It is by the fulfillment of the law, including through His death under the law, that man can be brought to the promise. But Christ, in His human nature, needed encouragement and strengthening in His work under the law.

In Luke 9, Jesus was transfigured, and at that time, Moses and Elijah appeared and, as it says, “spoke of His decease which He was about to accomplish at Jerusalem” (Luke 9:31). In the same chapter, it then says, “that He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem” (Luke 9:51). Thus, He was encouraged by the lawgiver (Moses), as well as the prophet of the law (Elijah) fulfilling the typology here.

Later, in Luke 22:43, while Jesus was praying in the Garden of Gethsemane, it says that “an angel appeared to Him from heaven, strengthening Him.” Christ Jesus, under the law, was both encouraged and strengthened in order to continue His work of fulfilling the law...

²⁸ (con’t) for he shall go over before this people,

There is an emphasis here on the word “he.” “He it is that shall go over before this people.” The emphasis is to clearly show that Moses would not be the one to take the people in, but rather “The Lord is Salvation,” which is what “Joshua” means, would do so. He would go before them to bring them in...

²⁸ (con’t) and he shall cause them to inherit the land which you will see.’

Again, the same emphasis is on the word “he.” “And he it is that shall cause them to inherit the land which you will see.” The Lord, not the law, will bring the people in, and the Lord, not the law, shall cause them to inherit. Again, the picture is exactly fulfilled as seen in the words of Paul –

“Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as of many, but as of one, ‘And to your Seed,” who is Christ.¹⁷ And this I say, that the law, which was four hundred and thirty years later, cannot annul the covenant that was confirmed before by God in Christ, that it should make the promise of no effect.¹⁸ For if the inheritance is of the law, it is no longer of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise.” Galatians 3:16-18

It is by Christ, and by Christ alone that the promise is received, and the inheritance is obtained...

29 (fin) “So we stayed in the valley opposite Beth Peor.

Beth Peor means “House of Peor.” Peor comes from the verb paar, meaning “to open.” Thus, it is the House of the Opening. It was a place known for a temple to the Moabite god known as Peor.

The reason for including this final sentence, is that this is the ending of recounting the narrative which brought them to this place. It is from this spot that Moses will finish out the book of Deuteronomy, and then it is in this spot where Moses will be buried, as is seen in Deuteronomy 34:5, 6 –

“So Moses the servant of the LORD died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the LORD.⁶ And He buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, opposite Beth Peor; but no one knows his grave to this day.”

This word, paar, is used in Isaiah 5 when speaking of Sheol, the pit of death, opening its mouth beyond measure to receive those who reject the Lord. When under law – whether trusting in the law for righteousness, or in rejecting the law and satisfying one’s own desires – the inevitable outcome is death.

No matter which way one goes, man under law is condemned and will die outside of the promise. It is only through coming to Christ who fulfilled the law, and who embodies it on our behalf, that we can be made right before God.

In following Him, we will cross over His life, and be brought into the promise. This is – again – the theme set before us in these seven verses today. The Lord keeps giving us the same pictures, again and again and again because we are otherwise slow to learn.

He asks us to wake up from our slumber, our life of ignoring Him, or our supposed life of personal righteousness because of how good we are, and to come to Jesus with our hands empty and our hearts opened wide to Him.

In this, God will be pleased to call us His children and to provide us with a home in the true Land of Promise for all eternity. Think of it! People under the law are doing exactly what Moses did – whether intentional or not.

They are observing the law in an attempt to obtain the inheritance. Why would anyone observe the law if there was nothing to be gained from it? I have a Jewish friend right now who is dying of cancer. The last time I spoke to him, I tried – yet again – to convince him of his need for Christ.

He wrote, please don't speak to me about Jesus anymore. The funny thing is that I printed out Isaiah 52:13-53:12, removing the verse numbers so that he wouldn't know it was from the Bible. I said what do you think about this? Who is this referring to?

His answer was, "Jesus." He knew that. It was obvious. I asked him, "Where did that come from?" His answer, "I have no idea." I said, it is in your Bible – it is from Isaiah. He acknowledged that his own Scriptures refer to Jesus, and yet he does not want to hear about what his own Scriptures tell him.

And so, his last statement to me will testify against him at the judgment. I want to enter the promise, but I want to do it by my own effort under the law. And the Lord has said to man – "Speak no more to me of this matter."

There is no inheritance for the soul who desires to merit God's grace, because grace cannot be merited – it must be received. How stubborn we are to reject the offering of God in Jesus Christ and to say, "I can do better than what You promised, what You accomplished, and what You offer. Speak no more to me about this JESUS."

It is a sad and self-condemning choice. Be wise, be prepared to meet your God by coming to Christ, and you will be brought near to Him through His precious shed blood today.

Closing Verse: “For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, ‘Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.’¹¹ But that no one is justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for ‘the just shall live by faith.’¹² Yet the law is not of faith, but ‘the man who does them shall live by them.’” Galatians 3:10-12

Next Week: Deuteronomy 4:1 Only the evaluation of one verse will I give... (That You May Live) (12th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Speak No More to Me of This Matter

“And I commanded Joshua at that time, saying
‘Your eyes have seen; yes, you know it is true
All that the LORD your God has done to these two kings
So will the LORD do to all the kingdoms which you pass through

You must not fear them; this you shall not do
For the LORD your God Himself fights for you

“Then I pleaded with the LORD at that time, saying:
So to Him I was then relaying

‘O Lord GOD, You have begun to show
Your servant Your greatness and Your mighty hand
-----from You such great power proceeds
For what god is there in heaven or on earth who can Do anything like Your works and Your mighty deeds?

I pray, let me cross over and see the good land as it stretches on Beyond the Jordan, those pleasant mountains, and Lebanon

“But the LORD was angry with me on your account
And would not listen to me. So the LORD said to me:
‘Enough of that! Speak no more to Me of this matter

It is decided and that is it. Can't you see!

Go up to the top of Pisgah, and lift your eyes
Toward the west, the north, the south, and the east
Behold it with your eyes
For you shall not cross over this Jordan
-----only with your eyes shall you on this beauty feast

But command Joshua, and encourage him and strengthen him
For he shall go over before this people, prepared for war
And he shall cause them to inherit the land which you will see
"So we stayed in the valley opposite Beth Peor

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 4:1 (That You May Live)

In our sermon last week, which ended Chapter 3, we were shown a chiasm which continues through much of this chapter, even to verse 22. The beginning and ending parts of that chiasm revealed that Moses wanted to cross the Jordan (verse 3:25), but that he must not do so (verse 4:22).

We have seen, and we certainly will see today, that the reason for this is that Moses is a type, or picture of the law, and thus of those under the law. But in our verse today, Moses refers to “the Lord God of your fathers” when speaking to Israel there before him.

That is referring to those who went before them, including their fathers who received the law. But those who received the law did not enter. And those before them did not have the law, and yet, the Lord promised the land to them.

If he did this, before giving them the law, then inheriting the promise cannot be because of the law. As Paul says in Galatians 3:18, “For if the inheritance is of the law, it is no longer of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise.”

Further, Paul says in Romans 4:14 that, “...if those who are of the law are heirs, faith is made void and the promise made of no effect.” The promise there in Romans 4 is the same promise to Abraham Paul referred to in Galatians 3. To maintain the typology, Moses (picturing the law and thus those under law) is not to cross the Jordan and enter Canaan.

Well then, if God gave the inheritance to Abraham and his descendants by promise, and yet Israel under law will actually go over Jordan and dwell there, it means that the promise is not really the land of Canaan at all. These people and places are given as types and shadows of something greater.

But this still doesn't explain why the law was given. What purpose did it serve? Paul answers that in his next words of Galatians after speaking of the inheritance, our text verse for today...

Text Verse: “What purpose then does the law serve? It was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was appointed through angels by the hand of a mediator. ²⁰ Now a mediator does not mediate for one only, but God is one.” Galatians 3:19, 20

Paul says the law was “added because of transgressions.” What that means is that the statutes and judgments which Moses will begin to refer to today actually multiply Israel’s guilt before the Lord. They don’t bring the people nearer to God, but rather, they were to show the people the perfection of God and how far short of that standard they actually were.

Thus, in the coming of the Seed, meaning Christ, they could also understand the immense grace of God, the infinite mercy of God, and the immeasurable love of God. But those attributes of God can only be realized by faith in God, not in observing the law.

If someone observes the law, it is done to merit favor or to avoid punishment, but it is not done out of faith. You are going to hear this presented to you so many times, and in so many ways, in the next few minutes that your heads may either spin off or explode, but this is necessary to clearly think through what is presented here on several different levels.

The reason we are going to do this, is in hopes that you, or someone else, will finally be able to say, “Aha, I get it.” We may have heard the story of grace a million times, and yet we may still be clinging to our own selfish means of making God happy other than in simply trusting Him and what He has done.

How many of you refrain from certain types of foods because you believe the Bible tells you to? How many of you give a tithe because you believe the Bible tells you to? How many of you think your time at church is part of a Sabbath Day worship?

If you think any of these things, you are both wrong, and you are not pursuing grace, but rather you are pursuing a law, attempting to please God through your efforts. You are setting aside grace in the process of living out some supposed law that you think is bringing you nearer to God. Grace is grace. It cannot be merited.

If you are trying to do so, let’s hope that after the countless repetitions of thought that you are about to hear, you will finally give that up and just... trust. May it be so. By grace, and by faith, meaning faith alone for salvation, is a principle point of Christian theology, and it is clearly laid out in God’s superior word. And so, let’s turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Statutes and Judgments

Moses has spent the first three chapters of the book of Deuteronomy recounting the events which brought Israel to the place where they are now. All of what he has conveyed has been given as typological pictures of future redemptive history, and most especially that of the Person and work of Jesus Christ.

Israel was brought out of Egypt and was set to enter into the land of Canaan, they failed to believe the Lord and His promises, and they were turned into the wilderness to perish there. That pictured Israel's rejection of Christ, and their exile among the nations for these past two thousand years.

The typology has been exceedingly precise and clear. Now, Israel is once again set to enter into the Land of Promise. But Canaan is not the true Promise. Rather, it is only a typological picture of entering God's rest which comes by believing in Christ Jesus. As the author of Hebrews says –

“For we who have believed do enter that rest.” Hebrews 4:3

He is referring to faith in Christ which makes that possible.

Chapter 3 closed out with verses 23-29 where Moses petitioned the Lord to allow him to enter the land. To understand the context of what will now be presented, those verses, which we evaluated last week, are again given –

“Then I pleaded with the LORD at that time, saying: ²⁴ ‘O Lord GOD, You have begun to show Your servant Your greatness and Your mighty hand, for what god is there in heaven or on earth who can do anything like Your works and Your mighty deeds? ²⁵ I pray, let me cross over and see the good land beyond the Jordan, those pleasant mountains, and Lebanon.’

²⁶ “But the LORD was angry with me on your account, and would not listen to me. So the LORD said to me: ‘Enough of that! Speak no more to Me of this matter. ²⁷ Go up to the top of Pisgah, and lift your eyes toward the west, the north, the south, and the east; behold it with your eyes, for you shall not cross over this Jordan. ²⁸ But command Joshua, and encourage him and strengthen him; for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which you will see.’

²⁹ “So we stayed in the valley opposite Beth Peor.” Deuteronomy 3:23-29

Understanding the typology from last week (Moses represents the law, and the law cannot bring people into the promise), the narrative now turns to...the law. It seems almost contradictory. How can it be that Moses, who represents the law and who is forbidden entry into the promise, now issues forth more words of law which he expects the people to be obedient to?

The answer to that question is found in the first verse which introduces the words of law which will span the next twenty-nine chapters, right up until the end of Chapter 32.

¹“Now, O Israel, listen to the statutes and the judgments

v’atah Yisrael sh’ma el ha’khuqim v’el ha’mishpatim – “And now Israel, hearken unto the statutes and unto the judgments.” The word shama means to hear, but the sense here is to hear and to pay heed to what is heard. And that which is to be hearkened to are the statutes and judgments.

The words are variously translated – decrees and laws, statutes and rules, statutes and ordinances, ordinances and judgments, etc. The first word is khoq, signifying something prescribed or owed.

It comes from khaqq which is something decreed or even a person or thing which is appointed. That comes from a primitive root meaning to hack, and thus to engrave. These things are appointed and are expected to be obeyed, as any decree would be.

The second word is mishpat. It is a standard or a judgment, coming from shaphat which means to judge or to govern. Moses is now going to relay statutes and judgments for the people to hearken to.

Many of these are going to be repeated from earlier times and will include further recountings of what occurred, and why they were given. In other words, and for example, Moses will repeat the Ten Commandments, which were given to Israel, but He will also recount the many events which surrounded the giving of those commandments.

The end of Moses’ recounting the past is not over, but Moses first recounted the events which led to their punishment before recounting those events that surrounded things which occurred before that time. If this seems out of order, it isn’t.

The Lord, through Moses, is showing Israel in typology what brought them the years of disaster that had happened to them (meaning their rejection of Christ) before showing them again what led them to that point.

So, what led them to it? The law. They had been given the law, and even though they were under law, it is not disobeying the law that brought about their punishment. It was a lack of faith in the Lord that brought it about. That was stated, explicitly and in the most poignant terms, in Deuteronomy 1:32, 33

“Yet, for all that, you did not believe the LORD your God, ³³ who went in the way before you to search out a place for you to pitch your tents, to show you the way you should go, in the fire by night and in the cloud by day.”

The people failed to... believe. If you remember, the Hebrew was very marked and specific. Moses had recounted what got them to the door of Canaan, and yet – and despite all of that – they failed to believe. Nothing about the law was even said. They simply failed to trust the Lord.

Moses is now going to heap all of the laws back onto the people again, and he is going to add in other laws as well. And yet, it isn't their failure of the law that excluded them from the promise, and so it cannot be their observance of the law which will – next time – bring them into the promise.

So why is Moses doing this? Because the Law of Moses, this impossible body of statutes and judgments and penalties – and so much more – is given as a body of instruction to teach Israel one thing... that they need grace. Paul says as much in Galatians 3 –

“Is the law then against the promises of God? Certainly not! For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law. ²² But the Scripture has confined all under sin, that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. ²³ But before faith came, we were kept under guard by the law, kept for the faith which would afterward be revealed. ²⁴ Therefore the law was our tutor to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. ²⁵ But after faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor.”

-Galatians 3:21-25

The first time, Israel was given the law, and while under the law they were presented Christ – the embodiment of the law. They failed to believe, and they were punished.

Israel will again be presented the law – for a final seven years known as the tribulation period.

They will have a temple, sacrifices, and all of the trappings that are a part of the Law of Moses, and they will find that it will fail to bring them any closer to the Lord. Eventually, as a people, they will demonstrate faith, they will come to Christ, and they will enter the promise. It is not the law that will save, but Christ's fulfillment of it.

This is why Deuteronomy is given. It is a second attempt at bringing the people to understand their need for Christ, just as they will have a second attempt after their many years of exile to realize their need for Christ. In the end, it is about Christ. But how contradictory that sounds from Moses' next words...

¹ (con't) which I teach you to observe,

asher anokhi m'lamed etkhem laasot – “which I train you to do.” Here is a new word, lamad, which means learning, teaching, instructing, and so on. It comes from a primitive root signifying “to goad.” One uses a goad to prod an animal along. Moses will use this word seventeen times in Deuteronomy alone.

Moses is thus, prodding the people through this instruction to do the things that he will expound to them, and it is for a very specific purpose...

*Listen to the statutes and the judgments too
Pay heed to the word you are about to hear
I am going to lay out all that you are to do
Keep them with you always, yes – be sure to keep them near*

*Think on all I am going to tell you Consider what needs to be done
Will you trust in your own ability, these things to do?
If so, you must accomplish them all – yes, every single one*

*Think on what I am going to tell you Consider again what needs to be done
Will you trust in your own ability, these things to do?
Or will you by faith simply trust in My Son?*

II. That You May Live

¹ (con't) that you may live,

l'maan tikhyu – “that you may live” is technically correct, but to understand the meaning, one might paraphrase this as, “to the end purpose of your living.” The word maan speaks of a teleological view of things. In other words, “What is the purpose of what is relayed?” In this case, it is that “you may live.”

This is the entire point of the giving of the law – whether it seems like it or not. We can think of the law as a basis for holy living, for moral conduct, for treating others as humans created in the image of God (which is both holy living and right moral conduct), etc.

However, people all over the world do the things of the law, even without having the law, don't they? All societies, cultures, and nations have codes – written or unwritten – concerning murder, adultery, theft, lying, and so on. But they don't have life, meaning a right standing with God, through the doing or not doing of those things, do they? No. Paul says as much in Romans –

“For as many as have sinned without law will also perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law will be judged by the law ¹³ (for not the hearers of the law are just in the sight of God, but the doers of the law will be justified; ¹⁴ for when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do the things in the law, these, although not having the law, are a law to themselves, ¹⁵ who show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and between themselves their thoughts accusing or else excusing them) ¹⁶ in the day when God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel.” Romans 2:12-16

Paul seems to say that people without the law, who have this law on their heart, can live (be right with God) apart from the law by doing these things. But this is not the case. He later says that all have sinned and all fall short of the glory of God. Without Jesus, all stand condemned. Jesus confirms this in John 3:18 –

“He who believes in Him is not condemned; but he who does not believe is condemned already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.” John 3:18

Moses sums up what he is going to present, saying to Israel that obeying the law has the end purpose of granting life. It is a general repeat of what was said in Leviticus 18 –

“You shall therefore keep My statutes and My judgments, which if a man does, he shall live by them: I am the LORD.” Leviticus 18:5

Moses repeats this now, but even more, the very last thing he says in this major section of Deuteronomy – a section which goes all the way through Deuteronomy 32 – is exactly the same thing he says now in the first verse of this section –

“Moses finished speaking all these words to all Israel, ⁴⁶ and he said to them: ‘Set your hearts on all the words which I testify among you today, which you shall command your children to be careful to observe—all the words of this law. ⁴⁷ For it is not a futile thing for you, because it is your life, and by this word you shall prolong your days in the land which you cross over the Jordan to possess.’”

-Deuteronomy 32:45-47

The only things after this large section of instruction are that Moses will speak out a blessing to the tribes of people in Chapter 33, and then it will record his ascent up Mount Nebo where he dies in Chapter 34. The body of instruction actually ends in Chapter 32.

Think of it! The first words of the actual body of instruction of the book of Deuteronomy say that the end purpose of them is so that the people may live. And the last words of that same body of instruction say that in the observance of these things it is their life.

But more, that is based upon the words of the Lord which explicitly say that the man who does the things of things of the law will live. Those words from Leviticus are a set of words that are so important that they are repeated by Nehemiah (Nehemiah 9:29) after their first exile. They are substantially repeated by Ezekiel several times (Ezekiel 20). And, they are repeated twice by Paul (Romans 10:5 & Galatians 3:12).

And yet, Paul explains something to us concerning these words there in Galatians 3 that is contrary to what we already saw in Deuteronomy 1 –

“For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, ‘Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.’ ¹¹ But that no one is justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for ‘the just shall live by faith.’ ¹²Yet the law is not of faith, but ‘the man who does them shall live by them.’” Galatians 3:10-12

Paul cites the very law that Moses is about give, right from Deuteronomy 27:26 –

“Cursed is the one who does not confirm all the words of this law by observing them.” Deuteronomy 27:26

He then cites a prophet who lived under the law, and who thus prophesied words of law–

“Behold the proud,
His soul is not upright in him;
But the just shall live by his faith.” Habakkuk 2:4

Habakkuk shows that attempting to be justified before God on one’s own merit, something that the law requires, is prideful, and that the soul of one who is prideful is “not upright in him.”

As this is so, then it is not – nor can it be – that observance of the law will bring life. If it does not bring life, then it – by default – will bring death. Paul says that in Romans 7:7-12 –

“What shall we say then? Is the law sin? Certainly not! On the contrary, I would not have known sin except through the law. For I would not have known covetousness unless the law had said, “You shall not covet.” ⁸ But sin, taking opportunity by the commandment, produced in me all manner of evil desire. For apart from the law sin was dead. ⁹ I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. ¹⁰ And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death. ¹¹ For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me. ¹² Therefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good.”

Moses has said, right at the beginning of his giving of the law, and he will then repeat, right at the ending of this giving of the law, what the Lord said in His words of law – that the purpose of the law is for the granting of life. Can anyone disagree with that? No. It is explicit.

And yet, Israel did not enter into the promise. And more, not only did they not enter the promise, it wasn't at all because of a matter of law. The Lord never commanded the people to go into Canaan, despite the translation of Deuteronomy 1:26. There it said –

“Nevertheless you would not go up, but rebelled against the command of the LORD your God.” Deuteronomy 1:26

Rather, and as we saw at that time, the Hebrew said, va'tamru eth pi Yehovah elohekem – “and rebelled against the mouth of Yehovah your God.”

The “mouth of the Lord” can mean a commandment, but in this case the Lord did not “command” the people to go up. Instead, He promised to go before them. The implication is that they would believe Him and His promises and willingly follow His lead. But they did not.

They failed to have faith that the Lord would lead them and fight their battles for them. In failing to believe, they cut themselves off from the promise. From there, they found death in the wilderness instead of life in Canaan.

But then that brings us to the next thought. Were they under law while in the wilderness? The answer is “Yes.” The entire time that they were wandering there, they were under law. They certainly observed the Sabbath and were bound under the precepts of the law, and yet they could not fulfill the law entirely.

This is because the law included certain observances that can only be fulfilled while in Canaan – such as certain aspects of the Feasts of the Lord. And so, they were under law, but they were so in an imperfect manner.

This is the same as it was for Israel after their rejection of Christ during their dispersion. They were bound to the law, and yet they could not truly be obedient to the law.

When the Lord said that all would die in the wilderness, it isn't just true for the thirty-eight years after failing to enter Canaan. It was also true for every one of them who was exiled after rejecting Christ. The law that was to bring life, was found to bring death – both while they lived in Canaan, and during their time exiled from Canaan.

But those who were in the wilderness, and who were dying could be spared. Remember the account of the fiery serpents! It says the people spoke against Moses (meaning the law) and so the Lord sent fiery serpents among them. After acknowledging their wrong, Moses prayed for the people. At that time, it said –

“Then the LORD said to Moses, ‘Make a fiery serpent, and set it on a pole; and it shall be that everyone who is bitten, when he looks at it, shall live.’⁹ So Moses made a bronze serpent, and put it on a pole; and so it was, if a serpent had bitten anyone, when he looked at the bronze serpent, he lived.” Numbers 21:8, 9

It says that whoever looked to the bronze serpent lived. He found life. But Moses says here in Deuteronomy 4 that in observing the law, they would live. But these people found life not through the law, but through an act of faith alone.

And who is it that made the serpent and put it on a pole? Moses! It was Moses who – at the direction of the Lord – did so. Moses, the lawgiver, put the serpent on the pole. And it is the law – the penalty of the law – which necessitated Christ being placed on the cross. This is seen first from Jesus’ words –

“And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up,¹⁵ that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have eternal life.¹⁶ For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have everlasting life.¹⁷ For God did not send His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved.” John 3:14-17

And then from the words of Paul –

“In Him you were also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, by putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ,¹² buried with Him in baptism, in which you also were raised with Him through faith in the working of God, who raised Him from the dead.¹³ And you, being dead in your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh, He has made alive together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses,¹⁴ having wiped out the handwriting of requirements that was against us, which was contrary to us. And He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross.” Colossians 2:11-14

Jesus says that Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness. Moses, the “law,” did so because the Lord told him to do so. Jesus equates what happened there to what will happen to Him – He would be lifted up. As Moses is a type of the law, what Jesus is implying is that it is the law, the word of the Lord through the law, that necessitated that He would be lifted up.

But those who looked to the snake lived, not because of the law, but because of faith in looking to the serpent on the pole. Jesus is implying through the analogy, and explicitly stating through His words, that the world is saved through faith in His being lifted up, not through direct obedience to the law.

Paul then speaks of circumcision, a precept of the law (Leviticus 12:3), as being fulfilled in any who are in Christ, and that in this forgiveness, Christ wipes out the handwriting of the law, meaning He annuls it for that person.

And how is this possible? It is because God has taken the law “out of the way, having nailed it to the cross.” Did any of this – either at Moses’ time, or in the life of a believer now – occur through obedience to the law? Absolutely not. It came by faith in God’s provision.

If you can see it, when Moses put the serpent on the pole and lifted it up, he was – for all intents and purposes – nailing the law he had been given to that pole, crucifying it. Why?

Because first, the Lord said that the man who does the things of the law would live. Moses repeats this, saying that by observing the law you will live. And yet, the people who looked to the serpent on the pole – without doing a single deed of the law – lived.

If people found life without the law, then the law was no longer needed. This is what every Jew – few as they may be – who have come to Christ over the last 2000 years has discovered. The law died to them because they died to the law through Christ.

If Moses was astute, he may have said to himself, “The people have this law (under which they were condemned to die), which is supposed to bring life, and they are all dying around me, except for those who look at this bronze serpent. What on earth do we need the law for then?”

If he were exceedingly astute, he might have then said, “The law, which is supposed to give life to the man who does the things of this law, is summed up in the faith he has in looking to this serpent. This serpent embodies everything that the law was intended to provide. And it came from the Lord by an act of grace.”

If Moses figured that out, which the Bible does not even hint at, then he would have understood one of the main premises of the gospel as explained in detail by Paul –

“But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, ⁵ even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), ⁶ and raised us up together, and made us sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus, ⁷ that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us in Christ Jesus. ⁸ For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, ⁹ not of works, lest anyone should boast.”

-Ephesians 2:4-9

And this is what occurs with every Gentile as well. Paul already said it, as we cited earlier, “And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death” (Romans 7:10). This is exactly why Leviticus 18:5 is so important. Again –

“You shall therefore keep My statutes and My judgments, which if a man does, he shall live by them: I am the LORD.” Leviticus 18:5

While evaluating that verse, it was noted that there is a definite article before “man.” And further, it used the word adam, instead ish. Both mean “man,” but in using the word adam, it speaks of a human being, the species. It is speaking of a specific man, “if the man does.” Paul explains who the Man is –

“For since by man came death, by Man also came the resurrection of the dead. ²² For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ all shall be made alive.”

-1 Corinthians 15:21, 22

Adam died because of the law. God gave him a law, he disobeyed it, and he died. Paul says that through that man, meaning Adam, came death. The Lord says that if the Man does His statutes and judgments, He will live. Christ did the Lord’s statutes and judgments and He lives.

Jesus, and the apostles also, show that faith in Him means that we shall be made alive. If that is said to people who are alive – because only those who are alive can hear it, then it cannot simply be speaking of physical life.

As Paul says, “all in Adam die.” It is a confirmation of the doctrines we call “original sin” and “inherited sin.” Adam sinned, sin entered the world, and we have all inherited his spiritually dead state.

Paul cannot merely be speaking about people who had physically died, because he then says, “even so in Christ all shall be made alive.” But that includes us, who are physically alive right now. And so, it must be speaking of spiritual life, and thus eternal life.

We cannot even begin to speculate on whether Moses realized this or not. All we can know is that Moses repeats the words of the Lord concerning life for the people being found in doing the statutes and judgments set before them, and that some of the people lived, not by doing those, but by looking in faith to a serpent on a pole.

*The words are given so that you may live
But you must think on them and consider what to do
These innumerable laws are presented, to you them I give
And in doing them, life shall be granted to you*

*But consider well what this means to you
Every precept must be exactly completed and done
The man will live who these things doing he does do
Yes, he will live when he does every single one*

*Can you pass muster in doing these things you are to do?
Can you accomplish them all – yes, every single one?
There is another option laid out for you...
Trust in the doing of them all by My own precious Son*

III. Possess the Land

Having said all that we have said thus far, all of which is true and proper, it must be observed that the words of this verse are in the second person plural. Moses is speaking to Israel. When he said, “the statutes and judgments which I teach you,” the word “you” is plural. The word “you” in “that you may live” is also plural, and so are the words of the next clause...

^{1 (con't)} and go in and possess the land

Of this verse, Charles Ellicott says, “Life is put before possession. The penalty of the broken law is death.” This depends on what Ellicott is speaking of. If he is referring to physical life, the statement is incorrect. Breaking the law depends on what law is broken.

However, if what he says is speaking of the truth of the law itself, then he is correct. In Adam’s breaking of the law, death was the result. Any infraction of God’s law incurs spiritual death, but as we are born in that condition, it hardly matters. It simply means that we will never be made alive by breaking the law.

However, in this, Ellicott would continue to be correct. Life is put before possession. One cannot obtain the inheritance without first being given life. One believes in Christ unto salvation (the granting of life), and then the inheritance is realized. They may actually occur at the same time, but the logical order is life and then possession.

The verb “and go in” is plural as is the verb “and possess.” Moses is speaking to Israel as a collective body. But the fact is that once in the land, the people failed to do the statutes and judgments of the Lord, and yet they – as a people – have continued to live, even though individually they have either 1) trusted in Messiah and been granted eternal life, or 2) they have continued to die physically, and also to remain spiritually dead forever.

After entering Canaan, they lived in the land up until the time of the prophet Jeremiah. At that time, they were exiled to Babylon, as promised. Eventually, they were brought back to the land, also as prophesied.

After the return, Nehemiah went to accomplish a task in Judah, and during his time there, he repeats Leviticus 18:5 in the context of none of the people having done what was expected –

“But after they had rest,
They again did evil before You.
Therefore You left them in the hand of their enemies,
So that they had dominion over them;
Yet when they returned and cried out to You,
You heard from heaven;
And many times You delivered them according to Your mercies,
²⁹ And testified against them,
That You might bring them back to Your law.
Yet they acted proudly,

And did not heed Your commandments,
But sinned against Your judgments,
'Which if a man does, he shall live by them.'
And they shrugged their shoulders,
Stiffened their necks,
And would not hear.
³⁰ Yet for many years You had patience with them,
And testified against them by Your Spirit in Your prophets.
Yet they would not listen;
Therefore You gave them into the hand of the peoples of the lands.
³¹ Nevertheless in Your great mercy
You did not utterly consume them nor forsake them;
For You are God, gracious and merciful. Nehemiah 9:18-30

Nehemiah cites Leviticus 18:5, speaking of a singular man, but without the article – “if a man does...” No man had. All had died. The rest of the time, he is speaking of the people collectively – they, them, etc.

And more, not only had a man not done the things of the law, it implied that no man had done the things of the law – meaning that all of Israel had failed to do the things of the law. One plus one equals two. If they had not – meaning none of them – then the promise of Moses in Deuteronomy cannot have been attained.

Further, the people were exiled a second time, but the record shows that a Man (THE Man) had done the things of the law. That is the purpose of the gospels. It is to show that THE Man came, He fulfilled the law, and therefore the promise can be obtained.

However, Israel collectively rejected THE Man, and they were exiled again. Their exile demonstrates that one of two truths must exist: 1) Either no man did the things of the law, and thus Israel did not do the things of the law, or 2) a Man did do the things of the law and they rejected that.

The answer to which is true is obvious based on the gospels, and also on the words of Acts and the epistles. However, because Moses' words are to Israel collectively, and because they are now back in the land, even though they had not been doing the things of the law, nor are they now doing the things of the law, then there must be a purpose for them being there.

This is evident from our final words of this opening verse of Deuteronomy 4...

1 (fin) which the LORD God of your fathers is giving you.

The land is given to Israel by the Lord God of their fathers. If the land is given to Israel, which it clearly is stated here, and if they may live (meaning not die), and that they may both go in and also possess the land, then – as was clearly seen in our last of three Leviticus 26 sermons – Israel will someday come to Christ.

They are under the law right now, whether they are observing it or not. They will be under the law during a period of observing it – meaning with a temple, sacrificial rites, and etc., and yet they will continue to be bound by the law which they cannot meet. For a third time, as Paul says, “And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death” (Romans 7:10).

If they cannot meet the law, and if the law brings death, and yet Moses says that through observing the law they may live, then it must mean through the Man who did the things of the law. Their life, the collective life of Israel, is bound up in the observance of the law. But it is only so in regard to Jesus Christ’s fulfillment of it – nothing more. THE Man has done the things of the law.

It doesn’t matter if it is singular you, or plural you all, the same truth holds for both. By deeds of the law, no man – and no nation – will be justified in God’s sight. For all of the detail of our words today, for all of the carefully and precisely stated words, and for all of the logic that had to be applied to certain points, one truth is inescapable – the law promises life, but it only brings death.

This does not mean that the Lord deceived Israel. It means that they misunderstood what the promises entailed, and that they failed to observe what the very promises of the law speak to – both from Moses and from the later writings. That which it speaks to is the incarnation of God in the Person of Jesus Christ.

Does the law truly bring death? Well, yes. Jesus Christ was born under the law, He lived without violating the law, and thus He could have lived in that capacity forever. But the law even brought death to Christ – not for His violations of it, but for ours –

“I am the good shepherd; and I know My sheep, and am known by My own. ¹⁵ As the Father knows Me, even so I know the Father; and I lay down My life for the sheep. ¹⁶ And other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they will hear My voice; and there will be one flock and one shepherd.

¹⁷ “Therefore My Father loves Me, because I lay down My life that I may take it again. ¹⁸ No one takes it from Me, but I lay it down of Myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This command I have received from My Father.” John 10:14-18

Thank God for Jesus Christ who was willing to die under that law so that we could die to the law. My hope and great desire for you is that you will contemplate what this means, and then that you will decide to trust Jesus, by faith alone, for your salvation.

The sin in man must be judged, or man must be judged in sin, but either way, our sin will be judged. Be wise and discerning and ask God for your sin to be judged at the cross of Calvary in the sinless Man who became sin so that we could become the righteousness of God in Him. May it be so, and may it be today – to the glory of God and to the saving of your soul.

Closing Verse: “But now the righteousness of God apart from the law is revealed, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets, ²² even the righteousness of God, through faith in Jesus Christ, to all and on all who believe. For there is no difference; ²³ for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, ²⁴ being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, ²⁵ whom God set forth as a propitiation by His blood, through faith, to demonstrate His righteousness, because in His forbearance God had passed over the sins that were previously committed, ²⁶ to demonstrate at the present time His righteousness, that He might be just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus.” Romans 3:21-26

Next Week: Deuteronomy 4:2-7 It applies to all – be it a Janice or a Jim... (For Whatever Reason We May Call Upon Him) (13th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

That You May Live

Now, O Israel, listen to the statutes and the judgments
Which I teach you to observe, that you may live
And go in and possess the land
Which the LORD God of your fathers is going to you give

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 4:2-7 (For Whatever Reason We May Call Upon Him)

Last week, we got through just one verse, and in all honesty, that could have easily happened again today. There is sufficient detail in verse 2 that it could have been fully fleshed out in a single sermon. But I thought, “If I do this, there will be a rebellion. Eventually, someone is going to go crazy, or shoot me, or both.”

And so, I cut the commentary on verse 2 short. About an hour after having done this, Sergio messaged me and asked if I was sticking with verse 2 alone for the sermon, or if there would be progress. I told him my thoughts about a rebellion and went back to work. He suggested that I not rush it and to just give you one verse. He said that if you have a problem with that, you should email him.

Ok, he didn’t really say that, but a few minutes later, he sent me a GIF of a riot – people destroying a car with the caption, “Rebellion on Siesta Key After 2nd One Verse Sermon.” I laughed and got back to work.

But two minutes later, a second GIF came in of a black congregation applauding in the Spirit, saying, “While Sarasota Protests, SW Satellite Church in Uganda is Like...” meaning that they were all behind another one-verse sermon.

I think he’s implying that folks in the US are lazy about their theology, but those in Africa cherish the word. Can it be? I dare not try to find out because he sent one more GIF with a picture of a person drowning in emails and a caption, “Charlie the Day After the Sermon,” implying that people will, in fact, be upset enough to email by the hundreds.

And so, I have done my best to shorten the comments of verse 2, and to continue on through the rest of what is now our sermon text.

Text Verse: *“Oh, how I love Your law!
It is my meditation all the day.” Psalm 119:97*

Meditating on the law of the Lord is what brings out the beauty of the law of the Lord. One cannot meditate on what he does not know, nor can he know unless he first opens the word and reads it.

Sermon typing is to be an active meditation on the word which is then intended to be expressed to others concerning what has been considered and brought forth. I can’t think of any other way of expressing myself in a sermon that has more value than to sit and contemplate each word of each verse and then pass that on to whoever is willing to listen.

It is God's word and it is given for us to find Christ, and/or to marvel in what Christ has accomplished for us. We will see more of that today as we go through our verses. For now, I would like to remind you of the chiasm which spans the verses we're looking at.

Deuteronomy 3:25-4:22 - Call upon Him.
Israel's Instruction (11/07)

- a 3:25 Moses wants to cross Jordan
- b 3:26 Lord angry with Moses
- c 3:27 "Lift your eyes toward the west, the north, the south, and the east."
- d 4:3, 4 Example of apostasy (idolatry)
- e 4:5 Taught statutes and judgments
- f 4:6 Be careful to observe them (judgments)
- g 4:7 Great nation
- x 4:7 Call upon Him
- g 4:8 Great nation
- f 4:9 Diligently keep yourself (judgments)
- e 4:10-14 Taught statutes and judgments.
- d 4:15-18 Warning of apostasy (idolatry)
- c 4:19 "Lift your eyes to heaven."
- b 4:21 Lord angry with Moses
- a 4:22 Moses must not cross over the Jordan

We will get through a portion of the verses of this chiasm today, including the central verse upon which it is anchored. What a treasure we have in the word! It is filled with beauty and riches. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Do Not Add to It nor Take from It (Verse 2)

²You shall not add to the word

Here, the "statutes and judgments" referred to in verse 1 are combined into one thought – lo tosiphu al ha'davar – "No shall you add to the word." The word "you" is plural. It is spoken to all of the people of Israel, and what is conveyed to them is a codified body of law which stands alone – ha'davar, “the word.”

Despite being made up of many words which then comprise the statutes and judgments that must be individually observed, together they form a single unit. This idea is precisely conveyed by James –

“For whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is guilty of all. ¹¹ For He who said, “Do not commit adultery,” also said, “Do not murder.” Now if you do not commit adultery, but you do murder, you have become a transgressor of the law.” James 2:10, 11

Of this, Charles Ellicott says, “The word is the substance of the Law. The words in which it is expressed may be more or less.” He then continues with, “The law of Moses contains in it the germ of all revelation to the very end.”

In other words, what Moses presents here is what will spring forth into new revelation. The prophets, under the law of Moses, would speak forth more to the people which would be considered further revelation within the framework of the law.

For example, Jeremiah, again and again, would come forward to the people and say, “Hear the word of the Lord.” The book of Jeremiah is a revelation of God, and it is authoritative. His words are incorporated into the body of Scripture which issues forth from the Lord.

At times, what he or others said was simply a call to observe what is already laid out by Moses. At times, Jeremiah would reveal something which would occur because of obedience or disobedience to the word, and so on.

It is the word (singular) of the Lord, spoken with words (plural) which become a continued part of the word of the Lord. However, it is – in fact – the word of the Lord. When the false prophets spoke, it was not the word of the Lord.

Based on these things, one might jump to the conclusion that what is presented in the Law of Moses is the complete and completed word of law which stands alone and for all time.

And indeed, there are those who treat it as such, as least in principle. The Jews of Jesus’ time would hold up Moses as the full and finished revelation of God, sticking fast to every precept when it was convenient, but then dismissing what the Law of Moses clearly revealed, and what the prophets later continued to reveal.

Even today, many messianics and Hebrew Roots adherents look at the Law of Moses as still binding in every precept. And yet, even they conveniently dismiss those parts of the law which are inconvenient, or impossible, to observe.

What the Jews of Jesus' time, those swayed by the false apostles who came forth to reinsert the law as recorded in Paul's writings, and the pseudo-Christians today who continue to hold to the Law of Moses, fail to see is that the Law of Moses, itself, speaks of its own end. It is merely a steppingstone on the path to a New Covenant, of which Moses Himself speaks of. For example, Deuteronomy 18 says –

“The LORD your God will raise up for you a Prophet like me from your midst, from your brethren. Him you shall hear, ¹⁶ according to all you desired of the LORD your God in Horeb in the day of the assembly, saying, ‘Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, nor let me see this great fire anymore, lest I die.’

¹⁷ “And the LORD said to me: ‘What they have spoken is good. ¹⁸ I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their brethren, and will put My words in His mouth, and He shall speak to them all that I command Him. ¹⁹ And it shall be that whoever will not hear My words, which He speaks in My name, I will require it of him.” Deuteronomy 18:15-19

A Prophet like Moses is different than any other prophet who would come under the Law of Moses. Other prophets spoke in accord with the covenant, but Moses spoke out the covenant. Thus, a Prophet like Moses would speak out a New Covenant. Ironically, Jeremiah – a prophet under the Law of Moses – spoke of exactly this –

“Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah— ³² not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt, My covenant which they broke, though I was a husband to them, says the LORD. ³³ But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put My law in their minds, and write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people. ³⁴ No more shall every man teach his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, ‘Know the LORD,’ for they all shall know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them, says the LORD. For I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin I will remember no more.” Jeremiah 31:31-34

Jeremiah spoke the word of the Lord, with words in accord with the word of the Lord, which support Moses' words concerning a New Covenant. But such a New Covenant would not be, and indeed could not be, a part of the Law of Moses. This is a truth which was completely missed by the scholar Keil –

“Christ also said that He had not come to destroy the law or the prophets, but to fulfil (Matthew 5:17); and the old covenant was not abrogated, but only glorified and perfected, by the new.” Keil

He could not be more wrong in this. As we saw ever so clearly last week, the law was glorified in Christ, but only so in His fulfillment of it. And the law could not be “perfected.” As it is from God, it is perfect in what it teaches, even if incomplete in what it presents concerning His revelation of Himself. The law was abrogated in the introduction of a New Covenant.

Jeremiah said that the sins of the people would be remembered no more. And yet, it is through law that sin is imputed. If the Lord God would no longer remember their sins, then this New Covenant could not be a part of the Law of Moses, meaning the Old Covenant. And this is confirmed, explicitly, in Hebrews with the words, “In that He says, ‘A new covenant,’ He has made the first obsolete” (Hebrews 8:13).

And that takes us back to the opening words of the verse, “You shall not add to the word.” Observing the Law of Moses required that it was to be kept, exactly as it was given. But this is the very thing that Israel did as is recorded throughout the prophets, and as is recorded by Jesus' own words at His time –

“Hypocrites! Well did Isaiah prophesy about you, saying:

⁸ ‘These people draw near to Me with their mouth,

And honor Me with their lips,

But their heart is far from Me.

⁹ And in vain they worship Me,

Teaching as doctrines the commandments of men.” Matthew 15:7-9

Both the words of the prophets, and Jesus' words, show that Israel failed in this. They added in words to the word which were not a part of the word, thus violating the word itself...

² (con't) which I command you,

The Lord has spoken out the terms of the covenant, and He has relayed through Moses His expectations to the people. This was seen innumerable times in the previous books with the words, “And the Lord spoke to Moses saying.”

From there, Moses would transmit that word to the people. It is the word of the Lord, from the Lord to Moses, and which is then given to the people. However, Moses now says, “which I command you.” What is to be presented is the word of the Lord, and yet it is not the word from the Lord to Moses, but the word of the Lord through Moses.

Though it is the word of the Lord, it is a completely different way in which the Lord will speak. In Numbers 7, we read –

“Now when Moses went into the tabernacle of meeting to speak with Him, he heard the voice of One speaking to him from above the mercy seat that was on the ark of the Testimony, from between the two cherubim; thus He spoke to him.” Numbers 7:89

When there, we learned that the verb was in a particular form, expressing the reflexive voice where the subject of the verb is both performing and receiving the verbal action. A more literal translation would be “...he heard the voice conversing with him” (Pulpit).

In Exodus 33:11, it said that “the Lord spoke to Moses face to face, as a man speaks to his friend.” This means that they had open and free discussion. And, in Numbers 12:8, it said that Moses “sees the form of the Lord.”

The Lord conveyed His word to Moses, and Moses then relayed that which he received. But because Moses is speaking in the first person now in Deuteronomy, “which I command you,” it is still divine revelation, but rather than direct revelation “to,” it is divine inspiration “through.”

It is the word of the Lord, and it is not to be added to. This is why the true prophets were not to be stoned to death as if they were violating the covenant, but the false prophets were. A remarkable example of this is found in Jeremiah 26. Jeremiah prophesied to the people words of judgment, they said –

“And the priests and the prophets spoke to the princes and all the people, saying, ‘This man deserves to die! For he has prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your ears.’” Jeremiah 26:11

However, Jeremiah gave a defense for his words, stating they were, in fact, the word of the Lord and that he was in their hands to do with as they wished. After that, we read –

So the princes and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, “This man does not deserve to die. For he has spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.”

¹⁷ Then certain of the elders of the land rose up and spoke to all the assembly of the people, saying: ¹⁸ “Micah of Moresheth prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spoke to all the people of Judah, saying, ‘Thus says the LORD of hosts:

“Zion shall be plowed like a field,
Jerusalem shall become heaps of ruins,
And the mountain of the temple
Like the bare hills of the forest.””

¹⁹ Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah ever put him to death? Did he not fear the LORD and seek the LORD’s favor? And the LORD relented concerning the doom which He had pronounced against them. But we are doing great evil against ourselves.” Jeremiah 26:16-19

The prophet Micah was held to be a true prophet of God. In citing Micah, they had a set precedent which could not be denied without denying that he was a prophet. As Jeremiah’s words both confirmed the word of the Law and were also supported by Micah who confirmed the word of the Law, they could not punish Jeremiah without violating the Law of Moses.

² (con’t) nor take from it,

There are two things which are to be considered. The first is the performance of what is given. Verse 1 said, “listen to the statutes and judgments.” To listen means more than hearing. It speaks of hearing and acting. For example, in Numbers 15, it said –

“Speak to the children of Israel: Tell them to make tassels on the corners of their garments throughout their generations, and to put a blue thread in the tassels of the corners.” Numbers 15:38

In this, there is the possibility of a sin of commission or a sin of omission. If a person made the tassels as instructed, but put a red thread in them, that would be a sin of commission. He purposefully disobeyed the precept. But if he made the tassels and forgot to put in a blue thread, it would be a sin of omission. Both are violations of the law.

But there is another aspect of the law which is what is now spoken of here, and it is what we have been addressing. There is adding to the law that which is not law, or there is taking away from the law that which is law.

Jeroboam, in order to have the people worship in Israel rather than in Judah, made two golden calves for the people to present their sacrifices and offerings to. He added that which was not law.

King Ahaz, on the other hand, took away the burnt altar made by Moses, replacing it with another, one of pagan design. He both took away from the law that which was mandated, and he added that which was not.

Moses is telling the people to not add to, or take away from, that which he is instructing them, meaning purposeful manipulation of the law. This was so...

² (con't) that you may keep the commandments

If there was an addition to the law, they could not rightly keep the law. If there was a taking away from the law, they could not rightly keep the law. But in leaving the law – as given by the Lord, either to or through the prophet of God – the people could then rightly keep the commandments.

From that point, it would be up to the people to not commit violations of the law and to not omit doing the commandments of the law. But if the law is manipulated, the people could not successfully do either. The law is God's revelation of Himself, and it was to be treated as such. As Moses says, they are commandments...

² (con't) of the LORD your God

Despite being conveyed from Moses to the people, they are ultimately words which form the word of the Lord. And, that the words of the later prophets are a part of that same word is obvious.

The Lord spoke through them His continued revelation to the people, and the words of those prophets carried the same weight and authority as that of Moses, because Moses was not the source of his words, just as the prophets were not the source of their words. In both, they are the words of the Lord God. This is certain based on Jesus' own words –

“Do not think that I came to destroy the Law or the Prophets. I did not come to destroy but to fulfill. ¹⁸ For assuredly, I say to you, till heaven and earth pass away, one jot or one tittle will by no means pass from the law till all is fulfilled. ¹⁹ Whoever therefore breaks one of the least of these commandments, and teaches men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but whoever does and teaches them, he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.”

-Matthew 5:17-19

Jesus refers to the Law and the Prophets, placing them on equal authority. He then confirms this by combining them into one thought – “one jot or one tittle will by no means pass from the law.” The word of the Lord to Moses is law. The word of the Lord through Moses is law. And the word of the Lord to and through the prophets is law. For now, these are the words of the Lord through Moses, as he says...

² (con't) which I command you.

Moses had the authority to do so because these are the words of the Lord. However, that authority did not end with his death. Rather, it was a word binding upon Israel even at Jesus' time. When a question of law arose, Jesus would appeal to the law, asking “What did Moses command you?” (Mark 10:3). Also, He told the people to do what the scribes and Pharisees instructed because they sat in Moses' seat (Matthew 23:2).

The final authority of the Law was Moses, representative of the law, even if the words were of later prophets. This is because the law is one codified body.

Before we go on now to verse 3, you might wonder why this is so important. Why go through all of this detailed analysis over something so simply stated? It is because one must hang his hat somewhere.

One can hang his hat on Moses and thus be obligated to Moses – wholly and entirely. This is the weight and the penalty of the law. No man may add to it, and no man may subtract from it. If one desires the law, he must live and die by the law –

“And I testify again to every man who becomes circumcised that he is a debtor to keep the whole law. ⁴ You have become estranged from Christ, you who attempt to be justified by law; you have fallen from grace.” Galatians 5:3, 4

Or, one can come to Christ, find life in His fulfillment of the law, and receive His grace and mercy, as provided to under the law – of which He embodies, as we see in John 1:16, 17 –

“And of His fullness we have all received, and grace for grace. ¹⁷ For the law was given through Moses, but grace and truth came through Jesus Christ.”

This is not an arbitrary, haphazard, way of spending Sunday morning. Rather, it is an encounter with the God of the universe and what His expectations are for fallen man, because His expectations are based on His eternal, unchanging nature.

Any violation of the law is reason for condemnation, but through the law mercy could – at times – be given. At others, the just, righteous, and holy standard of God was to be meted out to the people for their willful disobedience of His word...

*Keep the commandments of the Lord your God
This is what you are asked to do
To reject this is thinking that is flawed
These words are life and blessing for you*

*And to every word, you are to pay heed
Not missing a single precept, because they all apply
In the doing of them, life has been decreed
So be sure to cross every “t” and dot every “i”*

*But be sure not to miss what I am telling you
There is one precept you are surely not to miss
When you fail to do what you have been told to do
Come to my Son, and Him you shall kiss*

In Him it is all accomplished and done for you Come to Him and be reconciled to Me; so, you shall do

II. Be Careful to Observe Them (verses 3-7)

³Your eyes have seen what the LORD did at Baal Peor;

To continue the chiasm, which is hidden in these verses, Moses now gives a concrete example of what violating the law calls for. He takes Israel back to what occurred in Numbers 25. Something which was still fresh on their memories, because it only happened a short time earlier.

In this, he says, enekhem ha'root, "your eyes that are seeing." It is present tense, plural. The events occurred within the time of law, the plan is set, it is unfolding, and those under the law were active participants. And this was at a time when all of the previous generation had died, except for Moses, Joshua, and Caleb.

What occurred was with the new generation – those who were set to leave Kadesh, head towards Canaan, and eventually enter into the Land of Promise. But along the way, they were seduced to worship the Baal of Peor through sexual sin on a large scale. It happened, and one can assume it is exactly what is expected of Israel in the near future.

A temple will be built, the people will live under this covenant, and they will suffer the consequences of violating what this covenant demands. Although we are not there yet, a portion of the people of Israel today can be expected to play the harlot through sexual sin – maybe it will be at the annual gay parade in Tel Aviv. And the nation will suffer the consequences of their actions.

This isn't idle speculation. The past can be expected to be called forward, and that which has been will be again. Israel was given an example of apostasy leading to death, and it can be expected that they will again be given that same example.

When it comes, it will be to remind them that they, as a collective people, are bound to the covenant... or they can come to Christ and be relieved of its burden in Him.

Moses says it is "what the Lord did." A plague from the Lord came upon the people because of their harlotry and turning from the law which governed them. In turning from the law, they turned from the Lord. And in doing so, he says...

^{3 (con't)} for the LORD your God has destroyed from among you all the men who followed Baal of Peor.

The events of Peor culminated in the death of twenty-four thousand through the sword and through plague. If this is an event to be repeated once the temple rites begin again, and this is mere speculation, Israel can expect another plague in those who openly sin in some idolatrous and sexual way.

Again, something like the gay parades in Tel Aviv could spawn a sudden plague of death by those who participate in them. But even if this doesn't happen, the fact that it has occurred in Israel, and that it is recorded in the law, is sufficient to apprise Israel that they are bound under this law of penalty, punishment, and death.

However, in contrast to those who sinned...

⁴ But you who held fast to the LORD your God are alive today, every one of you.

Here, the word of the Lord is equated directly to the Lord. Moses says, v'atem ha'debeqim Yehovah elohekhem – “And you, the clinging ones to Yehovah your God.” It is by violating the law that the people died. It is by not violating the law that the people did not die. And yet, it says they clung to the Lord. The Lord, and the word of the Lord, cannot be separated. What He says is a reflection of who He is.

Further, there is a difference between living and being granted life. The law cannot grant life unless one does, and continues to do, the things of the law – perfectly. However, the law can (and does) bring death. In failing to observe the law, death is assured. This is what is being referred to here.

These people did not die, but it does not mean that they have been granted eternal life. Under the Law of Moses, this is impossible. One must be brought out from under the bondage of the law in order to be granted eternal life.

This is stated by John Lange. Understanding that the law cannot give life, he says that this verse only “points to the kernel of all fulfilling of the law, as a living union with the Lawgiver Himself, from which springs, as here, its fruit, life, and life enduring.” It is what Paul writes of in Romans 5 –

“Moreover the law entered that the offense might abound. But where sin abounded, grace abounded much more, ²¹ so that as sin reigned in death, even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.” Romans 5:20-21

⁵ “Surely I have taught you statutes and judgments, just as the LORD my God commanded me, that you should act according to them in the land which you go to possess.

The words of this verse pick up the theme presented in verse 1. Putting the verses side by side will show you this –

* Now, O Israel, listen to the statutes and the judgments which I teach you to observe, that you may live, and go in and possess the land which the Lord God of your fathers is giving you.

* Surely I have taught you statutes and judgments, just as the LORD my God commanded me, that you should act according to them in the land which you go to possess.

First, he uses the same word here as was introduced there, and which is translated as “teach” and “taught.” It is lamad, coming from a primitive root signifying “to goad.” One uses a goad to prod an animal along.

Moses is thus using the word of the Lord to prod the people. However, in verse 1, it was stated as an ongoing act – “which I teach you to observe.” Here in verse 5, he says it in the past tense, “I have taught you.” Why would he do that?

He then uses the same word, laasot, that he used in verse 1. It signifies “to do.” Moses taught the people the statutes and judgments so that they could do them.

However, in verse 1, he said, “that you may live, and go in and possess the land.” Here, he leaves off “that you may live” and he says b’qerev ha’aretz asher atem ba’im shamah l’rishtah – “in the midst of the land which you go there to possess.”

In verse 1, Moses used a word, maan, which signified that the purpose, or goal, of observing the statutes and judgments was two-fold – 1) to live, and 2) to possess the land. He leaves that off now because he is speaking of those who actually cross the Jordan and who will be in the midst of the land.

This is why he changed it from “teach” to “taught.” He is speaking to them as if they have entered and are in the midst of the land. If the purpose of teaching was to live and to enter the land, then when they are in the land, what was taught should be adhered to.

The typology is not to be missed. Moses, representing the law, will be dead when they enter. Joshua, typical of Christ as the leader who replaces the law, will lead them in. They will pass through the Jordan, meaning passing through the life, death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, and thus they will have life, and they will dwell in the midst of the land – meaning they will have entered the promise.

This is why Moses speaks of it as a done deal, not one which has a purpose or goal, and that is why he doesn't say, "that you may live." In type, life is granted in Christ – pictured by dwelling in Canaan. However, this is only in type.

The group who is going in will fail to act in the manner expected. In fact, Ezra uses almost the exact same wording, "the land which you are entering to possess" (Ezra 9:11), when speaking of the words of law which Israel failed to heed. In their failure, they were exiled, in their return from exile, they again failed to heed.

This is one of the main purposes of the Old Testament after the giving of the law. It is to show that Israel did not – and indeed could not – meet the demands of the law. Encouragement didn't work, punishment didn't work, and the attempts of people like Ezra and others to do their best at simply honoring the Lord through their efforts under the law didn't work.

Israel didn't learn, they continued to not learn, and to this day, their inability to learn this lesson has cost them greatly. Though they entered the land, they did not enter their rest. And today, back in the land once again, they have not entered their rest.

For now, and having left off "that you may live" from his words, Moses provides, instead, another reason for observing the law...

⁶Therefore be careful to observe them;

The Hebrew is more specific – u-shemartem va'asitem – "And you shall keep, and do them." One can keep and not do – "This is our law, but I am not going to do it." Or one can "not" keep and yet do – "There is no law that says I should do this, but I am doing it because it is right."

Israel, however, was given the law, they were to keep the law, and they were to do the law. This goes for common person as well as judge. A person could not do the law, and a judge could fail to punish him for that. Or, a person could not do the law, and a judge could punish him for that. In the case of the latter, the law is observed, and it is kept through the judge's actions.

This is especially seen and highlighted in the times of the kings. When the people were without restraint, and the kings likewise failed to restrain the people, the Lord would intervene to judge because the laws were not kept.

However, at times, kings would come in and take the necessary action to correct the people and the Lord would bless the land. Kings are known in the record by their conduct before the law.

A good king might have the words “and he did right in the sight of the Lord,” recorded in his record. A bad king might have the words, “and he did evil in the sight of the Lord,” recorded in his record. At times, David was used as the standard, and a king’s record might say, “he did right in the sight of the Lord, as his father David had done.” These and other variations are given based on one overarching rule – that of the law...

⁶ (con’t) for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the peoples who will hear all these statutes,

In keeping the law, there is – in the law – a promise of blessing from the Lord. When one is blessed, he prospers. There is contentment, wealth, abundance, and so on. When a person is seen in such a state, it is recognized that he must have wisdom and understanding.

In understanding this, the source of that wisdom and understanding is then observed. It logically follows that when a person prospers, the reason for it will want to be seen. In Israel’s prosperity, the framework of law which established them would then be heard and understood.

On the other hand, possessing the law, and yet not doing the law, is of little value. It further shows no wisdom at all. In fact, exactly the opposite is true. Israel had the law, and they – more often than not – failed to do the law.

The problem with this is that in the law are listed punishments for not doing the law. Those punishments came upon the people and the nations were quick to recognize why this had come about. The Lord even warned them, through Solomon, of exactly this –

“But if you or your sons at all turn from following Me, and do not keep My commandments and My statutes which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods and worship them, ⁷ then I will cut off Israel from the land which I have given them; and this house which I have consecrated for My name I will cast out of My sight. Israel will be a proverb and a byword among all peoples. ⁸ And as for this house, which is exalted, everyone who passes by it will be astonished and will hiss, and say, 'Why has the LORD done thus to this land and to this house?' ⁹ Then they will answer, 'Because they forsook the LORD their God, who brought their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have embraced other gods, and worshiped them and served them; therefore the LORD has brought all this calamity on them.'" 1 Kings 9:6-9

Either way, the law sets the parameters for how the peoples would view Israel. And the conduct of Israel was guided by the conduct of her leaders. Moses now conveys to them that it is the law, and it is obedience to the law, that will convey a positive image of Israel to the nations...

^{6 (con't)} and say, 'Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.'

The psalms speak of the law of the Lord, of the blessings that follow in keeping them, and in the wisdom that is displayed in doing so –

"The testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple;
⁸ The statutes of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart;
The commandment of the LORD is pure, enlightening the eyes;
⁹ The fear of the LORD is clean, enduring forever;
The judgments of the LORD are true and righteous altogether.
¹⁰ More to be desired are they than gold,
Yea, than much fine gold;
Sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.
¹¹ Moreover by them Your servant is warned,
And in keeping them there is great reward." Psalm 19:7-11

Here and elsewhere, this is stated. And throughout the times of the kings, this is validated. This is especially so with Solomon where he is set as the epitome of wisdom and understanding. In this state, the Queen of Sheba sought him out and experienced the truth of what Moses now conveys.

How Israel is viewed by the people of the world is based on this one overarching premise. No one can deny the moral uprightness and greatness of the law. Nations around the world have incorporated portions of it into their own laws.

But the law in and of itself, despite being great, is not what conveys greatness. Rather, adherence to it does. When it is not adhered to, the opposite is true. Israel's identity is wholly tied up in the law. And, unfortunately, Israel's failure to adhere to their own law is what brought them scoffing from the nations, exile, and being viewed as pariahs in their places of exile.

But, in their times of obedience, the law provided them something that no other nation had...

⁷ “For what great nation is there that has God so near to it,

The word elohim, or “God,” is a masculine plural noun. It can be translated as “God,” “a god,” or “gods,” depending on the context. Here, the word elohim, and the adjective qerovim, or “near,” are both plural. Therefore, this could be read, “that has God near to it,” “that has a god near to it,” or “that has gods near to it.”

Moses could be saying that there is one God, and that he is especially near to Israel – unlike any other nation. Or, he could be mocking the nations concerning their false gods.

What seems likely is that it should be rendered “a god,” or “gods.” It appears from the next clause that by using the name Yehovah, He is set in contrast to what is stated in this clause.

Either way, the statement is defined by the words “near to it.” No other nation was as close to God, or “gods,” as was Israel, and no other nation had a god or gods that were truly near to it. They were false gods that could not come near. Instead, the nations had to be the ones to draw near. But the Lord, in relation to Israel, was always near. That is explained by Moses saying...

^{7 (con't)} as the LORD our God is to us, ka'Yehovah elohenu – “as Yehovah our God.” The contrast appears to show that the previous clause is referring to false gods. Otherwise, one would think that Moses would say, ha'elohim, or “the God,” as is seen at times. By not using the article there, and by naming Yehovah and calling Him “our God,” he has formed a complete and total contrast to the other nations.

They had no god near, but Israel had Yehovah near...

7 (fin) for whatever reason we may call upon Him?

b'kal qareenu elav – “in all we may call upon Him.” These words form the center of the chiasm and they demonstrate that the greatness of Israel is tied directly to the Lord. But the word of the Lord is a reflection of who the Lord is. The two cannot be separated.

Therefore, the greatness of Israel rests solely on their adherence to the word of the Lord, meaning the law. The Lord is near to Israel only when they draw near to Him through obedience to His word. And this, then, brings us directly back to what was discussed in verse 2.

The law, meaning the word of the Lord, clearly and unambiguously spoke of the coming Messiah. And that coming Messiah was clearly revealed in its words. When Christ came, He told them as much –

“Do not think that I shall accuse you to the Father; there is one who accuses you—Moses, in whom you trust. ⁴⁶ For if you believed Moses, you would believe Me; for he wrote about Me. ⁴⁷ But if you do not believe his writings, how will you believe My words?” John 5:45-47

Moses wrote about Him, the prophets wrote about Him, and that is because they were inspired, by the Lord, to write about Him. At this time, there is no prophetic revelation from the Lord to Israel because Israel has rejected the Source of prophetic revelation.

If the Lord is near to Israel at this time, it is only in a protective sense, not in the friendly, relational sense that Moses speaks of here. His word says that they have seven more years of this law – the Law of Moses – ahead of them. That is intended to bring them into the New Covenant, and it will come to pass.

At that time, Israel will be as close to their God as the people of God, meaning the church, have been for the past two millennia. Moses asked, what nation has a god, or gods, so near to them? The answer begs a negative response – “There is no such nation.”

However, through Christ Jesus, a people, even if not a nation, has the God – the true God – near to them. Paul speaks of that in Romans 10 when speaking of those who are the saved of the Lord through the blood of Christ. Citing Deuteronomy 32, he says, “I will provoke you to jealousy by those who are not a nation” (Romans 10:19).

While Israel has groaned under the punishment of having rejected the Lord, who is the embodiment of this law, the people of the world have streamed to Christ Jesus. He has been, and He remains, as close to us as the simple call out of a prayer under our breath.

When we need comfort, we can talk to Him and He will provide it. When we need reassurance, He is there to give it. And when we need to lay our hearts out to Him for the things we have done wrong, He is there to listen and to forgive.

Israel has missed this because they have missed Jesus. But the church will be called home, the focus of attention will be on Israel, and they will be brought into that sweet fellowship with their God that they failed to receive in times past. This is so that for whatever reason, all will be able to “call on Him.”

Closing Verse: “Concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but concerning the election they are beloved for the sake of the fathers. ²⁹ For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable. ³⁰ For as you were once disobedient to God, yet have now obtained mercy through their disobedience, ³¹ even so these also have now been disobedient, that through the mercy shown you they also may obtain mercy. ³² For God has committed them all to disobedience, that He might have mercy on all.” Romans 11:28-32

Next Week: Deuteronomy 4:8-14 Something to consider, ladies and gentlemen... (That They May Teach Their Children) (14th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

For Whatever Reason We May Call Upon Him

You shall not add to the word which I command you
Nor take from it, that you may keep
The commandments of the LORD your God
Which I command you, as my obedient sheep

Your eyes have seen what the LORD did at Baal Peor
For the LORD your God has destroyed, for sure
From among you all the men
Who followed Baal of Peor

But you who held fast to the LORD your God
Are alive today, every one of you still on this earth does trod

Surely I have taught you statutes and judgments
Just as the LORD my God commanded me
That you should act according to them in the land
Which you go to possess, from the Jordan to the Great Sea

Therefore be careful to observe them
For this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight
Of the peoples who will hear all these statutes, and say “Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people
-----they have got things set just right

For what great nation is there
That has God so near to it, like a man’s own limb
As the LORD our God is to us
For whatever reason we may call upon Him?

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 4:8-14 (That They May Teach Their Children)

In Homestead, Florida, there is a place called the Coral Castle. It was built by a Latvian immigrant to America named Edward Leedskalnin. He was engaged to a sixteen-year-old girl, but one day before the wedding, she bailed on him.

Putting that life behind, in the early 1920s, he moved to America and eventually came to Florida. There, he began working on his home, which was a monument to the lost love of his life.

Ed was only 5 feet tall and weighed around 100 pounds, and yet, the house he built includes blocks of Oolite Limestone, meaning fossilized coral, over 25 feet tall, and weighing over 30 tons. Thus, some of the stones are taller than those in Stonehenge and heavier than the heaviest stone in the great pyramid of Giza.

The entry gate for the house weighs 9 tons and could be spun by a slight push by a child with a single finger. It is carved so that it fits within a quarter of an inch of the walls. In 1986, it stopped working, and so a crew was called in to repair it.

It took six men and a 50-short-ton crane to pull it out. After repairing it, it was set back in place. That lasted about 20 years and it had to be repaired again, but it has never rotated as precisely as it once did.

It has never been discovered how he was able to do the work he did, and his secrets died with him. A lesson we can learn here is that great things must be passed on to another generation, or they will die off and be lost – maybe to never be recovered again.

Text Verse: “But now the righteousness of God apart from the law is revealed, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets,²² even the righteousness of God, through faith in Jesus Christ, to all and on all who believe. For there is no difference;²³ for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God.” Romans 3:21-23

In our verses today, both the Lord and Moses note the importance of parents teaching the children what they know concerning the words of the Lord. If we find it a loss to think of not knowing how Ed Leedskalnin did what he did, how much more of a loss should it be considered when the word of the Lord is not passed on to the next generation!

Or maybe even worse than that would be incorrectly passing on the word of the Lord. Who knows, someone who was not trained in the word of the Lord might find a copy of it, read it, and come to find Him in it. That actually will be seen in today's sermon.

But if someone is incorrectly taught the word of the Lord, the chances are likely that his doctrine will never be corrected. This is evidenced all over the world in people who learned incorrectly, and who continue on in the incorrect pursuit of the word for the rest of their lives.

Let us be sure to not only pass on the word of the Lord, but let us be absolutely sure that we are passing it on properly – to the glory of God who gave it to us in the first place. Such truths as these are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Gather the People to Me (verses 8-10)

The final verse of the previous sermon asked, "For what great nation is there that has God so near to it, as the LORD our God is to us, for whatever reason we may call upon Him?" That verse forms the middle of the ongoing chiasm which began in verse 3:25 and which will end in verse 4:22.

Moses just asked which nation has God so near to it. It was a rhetorical question which demanded the answer, "No such nation exists." Starting off where we left off, Moses now continues in this same line of thought by asking another rhetorical question...

⁸ And what great nation is there that has such statutes and righteous judgments as are in all this law

Moses asked concerning the nearness of God to the people, noting that for whatever reason, they might call upon Him. Now, he asks concerning the "statutes and righteous judgments." What nation possesses any that are comparable to that which is contained in their law? Again, it demands a negative answer. "There is no such nation."

The question is dependent on two different thoughts. The first is concerning the statutes and judgments which the Lord first commanded Moses. That was seen in verse 4:5. There Moses said, "Surely I have taught you statutes and judgments, just as the Lord my God commanded me."

The second thought is that it is those same laws that Moses is giving to teach the people. That was seen in verse 4:1, saying, “listen to the statutes and the judgments which I teach you to observe.” Both rhetorical questions are given in relation to the Lord God.

The Lord is Israel’s God, and He is near to them as a people. And the statutes and judgments find their source in the Lord God. Both of these together are what make them a great nation.

Israel cannot claim the nearness of God as a right to call upon Him unless they acknowledge – meaning hear and obey – the statutes and judgments which He has given. They are a reflection of Him, and a condition of a right relationship with Him.

The two questions asked by Moses show that the greatness of a nation is not truly based on size, military power, wealth, or any other such thing. Rather, it is based on its relationship with God and on its form and structure of government – meaning its statutes and judgments which form the basis of it – both of which are available to Israel.

At times, Israel had great military power, and Israel also had the greatest of wealth – especially under Solomon – but neither of these defined them, and neither of these could save them. Only in holding to the Lord and not false idols, and only in observance of His law and not in deviating from it, could Israel be considered a great nation. Moses says, it is these statutes and judgments...

⁸ (con’t) which I set before you this day?

liphnekhem – “before you.” It is second person plural. Moses is setting these things before the people. There was a time when the Law of Moses did not exist. The nations set up kingdoms and governments, and they conducted their affairs according to their own set guidelines. Many of them had noble laws, some of which mirror the laws found in the Law of Moses.

The expectations of God are often natural laws which are known even to those who do not have the law. Paul shows this is true in Romans 2 –

“...for when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do the things in the law, these, although not having the law, are a law to themselves, ¹⁵ who show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and between themselves their thoughts accusing or else excusing them)”

-Romans 2:14, 15

However, not all of what God expects of man is found in nature. And further, with the introduction of sin, corruption of what is right is introduced into even what is evident from nature. Thus, the otherwise noble laws of the nations contained corruptions of what is right, and they also lacked the fulness of what God expected.

This would not be the case with the Mosaic Law. The laws of the nations could not provide life. They could only constrain or guide the people during life. The Law of Moses, however, was given to give life, if it was adhered to. Hence, Moses implored them to be attentive to what he set before them...

⁹ Only take heed to yourself, and diligently keep yourself, raq hishamer lekha u-shemor naphshekha meod – “Only take heed to yourself, and watch your soul exceedingly.” First, this is a double imperative, using the same Hebrew word, shamar, twice. Secondly, the words are second person singular. Each individual, forming a collective whole, is to do so.

They are to watch their actions, and they are to exceedingly confine the actions of their souls. A good parallel to this thought is found in 1 Timothy 6 –

“O Timothy! Guard what was committed to your trust, avoiding the profane and idle babblings and contradictions of what is falsely called knowledge.” 1 Timothy 6:2

Thirdly, Moses will again use the word shamar in verse 4:15 in conjunction with the nature of God. No image bears His likeness, and therefore there is to be no image made attempting to reveal any likeness of anything which is to then be worshipped.

It is the soul of the man which is tempted to fall into idolatry, and so each man was to carefully guard his soul from doing so. This is what Moses begins to speak of now...

^{9 (con't)} lest you forget the things your eyes have seen,

Although all but Joshua and Caleb of those twenty and above had died in the wilderness, those nineteen and younger were spared. Those twenty and above had seen all of the events – from the Exodus through until arrival at the border of Canaan, and yet they forgot what their eyes had beheld.

However, at the time of Moses' words, those who were around forty-five, up to those who were in their late fifties would have vivid memories of the Exodus, of the giving of the law, of the coming of the manna for the first time, of the water flowing from the rock, of enough quail coming to the camp to feed them all for a month, and on and on and on.

Moses, however, will focus only on the giving of the law for his words here. It is that display, and the events which surrounded it, that established them as the Lord's people under His rule and authority.

Their young, impressionable eyes would have seen those things. And in seeing, Moses implores them to not forget. And not forgetting was to be based on an active process of remembering by keeping and guarding themselves through observance of the laws that same Lord, through Moses, set before them.

^{9 (con't)} and lest they depart from your heart all the days of your life.

In the Bible, when the heart is mentioned this way, it never speaks of the organ which pumps blood, nor does it speak of the seat of emotions as we use it today. Rather, it speaks of the place of reason and intellect. The words here may have been on the mind of the psalmist when he wrote –

“Your word I have hidden in my heart,
That I might not sin against You.” Psalm 119:11

Each individual was to take heed to himself, and to watch over his soul diligently in order to remember the precepts of the law. If any of you has ever learned another language, you know that unless you actively maintain that language, you will forget it – very quickly. This is what Moses is telling the people.

“If you don't actively pay heed to the law, and if you do not actively watch over yourself and your actions in relation to the law, the precepts of the law will depart from your mind, and they will be absolutely gone. You will not even have a memory of them unless you are once again schooled in them.”

Further, a knowledge of the law, like a knowledge of maintaining a free society itself, is not congenital. It must be carefully guarded and passed on...

^{9 (con't)} And teach them to your children and your grandchildren,

v'hodatam l'vanekha v'livne vanekha – “and teach them to your sons, and to your sons' sons.” This is the first time that Israel is instructed to not only pay heed to the word of the Lord but to actively pass that word on to their children after them. However, the same thought will be seen again several more times throughout Deuteronomy.

If a person fails to keep guard over what he knows, he will forget it, having it crowded out by all kinds of other things that come in and replace whatever that knowledge is. And, even if that person actively and carefully guards his knowledge, unless he passes it on to those who come after him, that knowledge will perish with him.

Further, this isn't just something that will happen to each individual. Rather, it is something that will happen to the entire nation collectively as well. Even though spoken in the singular, it is referring to the nation as a whole.

Unless the law is remembered and heeded by those under it, and unless it is taught to those who come after them, it will die from both the individual and the collective memory.

While Moses is speaking these words, his coming replacement, Joshua, is sitting right there with him. And yet, we read this in Judges 2 –

“When all that generation had been gathered to their fathers, another generation arose after them who did not know the LORD nor the work which He had done for Israel.” Judges 2:10

Within one generation of the exhortation by Moses, the very thing that he implores for them to do is the very thing that they failed to do. An entire generation did not know the Lord, nor those things that He had done, because the parents failed to protect, keep, and pass on that which they knew.

This was corrected, from time to time, through the Lord's chastening hand, or His active intervention more than for any other reason. But no sooner would they turn back to the Lord, then they would fall away again. One generation to the next, failing to instill in their children the things that would keep them from His wrath.

Eventually, the knowledge of His statutes and judgments was so far removed from them, that they didn't even know that they existed. This is seen at the time of King Josiah and the entire chapter must be read to understand both the situation, and the ramifications of what transpired because of it. (2 Kings 22).

Moses' is imploring them to do these things now, because the Lord had already done so forty years earlier. He gave them a display which was intended to impress His glory upon their minds, and which was then intended to be passed on as a truthful account to each subsequent generation...

¹⁰ especially concerning the day you stood before the LORD your God in Horeb,

The words "especially concerning" are not in the original, and they are an unnecessary insert. Moses is referring to the law, the Source of the law, and beginning of the giving of that law.

It is this Day in Horeb that is the basis of everything Moses is relaying concerning the law. The people stood before the Lord, and they became a people under the law at that time. In verse 9, Moses referred to ha'davarim, the things, that their eyes had seen. Now, he explains what those "things" are that he was referring to.

It is important for us to remember that the giving of the law at Sinai came at the same time of year that the descending of the Holy Spirit came to the church – Pentecost. The two occurrences at this time, spanned by almost fifteen hundred years, was to teach us a lesson. It is a lesson detailed throughout the New Testament.

In Romans, Paul says that the law, which was intended to bring life, actually brought death. Later, Paul refers to this in 2 Corinthians –

"Do we begin again to commend ourselves? Or do we need, as some others, epistles of commendation to you or letters of commendation from you? ² You are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read by all men; ³ clearly you are an epistle of Christ, ministered by us, written not with ink but by the Spirit of the living God, not on tablets of stone but on tablets of flesh, that is, of the heart. ⁴ And we have such trust through Christ toward God. ⁵ Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think of anything as being from ourselves, but our sufficiency is from God, ⁶ who also made us sufficient as ministers of the new covenant, not of the letter but of the Spirit; for the letter kills, but the Spirit gives life." 2 Corinthians 3:1-6

Again, in Galatians 4, Paul compares the two covenants and calls the Covenant at Sinai bondage, but he says those of the New Covenant are free. In the book of Hebrews, the author time and again speaks of the superiority of the New Covenant over the old, and in Hebrews 12, he specifically refers to the account which Moses will now remember.

We don't want to get our minds too far away from these New Covenant truths as we evaluate what Moses will say. This is because the very covenant which was promised to be life for the people turned out to be death for them.

It is not that the fault is with the law, but with man's inability to live by what the law says. The initial giving of this law is what forms the basis of the entire law, and it is that initial giving that Moses appeals to...

¹⁰ (con't) when the LORD said to me, 'Gather the people to Me,

This is a condensed version of what is stated in Exodus 19. There, the people were told to consecrate themselves, including not coming near their wives, meaning intimately, and they were to wash their clothes. After the consecration, the Lord was to appear to them on the third day atop Sinai...

¹⁰ (con't) and I will let them hear My words,

The words here tie in with "the things" their eyes saw which Moses referred to in verse 9. The word he used there, ha'davarim, literally means "the words." When hearing, one doesn't actually see the words, but to us things are made up of words, and so our minds can make a mental picture of things we hear.

The Lord here says v'ashmiem eth devarai – "and I will let them hear my words." In the Bible, and in both testaments, the words "see," "heart," and "eyes" are used again and again in the same verse. The heart discerns and understands what the eyes see. And sometimes, the eyes see without visually beholding something.

Here we have the Lord, coming to reveal Himself to Israel in two ways – 1) through His spoken word, and 2) in a terrifying display of His glory through sight and sound. This was to impress upon the people that the law, which is being given, did – in fact – proceed from the Lord.

Thus, as much as the sight and sound revealed the power of the Lord, the words revealed the nature of the Lord. The people will not see the Lord, but the words He speaks will convey to them images nonetheless.

It is these mental images that come with the commandments that will – at the same time – be intended for convicting them of holding fast to what they are told, and yet also bring to mind possibilities of breaking the very laws they are to hear.

Paul explains that, in detail, in Romans 7, and it is what we will consider in the verses ahead. The Lord, at the giving of the law, understood this. Because of this – and known to us now, but unknown to Israel at the time – the law is only an interim step in the panorama of redemptive history.

Thus, despite the next words of the Lord, which seem like the purpose of the law, the actual purpose of the giving of the law was to identify this problem in us, to teach us that it is the case, and then – by taking that information – it is intended to lead us by the hand directly to the cross of Christ where we can find grace. Not knowing this at the time, the Lord next says...

^{10 (con't)} that they may learn to fear Me all the days they live on the earth, and that they may teach their children.'

The word lamad (meaning learning, teaching, instructing) that was introduced in 4:1 and which was repeated in 4:5 is used again here two times – learn and teach. As we have seen, it comes from a primitive root signifying “to goad,” which is what is done to prod an animal along. The Lord intends to prod the people through this law to 1) fear Him, and 2) to teach their children.

But this prodding isn't confined to the land of Israel. Instead of the word ha'ertz or “the land,” He says, ha'adamah, or “the earth.” Though almost interchangeable at times, the word adamah speaks of the ground itself, without distinction to a specific location.

When under the law, wherever one goes on the earth, he remains under the law. The physical boundaries of the lands of the earth do not end the spiritual confines of the burden of the law.

The same is true with the generations under the law. The burden of the law does not end with the death of the parent. It continues on to the children. Thus, whether the children are taught the law or not, the burden of the law remains. Therefore, the Lord includes them in His words now, both in word and in a visible manifestation...

*In the hearing of these commands, I find no hope
Even from the first one I was done in for sure
I used to think I was pretty great, but I see I am just a dope
Compared to God's standard, I am certainly impure*

*I tremble to think of my guilt, how it weighs me down
I fear to face God on my own deeds for righteousness
I once thought God would at me smile, but no! It will be a frown
I bear such heavy guilt, My God! I am such a mess*

*Oh, but then I heard of Jesus, sweet Jesus
He lived the life that I could never ever live
And He gave it up for sinners like me! Yes, for all of us
In exchange for my life of sin, His perfect life He did give*

*Oh! What a Savior! What a friend He is to me!
Oh! My Lord Jesus, the One who has set me free!*

II. Darkness, Cloud, and Obscurity (verses 11-14)

¹¹ “Then you came near and stood at the foot of the mountain,

Exodus 19:17 says, “And Moses brought the people out of the camp to meet with God, and they stood at the foot of the mountain.” It can be assumed that this means “all the people,” including women and children.

The entire congregation was brought out and stood before the Lord. Before this, however, they were given explicit instructions –

“You shall set bounds for the people all around, saying, ‘Take heed to yourselves that you do not go up to the mountain or touch its base. Whoever touches the mountain shall surely be put to death. ¹³ Not a hand shall touch him, but he shall surely be stoned or shot with an arrow; whether man or beast, he shall not live.’ When the trumpet sounds long, they shall come near the mountain.” Exodus 19:12, 13

That alone would have been terrifying to the people, but the awesome sight they beheld would have been even more so...

11 (con't) and the mountain burned with fire to the midst of heaven,

The Hebrew is much more expressive, saying, “and the mountain was burning with fire to the heart of the heavens.” It is as if a continuous raging burning reached up beyond the eyesight of the people. The display of a mountain actually burning would be beyond the ability of the people to mentally grasp.

The thought of the fire here is that of judgment burning up everything that approaches it. The law is given, and thus infractions of it bear a deserved penalty. It is the opposite of the picture seen in the coming of Christ –

“Whoever drinks of this water will thirst again, ¹⁴ but whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst. But the water that I shall give him will become in him a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life.”

-John 4:13, 14

Though the law burns with fire, that can be quenched through the fountain of water which comes through the grace of God in Christ. But at the giving of the law, there was more. The fire came...

11 (con't) with darkness, cloud, and thick darkness.

khoshek anan v'araphel – “darkness, cloud, and obscurity.” The imagery here is that of being completely unable to see. The Lord, and everything about Him, is totally hidden from the eyes. This, even though they strain with all intent to obtain the slightest view. It is exactly the opposite of what John writes about concerning Christ –

“And the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it.”

-John 1:5

The idea of the word John uses is that the darkness is unable to overtake the light. Though the law brings complete darkness, the grace of Christ brings complete light. Paul speaks of that in 2 Corinthians 4 –

“For it is the God who commanded light to shine out of darkness, who has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.” 2 Corinthians 4:6

Until the coming of Christ, however, the people were faced with the overwhelming yoke of knowing that the same Lord who presented Himself in judgment and total obscurity did so with accompanying words...

¹² And the LORD spoke to you out of the midst of the fire.

The fire of judgment, with implied ceaseless and complete destruction, is where the Lord speaks from. The eyes were unable to see anything in the gloom and darkness which would allow them to know the Lord behind it.

Instead, they only knew Him through the words of law which bring forth death, and that from the midst of the fire of judgment. What a terrible prospect to consider. The display resulted in what I mentioned a few minutes ago. From Hebrews 12 –

“For you have not come to the mountain that may be touched and that burned with fire, and to blackness and darkness and tempest, ¹⁹ and the sound of a trumpet and the voice of words, so that those who heard it begged that the word should not be spoken to them anymore. ²⁰ (For they could not endure what was commanded: ‘And if so much as a beast touches the mountain, it shall be stoned or shot with an arrow.’ ²¹ And so terrifying was the sight that Moses said, ‘I am exceedingly afraid and trembling.’). Hebrews 12:18-21

The people were terrified at what they beheld. And even their leader, who represented them before the Lord was left utterly afraid at the giving of the law. What a marked difference to that which Christ left His people at the giving of the New Covenant –

“Peace I leave with you, My peace I give to you; not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.” John 14:27

¹² (con’t) You heard the sound of the words, but saw no form; you only heard a voice.

The lesson of the law is found in these words. The law speaks, it speaks words of bondage, expected judgment, and that – then – leading to death. The only place to appeal a violation of the law is to either precepts within it, or to the unseen Lord who gave it in the first place.

The Lord will tell them in the coming verses that because they saw no form, they were not to make any image of anything in order to worship it, serve it, petition it, pray to it, or call it a god. A person under the law was only to worship the unseen Lord.

But for those after the first generation, this means a completely new dynamic is introduced. Without seeing the Lord, or a representation of the Lord, one must have faith that the Lord actually exists.

Such a state will lead to one of a few inevitable paths a person can follow. The first is to believe in the Lord and to follow Him in some measure – be it wholeheartedly, partially, or failingly. The second would be to not believe in the Lord and ignore the commandments of the law. Another would be to not believe in the Lord and obey the law anyway. And so on.

None of these are unlike the state of the believer in Christ today. We have not seen Jesus, and – like those under the law – all we have are the accounts which tell us of what occurred in the past. Either way, whether under the law, or in Christ, the key to a right relationship with the Lord is through faith. David understood this after having violated the law –

“For You do not desire sacrifice, or else I would give it;
You do not delight in burnt offering.
¹⁷ The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit,
A broken and a contrite heart—
These, O God, You will not despise.” Psalm 51:16, 17

The law demanded sacrifices for sin, but David knew that a sacrifice was only as good as the heart attitude behind it. Thus, we can see that the same day that the law was introduced a spirit of self-worth, because of the law, was also introduced.

For those who looked to the law for their justification, it wasn't because they took to heart the terrible display of judgment which came with the giving of the law. If they did, they too would quake and fear at their infractions of it. Rather, they look to the allowances within the law, or even beyond the law, for their justification.

“Yes, I may have sinned, but this goat will take care of that. And further, the more perfectly I adhere to the law, the more God will favor me.”

This is the principal error of what we might call Pharasaim. It comes from the self-righteous attitude which springs forth from going through the motions of the law without a care about having offended the One who gave the law in the first place. It is what Jesus stated to the people in Luke 18:10-14 –

“Two men went up to the temple to pray, one a Pharisee and the other a tax collector. ¹¹ The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, ‘God, I thank You that I am not like other men—extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this tax collector. ¹² I fast twice a week; I give tithes of all that I possess.’ ¹³ And the tax collector, standing afar off, would not so much as raise his eyes to heaven, but beat his breast, saying, ‘God, be merciful to me a sinner!’ ¹⁴ I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other; for everyone who exalts himself will be humbled, and he who humbles himself will be exalted.”

Whether the Pharisee believed in God at all or not, he did not look to God as the source of his righteousness. Rather, he looked to the law, additions to the law, and his observance of those things as his righteousness. The tax collector, like David, looked beyond the law to the Giver of it. “This law cannot forgive me, but You can.”

Unfortunately, the same spirit which filled the Pharisee fills much of the church today. The grace of God, and His tender mercies, are set aside by and through law observance. None of us deserve the grace and mercy of God which is found in Christ Jesus. And we prove that point in one of two ways –

- 1) We can trust in Christ and only in Christ for our justification, thus proving that we are saved by Christ.
- 2) We can trust in our adherence to certain precepts within the Law of Moses, thus showing that Christ’s grace does not matter to us.

We cannot have it both ways. The giving of the law of which the Ten Commandments is the basis, demonstrates this to us...

¹³ So He declared to you His covenant

Here it says berito – “His covenant.” There is no exchange between the Lord and the people. It is solely the Lord’s pronouncement. Nothing can be added to it by them. They are words of law coming from an unseen Source, and in a terrifying display of power.

But the display is not the Lord. The display is simply that – an effect produced by the Lord. But the words are a reflection of the Lord. And, as the words form the covenant, then the covenant itself is a perfect – even if incomplete – reflection of the Lord.

If the people were told to not approach the mountain lest they die, then what a greater horror could be expected if they violated the words of His covenant! This is all the more poignant because these were not mere admonitions – “Try to do these things.” These were unalterable commandments...

13 (con't) which He commanded you to perform,

The display of power was to impress upon the people the terror they should feel at violating the covenant. It was spoken by Him, it was imposed upon them, and they were to understand the consequences for failing to adhere.

13 (con't) the Ten Commandments;

asereth ha'devarim – “ten the words.” What would happen if the Lord never said, “You shall not murder”? Then murder would not be a violation of the law. And what happens in one’s mind when the words, “You shall not murder” are spoken?

The mind makes a mental image of doing just that. Thus, it shows that we know what murder is. And what is it that we do when we get in an argument with someone and we really hate him. It may be that in our mind, we form an image of killing him, just as we did when we were told to not murder.

This is what Jesus was referring to when He spoke of committing adultery, one of the Ten Words –

“You have heard that it was said to those of old, ‘You shall not commit adultery.’²⁸ But I say to you that whoever looks at a woman to lust for her has already committed adultery with her in his heart.” Matthew 5:27, 28

This is what the law does. It condemns us through mere thought. And this is what Paul writes about in Romans 7 –

“I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died.¹⁰ And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death. ¹¹ For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me.” Romans 7:9-11

It is certain that every person standing there receiving the Ten Words did exactly this as the Lord spoke them out. He said, “You shall have no other gods before Me,” and some of the people’s minds went to the gods they had set up in their tent, or to a god they once worshipped in Egypt.

He said, “Honor your father and your mother,” and some of them at that very moment thought in their minds, “My father is a loser and my mother is pathetic.” On down the line of the Ten Words, each one brought to mind a thought which caused some person to violate it, even while he was receiving it.

This is the infection in us known as “sin.” And it is what Paul refers to. The commandment, which was to bring life, brought death because sin took the occasion by the commandment, deceived them, and killed them, even while they stood there receiving them. But it didn’t end there. The commandment which brought death was made permanent...

¹³ (con’t) and He wrote them on two tablets of stone.

This is what Paul wrote about in 2 Corinthians 3 – the letter, meaning the tablets of stone, kills. Only the Spirit can grant life. The entire history of Israel is given to show us that we need Christ, and that without Him, we will remain in a state of death.

Stone is unyielding and when something is written on it, there it remains. Thank God for the Stone of Israel, Jesus Christ, by whom those commandments were fulfilled, and whose body was then broken for us so that we might be brought out from such bondage and terror and into new life and a heavenly hope.

¹⁴ And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments,

There is an emphasis in the words in regard to Moses – “And me Yehovah commanded at that time.” This is certainly stated this way because of the people’s reaction after hearing the Lord speak out the law –

“Now all the people witnessed the thunderings, the lightning flashes, the sound of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking; and when the people saw it, they trembled and stood afar off. ¹⁹Then they said to Moses, ‘You speak with us, and we will hear; but let not God speak with us, lest we die.’” Exodus 20:18, 19

The display was sufficient to accomplish its intended goal, and so from then on, Moses was given the words of the Lord which he then passed on to the people as instruction to prod them along.

These statutes and judgments began immediately after that in Exodus 20, and they continued on through Numbers. They now resume once again in the book of Deuteronomy. And this instruction was so...

14 (fin) that you might observe them in the land which you cross over to possess.

The intent of these statutes, judgments, commands, ordinances, and so on, was to lead the people through their lives in Canaan. They are a unique and perfect form of instruction – if the people adhered to them. But even from the first days after having crossed the Jordan, they began to violate them.

During the first battle to subdue the land, even during the battle itself, one of the people violated the tenth commandment, coveting, and he also violated other precepts which had been laid down in the forming of the government as well.

This pattern continued all the way throughout the time of the law, and it continued through the time of the coming of Christ as well. And, it continues on in the world today. Where law is given, law is violated. And with the violation of law, there is the imputation of sin.

The only way to be freed from this bondage is to be freed from the law. And in order to be freed from the law, one must be given grace. The law and grace are mutually exclusive. Either one is under law, or he is under grace.

Not only has Israel had innumerable laws laid upon them already, but Moses is going to heap more on them in the many chapters ahead. There is nothing wrong with the law though, Paul says that the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good. The problem does not reside in the law. Rather, the problem is in us.

In order to correct this problem, God sent His Son into the world to do what we could not do – live out the law as God expects. The remarkable thing about it is that the law itself proclaims its own ending in Him.

That was seen in our text verse today, and it will be confirmed in our closing verse. For now, please understand that if you are caught up in a church that asks you to come under the precepts of the Law of Moses, you are excluding God's grace by doing so.

Come to God through Christ and be reconciled to Him through His fulfillment of this terrifying law which was given by an infinitely holy God. His justice must be satisfied, and it will either be through Christ's fulfillment of it on your behalf, or your failure of it being reckoned to you. Choose wisely. Choose Christ.

Closing Verse: "And of His fullness we have all received, and grace for grace. ¹⁷ For the law was given through Moses, but grace and truth came through Jesus Christ. ¹⁸ No one has seen God at any time. The only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, He has declared Him." John 1:16-18

Next Week: Deuteronomy 4:15-24 Can you shape it with stone, metal, or a wood board? ... (The Form of the Lord) (15th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

That They May Teach Their Children

And what great nation is there
That has such statutes and righteous judgments, please do say
As are in all this law
Which I set before you this day?

Only take heed to yourself, and diligently keep yourself
Lest you forget the things your eyes have seen; all that has been
And lest they depart from your heart all the days of your life
And teach them to your children and your grandchildren

Especially concerning the day you stood
Before the LORD your God in Horeb, when the LORD said to me
Gather the people to Me
And I will let them hear My words spoken plainly

That they may learn to fear Me all the days they live on the earth
And that they may teach their children
-----of their incomparable worth

Then you came near and stood at the foot of the mountain
And the mountain burned with fire during my address
To the midst of heaven
With darkness, cloud, and thick darkness

And the LORD spoke to you out of the midst of the fire
You heard the sound of the words all around
But saw no form
You only heard a voice; one that shook the ground

So He declared to you His covenant
Which He commanded you to perform; these He made known
The Ten Commandments
And He wrote them on two tablets of stone

And the LORD commanded me at that time
To teach you statutes and judgments; to you them I did express
That you might observe them in the land
Which you cross over to possess

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 4:15-24 (The Form of the Lord)

The day I typed this sermon is the day that Florida was removed from lockdown status. Remember that? It seems like eons ago, doesn't it? In the morning, I posted my usual sunrise photo (a really beautiful sky), and I made a comment on it saying –

“Florida is off lockdown. If you're still stuck at home - be adventurous. Get in your car and c'mon down. The weather is here. We wish you were beautiful. Join us at the beach.”

I was thoroughly amazed at the number of negative comments that came in. People horrified that we were freed from the bondage we had been in, and what an unwise decision it was to do this. Others cautiously said, “Be safe, Charlie,” as if I was now going to change my daily routine from what it had been.

But the fact is, I never changed it – even a bit – from before the lockdown, and so there was nothing to change back to. There are all types of bondage in the world. There is forced bondage, there is incarceration, there is self-imposed bondage, and so on. And, within these, there are countless subdivisions.

But the word “bondage” always signifies “not free.” Why anyone would want to continue in the bondage of fear – of a virus which proved as undeadly as a mild flu, or bondage to a government that salivated at the chance of taking away the freedoms of its people? It is hard to figure. But this is what was evident on the morning of 4 May 2020.

Text Verse: “For you did not receive the spirit of bondage again to fear, but you received the Spirit of adoption by whom we cry out, ‘Abba, Father.’¹⁶ The Spirit Himself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God,¹⁷ and if children, then heirs—heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, if indeed we suffer with Him, that we may also be glorified together.” Romans 8:15-17

Paul very well may have been thinking of this passage from Deuteronomy when he wrote these words to those at Rome. He speaks of bondage, adoption, and an inheritance. These things are found in today's passage as well, and it is certain that they did not come through the Law of Moses.

This is seen, again, in today's verses as well. Moses repeats that he will not cross over Jordan and into the inheritance. As Paul shows in Romans 8, the law has no part in the inheritance. Only in coming to Christ is that made possible.

These verses today will also close out our chiasm which began in verse 3:25. That truth is seen laid out quite clearly in it...

Deuteronomy 3:25-4:22 - Call upon Him.
Israel's Instruction (11/07)

a 3:25 Moses wants to cross Jordan

b 3:26 Lord angry with Moses

c 3:27 "Lift your eyes toward the west, the north, the south, and the east."

d 4:3, 4 Example of apostasy (idolatry)

e 4:5 Taught statutes and judgments

f 4:6 Be careful to observe them (judgments)

g 4:7 Great nation

x 4:7 Call upon Him

g 4:8 Great nation

f 4:9 Diligently keep yourself (judgments)

e 4:10-14 Taught statutes and judgments.

d 4:15-18 Warning of apostasy (idolatry)

c 4:19 "Lift your eyes to heaven."

b 4:21 Lord angry with Moses

a 4:22 Moses must not cross over the Jordan

Where are you placing your trust? In self-imposed bondage? In a government which can't balance its own budget? In a bottle of Clorox and a face mask? What is it that will make you safe and keep you that way? The answer is Jesus Christ. The law was given to lead us to Him. Therefore, use the law wisely – not as bondage leading to death, but as a tutor to lead you to Christ.

This is an invaluable lesson which is found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Out of the Iron Furnace (verses 15-19)

¹⁵ "Take careful heed to yourselves,

This is a new section of Deuteronomy 4 which builds upon what Moses has already expressed. First, in verse 4:9, he said to the people raq hishamer lekha u-shemor naphshekha meod – “only take heed to yourself and keep yourself exceedingly.”

When he said that, it was in the second person singular. Moses was speaking to each individual which made up the collective whole. Thus, he was speaking to Israel collectively. Now he says, v'nishmartem meod l'naphshotekhem – “and take heed exceedingly to yourselves.”

The words are in the second person plural. He is speaking to all the people collectively. The first stressed personal responsibility leading to national acceptability. The second stresses national responsibility which is derived from the obedience of all people.

Moses is ensuring that the nation understands that it cannot blame the individuals for failing, and he is ensuring that the individuals cannot blame a national failure for their own failings.

To get this, imagine a family where the father is arrested. They are in a culture that looks to family responsibility in a collective manner. He cannot say, “My family is out of control, and so it is their fault.” And if the whole family is arrested, they cannot say, “It is dad’s fault because he is out of control.”

Moses tells all of Israel that they are to take heed, individually and as a nation. If this is not the case, breakdown in society is inevitable. This is the very reason for these words coming in Deuteronomy 17:1-5 –

“If there is found among you, within any of your gates which the LORD your God gives you, a man or a woman who has been wicked in the sight of the LORD your God, in transgressing His covenant, ³ who has gone and served other gods and worshiped them, either the sun or moon or any of the host of heaven, which I have not commanded, ⁴ and it is told you, and you hear of it, then you shall inquire diligently. And if it is indeed true and certain that such an abomination has been committed in Israel, ⁵ then you shall bring out to your gates that man or woman who has committed that wicked thing, and shall stone to death that man or woman with stones.”

That subject matter from Chapter 17 is exactly what Moses has spoken about and what he will again speak about now. The contents of what he says ahead are new even if parts of it are substantially a repeat of what he just said in verse 12 –

“And the LORD spoke to you out of the midst of the fire. You heard the sound of the words, but saw no form; you only heard a voice.”

Some of that repetition begins with the next words...

¹⁵ (con't) for you saw no form

lo reitem kal temunah – “no saw you any likeness.” Of these words, Adam Clarke incorrectly states –

“Howsoever God chose to appear or manifest himself, he took care never to assume any describable form. He would have no image worship, because he is a Spirit, and they who worship him must worship him in Spirit and in truth. These outward things tend to draw the mind out of itself, and diffuse it on sensible, if not sensual, objects; and thus spiritual worship is prevented, and the Holy Ghost grieved. Persons acting in this way can never know much of the religion of the heart.” Adam Clarke

Christians worship Jesus Christ because Jesus Christ is God. Not only this, but God is pleased when we worship Him. Jesus says this explicitly in John 5:23 and John 12:26. Paul confirms it, saying –

“Therefore God also has highly exalted Him and given Him the name which is above every name, ¹⁰ that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of those in heaven, and of those on earth, and of those under the earth, ¹¹ and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.”

-Philippians 2:9-11

Further, Moses has already recorded that the Lord did appear in a form – in the likeness of a man. That is actually first recorded in Genesis 3, where it says that Adam and Eve “heard the sound of the Lord God walking in the garden.” If the Lord God walked, he had feet. The implication is that there was a form. This is seen again in Genesis 18 –

“Then the LORD appeared to him by the terebinth trees of Mamre, as he was sitting in the tent door in the heat of the day. ² So he lifted his eyes and looked, and behold, three men were standing by him; and when he saw them, he ran from the tent door to meet them, and bowed himself to the ground, ³ and said, ‘My Lord, if I have now found favor in Your sight, do not pass on by Your servant.’” Genesis 18:1-3

These, and other, manifestations of the Lord – the eternal Christ – had already been revealed to the people through Moses’ words, but when the law was given at Sinai, the Lord set about to impress upon the people’s minds that the Lord extends beyond mere human form, and indeed beyond any form.

Because this is so, no image can fully represent Him. This is why Isaiah wrote these words to the same people who were so prone to going astray in their hearts –

“The craftsman stretches out his rule,
He marks one out with chalk;
He fashions it with a plane,
He marks it out with the compass,
And makes it like the figure of a man,
According to the beauty of a man, that it may remain in the house.

¹⁴ He cuts down cedars for himself,
And takes the cypress and the oak;
He secures it for himself among the trees of the forest.
He plants a pine, and the rain nourishes it.

¹⁵ Then it shall be for a man to burn,
For he will take some of it and warm himself;
Yes, he kindles it and bakes bread;
Indeed he makes a god and worships it;
He makes it a carved image, and falls down to it.

¹⁶ He burns half of it in the fire;
With this half he eats meat;
He roasts a roast, and is satisfied.
He even warms himself and says,
“Ah! I am warm,
I have seen the fire.”

¹⁷ And the rest of it he makes into a god,
His carved image.
He falls down before it and worships it,
Prays to it and says,
‘Deliver me, for you are my god!’” Isaiah 44:13-17

People who say that worshipping the Lord Jesus is idolatry make the fundamental mistake that the Jews made and then have passed on for two thousand years. God had already revealed Himself in human form, since the very beginning of man’s time on earth, and throughout the times of the Old Testament.

Not only is that clear, but the worship of Him in this form already has precedent. Abraham clearly called the Lord as such, saying Adonai, or my Lord (meaning Yehovah), and he bowed himself to the ground before Him. Joshua will, in the very near future, worship this same Person –

And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he lifted his eyes and looked, and behold, a Man stood opposite him with His sword drawn in His hand. And Joshua went to Him and said to Him, “Are You for us or for our adversaries?”
¹⁴ So He said, “No, but as Commander of the army of the LORD I have now come.” And Joshua fell on his face to the earth and worshiped, and said to Him, “What does my Lord say to His servant?”

¹⁵ Then the Commander of the LORD’s army said to Joshua, “Take your sandal off your foot, for the place where you stand is holy.” And Joshua did so.

Joshua 5:13-15

A similar incident will occur in Judges 6 with Gideon and the Lord, and again in Judges 13 with the parents of Samson. Some of the prophets will have visual manifestations of the Lord appear to them as well. Thus, the unseen God has clearly chosen to reveal Himself in a Person, even before the coming of Jesus – and yet it was Christ the Lord who came to them.

What is being revealed to Israel now is a lesson concerning idolatry, but it is not to be – nor can it be – considered as idolatry to worship the Man who is the Lord. “No form, then, signifies no thing which man can create or devise which could failingly resemble the Lord God.

An image of a man cannot reveal anything beyond itself, whereas Jesus can. It is He who reveals the unseen God to us. Israel needed tutoring before that could happen, and so God gave no form or likeness when He spoke out the law. Moses repeats that now for Israel’s instruction. That instruction came...

¹⁵ (con’t) when the LORD spoke to you at Horeb

Rather than “when,” the Hebrew says, b’yom – “in the day.” In other words, it was one day, and one day only, that the Lord so spoke to Israel. After that, Moses stood between them, receiving the Lord’s word and passing it on to the people.

¹⁵ (con’t) out of the midst of the fire,

Again, this was seen in verse 12. The Lord was demonstrating His holy nature, and that He alone was to be served and worshipped. Thus, speaking out of the fire was a deliberate note to Israel that His word is one of judgment. For a violation of it, the expectation was to be that of punishment.

The lesson of the voice is that of worship – properly directed worship. There is nothing that man can imagine or produce that is, or ever could be, a substitute for God. If this is so, then making something – be it a household idol, or an artificial intelligence computer, or any other thing in creation – it cannot suffice to represent God.

Therefore, no such thing was to be made and then bowed down to. To do so is to pervert the lesson of the voice, it is to diminish the glory of God, and it is to diminish the value of the person who so commits such a crime. That is revealed in Moses' next words...

¹⁶ lest you act corruptly

The Lord is holy, and He demands holiness in His people. To act corruptly is to act in an unholy manner. This was unbefitting of a person who had been redeemed by the Lord, and who was considered one of the people of the Lord.

But further, this corruption extends in another way. To make an image of God is to make it out of something which is corruptible. But God is incorruptible. Therefore, there is an infinite disparity between the two. It equates something worthless with that which cannot be valued.

Moses next defines how this could come about, beginning with...

^{16 (con't)} and make for yourselves a carved image

A portion of the chiasm which has spanned the verses of our last few sermons begins to be defined here.

d 4:3, 4 Example of apostasy (idolatry)

d 4:15-18 Warning of apostasy (idolatry)

In verses 4:3, 4, Moses referred to the idolatry of the people. It was an example of apostasy for the people to remember.

The incident concerning Peor is found in Numbers 25. The men of Israel were enticed by the women of Moab, they fell into harlotry with them, and they then fell into idol worship with their gods. Moses reminded them of this in order to warn them of it now.

One cannot call on the Lord, the central thought of the chiasm, if his mind, heart, or eyes are focused on a god which is no god at all. No form was seen at Horeb, and therefore, no pesel, or carved image, of any form was to be made.

But, again, because we are slow to learn, we can – and indeed we should – consider the Lord Jesus in our every prayer. To do so is not idolatry. He is the incarnate Word of God. He is our Mediator between this physical world of people and the unseen God.

Because God has revealed Himself to us in this way, it would not only be inappropriate to worship God apart from Jesus, it would be an affront to Him. As Jesus said, “all should honor the Son just as they honor the Father. He who does not honor the Son does not honor the Father who sent Him” (John 5:26).

The difference between that which man has made, and the body which God prepared for Christ, is infinite in scope. Until Israel learns this, they must remain under this law which forbids any image to be made or worshipped. Moses further defines this as...

16 (con't) in the form of any figure:

temunath kal samel – “form of any figure.” Moses introduces a new word here, semel. It signifies “to resemble,” and thus it is a figure or image. It is a word which will only be seen again in 2 Chronicles 33 (twice) and Ezekiel 8 (twice). The powerful significance of this word will be seen before we end today. For now, Moses speaks on...

16 (con't) the likeness of male or female, tavnith zakar o neqevah – “pattern after male or female.” This explains what was just said – “the form of any figure.” The word tavnith, or “pattern,” comes from the word banah, “to build.” Nothing was to be constructed into such a form.

The Hebrew words signify the form of the sexes. Thus, it includes the male or female form. Though not stated, this clause certainly speaks of a human man or woman.

The Lord has already, in the books of Moses, revealed Himself in such a way, and so the Lord is making a complete distinction between what He has done and what man can do. The unseen voice reveals no form for Israel to emulate.

Logically, this cannot mean that Israel could not worship the Man, who is the Lord. This is evident because Joshua will do so within about one month's time from the words Moses now speaks. The words hinge on the thought that one is God's revelation of Himself while the other is man's attempts at creating a god in his own image and calling it the Lord. Next, Moses continues...

17 the likeness of any animal that is on the earth

tavnith kal behemah asher ba'aretz – “pattern after any beast which is on the earth.” The words of this clause, and the next, take us back to Genesis 1:1. It is God who created those things, and thus they are not gods.

Further, they are things God had purposed for the benefit of man. For man to worship and serve them is not only to deny the Creator, but it is to turn upside down the order of His creation by exalting over man that which was for man's enjoyment and benefit.

This is what the Egyptians had done. But the Lord had brought judgment on those, and all the other, false gods of Egypt.

17 (con't) or the likeness of any winged bird that flies in the air,

This again returns us to Genesis 1. In fact, the word uph, or “flies,” hasn't been seen since then. It also takes the reader back to Israel's time in Egypt where birds, such as the ibis and the falcon were worshipped. These or any bird of wing were not to be patterned into an idol. And Moses continues...

18 the likeness of anything that creeps on the ground or the likeness of any fish that is in the water beneath the earth.

Moses rounds out the list from Genesis 1 of created species, but which had become objects of worship throughout Egypt. They worshipped both creeping animals like the scarab beetle, and the fish-goddess Hatmehyt, along with many other such creatures.

In the Genesis account, the creation of the living beings is in a different order. There, the creatures are noted in order of creation – fish, bird, beast, creepy, man. Here, it appears Moses is ordering them in likeliness to be worshipped – Man, beast, bird, creepy, fish.

But it is noted that all categories were worshipped in Egypt – from Pharaoh the man, all the way down to the crocodile, and everything in between. Israel is strictly forbidden from fashioning any such image in order to set it up and worship it.

However, there is more that was worshipped in Egypt, and that is also worshipped in the land of Canaan where Israel was heading. And so, Moses begins a new category of such things...

¹⁹ And take heed, lest you lift your eyes to heaven, u-pen tisa eneka ha'shamaymah – “And lest you lift your eyes to the heaven.” Heaven is singular. It is where God is seen to dwell, such as in Genesis 28:12, where Jacob saw a ladder set up on the earth and which reached to heaven. The Lord stood above the top of the ladder.

They are words of caution. This is something that everyone does. We all look to the sky, both in day and in night, but Moses warns that trouble could be lurking in our minds when doing so.

In other words, what he will warn about does not indicate anything wrong with what is up there, but how we treat what is up there...

¹⁹ (con't) and when you see the sun, the moon, and the stars,

This is something that most people do every time that they are out. They look up and check things out – the sun and how its light dances around, the moon and how it bathes the night in a soft glow, and the stars which capture our imagination for a multitude of reasons. Indeed, they are each a part of...

¹⁹ (con't) all the host of heaven, kol tseva ha'shamayim – “all the host of the heavens.” Here, the singular “heaven” of the previous clause is now rendered in the plural. The Lord is in heaven, but these things are the host of the heavens.

They are created things, as are the heavens, just as was explicitly stated in Genesis 1. As they are created, they are not gods, but are rather things which exist and are sustained by His direction and power. But man has devised many schemes in his imaginings...

19 (con't) you feel driven to worship them and serve them,

Here is a new word to Scripture, nadakh – to impel, compel, be led, driven away, etc. There is a force which moves something, and that force here is to impel a person to do what is against the proper order expected by God.

Here the verb is reflexive, meaning “you allow yourself to be drawn away.” Man’s own mind moves him from the proper worship of the Creator to the improper worship of the creation.

19 (con't) which the LORD your God has given to all the peoples under the whole heaven as a heritage.

asher khalaq Yehovah elohekha otam l'kol ha'ammim takhat kal ha'shamayim – “which divided Yehovah your God to all the peoples under all the heavens.” It is a fascinating and, at first, perplexing statement.

Scholars argue over what is meant, some saying that God has divided the other nations, allowing them to worship these bodies, but Israel was to worship only the Lord. That is a rather perverse way of looking at it.

Cambridge lessens the force of that and says it is “An interesting attempt by the writer to reconcile his great truth that Jehovah is God alone with the fact that the other nations worship other gods.” As justification for that, they cite Deuteronomy 29:26 which speaks of Israel doing exactly this –

“...for they went and served other gods and worshiped them, gods that they did not know and that He had not given to them.” Deuteronomy 29:26

But this is an error in thinking. The Lord did not give these things to Israel, or anyone else, as gods. The verse says that the Lord has divided these heavenly bodies “to all the peoples under the whole heavens.” It is inclusive of Israel.

What Moses is saying is that no nation can claim any or all of these heavenly bodies as its own. The same sun that shines on Shiloh, Israel also shines on Wang Chung, China.

Egypt claimed the sun god Ra as their own. But it is not a god. It is the sun, and the Lord has divided it among all the peoples of the earth.

These things were never intended to be objects of worship. This is evident because the sun is found over Japan at one time, but over England at another. The same is true with the moon and the stars. The heavens, being plural, means any and every view of the sky by man at any point in time.

At one time, a part of the people enjoys one aspect of them, at another, others do. If these were gods, they would always be present. Thus, the Lord has divided them among the peoples because He is the Creator of them, and the One who appoints their seasons.

Therefore, the evident truth is that the Lord God gave these, as is recorded in Genesis 1 to serve man, not that they should be served by men. Man was the anticipated guest. All of these things – the animals, birds, creeping things, fish, and the host of the heavens were all created before man was. And man was created to worship and serve the Lord God.

*Do not worship anything, but Me alone, says your God
In doing this, you will do well
I will keep you safe on this earthly path you trod
And will open to you heaven, instead of opening hell*

*I am the Lord your God, so you are to worship only Me
And I will lead you in paths of righteousness for My name's sake
I will guide you each step, watching over you tenderly
If you will follow Me – may this be the path you take*

*Forget the idols of the nations, which are only vanity
Don't bow to the heavenly host, and you will do well
Don't allow yourself to be pulled into idolatrous insanity
And I will open to you heaven, instead of opening hell*

II. A Jealous God (verses 20-24)

²⁰ But the LORD has taken you v'etkhem laqakh Yehovah. It is emphatic, “And you, has taken Yehovah.” Egypt pictures bondage to sin. They were caught up in worshipping and serving everything Moses just mentioned – all of it. But the Lord brought them out of that...

²⁰ (con't) and brought you out of the iron furnace,

These words are unfortunately taken completely out of their intended context by many. This is not saying Israel was forced to work in iron furnaces. It is also not speaking of any other forced labor that Israel suffered under.

It is certainly true those things literally happened, but the context is that of idolatry. Moses said that the Lord spoke to the people at Horeb from the fire. Iron represents strength, be it in binding together, in government, in hard service, in bondage, etc.

But iron can go into a furnace, which is now a new word in the Bible, kur. It signifies a pot or furnace – something dug out in order to form a place for smelting. It is kin to the word kir, found only in Leviticus 11:35. It is a place of divine testing and purification.

In an iron furnace, the strength of iron is removed and cohesion is lost through the heat of the fire. In idolatry, there is no cohesion and strength of worship toward God. Rather, there is a purposeless state of futility. This iron furnace is next described as...

²⁰ (con't) out of Egypt,

Egypt, or double distress, is the iron furnace. Being brought out of that implies that the iron can be shaped and strengthened by the Lord for His purposes. This is exactly seen in Isaiah 48:10 where the kur, or furnace, is noted –

“Behold, I have refined you, but not as silver;
I have tested you in the furnace of affliction.
¹¹ For My own sake, for My own sake, I will do it;
For how should My name be profaned?
And I will not give My glory to another.” Isaiah 48:10

The Lord sent Israel to Egypt to be tested and refined. The purpose of this was because Israel was...

²⁰ (con't) to be His people, an inheritance, as you are this day.

Israel was morally prepared in Egypt to be a people who were to know the difference between idolatry and true worship. This selection was typologically given to prefigure the church – the people of God in Christ – be they Jew or Gentile. Paul states this in Ephesians 1 –

“...that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give to you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, ¹⁸ the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that you may know what is the hope of His calling, what are the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints.”

-Ephesians 1:17, 18

²¹ Furthermore the LORD was angry with me for your sakes,

v'Yehovah hitaneph bi al divrekhem – “And Yehovah was angry with me for your words.” This is the third time that Moses has substantially repeated this. However, each time Moses has changed the wording concerning why. The first time, in Deuteronomy 1:37, he used the word galal, or roll. The Lord was angry with Moses because the words of the people rolled back upon him.

The second time, in Deuteronomy 3:26, the word maan, meaning intent or purpose, was used. It was the Lord's purpose that Moses (picturing the law) would not cross the Jordan. Now, for the third time, he says it is because of the people's words that he cannot enter. It again looks to Christ.

How does one enter into the promise? Is it by faith – displayed in words – or is it by deeds of the law? The words of the people kept them out of the inheritance. They didn't believe and their words reflected that. Now, the people's words will be words not of law, but of faith. The law cannot bring the people into the inheritance. Only the word of faith can do so –

“But what does it say? “The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart” (that is, the word of faith which we preach): ⁹ that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved. ¹⁰ For with the heart one believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.” Romans 10:8-10

²¹ (con't) and swore that I would not cross over the Jordan, and that I would not enter the good land which the LORD your God is giving you as an inheritance.

This is not recorded anywhere else. But it is a statement of fact, relayed by Moses, and which points directly to the consequences of being led by the law and not by following Christ through faith.

Moses led the people, the people failed to believe – thus indicting Moses for failure to lead the people – and so the Lord swore that he would not enter. There is nothing unfair about this. If a president fails to lead his people properly – think of Jimmy Carter and his famous malaise speech accompanied by a malaise administration – there are consequences for that failure.

It may have been, and it certainly was, an indictment upon the people by the Lord, but it was also a failure of Moses to inspire them to words of faith, because the law is not of faith, but of deeds. This is the truth which Moses presents to the people and the consequences of that are once again stated by him...

²² But I must die in this land, ki anokhi met ba'arets ha'zot – “For I die in the land the this.” Translations using the word “but” reduce the impact of the clause. It is a statement of fact, an affirmation, that Moses is to die outside of the promise.

The symbolism is absolutely clear. The Lord swore that Moses would not enter for he is to die in the land outside of the inheritance. The law died when Christ died. Those under law will die with the law. Those who died to the law, with Christ, will live with Christ. They will cross over. As for Moses, meaning the law...

²² (con't) I must not cross over the Jordan;

One is either under law and outside the promise, or one dies to the law and crosses over the Jordan (the Descender), meaning Christ. This same thought has been stated at least seven jillion times, or close to that. The emphasis on this cannot be overstated. The law can bring no one into the inheritance. However...

²² (con't) but you shall cross over and possess that good land.

v'atem oberim vi'rishtem – “And you shall cross over and inherit.” With the law dead, the people can enter. One plus one will always equal two in proper theology. As long as one is under law, there is no inheritance. When the law dies, the inheritance is possible.

The law died in Christ, and therefore only in Christ can one cross over to possess the good land the Lord has in store for His people.

²³ Take heed to yourselves, lest you forget the covenant of the LORD your God which He made with you,

The words are words of law, but of what timeframe is Moses speaking of? Obviously, he is speaking of the time after having crossed the Jordan. It is speaking of the nation of Israel, under the law, not of a typological picture of Christ.

The covenant was cut, and the people were to pay heed to it. Despite the typology Moses is fulfilling in his death east of Canaan, there is the continued existence of Israel under the law which must be lived out in order to give the world an understanding of its need for grace.

That covenant, and its many laws and prohibitions, says further...

²³ (con't) and make for yourselves a carved image in the form of anything which the LORD your God has forbidden you.

Here, the Hebrew actually says, “which the Lord your God has commanded you.” That is referring to the negative command of Exodus 20:4, 5 –

“You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; ⁵ you shall not bow down to them nor serve them.”

Those words of Exodus 20 are then immediately followed by exactly the same thought. Moses begins that now...

²⁴ For the LORD your God is a consuming fire, ki Yehovah elohekha esh okelah, “For Yehovah your God fire consuming.” The symbolism of this was seen by the people in Exodus 24 –

“The sight of the glory of the LORD was like a consuming fire on the top of the mountain in the eyes of the children of Israel.” Exodus 24:17

The appearance of the Lord's glory was a representation of the Lord's character and being. It was to impress upon the people that what they saw was reflective of who the Lord is. And more than just this outward display reflecting his nature also comes the final, terrifying, words of today's passage...

24 (fin) a jealous God.

hu el qanna – “He God Jealous.” It is an emphatic statement which describes His very character. After giving the commandments concerning idolatry, the Lord said this in Exodus 20 –

“For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, ⁶but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.” Exodus 20:5, 6

God is Jealous. The word is qanna. This doesn't indicate jealousy of success in another. Rather, it speaks of a defense of His honor and glory. When one bows to another god, the Lord isn't jealous of that false god receiving worship. His jealousy is directed to the violation of depriving Him what He is justly due. As He says in Isaiah –

“I am the LORD, that is My name;
And My glory I will not give to another,
Nor My praise to carved images.” Isaiah 42:8

This is the fourth use of this adjective, qanna. It will be used only two more times, both in Deuteronomy, and it is always used in relation to the Lord. As I said in verse 16, however, the word introduced at that time, semel, is one used only four more times.

It is seen in 2 Chronicles 33, where Manasseh, king of Israel, set up such an image in the house of the Lord. Because of that, and the other things Manasseh did, the Lord said he would no longer forgive Israel. Thus, He thrust them from His presence. But the word is also used in Ezekiel 8. There, it says this –

He stretched out the form of a hand, and took me by a lock of my hair; and the Spirit lifted me up between earth and heaven, and brought me in visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the north gate of the inner court, where the seat of the image of jealousy was, which provokes to jealousy. ⁴And behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, like the vision that I saw in the plain.

⁵Then He said to me, “Son of man, lift your eyes now toward the north.” So I lifted my eyes toward the north, and there, north of the altar gate, was this image of jealousy in the entrance. Ezekiel 8:3-5

The image erected at the temple is called “the image of jealousy.” The Lord was deprived His rightful worship because of this image, and the consequences of this, and the other violations of the law which are outlined there, resulted in death for those who followed those practices.

Though we are under grace, it is of note that John closes out his first epistle with these words, “Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen” (1 John 5:21).

Idolatry is no less serious under the New Covenant, even if its consequences in this life are not as terrifying. But the same Lord, whose name is Jealous, rules over us today. His hand of grace upon our lives does not negate His jealous nature when we worship other gods.

One thing we must do, then, is to ensure that our hearts are always directed to Him, and that we are not swayed away from a close walk with Him because of those things which are temporary, corruptible, and which have no value in the life we have been called to live.

Let us carefully evaluate our lives, from day to day, and let us endeavor to always put the Lord Jesus first. With this, the Lord our God will be pleased. And, as the trial of the Coronavirus lockdown is behind us, let us remember to not walk in this life with a spirit of fear.

The Lord has ordained our days, He had them set before the moment we were conceived, and our worries and anxieties will not change that one iota.

Israel saw no form of the Lord, because they were to focus on the Lord – and nothing else. We have something far better. What is the form of the Lord? It is the form of a Man – our Savior, Jesus. Paul says as much in 2 Corinthians –

“For it is the God who commanded light to shine out of darkness, who has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.” 2 Corinthians 4:6

Jesus – He is the Lord, the eternal God. Let us entrust our souls to Him, be confident and encouraged in Him, and be a light to others – both in how to conduct our lives properly, and in how to bear up in a positive way during those times which bring fear to the hearts of men. May they see our lives and say, “I want what they have. I want Jesus.” To the glory of God the Father.

Closing Verse: “Therefore, since we are receiving a kingdom which cannot be shaken, let us have grace, by which we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. ²⁹ For our God is a consuming fire.” Hebrews 12:28, 29

Next Week: Deuteronomy 4:25-31 Something to do always as on this earth you trod... (Seek the Lord Your God) (16th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Form of the Lord

Take careful heed to yourselves
For you saw no form; nothing visible to admire
When the LORD spoke to you
At Horeb out of the midst of the fire

Lest you act corruptly
And make for yourselves a carved image – yes even of a whale
In the form of any figure
The likeness of male or female

The likeness of any animal that is on the earth
Or the likeness of any winged bird that flies in the air
The likeness of anything that creeps on the ground
Or the likeness of any fish that is in the water beneath the earth
-----No! Don't you dare

And take heed, lest you lift your eyes to heaven
And when you see the sun, the moon, and the stars
All the host of heaven

You feel driven to worship them and serve them
-----even the planet Mars

Which has given the LORD your God
To all the peoples as a heritage under the whole heaven
-----wherever man does trod

But the LORD has taken you
And brought you out of the iron furnace; a place not bright and gay
Out of Egypt, to be His people
An inheritance, as you are this day

Furthermore the LORD was angry with me for your sakes
And swore that I would not cross over the Jordan
-----for me there is no such chance
And that I would not enter the good land
Which the LORD your God is giving you as an inheritance

But I must die in this land
I must not cross over the Jordan, thus I was made to understand
But you shall cross over
And possess that good land

Take heed to yourselves, lest you forget the covenant
Of the LORD your God which He made with you
And make for yourselves a carved image in the form of anything
Which the LORD your God has forbidden you to do

For the LORD your God – please give me an understanding nod
Is a consuming fire; a jealous God

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown

Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 4:25-31 (Seek the Lord Your God)

In the passage today, there is lots of bad news for Israel if they disobey, and Moses seems to take it as an axiom that they will – in fact – disobey. This isn't the beginning of such bad news. There have been numerous warnings and promised punishments for disobedience already, and more are forthcoming in the chapters ahead.

And yet, at the same time, the great themes of mercy, grace, forgiveness, and covenant faithfulness are seen in just these few verses. The Lord has spoken such words, and Moses confirms them here in Deuteronomy.

But one problem with Israel, and it is a problem with all of us, is that we often tend to rely a bit too heavily on the good stuff while ignoring the warnings. Some years ago, I heard a Jewish rabbi speaking on some show about how religions and denominations anticipate forgiveness.

He kind of flippantly said that for Jews, they just acknowledge they did wrong and that's it. There was no sense of any offense having been made. Kind of an uncaring, "Yeah, I did wrong." He then shrugged his shoulders and that was it.

The key point is that every religion that was interviewed all acknowledged that wrongdoing exists in our actions. If that is so, someone must be offended, or it can't be wrong. If the offended One is God, and if we get the means of obtaining forgiveness wrong, that becomes hugely problematic.

Text Verse: "Where can I go from Your Spirit?

Or where can I flee from Your presence?

⁸ If I ascend to heaven, You are there;

If I make my bed in Sheol, behold, You are there." Psalm 139:7, 8 (NASB)

Whenever I come to this passage in Deuteronomy, and I get to verse 28 where it speaks of serving gods that are the work of men's hands, it always brings back the memory of my time owning a retail business. I imported and sold things from Asia, a large percentage of the things were idols – everything from Buddha and Krishna to Hanuman and Lakshmi, and anything else that would sell.

Of course, at that time, I was as brain dead as the people that bought the things, trading the truth of God for worthless images, but it never ceased to surprise me the number of Jews who would come in and buy them. The Jewish population of Sarasota is not that big, but they all seemed to have this in common.

I always thought of them as a religious people, being obedient to their God and faithfully observing their law. How absolutely wrong I was. It didn't take long to know that the outward appearances, and the boasting in the heritage, has nothing to do with a sound relationship with the Lord.

Until I really came to know Christ, and to understand what it means to be a true Jew, I had no idea that almost all Jews do not qualify for that title. Rather, they perfectly fit the prophetic words of Moses here, even those who appeared to be observant perfectly match what he says.

In other words, they are no different than the people among whom they live, despite living separately from the people among whom they live. The difference between them and the others is that they are bound under this covenant in a unique way.

Any who are not in Christ are condemned. The Bible makes that absolutely clear. But the Jews face a kind of double trouble. This is because they bear the name of the Lord, even when they don't acknowledge the Lord. And in that, there are responsibilities and consequences.

We will see this again today. In the end, everyone needs Jesus, but the Jew needs Him individually and in a collective manner as well. Hence, the past 2000 years have not been very friendly to them. This is a truth which is to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. I Call Heaven and Earth to Witness (verses 25 & 26)

In the previous passage, Moses began to speak of idolatry. The people saw no form of the Lord, and therefore the Lord is not to be worshiped through a form – a representation of who He is. But more, a form of any other god is a form of no god at all, and they likewise were not to be set up and worshipped.

With that understood, Moses will continue with that thought for a moment, and then he will turn to the penalty for doing such things, including the greatest penalty for the people, exile. Moses explains, in advance, what will happen in exile, and what will bring them to restoration from it.

But Moses will also confirm one major point of Israel's punishment, destruction, and exile – that a covenant exists between the Lord and Israel. No matter what happens, even in the breaking of the covenant by Israel, God will remember it and keep His side of it. This is the scope of what will now be seen...

²⁵ “When you beget children and grandchildren

The words of this verse are in the singular – you. It is speaking to all of Israel as a single entity, even if every Israelite is included. The Hebrew reads, “When you beget sons and son's sons.” The words here call to reminder what Moses had just said in verse 4:9, using the same expression –

“Only take heed to yourself, and diligently keep yourself, lest you forget the things your eyes have seen, and lest they depart from your heart all the days of your life. And teach them to your children and your grandchildren, ¹⁰ especially concerning the day you stood before the LORD your God in Horeb, when the LORD said to me, ‘Gather the people to Me, and I will let them hear My words, that they may learn to fear Me all the days they live on the earth, and that they may teach their children.’” Deuteronomy 4:9, 10

The admonition was given first, “Take heed to yourself, and diligently keep yourself, lest you forget.” Moses now takes it as an axiom that the people will not only fail to take heed, but they will also forget. That begins to be implied in the next words...

²⁵ (con't) and have grown old in the land,

v'novoshantem ba'arets – “And have slumbered in the land.” The word is yashen, and it needs explanation. It comes from a root which signifies to be slack, or languid. By implication, it means to sleep, even a figurative sleep of death, or to grow old, stale, etc.

Here, it certainly isn't speaking of the people's age, but of their time in the land. However, it is not necessarily an extended period there. Most translations say, “have grown old in the land,” or “have lived long in the land.” But this is not the correct idea as is evidenced by the early turning away from the Lord to idolatry. Immediately after Joshua's death, even in Judges 2, it says –

“Then the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served the Baals; ¹² and they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt; and they followed other gods from among the gods of the people who were all around them, and they bowed down to them; and they provoked the LORD to anger. ¹³ They forsook the LORD and served Baal and the Ashtoreths. ¹⁴ And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel.” Judges 2:11-14

The idea of Moses’ use of this word cannot be separated from the idea of sleep, which is how it is usually translated. Of this, Charles Ellicott rightly states, “Prosperity often sends true religion to sleep, and brings conventional, or fashionable, religion in its stead.” This is exactly the thought Moses now conveys.

In the forming of Eve from Adam’s rib, it says that “the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall on Adam and he slept.” Two different words are used in that verse for “sleep.” The second, “and he slept,” is the word Moses now uses.

The idea then is that Israel won’t be attentive. Instead, they will slacken in their responsibility to pay heed and keep themselves. This is akin to what Paul says in the New Testament, such as in 1 Thessalonians 5 –

“You are all sons of light and sons of the day. We are not of the night nor of darkness. ⁶ Therefore let us not sleep, as others do, but let us watch and be sober. ⁷ For those who sleep, sleep at night, and those who get drunk are drunk at night.” 1 Thessalonians 5:5-7

It is this that Moses warns them of, slumbering. In this inattentive, sleeping state, they will forget the Lord their God...

²⁵ (con’t) and act corruptly and make a carved image in the form of anything,

This is just what Moses warned against only two verses earlier –

“Take heed to yourselves, lest you forget the covenant of the LORD your God which He made with you, and make for yourselves a carved image in the form of anything which the LORD your God has forbidden you.” (vs 23)

Moses just warned them of this, he noted that it was a part of the covenant, and that it was a forbidden part at that. Immediately after that, he said that “the Lord your God is a consuming fire, a jealous God.”

And yet, he – just one verse later now – assumes that the people will actually do this thing, and they will find out what it means concerning this aspect of the Lord. He knows they will, in fact, break the covenant...

²⁵ (con't) and do evil in the sight of the LORD your God

There is an article before “evil” in the Hebrew. It is the specific deed – the evil, or that which is evil – which Moses is referring to. The stress is there because such idolatry inevitably leads to countless other problems. It is also that which is seen directly in front of the eyes of the Lord...

²⁵ (con't) to provoke Him to anger, l'hakiso – “to provoke Him to anger.” It is a new word, kaas, coming from a primitive root meaning “to trouble.” Thus, by implication, to be angry or provoke to anger. This is exactly what it meant when Moses said the Lord is a jealous God.

As this is so, and as He is also described as a “consuming fire,” the implication is obvious. The Lord isn’t just going sit and stew. Rather, their provoking Him to anger will then bring upon them what is expected of One who is jealous. Moses therefore explains exactly what that means, starting with the next words which begin with a summons for witnesses...

²⁶ I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, haidoti bakem hayom eth ha'shemayim v'et ha'arets – “I call to witness against you this day the heavens and the earth.” The words here go from the second person singular to the second person plural. In essence, “I call these witnesses against you all.”

The meaning of Moses’ words is not that of judgment. In other words, in Leviticus 26:19, the Lord says concerning disobedient Israel –

“I will break the pride of your power;
I will make your heavens like iron and your earth like bronze.”

That is a consequence of disobedience. Moses is not calling for judgment, but for witnesses that will testify to the just nature of any coming judgment and punishment. That is why he refers back to the first sentence of the Bible, “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.”

In this, the heavens and the earth are being likened to the surety of the covenant. Just as God is the Creator and Sustainer of the heavens and the earth, He is the Initiator and Monitor of the covenant.

In other words, it is not speaking of those who dwell on the earth and those who dwell in heaven to be witnesses. Rather, it is saying that even the heavens and earth are the witnesses.

As evident as these are to remind us of the existence of God, so shall it be the same when judgment comes. Thus, Israel should then rightfully say, “As sure as I am standing on the ground, and as surely as the heavens are above my head – both created by God – so is my punishment deserved.” They speak out the obvious reality of what has occurred in Israel’s punishment, which Moses next speaks of...

^{26 (con’t)} that you will soon utterly perish from the land ki avod tovedun maher meal ha’arets – “perishing, you will perish quickly from the land.” Moses uses an adjective seen just once so far, maher. It isn’t an especially rare word, but the previous time it was used was in Exodus 32:8 where the people turned aside quickly out of the way the Lord commanded them. In this, they made a golden calf to worship during Moses’ absence.

The people quickly turned from the Lord, and there were dire consequences because of it. Moses promises now that if they do evil in the land, the Lord will just as quickly turn His favor from them and punish them, removing them from the land...

^{26 (con’t)} which you cross over the Jordan to possess;

asher atem oberim eth ha’yarden shamah l’rishtah – “which you cross over the Jordan to possess.” The verb translated as “cross over” here is identical in spelling to the noun “Hebrew.” It gets its meaning based on the structure of the sentence, just as a homograph in English.

Without stretching the intent too far, it almost appears to be a pun. Moses is speaking to the Hebrew people, “You (Hebrews) are crossing over the Jordan, but if you don’t pay heed, then you aren’t true Hebrews, because what you crossed over to possess you will be dispossessed from.”

If this is subtly the intent, it is well reflected by a similar thought from Paul in Romans 2–

“For he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, nor is circumcision that which is outward in the flesh; ²⁹ but he is a Jew who is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the Spirit, not in the letter; whose praise is not from men but from God.” Romans 2:28, 29

The Hebrew word for Jew means “praise.” Thus, Paul was making a pun concerning the nature of a true Jew. A true Jew has crossed over the Jordan, a picture of Christ, and is circumcised in the heart by the Spirit. Likewise, for the Hebrews to fail to adhere to the covenant, they would prove themselves false Hebrews. Thus...

²⁶ (con’t) you will not prolong your days in it,

Moses is speaking to all the people. In this, it is not speaking immediately about long life for each person, but a long continuance in the land for the people. However, this does not negate the thought of a shortened life for each person.

If the land is attacked, and if the people are exiled, it will mean that for many, the days of their lives will be cut short. As people and as individuals they will not continue...

²⁶ (con’t) but will be utterly destroyed.

hishamed tishamedun – “in being destroyed, you will be destroyed.” The word shamad gives the sense of extermination. Thus, the people, collectively and individually can expect being cut off. The words here are reflective of the similar warning coming from Moses in Deuteronomy 30 –

“I call heaven and earth as witnesses today against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life, that both you and your descendants may live;” Deuteronomy 30:19

However, even in the prospect of extermination, and even in the horror which continues to be relayed in the next verse, there is in it also to be found a note of covenant faithfulness by Lord...

*Heaven and earth are witnesses today
Of the words I now call out to you
Be circumspect on the path as you wind your way
Because the words are sure, and the warnings are true*

*You must be obedient to the Lord your God
Pursuing His precepts always, never shall you stray
Let your feet not depart from the path that you trod
Be circumspect on the path as you wind your way*

*Fix your eyes on the One who has gone before you
Fix your eyes on the Lord Jesus, and you will never stray
Should you wander off the path, He remains faithful and true
He will be with you on the path as you wind your way*

II. The Lord Your God Is a Merciful God (verses 27-31)

²⁷ And the LORD will scatter you among the peoples,

The words remain in the second person plural – “I will scatter you all.” To be scattered among the peoples implies being alive. The very fact that this is recorded indicates that the Lord is aware of those who remain, even if they are further punished in the land of their exile. Which is what is to be expected based on what the Lord has already said.

In these verses, Moses has called the words of the covenant to remembrance. In Leviticus 26, the Lord said –

“I will scatter you among the nations and draw out a sword after you; your land shall be desolate and your cities waste.” Leviticus 26:33

Here Moses repeats, and yet amends, that thought saying, v’hepits Yehovah etkem ba’amim – “and will scatter you Yehovah among the peoples.”

In Leviticus, the Lord used the word zarah. Here Moses uses puts. Both convey the same basic meaning, but the root of the word Moses uses carries more force, meaning “to dash in pieces.” The people would be dashed to pieces and what was left would fly off in all directions. In this, Moses says...

²⁷ (con’t) and you will be left few in number

The Hebrew reads, “men of a number.” It is an idiomatic expression indicating that there will be so few, that it will be no effort to count them. The once-great nation would be so greatly reduced that there would be little left.

And yet, to be left few in number implies... being. The hand of the Lord may be heavy upon the people, but the people remain. The intent of Haman in Esther was to destroy all of the Jews. The exile of Israel, and the punishment they received among the nations at that time were self-inflicted wounds.

However, Haman didn't simply want punishment, but annihilation. The Lord intervened, and the people – even if few in number – were spared.

Again, Hitler didn't simply want the Jews kicked out of Germany. Rather, he wanted them exterminated. The woes of Israel for the previous 1900 years were brought upon them through their rejection of Christ – another self-inflicted wound. But through their punishment, they remained a people.

This is the intent of the words of both Leviticus 26 and of what is seen, and what will continue to be seen, here in Deuteronomy. To be left few in number, as tragic as that is, is a note of covenant faithfulness, not by Israel, but by the Lord, even...

²⁷ (con't) among the nations where the LORD will drive you.

Moses withholds nothing. It is Israel who will break the covenant, and it is the Lord who will execute the judgments of the covenant. Of this verse, Charles Ellicott again rightly states –

“Our familiarity with this fact in history must not blind us to its force when uttered as a prophecy. The fact that the Jews were taken captive for idolatry, and dispersed for the rejection of JESUS, is a remarkable proof that the real reason why they were brought into Canaan, and kept there, was to be witnesses for Jehovah.” Charles Ellicott

Having died in 1905, he said this long before Israel was returned to the land in 1948. Thus, he had no knowledge that what he said was true, not only in the past, but in our present.

Israel was placed in the land to testify of the Lord. Israel was exiled to testify of the Lord. There would be no exile if Israel obeyed, and there would be no horrors in exile if the people took heed to the word.

But both occurred because the people willingly disobeyed, and they failed to heed. Thus, Moses here uses the word nahag, meaning to drive. John Lange notes that the word itself, and the form in which it is used “indicates ... not a gentle leading, but a driving and urgent pressure.” Israel sinned; Israel is punished.

But the obstinacy of Israel is seen when even with the obvious nature of what has occurred – meaning the heavens and the earth are witnesses to it, and thus Israel should have known better when it occurred – they would still fail to accept the Lord’s correction and turn from their sin...

28 And there you will serve gods, the work of men’s hands, wood and stone, which neither see nor hear nor eat nor smell.

It remains second person plural – “There you all will serve.” The senselessness of serving dead idols is well summed up as a contrast to the nature of the Lord. First, Moses calls them elohim, or “gods.” This does not mean that they are actually gods, but that they are people’s gods, and thus false gods.

In this, Moses then contrasts them to the Lord. He says they are maaseh yede adam, “work (of) hands man.” Moses has appealed to the Ten Commandments in verse 13. The fourth of those commandments says, “For in six days the LORD made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day” (Exodus 20:11).

As He created the heaven’s and the earth, and as He created man from the earth, the contrast is absolute. The God of Israel is THE GOD, and anything else is a false god.

Next, he says, “wood and stone.” In verses 12 and 15, it noted that the people saw no form. Here, form is implied. Thus, there is THE GOD without form, and anything else is a false god bearing form.

Next, he says, “which neither see nor hear nor eat nor smell.” In verse 7, it said that Israel’s God could be called upon for any reason. It implies that He hears. In verse 25 it says the people would do evil b’ene – in the sight, or literally, in the eyes of the Lord. It implies that the Lord sees. And finally, in verse 24, it said that the Lord is a consuming fire, using the word akal – to eat. It implies that the Lord can devour as a mouth would.

Thus, in this one chapter, Moses has woven into his words a complete contrast to the false gods, meaning the idols Israel would serve in the lands of their dispersion and punishment.

With that thought in mind, there are at least two ways to view what “serve gods” means. The first is that the people would serve these gods, meaning that they would be in bondage to them. The people of those gods would rule over them and thus they would serve those people and, thus, those gods.

The second is that it would mean that Israel will serve those gods, giving them worship and devotion. The Jewish commentator Rashi over-piously chooses the first meaning, as if in their exile they never actually served idols.

It was and has been true that Israel served other peoples who served their own false gods. However, that is hardly the intent of Moses’ words. He is quite clear that they are serving (meaning worshiping) the gods. This is certain for quite a few reasons.

First, it is the reason for their exile in the first place. The warning against this was seen in verses 15-19 and it was then repeated in verse 23. The acknowledgment that it would actually come to pass is seen in verse 25.

Since then, Moses has been telling of the effects upon the people for doing this. They worshipped and served idols in the land, having rejected the Lord and the covenant. Thus, they were exiled.

Secondly, it doesn’t say that they would serve the people of other gods, it says that they would serve other gods. This is repeated in Deuteronomy 28 –

“Then the LORD will scatter you among all peoples, from one end of the earth to the other, and there you shall serve other gods, which neither you nor your fathers have known—wood and stone.” Deuteronomy 28:64

The words, “which you nor your fathers have known,” would be superfluous unless it meant that they were worshipping new gods – false gods. But this type of idolatry goes beyond carved images. It extends to gods which Israel is abundantly known to serve. This is stated by the scholar Keil who, in turn, cites the scholar Schultz –

“The more refined idolatry of image-worship leads to coarser and coarser forms, in which the whole nature of idol-worship is manifested in all its pitiableness. ‘When once the God of revelation is forsaken, the God of reason and imagination must also soon be given up and make way for still lower powers, that perfectly accord with the I exalted upon the throne, and in the time of pretended 'illumination' to atheism and materialism also’ (Schultz)”.

Atheism, materialism, communism, humanism, and a plethora of other isms are the main staple of secular and religious life among the vast majority of Jews in the world, even to this day. They follow these gods with reckless abandon, having forsaken the Lord God. And thirdly, the words of the next verse imply that this is referring to active worship of false gods...

²⁹ But from there

In the previous verse, it said, “there (sham) you will serve gods.” Now it says, “But from there (mi’sham) you will seek the Lord your God.” The context is the same and the two words correspond to one truth.

They are in exile for serving other gods (among other things), and in their exile, they continued to do so, even to the point where they no longer retain a knowledge of the true God, Yehovah, as is confirmed by the words...

^{29 (con’t)} you will seek the LORD your God,

It is second person plural – “You all will seek.” One only seeks that which one does not possess. I will seek after one of my dogs because it has flippantly ignored my calls and run off to annoy one of the neighbors. I no longer possess my wayward furry friend, and I must go seek after him.

If Israel possessed Yehovah, as their God, they would not need to seek Him. But the truth remains that He is, in fact, the Lord their God, as Moses acknowledges right in these words. They have forgotten Him, but He has not forgotten them. To Israel, He remains “the Lord your God.”

^{29 (con’t)} and you will find Him if you seek Him with all your heart and with all your soul.

Remarkably, the words here now change, in the middle of the verse, to the second person singular – you will find; you seek; your heart; your soul. Each individual forms into a collective whole. Not all may find, but those who are of the collective who do, will find.

The Lord will be found when He is sought with the heart, meaning the seat of intellect and reason, and the soul, meaning the place of inner yearning and desire in the animated life.

To seek the Lord with the intellect and not the with a yearning desire is to seek after an understanding of who God is, but not caring about Him personally. This would be the scholar who is so busy learning about God, that he never gets to know Him.

To seek the Lord with the soul but not the intellect is to, most probably, find a relationship without a sound basis for it. This is the Jehovah's witnesses etc., who think they have a relationship with God, but who failed to do the due diligence only to discover they have called on a false god.

Moses assures Israel that after their exile, they will find the Lord their God when they search for Him with all of their heart and with all of their soul. This promise will be restated and built upon in Chapter 30 –

“Now it shall come to pass, when all these things come upon you, the blessing and the curse which I have set before you, and you call them to mind among all the nations where the LORD your God drives you, ² and you return to the LORD your God and obey His voice, according to all that I command you today, you and your children, with all your heart and with all your soul, ³ that the LORD your God will bring you back from captivity, and have compassion on you, and gather you again from all the nations where the LORD your God has scattered you. ⁴ If any of you are driven out to the farthest parts under heaven, from there the LORD your God will gather you, and from there He will bring you. ⁵ Then the LORD your God will bring you to the land which your fathers possessed, and you shall possess it. He will prosper you and multiply you more than your fathers. ⁶ And the LORD your God will circumcise your heart and the heart of your descendants, to love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul, that you may live.”
Deuteronomy 30:1-6

Of this verse, Adam Clarke – who died in 1832, a time in which it was unimaginable to most of the world that Israel would be reconciled to God – asked, “Is not this promise left on record for the encouragement and salvation of lost Israel?”

The foresight of Clarke was lost to the vast majority of scholars prior to him, contemporary with him, and even of those who continue to teach replacement theology to this day.

Having died over a hundred years before the reestablishment of Israel, he picked up his Bible, accepted it at face value, and rejected the theology of those who rejected Israel as a people bound by the covenant of the Lord, and thus still under the care and watchful eye of the Lord.

Despite this, there is the truth that Israel of today has not met the demands of these words of Moses. They have not sought the Lord, they are still immersed in idolatry, and they remain under the law and apart from Christ.

Therefore, the words, remain anticipatory for them. Even though the land has been returned to them, many of them have not returned to the land, and most of them have not returned to the Lord. Therefore, the continued words of the passage still ring true...

³⁰ When you are in distress, and all these things come upon you

The second person singular continues here. The word “when” is not in the Hebrew. It more closely reads, “In distress you are, and find you all these words.” The “words” are things, but they are based on Moses’ words. In other words, what he says here is what will happen. They will be found in the state prophesied here.

Despite possessing the land, Israel does not – at this time – possess the Lord. They are His possession, but they are not yet His people. Moses prophesies that this would be the case...

³⁰ (con’t) in the latter days, b’akharit ha’yamim – “in end the days.” The words here can be paraphrased as “a time of messianic completion.” If one was to assume that this is speaking of the completed work of Christ, he could then argue that this is referring to the initiation of the church age and thus the entire church age.

From both a Hebrew and a Mosaic Covenant perspective, these would both be incorrect. For a Gentile-led church age, that argument could be made based on Paul’s words of 1 Timothy 4:1 where he speaks of the “latter times.” But that has nothing to do with Moses’ words here now.

It is speaking of a time, at the end of the age, when the messianic promises will be realized in Israel. Q: Has this ever occurred in history. A: No. They began to be realized, but the nation as a whole rejected Him. Thus, this has a future fulfillment to us now. That is seen in the words...

30 (con't) when you turn to the LORD your God and obey His voice

The words, as noted, are in the second person singular. Each individual who comprises the collective whole is addressed, and thus it is speaking to all as one. However, the translation is lacking. The word is shuv – to return, or to turn back.

Saying “turn” could lead a person to think this might be speaking of the church, turning to Christ, rather than Israel returning to the Lord. But Moses is speaking to Israel, and he has noted that they have departed from the Lord. Therefore, it signifies more than a turn to the Lord, but a return to Him.

With this in mind, it should be noted that several great scholars of the past rightly pinpoint this as speaking of Israel, though the details from them vary on what it means to return to the Lord. Does it mean to the law, or what the law anticipated – meaning Christ?

But they agree that it is Israel, and it will be a return to the Lord. However, many other scholars make the galactically incorrect leap to indicate that this is referring to the church. For example, John Lange says –

“The condition and the time for the return of Israel are arranged in parallel clauses, (Deut 4:30), i. e., when the distress, the curse of the law, is completed, then also will the time of Israel be completed, then will be the end of days, and as the threatening will be fulfilled, so also the promise, the return to the Lord. Thus there is revealed a future of Israel, when through its returning obedience to the law, (and hearkening to his voice, Deut 4:30, Matt. 5:17; 7:24 sq.) it makes effective in humanity, the peculiar idea of its nationality, see Deut 4:6 sq. (comp. upon 2:25). Since salvation comes from the Jews, (John 4:22), the national Israel may be considered a spiritual, which in that respect is the completion of Israel, when through the ingrafted fulness of the Gentiles in the place of the hardened portion, which takes place more and more, ‘all Israel shall so (in this way) be saved,’ Rom. 11:26.”

The error of this thinking goes on and on. First, it ignores that there is a people in exile and under punishment for having rejected the Lord. This can never be applied to the Gentiles as he states. The Gentiles never had the Lord, and so the punishment and dispersion cannot apply to them.

Secondly, the repeated changing in point of view from the singular to the plural would make absolutely no sense if it was applied to Gentiles. Moses is speaking to Israel and changing the perspective to show individual and combined character within the nation as well as national character.

Thirdly, regardless as to whether Moses is speaking of a return to the law, or to what the law anticipates, meaning Christ, the Gentiles were never under the Law of Moses. Christ's fulfillment of the law, on our behalf, does not set this aside.

It may be God's standard, because Christ is the embodiment of the law, but Moses cannot ascribe to the Gentiles aspects of a law which has never applied to them. He has referred to the law, and he will continue to do so throughout Deuteronomy. But the law applied to Israel, and only to Israel.

One more logical argument will suffice, and that will be reviewed before we complete the next verse...

³¹ (for the LORD your God is a merciful God), ki el rakhum Yehovah elohekha – “For God compassionate, Yehovah your God.” The word is rakhum. This is only its second use. It is an adjective seen 13 times in the Old Testament. It is always used when speaking of the Lord.

It is from the same root as rekhem, meaning “womb.” One can see how just as a mother cares for the child in her womb, so the Lord is compassionate. Though the word is referring to the Lord and His character, the loving care of Israel is clearly seen in it. The context is Moses speaking to Israel concerning the Lord being Israel's God. That same thought continues with...

³¹ (con't) He will not forsake you nor destroy you,

The word translated as “forsake” is raphah. It gives the sense of letting go. In Exodus, Pharaoh accused the Hebrews of being, raphah, lazy. The Lord will never fail Israel by letting go of them, nor would He actively destroy them, meaning utterly wipe them out. They would remain as a people, even if individually they were wiped out. Plus, there is one more promise which will close out our words today...

³¹ (fin) nor forget the covenant of your fathers which He swore to them.

Moses promises that the Lord will not forget the covenant made with Israel's fathers, as it says, “which He swore to them.” This is an obvious reference to the covenant which the Lord swore to Abraham, and then to Isaac, and then to Jacob, as He said in Exodus 33 –

Then the LORD said to Moses, “Depart and go up from here, you and the people whom you have brought out of the land of Egypt, to the land of which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, saying, ‘To your descendants I will give it.’”

-Exodus 33:1

There is no doubt that this is what is being referred to. In fact, he repeats that sentiment in Leviticus 26 –

“...then I will remember My covenant with Jacob, and My covenant with Isaac and My covenant with Abraham I will remember; I will remember the land.”

-Leviticus 26:42

The covenant promises are repeated in the very chapter where the blessings and curses are spoken, which Moses’ words here now refer to. The promises, as noted, go beyond Abraham to include both Isaac and Jacob. And, they are inclusive of the land.

For this reason, this cannot be speaking of the Gentiles. This is for two reasons. The first is that no land promise is ever recorded for the Gentiles. Secondly, the promise of Messiah for Gentiles, which Paul appeals to, is one which is only inclusive of Abraham and his faith. It says nothing of Isaac or Jacob.

Though these points could be argued or spiritualized, Leviticus 26 does not end on that note. Rather, after saying this, it then goes on to appeal to the Mosaic Covenant –

“But for their sake I will remember the covenant of their ancestors, whom I brought out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the nations, that I might be their God: I am the LORD.” Leviticus 26:45

The Lord, after citing the covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, which included a land grant, lastly appealed to the covenant of Israel’s ancestors, who He brought out of the land of Egypt. In other words, He is looking forward in time and referring to the covenant He was in the process of giving.

That is this covenant, having started at Sinai, and which is continuing to be made right now through Moses, to which the Lord – in the end of days – would remember.

Therefore, the “covenant of their ancestors” there in Leviticus refers to the Mosaic Covenant. The Lord’s words speak of the people far in the future but looking back to this time – as Moses speaks. It cannot refer to the Gentiles because they were never brought out of Egypt and given a covenant to live by.

This same point is bound to be reviewed again while we are in Deuteronomy, but it is a point that cannot be reviewed enough. God made a covenant with Israel. That covenant has not yet been ended, even though it is fulfilled in Christ.

The reason it has not ended is because even though individuals of Israel entered into the New Covenant, Israel the nation did not. Until that happens, they remain under the confines and the bondage of the Old.

But this is exactly why they have been kept as a people. The Lord covenanted with them that they would remain, and remain united, until and after they entered into the New Covenant.

During their time of exile and punishment, however, the Lord has not wasted time. Any person, Jew or Gentile, can receive what Israel missed. They can accept what God has done in Christ, they can be saved through His shed blood, and they are – at that time – granted eternal life.

God’s gifts and His calling are irrevocable. Israel was called, and Israel shall be granted what they have missed for so long. This is the faithful God we serve, and this is the marvel of His faithfulness to His unfaithful people – meaning the Jew first, but also the Gentile. Thank God for the compassion of the Lord which is fully displayed in the giving of Jesus Christ.

Closing Verse: “For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, says the LORD, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you a future and a hope. ¹² Then you will call upon Me and go and pray to Me, and I will listen to you. ¹³ And you will seek Me and find Me, when you search for Me with all your heart. ¹⁴ I will be found by you, says the LORD, and I will bring you back from your captivity; I will gather you from all the nations and from all the places where I have driven you, says the LORD, and I will bring you to the place from which I cause you to be carried away captive.” Jeremiah 29:11-14

Next Week: Deuteronomy 4:32-40 This is true; take it to heart, brother.. (There Is No Other) (17th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Seek the Lord your God

When you beget children and grandchildren
And have grown old in the land – pay heed, this is no joke
And act corruptly and make a carved image in the form of anything
And do evil in the sight of the LORD your God
-----to anger Him you provoke

I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day
That you will soon utterly perish from the land
-----which you have so enjoyed
Which you cross over the Jordan to possess
You will not prolong your days in it, but will be utterly destroyed

And the LORD will scatter you among the peoples
And you will be left – pay heed my word is true!
Few in number among the nations
Where the LORD will drive you

And there you will serve gods
The work of men's hands – if described in a nutshell
Wood and stone
Which neither see nor hear nor eat nor smell

But from there you will seek the LORD your God
And you will find Him – the One written about in the scroll
If you seek Him with all your heart
And with all your soul

When you are in distress
And all these things come upon you in the latter days
When you turn to the LORD your God
And obey His voice – yes, obedience pays

(for the LORD your God is a merciful God)
He will not forsake you nor destroy you
Nor forget the covenant of your fathers which He swore to them; this He will never do

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 4:32-40 (There Is No Other)

In Romans 9-11, Paul speaks of the situation with Israel in relation to the Lord. He speaks of their rejection of Christ, he speaks of what the state of those who rejected Him is, he speaks of God's sovereignty over what occurred and what their rejection of Him means for Gentiles and for individual Jews who believe in Him.

He then continues with how their rejection came about, their need for the imputed righteousness of Christ rather than relying on deeds of the law, and how they too can be saved – even despite their continuing hardheartedness.

At the beginning of Chapter 11, Paul opens with, "I say then, has God cast away His people?" His answer, "Certainly not!" He then further explains what their rejection of Christ means for the Gentiles, but he also goes on to say what their acceptance of Christ will mean. He finishes out that portion of his epistle with the following words which form our text verse –

Text Verse: For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own opinion, that blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. ²⁶ And so all Israel will be saved, as it is written:

*"The Deliverer will come out of Zion,
And He will turn away ungodliness from Jacob;*

*²⁷ For this is My covenant with them,
When I take away their sins."*

²⁸ Concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but concerning the election they are beloved for the sake of the fathers. ²⁹ For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable. ³⁰ For as you were once disobedient to God, yet have now obtained mercy through their disobedience, ³¹ even so these also have now been disobedient, that through the mercy shown you they also may obtain mercy. ³² For God has committed them all to disobedience, that He might have mercy on all. Romans 11:25-32

Paul speaks of Israel being beloved for the sake of the fathers. It is exactly what Moses will refer to in our passage today. He then says that the gifts and the calling are irrevocable. For replacement theologians, as well as for those unable to learn what Paul means (but I repeat myself), it is a word meaning, "not able to be changed, reversed, or recovered."

God has promised, he has called Israel, and that will not change. Israel's unfaithfulness to the Lord will not in any way affect the Lord's promises and His faithfulness. This is a great lesson for each of us who has been saved by Christ, but who struggle with all of the things we as humans struggle with. We may be unfaithful, but God will never revoke what He has granted to us through a simple act of faith.

If you have never received Jesus, stick around for the next forty minutes or so for a great sermon (yes, it will be great – because it is based on God's word), and at the end, I'll tell you the simple path to salvation. But in case your meeting with God is less than forty minutes away, I'll give you a short and quick preview – believe that Christ died for your sins and accept that.

This is the central point of all of Scripture – JESUS. The law of Moses is merely a steppingstone leading to Him. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. From One End of Heaven to the Other (verses 32-34)

The words of Deuteronomy 4:32-40 are a summary thought for Israel to consider and to live by. It is an amazingly profound portion of Scripture which would be appropriate to copy by every member of the assembly, and to then place in a centrally located part of the house where everyone who came in could see it, reflect on it, and pay heed to it.

Moses is going to reiterate many of the thoughts that he has presented to Israel so far in Chapter 4. He has conveyed to them the need to keep the commandments of the Lord. He will repeat that in verse 40. He has shown that the Lord destroyed many in Israel for idolatry. He will warn that they can expect more of this also in verse 40.

He has spoken of the great wisdom to be found in the statutes and judgments of the Lord. In keeping these, they may call upon Him when needed, because He is near to them. He will refer to this bond in verse 34.

He spoke of the receiving of the law and what it was like when it was received. He will refer to this again in verse 36. He warned against idolatry among the people and the consequences of not paying heed. He will speak of the contrast of that in verse 39 – that the Lord is God, and that there is none other.

He has referred to being brought out of the bondage of Egypt. He will refer to this again in verse 37. And, he has spoken of the faithfulness of the Lord, despite the anticipated unfaithfulness of Israel. He will speak of this unbreakable covenant bond (at least on His side of it) again in verse 34.

In just nine verses, Moses will open up a panorama of thought which extends from the creation of man even through all of the future history of the world. And, it extends out from Israel in all directions over the entire earth.

What is said speaks of the eternal nature of God, and – therefore – of the eternal and irrevocable nature of God’s dealing with this particular people, regardless as to how they respond to Him. In these words, are the magnificent concepts of love, mercy, grace, and also of warning...

³² “For ask now concerning the days that are past, ki sheal na l’yamim rishonim – For inquire, I pray, to days first. Moses begins the thought imploring his audience – and therefore anyone who ever reads his words – to inquire, into the events of time itself. That word is rishonim, and it signifies the former, first, or beginning.

The idea here is that Moses is imploring his audience to diligently seek, even to the first times that were. But the context of what he is saying is based on the first word, ki, or “for.” The idea is connected to everything in the previous verses. If we start with verse 26 until this verse, we can get the idea of what Moses is conveying –

“I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that you will soon utterly perish from the land which you cross over the Jordan to possess; you will not prolong your days in it, but will be utterly destroyed. ²⁷ And the LORD will scatter you among the peoples, and you will be left few in number among the nations where the LORD will drive you. ²⁸ And there you will serve gods, the work of men’s hands, wood and stone, which neither see nor hear nor eat nor smell. ²⁹ But from there you will seek the LORD your God, and you will find Him if you seek Him with all your heart and with all your soul. ³⁰ When you are in distress, and all these things come upon you in the latter days, when you turn to the LORD your God and obey His voice ³¹ (for the LORD your God is a merciful God), He will not forsake you nor destroy you, nor forget the covenant of your fathers which He swore to them.” Deuteronomy 4:26-31

Moses has let Israel know that they are prone to wander, and in that state, they will be dispersed. They will be in a state of complete denial of the Lord, but in their distress of those times, they will seek Him, and He will be found by them. And that, for two reasons – 1) He is merciful, and 2) He has made a covenant with their fathers.

This is what Moses' words are now based on, imploring Israel to seek even to the foundations of the world for a comparison to the proposition he will set before them. O Israel, seek to the days...

32 (con't) which were before you, asher hayu lephanekha – “which have been before you.” Israel is sitting before Moses, and before entry into Canaan. They are the same people who had been brought out of bondage and offered Canaan many years earlier.

They are the same who rejected that, and who were thus rejected. They are the same whose fathers had perished, and who were now free from the stain of their guilt. However, Moses asks them to not only consider these times, but of all of the times before their calling, even...

32 (con't) since the day that God created man on the earth, l'min ha'yom asher bara Elohim adam al ha'arets – “from the day which created Elohim man on the earth.” Moses' words now take his audience back to both the first page of Scripture and to the sixth the day of creation, where it is recorded –

“Then God said, ‘Let Us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness; let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, over the birds of the air, and over the cattle, over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creeps on the earth.’ ²⁷ So God created man in His own image; in the image of God He created him; male and female He created them.” Genesis 1:26, 27

The intent of the words is that if one could, they were to inquire of every human that ever existed since God created Adam and his wife. This is the diligence of the search that Moses is calling forth for those he is speaking to. And not only in a certain stream of men from Adam is this call made. Rather...

32 (con't) and ask from one end of heaven to the other, u-l'miqtseh ha'shamayim v'ad qetseh ha'shamayim – “and to from end of the heavens and to end of the heavens.” The translation “heaven” is incorrect. It is not referring to the place of God’s dwelling, but the places of man’s dwelling. The term means from anywhere on the planet – from north, south, east, or west.

Any location where man has been or is. The search is to be made from all men at any time and at any place in all of that time. Moses is speaking in absolute and all-inclusive terms for an answer to the proposition he now puts forth...

32 (con't) whether any great thing like this has happened, hanihyah ka'davar ha'gadol ha'zeh – “has happened like this manner, the great, the this.” What has ever come into being which is comparable to what I am asking you about now? Such a great thing as this! Tell me, please. I want to know...

32 (con't) or anything like it has been heard.

o ha'nishma kamohu – “or has been heard like it.” Not only is the thing which has come to pass great, but there is nothing even comparable to it. Ear has not heard of such a thing. The sentiment is almost identical to what Paul says in 1 Corinthians when referring to the gospel in 1 Corinthians 2:7-9 –

“But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, the hidden wisdom which God ordained before the ages for our glory, ⁸ which none of the rulers of this age knew; for had they known, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.

⁹ But as it is written:

‘Eye has not seen, nor ear heard,

Nor have entered into the heart of man

The things which God has prepared for those who love Him.’”

Paul was not speaking of what lies ahead for the believer. Rather, he – like Moses – was referring to what God had done. God had sent Christ to die for the world in order to call out a people for Himself, even from Israel and even from the Gentiles.

Moses, however, speaks not of the New Covenant in Christ and those who are a part of it, but rather of the Sinaitic Covenant between the Lord and Israel. Of that covenant, and the events which surrounded it, Moses now questions the people.

The questions he will ask are based on the proposition he just set forth – has anything such as this ever happened, at any time since creation, and among any people within creation...

³³ Did any people ever hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, ha'shama am qol Elohim m'daber mitok ha'esh – “Heard people voice of God speaking from midst the fire?” The intent of the words is probably, “Did any people hear the voice of ‘a god.’” In other words, what occurred at Sinai between the people and the Lord is completely unknown.

No other people heard the voice of a god because there is no other god than the Lord God. And, the people of Israel did, in fact, hear the voice of the Lord God out of the midst of the fire.

Looking back on the record from Genesis, one would consider the visitation of God to be one of judgment. The earth was flooded at Noah’s time, and all but eight perished. Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed and only the family of Lot was spared. Nothing is recorded of God speaking. But His visitation was evident.

Later, God appeared to Abram, to make a covenant with him. In the cutting of that covenant, it said a smoking oven and a burning torch passed between the pieces of the animals when the covenant was made with him.

At that time, the Lord spoke to Abram concerning the promise of the land. That event established the baseline of the land covenant with him and his descendants, but more revelation from God would come at Sinai. It is that which Moses is now referring to.

When the Lord appeared to Israel at Mount Sinai, and as was further detailed in verse 12 of this chapter, He spoke out of the midst of the fire. They heard the voice, they were given the words of law, and they saw the terrifying sight of pending judgment which could be anticipated from violating the law. And yet...

³³ (con’t) as you have heard, and live?

ka'asher shamata atah va'yehi – “as has heard you, you, and live?” One can feel the emphasis in Moses’ words, “You heard it – even you – and yet you are still alive! Has such a thing ever happened before? I think not, and yet it has happened to you.”

But as important as the emphasis on the addressee is, there is also the fact that his words are in the second person singular. Moses is speaking to each individual personally, even though it is to Israel as a collective. They are being set in complete contrast to any other people group.

Knowing this, a point of immense importance can be elicited from what Moses is conveying. The people heard the words of the Lord God from the fire and they lived. But the same words are conveyed in what Moses recorded.

They are words of law. The law doesn't change because of the visible manifestation of the Lord or because of its lack. It is the same law that carries the same penalties. This is why the use of the second person singular is so important.

Even if those of Israel die because of the law – and indeed many had died, and many would continue to die because of it – Israel would continue to exist. It is a note of absolute surety for the collective in the face of the expectation of certain disaster for many individuals.

³⁴ Or did God ever try to go and take for Himself a nation from the midst of another nation, o hanissah Elohim lavo laqakhat lo go miqerev go – “Or did try God to come take for Himself nation from midst nation.” As before, this is more likely saying, “Did a god try.”

The Lord God is again being set against the false gods of all other nations. It is a rhetorical question concerning them. Thus, it demands a negative response. No other god has done such a thing. And next, to show the superlative nature of what Yehovah did, Moses speaks on...

³⁴ (con't) by trials,

Moses begins a list of seven descriptors concerning their past. The first is massah, meaning testing or trials. It is a new word, being derived from the word nasah which was just used in the previous clause where it asked, “...did God ever try.”

It is probably referring to the trials of the people prior to Moses' arrival. They were in hard bondage, they were afflicted and tested, and it said in Exodus 2 –

“Then the children of Israel groaned because of the bondage, and they cried out; and their cry came up to God because of the bondage. ²⁴ So God heard their groaning, and God remembered His covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. ²⁵ And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God acknowledged them.” Exodus 2:23-25

³⁴ (con't) by signs,

The othoth, or signs, are things given to represent something else. The Lord gave Moses three signs to give to Israel – the rod which turned into a snake, the leprous hand, and the water which turned to blood. He also gave signs to Pharaoh concerning what would come upon them as the Lord accomplished His work. Next...

³⁴ (con't) by wonders,

u-b'mophtim – “and in wonders.” The mopheth, or wonder, comes from yaphah, or beautiful. Thus, it speaks of that which is conspicuous and amazing. The word “wonders” gives us the right sense. It speaks of the plagues which came upon the land. And yet, it also speaks of the fact that Israel was spared at the same time. While Egypt was destroyed, Israel survived through the plagues – each time, it was a wonder in itself.

³⁴ (con't) by war, by a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, and by great terrors,

These are what the Lord brought upon Egypt and the Egyptians, especially after the Exodus. Each of them speaks of the power and splendor of the Lord through His great workings. He fought the battles, it was his strength that worked against Egypt, it was his reach which devastated them while Israel remained safe, and it was His actions that brought terror upon the foe. All of this was...

³⁴ (con't) according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt

It is in the second person plural, the only plurals in this section. The Lord is the God of the people, and He accomplished His work on their behalf accordingly. And He did it...

³⁴ (con't) before your eyes?

It returns to the second person singular. The collective eyes of the people are spoken of as one person. Israel beheld the marvels wrought by Yehovah his God.

*There is no other God; I know not one
Search in the highest heavens and there will be only Me
Search below the earth until your days are done
And no other god shall you see*

*I alone am the Lord your God
And to Me alone shall you give your thanks and praise
Wherever on this earth you trod
Only Me you shall honor for all your days*

*Trust in Me, and I will give you rest
I will lead you on soft paths, lush and green
In your soul, you shall be forever blessed
Because you have no other gods; to you only I am seen*

II. Consider it in Your Heart (verses 35-40)

³⁵ To you it was shown,

The words are emphatic: atah hareeta – “You, it was shown to you.” Israel, no other, beheld the things which brought them to where they now are. The past is being called to testify that the Lord did these things to Israel, and to no other. This was so...

³⁵ (con’t) that you might know that the LORD Himself is God;

The words are again emphatic: la’daath ki Yehovah hu ha’elohim – “that you might know that Yehovah, He, the God.” As your Bible failed to put an article before the word “God,” please pen it in, and give your translation 1 demerit in the margin.

This is the whole point of the Lord contrasting Himself to the other gods, and it is why the term “a god” should have been used in the previous verses. Any other god is a false god. None has done what Yehovah has done.

Therefore, Yehovah – He – is THE GOD. He did these things so that Israel (it is again in the second person singular) would know that He alone is God. By extension, then, His identification with, protection of, and continued faithfulness to, them is so that all the world will know that He, Yehovah, is THE GOD.

Their faithfulness or unfaithfulness to Him has no bearing on who He is. But His faithfulness to them is for the specific and particular purpose of demonstrating to all that He is God, and...

³⁵ (con't) there is none other besides Him.

ain od milbado – “None other beside Him.” That there is one God can be logically determined without knowing who that God is. The twelve First Principles logically and undeniably demonstrate this. But just because a person can logically think that through, it does not mean that he knows this God except as can be perceived through what He has created.

But, God can – and Has – specifically revealed Himself in various ways. Here in Deuteronomy 4, He has shown us one of those ways. It is through Israel and what He has done for and through, them. Such things have not been seen in any other nation. Israel was to know this, and they were to then understand that there was, in fact, no god besides Him.

³⁶ Out of heaven He let you hear His voice, min ha'shamayim – “from the heavens.” The idea is that the people looked up, but the sounds did not come from any discernible place. They heard the voice, saw the fire, but could not discern the location of where the voice came from. This was so...

³⁶ (con't) that He might instruct you;

Here the word yasar, or instruct, is used. It comes from a primitive root signifying “to chastise.” Thus, it usually gives the sense of punishment for corrective instruction. The terror of hearing the voice of God was intended to do this. The instruction is multi-layered. He instructed them in the law.

He instructed them in seeing that He had no discernable form, and thus He was not to be worshipped through any created thing. He instructed them that He was above them, and yet He was willing to speak to them without destroying them.

He instructed them that He is, because a voice comes from somewhere, and words convey intelligence and meaning. Such things as these, and certainly many more, were provided for their instruction. Further...

³⁶ (con't) on earth He showed you His great fire, and you heard His words out of the midst of the fire.

v'al ha'arets – “and on the earth.” In Exodus 20:18, it said, “Now Mount Sinai was completely in smoke, because the Lord descended upon it in fire.” Fire consumes and fire destroys. The manifestation was to instruct the people that the Lord is a consuming fire and that they were to heed Him.

And yet, it was also to instruct them that He could contain the fire as well. It extended to where He wished it to go, but it could be contained – signifying restraint and even mercy.

Also, the fire extended from the earth to the heavens. It was a demonstration that Yehovah is not limited to one aspect of His creation.

As it says in Genesis 1:1, “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.” He is transcendent over His creation. He can manifest Himself nowhere in it, or He can manifest Himself in one location or another in it, or He can extend Himself between locations – as He did at Sinai.

Despite manifesting Himself, however, the source of the voice could not be determined because it was enveloped within the midst of the fire. All of this was for the instruction of Israel. But it was based upon His faithfulness to those who came before them...

³⁷ And because He loved your fathers, v'takhat ki ahav eth avotekha – “And instead, because He loved your fathers.” The word takhat means “under,” and thus signifying “instead.” The idea is that when one comes under another, he replaces the one he comes under. Thus, this is referring to Egypt.

Israel was in the midst of Egypt, a people greater and more numerous than Israel. But the Lord chose Israel instead of Egypt to display Himself to the world. It is reflective of Paul's words to those at Corinth –

‘For you see your calling, brethren, that not many wise according to the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called.²⁷ But God has chosen the foolish things of the world to put to shame the wise, and God has chosen the weak things of the world to put to shame the things which are mighty;²⁸ and the base things of the world and the things which are despised God has chosen, and the things which are not, to bring to nothing the things that are,²⁹ that no flesh should glory in His presence.³⁰ But of Him you are in Christ Jesus, who became for us wisdom from God—and righteousness and sanctification and redemption—³¹ that, as it is written, ‘He who glories, let him glory in the LORD.’” 1 Corinthians 1:26-31

The Lord chose the underdog to display His glory, but more than that, it was because of His love for their fathers – meaning Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He had made the covenant promises to them, and He would fulfill them through Israel. As Moses says...

³⁷ (con’t) therefore He chose their descendants after them;

v’yivkhar b’zarow akharav – “and He chose in his seed after him.” The word “seed” is singular. The fathers had other descendants at times, but it is this particular seed, in this particular line, that was chosen by God to reveal Himself in this unique way.

Interestingly, a verse parallel to this is seen in Deuteronomy 10:15, but there, the word “seed,” and the pronouns in the verse, are all plural –

“The LORD delighted only in your fathers, to love them; and He chose their descendants after them, you above all peoples, as it is this day.”

The interchange of the singular and plural throughout these verses is complicated, but purposeful. It shows minute specificity which is, sadly, overlooked by almost all translations. Moses is making theological points about the people who are Israel, and about those people of whom Israel is comprised.

In this clause, we see that Israel was specifically chosen. In this selection, the Lord set them apart from all others. This thought was seen in our text verse today where Paul spoke of Israel’s gifts and calling being irrevocable. The same thought is seen later in Deuteronomy –

“Remember the days of old,
Consider the years of many generations.
Ask your father, and he will show you;
Your elders, and they will tell you:

⁸ When the Most High divided their inheritance to the nations,
When He separated the sons of Adam,
He set the boundaries of the peoples
According to the number of the children of Israel.

⁹ For the LORD's portion is His people;
Jacob is the place of His inheritance." Deuteronomy 32:7-9

Samuel repeated this during the time of the judges –

"Then Samuel said to the people, 'Do not fear. You have done all this wickedness; yet do not turn aside from following the LORD, but serve the LORD with all your heart. ²¹ And do not turn aside; for then you would go after empty things which cannot profit or deliver, for they are nothing. ²² For the LORD will not forsake His people, for His great name's sake, because it has pleased the LORD to make you His people.'" 1 Samuel 12:20-22

The same thought is found throughout the Old Testament. The Lord was and remains (according to Paul) unwilling to reject Israel, even when they had forsaken Him. It is His honor that is tied up in the preservation of this people.

Though there is overlap in the Lord's way of dealing with the church, it does not negate His continued faithfulness to Israel. But that is the classic and appalling error made by replacement theologians.

³⁷ (con't) and He brought you out of Egypt with His Presence, with His mighty power,

Here, it literally says, "in His face." Thus, it means He personally went with them and led them out of Egypt. It was also a promise given to Moses in Exodus 33:14, where the Lord said, "My Presence will go with you, and I will give you rest."

Israel did not come out alone, but rather they had the Presence of the Lord with them. They had His great power to guide them, feed them, sustain them, and ensure they would make it to their final destination.

As Exodus 33:14 says that their final destination is being granted their rest, it is a promise that must come to pass. However, Hebrews tells us that Israel did not enter its rest, neither at the time of Joshua, nor at the time of David. As this is so, then the rest which is promised to them – and which is realized in their collectively coming to Jesus – is yet ahead of them, even today.

This is certain because Exodus 33 says I will go with you (plural) and I will give you rest (singular). The Lord will continue to go with the people of Israel, until Israel the people are given rest. At the time of Moses' words now, he says the Lord has been...

³⁸ driving out from before you nations greater and mightier than you, to bring you in, to give you their land as an inheritance, as it is this day.

It is the Lord who accomplished the act. He was the One who gained the victory for Israel over Sihon and Og, the Amorite kings dwelling east of the Jordan.

Despite their great size and strength, they were dispossessed, or disinherited, from the land so that Israel could then possess it as an inheritance. Because of this, all of these great wonders which the Lord had displayed before Israel, Moses again implores them...

³⁹ Therefore know this day, and consider it in your heart,

The Hebrew is more expressive: v'yadata ha'yom va'hashevota el l'vavekha – “and know this day and return it to your heart.” The people are to consider everything that they had seen and then been reminded of, and then they were to take that knowledge and return it to their heart.

As always, the heart in the Bible is the seat of reasoning and understanding. Therefore, it is like our saying, “Think it through and then tuck it away in your mind.” They were to never forget this. By returning it to their heart, they could contemplate it continuously. So, Israel was to do with the knowledge...

³⁹ (con't) that the LORD Himself is God

The same emphatic form is brought forth again: ki Yehovah, hu, ha'elohim – “for Yehovah, He, the God.” Again, there is an article before “God.” The emphatic “He,” along with the highlighted nature of Yehovah being “the God,” is intended to reveal His uniqueness. Be sure to put the article before God in your Bible and make a 1 demerit margin note.

The uniqueness of Yehovah continues to be highlighted, again, in the next clause as He is THE God...

³⁹ (con't) in heaven above and on the earth beneath;

ba'shamayim mi'maal v'al ha'arets mi'takhat – “in the heavens from above and on the earth from under.” It is an important statement to include. In verse 36, it said that the Lord spoke out of the heavens, and that on the earth He showed His great fire. He is not limited to any part of creation.

He fills any and all of creation without distinction. And He can manifest Himself in any way He chooses, such as at Sinai. If someone said the stars from the heavens were gods, that would be false. If someone said the volcanoes from the earth were gods, that would be false.

Such things will be seen as we progress through Scripture, but Israel is being instructed now that those things are false. And yet, they will be the downfall of Israel numerous times because they failed to pay heed to what Moses is now telling them. There is one God and...

³⁹ (con't) there is no other.

ain od – “no other.” The word od signifies continuance or going around. It is widely translated as again, more, yet, still, else, and so on. There was none, there are none still, and none will be coming around. Yehovah is God and He alone...

⁴⁰ You shall therefore keep His statutes and His commandments which I command you today,

This verse returns to the opening verse of the chapter, substantially repeating it, but it has now been supported with the reason it is to be so from these previous verses –

“Now, O Israel, listen to the statutes and the judgments which I teach you to observe, that you may live, and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers is giving you.” Deuteronomy 4:1

Moses has methodically given precise reasons why they are to keep the Lord’s law. These reasons were summed up with the thought that Yehovah is God, and He alone. As this is so, then He is to be obeyed as such.

He has chosen His people, He has revealed Himself to them, He has made them promises in the land they are going to enter, He has given them warnings for disobedience, and Moses has shown that what has occurred is unique in all of the history of the world. God has come to be among a particular people, and they are thus expected to be obedient to His law. In this, Moses says...

⁴⁰ (con't) that it may go well with you and with your children after you,

The word translated as “that” is maan. It speaks of a purpose or intent. Moses shows that obedience to His commands isn’t simply an authoritarian edict by a tyrant, but that it will serve a good and noble purpose, which is that it will go yataav, or pleasing, for them.

The Lord intends that the people will prosper if they are attentive to Him and if they do as He instructs. The implication is that if they are not obedient, things will go contrary to them, and they will suffer a self-inflicted wound in the process.

Moses then explains what “go well with you and your children after you” means by saying...

40 (fin) and that you may prolong your days in the land which the LORD your God is giving you for all time.”

The people are, as we have seen before, tied to the land – meaning Canaan. By observing what the Lord commands, they will continue in the land. The implication is that if they do not, then they will be taken out of the land. It doesn’t need to be said to be understood.

Despite that, however, Moses finishes the section with the words kal ha’yamim, or “all the days.” There is no qualifier to the land grant. It is given to Israel forever. The qualifier is not in whether the land is theirs, but whether they can live in it. It is the Lord who determines if the agreement is sufficiently met by Israel.

When Israel is obedient, they may live in the land. When Israel is disobedient, they may not live in the land. Either way, the land is the Lord’s, and He has given it to Israel as a possession forever.

What has been seen, and what will continue to be seen, is that the law actually points to its own replacement. Israel was never obedient to the law, and they retained the land for an extended period of time before they were finally exiled.

Israel was returned to the land according to the Lord’s calculations of giving the land rest during Israel’s exile – seventy years. They returned and remained disobedient to the Lord throughout that time as well. Eventually, Christ came and fulfilled the law – an act intended to give life to Israel, but they rejected that and were exiled again.

They have been returned again, and they are promised seven more years to find an end to the Mosaic Covenant in Christ. The time of that final seven years is not far off. Eventually, it will come. To be obedient to the laws laid out here by Moses means to be obedient to them all.

We are progressing through Deuteronomy and we will see how this will be possible for them. Suffice it to say that their observance of the law in order to be right with God has nothing to do with their own efforts, but in trusting the Lord who gave the law in the first place.

Until that happens, the prospect of things going well for them and prolonging their days in the land cannot come to pass. But it will. Some wonderful day after much hardship and suffering, it will come to pass. For those of us who have understood what Israel missed, we have a marvelous hope set before us.

The Lord is coming for His people to deliver them from what lies ahead. He has a home prepared for His people, and the rest which we entered when we received Jesus will be realized in its fullness. It is a blessed hope. If it is something you have not yet received, you can do it today, even right now...

Closing Verse: *“Thus says the LORD, the King of Israel,
And his Redeemer, the LORD of hosts:*

‘I am the First and I am the Last;

Besides Me there is no God.

⁷And who can proclaim as I do?

Then let him declare it and set it in order for Me,

Since I appointed the ancient people.

And the things that are coming and shall come,

Let them show these to them.

⁸Do not fear, nor be afraid;

Have I not told you from that time, and declared it?

You are My witnesses.

Is there a God besides Me?

Indeed there is no other Rock;

I know not one.” Isaiah 44:6-8

Next Week: Deuteronomy 4:41-49 Places of safety for anyone, including Steve, Tom, or even Gordon... (On the East Side of the Jordan) (18th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

There Is No Other

For ask now concerning the days that are past
Which were before you, since the day that God created man on the earth by His spoken word

And ask from one end of heaven to the other
Whether any great thing like this has happened
-----or anything like it has been heard

Did any people ever hear
The voice of God (If so, please their name to me give)
Speaking out of the midst of the fire
As you have heard, and live?

Or did God ever try to go and take for Himself a nation
From the midst of another nation, by trials, by signs, by wonders
-----please to me apprise
By war, by a mighty hand and an outstretched arm
-----and by great terrors
According to all that the LORD your God did for you
-----in Egypt before your eyes?

To you it was shown, that you might know – you and not another
That the LORD Himself is God; there is besides Him none other

Out of heaven He let you hear His voice
That He might instruct you; to obedience you should aspire
On earth He showed you His great fire, and you heard His words
Out of the midst of the fire

And because He loved your fathers
Therefore He chose their descendants after them
And He brought you out of Egypt with His Presence
With His mighty power He brought Egypt mayhem

Driving out from before you nations
Greater and mightier than you
To bring you in, to give you their land as an inheritance
As it is this day; His word is faithful and true

Therefore know this day, and consider it in your heart
That the LORD Himself is God
In heaven above and on the earth beneath
There is no other; anything else is a fraud

You shall therefore keep His statutes and His commandments
Which I command you today, that it may go well with you
-----all will be sublime
And with your children after you, and that you
-----may prolong your days
In the land which the LORD your God is giving you for all time

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 4:41-49 (On the East Side of the Jordan)

Four times in today's nine verses the east side of the Jordan is mentioned, and each time it is given a description of the side to ensure we understand that it is referring to the east side. The east side is outside of the inheritance, and yet there is hope throughout the verses.

In the first three verses, it speaks of the cities of refuge – a clear allusion to Christ as we saw when the main passage of the cities of refuge was analyzed in Numbers 35. There is a place for those who had remained outside of the inheritance to go in order to be safe. What a wonderful promise that is.

And in the last six verses, the victories of Israel's recent past are again highlighted, and once again give minute detail concerning the layout of the land. Yes, it is all east of the Jordan, but the Jordan is there, and the Land of Promise lays on the other side. And yet, the law is highlighted at the beginning of those six verses. Why would the Lord structure these passages the way He has?

Text Verse: "Is the law then against the promises of God? Certainly not! For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law. ²² But the Scripture has confined all under sin, that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. ²³ But before faith came, we were kept under guard by the law, kept for the faith which would afterward be revealed. ²⁴ Therefore the law was our tutor to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. ²⁵ But after faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor." Galatians 3:21-25

Every single word of the word has meaning. Every verse is perfectly placed. Every passage has been carefully laid out through the wisdom of God. And for sure – nothing said in this word is superfluous. We may not understand why things are the way they are, but that is what study is for.

That is what meditating on the word of God is for. And, that is what prayer concerning the word is for. If we study and meditate on the word and we still don't understand what we are being told, we shouldn't give up. Rather, we should come to the Lord with our desires.

He expects us to do our part, but He also really wants the word revealed. Paul says the law was a tutor to bring us to Christ. That is true in several ways. First, it is a steppingstone in the redemptive plan; teaching us about the nature of God – His perfection.

Secondly, it is given to show us how far we fall short of the standard. As Paul says, it is so that sin through the commandment might become exceedingly sinful. These, and other such things are obvious, and they are explicitly stated in the New Testament.

However, the law is also given to show us types and pictures of other things. These can then help us to understand why certain passages are repeated, or why they are positioned in seemingly incorrect locations. In understanding the typological pictures, we find out that they are not. And, in understanding those pictures, we can also discern how the law is a tutor to bring us to Christ.

I could be wrong, but I don't think it's going to be the overt nature of the law which is going to lead Israel to the Lord. I think it is the typological pictures that will. Israel has had the law and the prophets for 2000 years, and they have failed to come to Christ.

Someday, they will see the typology back here in the Old Testament, maybe even in just the first five books of Moses, and it will suddenly dawn on them that the Lord has been there revealing Himself to them all along. I could be completely wrong, but it is what seems likely to me.

The pictures fill in what can't be seen on the surface. Such marvelous truths as this are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Three Cities of Refuge (verses 41-43)

So far, Deuteronomy has been a long recounting of what occurred, from the time after leaving Sinai until the point where Israel is presently at. Moses also reminded the people here in Chapter 4 of what they beheld at the giving of the Ten Commandments, and which established them as the Lord's covenant people at that time.

Interspersed into all of that have been exhortations and instructions concerning the statutes and judgments which have been taught, and which will be repeated and expanded upon in the chapters ahead. With all of this introductory information now recorded, and before Moses returns to the giving of the Ten Commandments in Chapter 5, this short section is carefully placed here.

The land east of Jordan has been acquired, the instruction for those who will dwell in this land concerning the conquest of Canaan have been given, and the surety that Moses will die outside of the promise has been settled. With all of that recorded, an aspect of the law which has already been given must now be settled. This then, explains the reason for the placement of this passage here. The last words of the last passage we reviewed last week said –

“You shall therefore keep His statutes and His commandments which I command you today, that it may go well with you and with your children after you, and that you may prolong your days in the land which the LORD your God is giving you for all time.” Deuteronomy 4:40

Because the land is subdued, and what lies ahead concerns the land of Canaan, this point of law must be settled now. If it were not so, then Moses could be accused of failing to keep the very statutes and judgments of law which he has exhorted Israel to keep.

But, being prompt and obedient to his duties, Moses does what the law expects him to do. That is introduced with the words of verse 41...

⁴¹ Then Moses set apart three cities az yabdil Mosheh shalosh arim – “At that time set apart Moses three cities.” The verse begins with az, a demonstrative adverb which gives the sense of, “At that time.” It indicates that this passage is placed here, between two separate and independent dialogues, to complete the necessary details of law in accord with the word of the Lord. That was first stated in Numbers 35:9-16 –

“Then the LORD spoke to Moses, saying, ¹⁰ ‘Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: ‘When you cross the Jordan into the land of Canaan, ¹¹ then you shall appoint cities to be cities of refuge for you, that the manslayer who kills any person accidentally may flee there. ¹² They shall be cities of refuge for you from the avenger, that the manslayer may not die until he stands before the congregation in judgment. ¹³ And of the cities which you give, you shall have six cities of refuge. ¹⁴ You shall appoint three cities on this side of the Jordan, and three cities you shall appoint in the land of Canaan, which will be cities of refuge. ¹⁵ These six cities shall be for refuge for the children of Israel, for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them, that anyone who kills a person accidentally may flee there.’”

In Moses' words, the verb "set apart" is in the imperfect tense. Thus, it has the sense of, "Moses began to set apart three cities." The reason is certainly because the land grant is still conditional. It will only belong to these tribes "if" they perform according to Moses' words of Numbers 32 (and as repeated in Chapter 3) –

"If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben cross over the Jordan with you, every man armed for battle before the LORD, and the land is subdued before you, then you shall give them the land of Gilead as a possession. ³⁰ But if they do not cross over armed with you, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan." Numbers 32:29, 30

If they perform according to the word, these cities will be formally consecrated at that time. What is said here, and understanding all it entails, is actually more important than may seem. If everything concerning the designation of these cities of refuge isn't taken properly, it appears that there is an error in the word.

Indeed, this is how Cambridge views it. Without directly citing their woefully incoherent argument, they say that what is said in Numbers 35, here, in Deuteronomy 19, and in Joshua 20 demonstrates that some various obscure people compiled the accounts.

They say this because Moses could not have known that three cities would be designated on the other side of the Jordan as is indicated in Deuteronomy 19 –

"When the LORD your God has cut off the nations whose land the LORD your God is giving you, and you dispossess them and dwell in their cities and in their houses, ² you shall separate three cities for yourself in the midst of your land which the LORD your God is giving you to possess. ³ You shall prepare roads for yourself, and divide into three parts the territory of your land which the LORD your God is giving you to inherit, that any manslayer may flee there."

-Deuteronomy 19:1-3

But that fact was already stated by the Lord in Numbers 35. The Lord told Moses the exact details of all of the borders of Canaan in Numbers 34. The claim of Cambridge implies that the Lord, and what He said, cannot actually be the word of the all-knowing Lord. Cambridge then says that the actual designation of these cities didn't occur until Joshua 20, where it says –

“The LORD also spoke to Joshua, saying, ² ‘Speak to the children of Israel, saying: ‘Appoint for yourselves cities of refuge, of which I spoke to you through Moses.’” Joshua 20:1, 2

A few verses later, it then says –

“So they appointed Kedesh in Galilee, in the mountains of Naphtali, Shechem in the mountains of Ephraim, and Kirjath Arba (which is Hebron) in the mountains of Judah. ⁸ And on the other side of the Jordan, by Jericho eastward, they assigned Bezer in the wilderness on the plain, from the tribe of Reuben, Ramoth in Gilead, from the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan, from the tribe of Manasseh. ⁹ These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel and for the stranger who dwelt among them, that whoever killed a person accidentally might flee there, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood until he stood before the congregation.” Joshua 20:7-9

In these accounts, Cambridge makes several points to justify their reasoning. It is that Numbers 35 states it (1) far more elaborately, (2) in a different vocabulary, and (3) with some differences of substance. And that in Joshua 20 this is stated again, but with some different terms. Their conclusion then is –

“This is the only fair interpretation; if the law Deuteronomy 19:1 ff. had meant three cities in W. Palestine in addition to the three already set apart by Moses on the E. of Jordan, it would surely have alluded to the latter. The law was obviously made in consequence of the institution of the single sanctuary and without regard to any historical tradition of what Moses or Joshua had done.” Dolts at Cambridge

First, the difference in vocabulary is exactly why these accounts are written where they are and as they are. Secondly, the form of the verb given by Moses in this verse which is in the imperfect tense is exactly why it is so.

Numbers 35 gave the law for designating the cities of refuge. Deuteronomy 4 obediently designates the three cities in accord with that word. Deuteronomy 19 is Moses’ reiteration that the law for cities of refuge must also be adhered to when the other tribes cross into and subdue Canaan. And Joshua 20 finalizes that law for both sides of the Jordan.

Moses “began” to appoint the cities. But the appointment is conditional based on these tribes east of the Jordan helping the tribes west of the Jordan. Until that happens, the appointment is not settled.

Further, Moses says to badal, or separate, these cities for this purpose. It is simply an acknowledgement that these cities will, in fact, be the ones given for the set purpose. That same word is used by Moses in Deuteronomy 19 concerning the other three cities west of Jordan.

Then, in Joshua 20:2 the Lord says to nathan, or give, the cities of refuge to the tribes. This is the formal grant of the cities to Israel for the set purpose of refuge. In Joshua 20:7, it then uses the word qadash – to set apart or consecrate. Once the cities were given, they were then consecrated for the purpose.

Finally, in Joshua 20:9, a word used only once in Scripture, muadah, is seen. It signifies “to appoint,” and it is the final note concerning the obedience of the command of the Lord which began all the way back in Numbers 35.

The very thing that Cambridge uses to claim the words of Deuteronomy are a hodgepodge of later scribal insertions, coming hundreds of years after the account, is the thing that fully supports that it is one unified whole which was received by Moses and then Joshua at the times the Bible carefully records what occurred.

All of this detail, which took several hours for me to compile, is so that you can be certain of the fact that the word is reliable, without error, and it is exactly what it claims to be – the word of God. Concerning the three cities now being discussed, Moses says...

^{41 (con't)} on this side of the Jordan,

b'ever ha'yarden – “in side the Jordan.” It should not say, “this,” but rather “on the side of the Jordan.” Where the account is written is irrelevant. The word always is in relation to Canaan, regardless of which side is being spoken of. In order to then define which side is referred to, Moses then says...

^{41 (con't)} toward the rising of the sun, mizrekah shamesh – “toward rising sun.” This explains what was lacking in the previous clause. The word mizrakh signifies the place of the rising of the sun. It comes from zarakh, which means “to rise” or “come forth.” That, in turn, comes from a root signifying “to shoot forth beams.” Thus, it speaks of the place from which the sun rises, and therefore the east.

It is east of the Jordan that these cities are now first designated for a particular and important purpose. It is so...

⁴² that the manslayer might flee there,

lanu shamah rotseakh – “That might flee there the manslayer.” As described in detail in Numbers 35, the word is ratsakh. It signifies the unsanctioned taking of a human life – whether it is intentional or unintentional. Whichever it is, it makes no difference. If the death was unsanctioned killing, the avenger of blood had the right – and indeed the responsibility – to take the life of the slayer.

However, the Lord determined that if the slaying was unintentional, the slayer could flee to one of these cities and be given protection from the avenger of blood. If he was a true murderer, or even if he was innocent, but he didn’t flee to one of these cities, his life was to be taken by the avenger. The cities then were for a person...

⁴² (cont) who kills his neighbor unintentionally,

The Hebrew reads, “who slays another without knowing.” In Numbers 35, a different word was used, signifying a mistake, or in ignorance. Either way, both accounts signify that he did not realize that his actions would lead to the death of another person.

He may have been building a brick wall and accidentally dropped a brick on another person’s head (making him dead). He may have been playing baseball, hit the ball, broke the bat, and the broken bat flew into the head of someone watching from the sidelines. And so on.

It is an unintentional slaying of another human, but it was not sanctioned killing – such as in war, a judicial execution, and so on. Despite being unintentional, he is a slayer and the avenger had the right and responsibility to then take his life. The reason for the killing is irrelevant, as is seen in the next words...

⁴² (cont) without having hated him in time past,

The Hebrew here contains an idiomatic expression, mi’temol shilshom – “yesterday, three days since.” It is a way of saying “before,” or “in the past.”

There was no animosity toward the person at any time. They could have been complete strangers or even good friends. Whatever the case, the person slayed another human without it being legally sanctioned. In this, he had only one choice open to him, a provision granted by the Lord for his protection...

⁴² (cont) and that by fleeing to one of these cities he might live:

Here, the Hebrew is very specific, akhat min he'arim ha'el – “one from the cities the these.” He could flee to any one of these cities, but it had to be one of them. He could not flee to just any city and take up residence.

If he were equal distance between two of them, he could choose which one he would go to. And he would need to choose well because he could, ostensibly, be spending the rest of his life within the walls of that city. And those cities were...

⁴³ Bezer

All three cities to be named are introduced into the Bible in this verse. The first is Betser. The name comes from batsar, meaning to enclose or make inaccessible, and so it means “Fortress,” or “Defense.” However, it is identical to the word betser, which means “precious ore.” That is seen only in Job 22 –

“Then you will lay your gold in the dust,
And the gold of Ophir among the stones of the brooks.
²⁵ Yes, the Almighty will be your gold
And your precious silver.” Job 22:24, 25

The idea is that the ore is what people use as a defense or a protection, but the person would put away this protection and trust in the Lord as his gold – meaning his protection – instead.

⁴³ (con't) in the wilderness on the plateau for the Reubenites,

More correctly, it reads, “in the wilderness, in the land of the plain.” The midbar, or wilderness, is a place of God’s grace and of closeness to God, but it is also a place of testing. Next, ha'mishor, or “the plain,” is a word which signifies a level place. Thus, it figuratively speaks of uprightness. It is “the place of uprightness.” Reuben means, “See, a Son.”

43 (con't) Ramoth

Ramoth comes from rum, meaning “high” or “exalted.” Thus, it signifies “Heights,” or “Lofty Place.”

43 (con't) in Gilead for the Gadites,

Gilead is prefixed by an article, and it means, “The Perpetual Fountain.” Gad means, “Troop,” or “Fortune.” It signifies “a fortune for which a troublesome, invasive effort is made” (Abarim).

43 (con't) and Golan

Golan comes from golah, meaning “Exile.” The NET Bible also defines it as “Their captivity: Their Rejoicing.”

43 (con't) in Bashan for the Manassites.

The Bashan means something like “The Place of Fertile Soil.” Manasseh means “He shall Forget.”

These are the three cities of refuge, and they each are beautifully named to highlight the purpose of the city. In turn, each city highlights the One who these cities represent.

Bezer – The manslayer can run to the Defense, laying aside his own “gold” or protection, coming to the One who will protect him with Himself. This is in the place where God’s grace is displayed, and it is the place of the uprightness. As Paul says, “For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes” (Romans 10:4). It is the state that one possesses when he comes to Christ.

That is found in the territory of Reuben, or “See, a Son.” It refers then to the Defense of Christ, God’s grace, and it is in a place of uprightness.

Ramoth – The manslayer can run to the Lofty Place. Though his actions deserve death, in Christ, God is willing to accept the one who comes to Him through Christ. As Peter says, “Therefore humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time” (1 Peter 5:6).

In this, the person comes to The Perpetual Fountain and is granted eternal life. Being in the land of Gad, it signifies a fortune for which a troublesome, invasive effort is made. In other words, it acknowledges the trials Christ went through in order to bring him to this fortunate spot of favor.

Golan – The person who flees into exile is the freest person of all if it is captivity in Christ. As Paul says, “...bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ” (2 Corinthians 10:5). This is said to be in the Bashan, or “The Place of Fertile Soil.”

This then speaks of the fertile soil of the word of God. As Paul says, “So then faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God” (Romans 10:17). This is in the land of Manasseh, or “He Shall Forget,” signifying that Christ shall forget the past deeds of the person who has come to Him. He is secure in the place of refuge, meaning Christ.

Without expanding on his thoughts at all, Adam Clarke curiously tossed out the following concerning these cities –

“As the cities of refuge are generally understood to be types of the salvation provided by Christ for sinners; so their names have been thought to express some attribute of the Redeemer of mankind.” Adam Clarke

A simple study of the words shows that what Adam Clarke surmised is exactly what the Lord is conveying to us in these three remarkable locations.

*Where can I go to save my life?
How can I get free from what I have done?
I killed a man, but not by strife
In innocence have I slain this one*

*But the avenger of blood waits for me
To take my life for what I have done
Is there a place to where I can flee?
Is there a place to where I can run?*

*Who will save me from what has come about?
Who can rescue me from what I have done?
Is there a chance for me? How will it come about?
Lord, my only hope is that to You I run*

II. After They Came out of Egypt (verses 44-49)

⁴⁴ Now this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel.

v'zot ha'torah asher sham Moseh liphne bene Yisrael – “And this, the Torah, which set Moses before the sons of Israel.”

The first main discourse of Deuteronomy – that going from verse 1:1 until verse 4:40 – is complete. As there was an introductory statement which led into the first discourse, so there is now one which leads into the second.

In other words, what is said here looks forward to Chapter 5. It is an anticipatory statement concerning the law that Moses will speak out to the people. He then next further defines what that means...

⁴⁵ These are the testimonies, the statutes, and the judgments

The Torah, or law, is subdivided by Moses into several categories which are variously translated. Using the NKJV, as I do for all sermons, this is the breakdown of the Torah that Moses uses –

- The testimonies – ha'edot. It is the word edah, a witness or testimony, coming from the word ed, meaning a witness or testimony. One could think of something set out for the well-being of God's people.
- The statutes – ha'khuqim. It is the word khoq. It signifies something prescribed or owed, and thus a statute. It comes from khaqq, which means to cut, inscribe, or decree. One could think of a written precept that is to be obeyed.
- The judgments – ha'mishpatim. It is the word mishpat; a judgment, determination, verdict, etc. It comes from shapat, meaning to judge or govern. A judge will put down a ruling which is legal and is to be obeyed. The Lord is the ultimate Judge. His rulings are to be followed.

These divisions of law, which together form the Torah, or law, are those...

^{45 (con't)} which Moses spoke to the children of Israel after they came out of Egypt,

The Hebrew says, b'tsetam mi'mitsraim, "in their coming out from Egypt." It speaks of the entire time of their coming out, even until the present time. Egypt means "double distress." They were brought out of that and to Sinai. The Lord spoke out some of these words at Sinai – such as the giving of the Ten Commandments, which will be seen in the next chapter.

However, there are differences which will be seen in the Ten Commandments between Exodus 20 and Deuteronomy 5. There are other words of law which have not been spoken before – such as the details of what to do with the annual tithes in Chapter 14.

Therefore, the words, "in their coming out from Egypt," are an all-inclusive statement which brings them up to the moment in which Moses is now speaking. All of this is the Torah, or law, which Moses revisits and expands upon now...

⁴⁶ on this side of the Jordan, b'ever ha'yarden – "In side the Jordan." It is the same phrase as verse 41. It is an expression which requires further explanation, and so Moses next provides it...

⁴⁶ (con't) in the valley opposite Beth Peor,

The word for "valley" here is gai. It comes from gevah, meaning exaltation. Figuratively, at times, it speaks of arrogance or pride. That comes from gaah, exaltation or triumph.

⁴⁶ (con't) in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon,

This goes back to Numbers 21 and the repeated story in Deuteronomy 2. Sihon means "Tempestuous" or "Warrior." Amorite comes from amar, meaning to utter or say. Therefore, the name signifies being spoken of, and thus "Renowned."

Also, the word kheshvon, comes from khashav. It is a word which signifies to consider, calculate, or devise. Therefore, it signifies an explanation of things, or "Intelligence." This is the land where they are now, and what occurs here is included in the thought of the previous verse – "in their coming out from Egypt."

They have come out of Egypt, but they have not yet entered into the promise. In this location where they are, we then read...

⁴⁶ (con't) whom Moses and the children of Israel defeated

The defeat of the kings on the east side of the Jordan has been highlighted several times already. It is a statement surely given to bolster the confidence of those who will cross over and enter into the promise. These great foes were defeated, and so how much more will the Lord defeat the foes Israel would face once they entered into the Promise.

Although this is speaking of Israel collectively, the truth applies to any who have come to Him. We have had enemies we faced before coming to Christ, and Christ defeated them. How much more then should we trust that in our life in Christ, He will defeat any and all foes who come our way!

The repetition for Moses is a call to us as well. He has defeated sin and the power of the devil in our lives. How much more will He defeat death, though it may come, through the power of His own resurrection. We are to be confident in our walk with the Lord, trusting Him from beginning to end. For now, Moses goes on...

⁴⁶ (con't) after they came out of Egypt.

It is the same expression used in the previous verse, b'tsetam mi'mitsraim, "in their coming out from Egypt." This shows that the entire process of coming out is what is spoken of here. It is an ongoing statement which has even now not been fully realized.

⁴⁷ And they took possession of his land and the land of Og king of Bashan, Sihon is mentioned first in this because it is the land taken from him in which Israel is currently dwelling. He was also the first king defeated, followed by Og. It is in this land that they wait out their final moments, receiving the words of Moses and looking forward to their long-awaited entrance into Canaan.

As was seen in Numbers and Deuteronomy, Og comes from uggah, which is a round baked cake. That comes from ug, to bake. The Bashan signifies "The Place of Fertile Soil." Together, these two are jointly described as...

⁴⁷ (con't) two kings of the Amorites, shene malke ha'emori – "two kings of the Amorite." In verse 46 and here the word Amorite is singular. It speaks of the people group as a whole. Each king had his own sphere of rule, but they ruled over the same ethnic group of people.

⁴⁷ (con't) who were on this side of the Jordan,

It is the same phrase already seen three times in our few verses today. It speaks of a side of the Jordan without any particular distinction of which side. The indicator of which side is affixed by the subsequent clause. Which is, as closely stated in verse 41...

⁴⁷ (con't) toward the rising of the sun,

Place of rising sun, meaning “eastward.” The repetition of these verses throughout the past chapters, and even in this chapter, is given for specificity, it is given for a reminder of the past, it is given for encouragement in the future, and it is given as a testimony that what is written actually happened.

It occurred at a specific place, at a particular point in time, and it is in a location that was settled based on the events which preceded what is being conveyed now. All of the repetition is an important note of surety to Israel, and to the reader of Scripture, and yet, Cambridge flippantly states the following –

“This part of Deuteronomy 4:46 and Deuteronomy 4:47 are [Sic], of course, superfluous after chs. 2 and 3.” Cambridge

Can you imagine calling a part of the word of God “superfluous,” as if God had wasted His breath in specifically detailing everything He has given us in His word? The arrogance of such an attitude is astonishing.

At times, I will say during a sermon something like, “The words here seem almost superfluous,” and then I go on and explain why they are not. To simply state that it is so without any qualification is a damnable offense against the word, and thus against the One who gave us this wonderful treasure.

But enough of that for now. Moses continues with his description of the land which was previously possessed by these two kings...

⁴⁸ from Aroer, which is on the bank of the River Arnon,

As has been seen, Aroer means “Stripped,” “Bare,” or “Naked.” The word translated as “bank” is saphah. It signifies a border as in a lip, edge, or bank like in the lip of a river, a garment, the mouth, etc. Thus, it also means speech, language, etc, because that is where language proceeds from.

The noun meaning “river,” is nakhal, and it implies a wadi which flows during the times of rain. The word is from the verb nakhal which speaks of obtaining as an inheritance or possession. And, Arnon means “Rejoicing.” This large expanse of land then extends...

48 (con’t) even to Mount Sion (that is, Hermon),

This is the only time that name Mount Sion is used in the Bible, but it is explained as being Hermon. The name Sion may be a shortening of the name Sirion which was given in Chapter 3, but it is said to come from the word siy, which means “loftiness.” That comes from nasa, to lift up, or carry. Hermon means “Sacred.”

These borders describe the southernmost and northernmost areas of the land that Israel had conquered. This land is then further described...

49 and all the plain on the east side of the Jordan

The word aravah, translated as “plain,” goes back to a word signifying a pledge, and thus it speaks of a guarantee. This plain is again described as being on the east side of the Jordan and it stretches...

49 (con’t) as far as the Sea of the Arabah,

It is the same word, aravah, which was just translated as “plain” in the previous clause. This is why some translations will call the plain “the plain of the Arabah,” or some will call the sea “the sea of the plain.” This is translator’s preference and one shouldn’t get confused by any reading because of this. Finally, we come to...

49 (fin) below the slopes of Pisgah.

The word here translated as slopes was first seen in Chapter 3. It comes from a word signifying a foundation or bed. That then comes from a root meaning an outpouring. Therefore, it means either springs or slopes – both of which pour out. As ha’pisgah or the Pisgah is a mountain with a cleft in it, it probably means “slopes.”

The words of these six verses first spoke of the Torah, or law, and all of its testimonies, statutes, and judgments – spoken out by Moses. Moses means, “He who draws out.” Here as is seen elsewhere, he pictures Christ. It is He who draws out the will of the Lord and who embodies that will.

There is the note that this is spoken in the coming out of Israel from Egypt. Egypt, or “double distress,” speaks of the land where man lives. He is born in sin, and he cannot redeem himself. Thus, he is in double distress.

The words are ongoing and speak of the process of bringing Israel out. It is not “after” they came out of Egypt, but “in their coming out.” Christ has accomplished His work, but Israel never accepted it, and so the narrative is ongoing.

Hence, there is the continued stress – saying it again and again in different ways – that they are still on the eastern side of the Jordan, meaning the Descender – which pictures Christ. They are in the gai, or valley opposite Beth Peor, or the House of the Opening.

Peor comes from paar which is used in Isaiah 5 when speaking of Sheol, the pit of death, opening its mouth beyond measure to receive those who reject the Lord.

When under law – whether trusting in the law for righteousness, or in rejecting the law and satisfying one’s own desires – the inevitable outcome is death.

It is a reminder of their previous failure of falling into idolatry. But being in the gai, or valley opposite it, this speaks of the triumph over that. They are in this place of exaltation, right on the border of the Jordan or Descender, picturing Christ. It is a way of showing that they can go in either direction – toward Beth Peor, or toward the Jordan and into the promise.

It then noted that this is the land of Sihon and Og with all of the specificity connected to their names – meaning their titles and the land which they ruled. But it notes that they were defeated, again using the term “in their coming out of Egypt.”

Previous sermons have shown that they pictured the Antichrist and the False Prophet. The foes are defeated – these two great kings of the Renowned. After mentioning them, the land was again described. Aroer means, “Stripped,” “Bare,” or “Naked. It is what Hebrews refers to –

“For the word of God is living and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the division of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. ¹³ And there is no creature hidden from His sight, but all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him to whom we must give account.” Hebrews 4:12, 13

Aroer is said to be on the sephat, or lip, of the nakhal, or River, Arnon – signifying the inheritance of Rejoicing. This land then extends all the way from there to Sion, or Loftiness, also known as Hermon, or Sacred Mountain – a picture of heaven.

After noting that entire expanse, it then mentioned ha'aravah, or the plain, and the sea of ha'aravah. The word, as we saw, comes from a root signifying a pledge, or guarantee.

The whole area – from the inheritance of rejoicing, all the way to heaven itself, as well as the plain, is given as a picture of what is offered to Israel. The same word aravon, which is the root of aravah, is also found in the New Testament – arrabon. It is used to describe the pledge or guarantee when one believes in Christ.

In Paul's letter to the Ephesians, one can see a summary of what Moses is relaying to us now in just two verses –

“In Him you also trusted, after you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also, having believed, you were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, ¹⁴ who is the guarantee of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, to the praise of His glory.” Ephesians 1:13, 14

There is the inheritance, there is the guarantee, there is the praise, there is the rejoicing, there is the attainment of the heavenly place. And all of this is summed up with the final words, “below the slopes of Pisgah.” It is the Outpouring of the Cleft.

It is the spot where in Numbers 21 it was said to look down on the wasteland. That would be to the east. In Deuteronomy 34, it is where Moses will ascend to before he dies in order to look to the west – towards Jericho. The wasteland signifies what is past, Jericho and the Land of Promise signify what is ahead.

It is an offering to Israel to speak the word, receive the inheritance, obtain the guarantee, and enter the promise. But one must pass through Christ to do so. They can look back to the past or forward to the promise.

This is what is being presented here as an introductory passage which will reiterate the law – the impossible body of requirements that will be set before Israel. That body of law must die outside of the promise, and the inheritance must be received by faith.

The enemies are defeated, access to the promise is right there awaiting the people, the cities of refuge have all been named, and they all point to Christ. The layout of the land speaks of Christ, of the inheritance, and of the promise, but the law must first be repeated to the people once again.

The reason for this is that the law itself will call out for its own ending. It did not get them into the promise the first time, and it cannot get them into it the next time.

Having said that, this is all typology. Israel will, in fact, enter Canaan. And when they do, they will be under law. That will continue for the next 1400 years until Christ comes and completes His work.

The typology is given to show us Christ and His work, but the actual narrative is given to show us true history of what occurred with Israel under the time of the law.

We can't miss this particular point. The failings of Israel under the law are as important in revealing Christ as are the pictures of Christ within the law. They could not have known these things at that time, because the law was to be a tutor to the world of what the pictures only anticipate.

However, since Christ's coming, these things are known, and they are explained in the word. The problem is that Israel rejected Christ, and they rejected that word. Thus, the very lives these people lived have become a picture of their own exile, punishment, and future reconciliation.

I think this is probably why the same names, places, and descriptions have been given so many times in Numbers and in Deuteronomy. It is to alert them to inspect the words, see the patterns, and then respond to what is presented.

And though we are not Israel, we are all expected to do the same. The word – this beautiful self-confirming word – has been given to show us again, and again, and yet again, that God has sent the Messiah. He has sent Christ. And we are under obligation to respond to that.

Let us be responsible and act accordingly, calling out to Jesus, leaving the barren wasteland of our past existence, and accepting the inheritance which is pictured in our passage today. Jesus Christ is our place of refuge, and He is the One who will guard us as His possession until the day He brings us home to glory. Yes, let us pay heed and respond according to that wonderful call.

Closing Verse: "...that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give to you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, ¹⁸ the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that you may know what is the hope of His calling, what are the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, ¹⁹ and what is the exceeding greatness of His power toward us who believe, according to the working of His mighty power ²⁰ which He worked in Christ when He raised Him from the dead and seated Him at His right hand in the heavenly places, ²¹ far above all principality and power and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this age but also in that which is to come." Ephesians 1:17-21

Next Week: Deuteronomy 5:1-6 It's like going from a miry bog and into a swampy pondage... (From Bondage to Bondage) (19th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

On the East Side of the Jordan

Then Moses set apart three cities on this side of the Jordan
Toward the rising of the sun, is where they shall be
That the manslayer might flee there
Who kills his neighbor unintentionally

Without having hated him in time past, these cities he did give
And that by fleeing to one of these cities he might live

Bezer in the wilderness on the plateau for the Reubenites
Ramoah in Gilead for the Gadites
And Golan in Bashan for the Manassites
These were those three sites

Now this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel
This is the law which he to the people did tell

These are the testimonies, the statutes, and the judgments
Which Moses spoke to the children of Israel
After they came out of Egypt

On this side of the Jordan as well

In the valley opposite Beth Peor, in the land of Sihon
King of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon
Whom Moses and the children of Israel defeated
After they came out of Egypt, by the Lord's hand alone

And they took possession of his land
And the land of Og king of Bashan, two kings of the Amorites
Who were on this side of the Jordan
Toward the rising of the sun
-----where starts the day and ends the nights

From Aroer, which is on the bank of the River Arnon
Even to Mount Sion (that is, Hermon) – Hallelujah!
And all the plain on the east side of the Jordan
As far as the Sea of the Arabah, below the slopes of Pisgah

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 5:1-6 (From Bondage to Bondage)

How many here have read the entire Old Testament? In the Law of Moses, there are said to be 613 individual laws. Can anyone here remember all of them? Has anyone here fulfilled all of them? If you didn't answer, but are listening and thinking, "Yes, I've fulfilled them all," then you are sorely deceived.

First, you would have to know all 613 of them, which you don't. And secondly, many of them cannot be fulfilled today. It is impossible, because there is no temple and no sacrificial system, among several other reasons of varying significance.

But, if you are one of the people of Israel who has not come to Christ Jesus, or if you are one of the people who piously claims to adhere to the Torah, meaning the Law of Moses, you stand condemned for several reasons.

First, the law itself condemns you because of your failure to perfectly meet it, which is certainly the case. You cannot claim adherence to the law and, at the same time, claim atonement under the law. It does not exist.

Secondly, you have rejected the grace of God in Christ, having instead relied on works of the law. You cannot claim adherence to the law and, at the same time, receive the grace of Christ. The two are mutually exclusive.

Text Verse: "How can a young man cleanse his way?

By taking heed according to Your word.

¹⁰ With my whole heart I have sought You;

Oh, let me not wander from Your commandments!

¹¹ Your word I have hidden in my heart,

That I might not sin against You." Psalm 119:9-11

The psalmist says that a young man can cleanse his way by taking heed to according to the word of God. That is true, but it is only true because the word of God anticipates the coming Redeemer. If a Redeemer is said to be coming, then it means....? Anyone? That there is a need to be redeemed.

How can that be for this psalmist, or for anyone in Israel? We see in today's verses that the Lord brought Israel out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Elsewhere, that action is noted as an act of redemption, such as in Deuteronomy 7:8.

If they were redeemed, then why do they need to be redeemed? Didn't the one redemption take care of things? The answer is obviously, "No." How is that so? Well, stay awake and attentive for the next few minutes and we will discover exactly how it is so.

It is an important lesson which is clearly to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. A Covenant with Us in Horeb (verses 1-4)

¹And Moses called all Israel, vayikra mosheh el kal Yisrael – "And called Moses to all Israel." There is the sense of the lifting of the voice of Moses beyond the state it has been in. He has been speaking to the people since Deuteronomy 1, but now he calls out to the people. It is reflective of what we see in John 7 –

"On the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried out, saying, 'If anyone thirsts, let him come to Me and drink. ³⁸ He who believes in Me, as the Scripture has said, out of his heart will flow rivers of living water.'" John 7:37, 38

Jesus was speaking to the people in a more general manner, but He then raised his voice for any and all to hear. This is probably the same thing Moses does here. He has been giving a general discussion of the events of the past, of the expectations for the people, and so on. But now, he lifts his voice and openly calls out.

The recording of that act, regardless as to how many people actually heard him, is its own call to "all Israel," not just at that time, but for all time. When the reader comes to this passage and sees the words, vayikra mosheh el kal yisrael – "And called Moses to all Israel," it is to alert them. It is to mentally call to their minds the importance of the words which lie ahead.

¹ (con't) and said to them:

vayomer alehem – "And said to them." Rather than davar, or speak, it is amar, or said. As always, the change reflects a state of participation by the hearer. When davar is used, they are to listen as if a command is given. When amar is said, there is the sense of hearing and participating in the instruction. That begins with...

¹ (con't) “Hear, O Israel,

sh'ma Yisrael – “Hear Israel.” The words are in the singular only here. In the rest of the passage, they will be in the plural. Even if each individual is to hear, Israel as a single collective is addressed in order to hear and to heed.

The word shama, or hear, is not uncommon, but it should be explained. It means more than to simply “hear,” in such an instance. Rather, it implies attention and obedience is to be applied to what is heard. In this form, it will be used repeatedly in Deuteronomy – calling Israel to hear and to attend to what is said. In this case, it is to...

¹ (con't) the statutes and judgments

ha'khukim va'eth ha'mishpatim – “the statutes and the judgments.” These are the main areas of subject matter which comprise the instruction to follow. The first is similar to written precepts that are to be obeyed. They are laws requiring the attention and obedience of the people. The second is a matter which is prescribed, as a legal decision by a lawgiver, and thus it is to be obeyed.

This statement is given just prior to the repeating of the Ten Commandments, but they are more logically connected to what will be said after the repetition of those Ten Commandments, meaning all of the general statutes and judgments which will be spoken out to the people later.

¹ (con't) which I speak in your hearing today,

asher anokhi dober b'azenekhem ha'yom – “which I speak in your ears today.” To speak in the people’s ears implies that they will then hear. However, it does not mean that they will assimilate, respond, and perform. But that is what the word sh'ma that Moses spoke calls for, and so...

¹ (con't) that you may learn them

u-lemadtem otham – “and you may learn them.” The word is lamad which was introduced in verse 4:1. It signifies “to goad,” and thus to teach. The rod is used to instruct, and from that rod, instruction is remembered. That is reflected in Proverbs 10:13 –

“Wisdom is found on the lips of him who has understanding,
But a rod is for the back of him who is devoid of understanding.”

The idea is that Israel is, at this point – and as has been demonstrated by their fathers – devoid of understanding. But in hearing and heeding the instruction which lies ahead, understanding will be attained, and wisdom can then be applied to that understanding. The understanding comes from the learning. The wisdom is found in its application, as is next seen...

1 (con't) and be careful to observe them.

u-shemartem laasotam – “and be careful to do them.” One might not know the law at all. This is a person with no understanding. One may know the law and fail to do what the law says. That demonstrates understanding, but a lack of wisdom. And, one can know the law and do what the law says. It demonstrates a person with both understanding and wisdom. This is what Moses is conveying to the people.

The reason for the need for this is found in the explanation Moses will now carefully remind the people of...

²The LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

Yehovah elohenu karat immanu berit b'khorev – “Yehovah our God cut with us a covenant in Horeb.” The word “us” speaks of the nation, Israel. It is the people who descended from Abraham, through Isaac, and then through Jacob. It signifies the tribes of Israel. It is this group, and none other, that Moses is referring to. That this was a covenant is explicitly stated in Exodus –

“And Moses went up to God, and the LORD called to him from the mountain, saying, ‘Thus you shall say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel: ⁴‘You have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I bore you on eagles’ wings and brought you to Myself. ⁵ Now therefore, if you will indeed obey My voice and keep My covenant, then you shall be a special treasure to Me above all people; for all the earth is Mine. ⁶ And you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation.’ These are the words which you shall speak to the children of Israel.’” Exodus 19:3-6

The fact that this is its own covenant is repeated in Exodus 24, Exodus 34, and then into the book of Leviticus. It is even implied in Numbers when referring to the Ark of the Covenant. The ark was detailed and built at Sinai as a part of the instruction under the law. Thus, the Ark of the Covenant speaks of the covenant at Sinai (Horeb). Moses next continues to define what he is referring to...

³The LORD did not make this covenant with our fathers, lo eth avotenu kara Yehovah eth ha'berit ha'zot – “Not with our fathers cut Yehovah the covenant the this.” Who the “fathers” are is debated, but the debate is actually unnecessary. Charles Ellicott takes the “not” as meaning “not only.” In other words, it was with our fathers who were alive at Horeb and with us also.

This cannot be if the words include Moses himself, which they certainly do. He says, avotenu – “our fathers,” not avotekhem – “your fathers.”

Augustine says it refers to those who died in the wilderness. Calvin says it refers to the forefathers who dwelt in Egypt. Keil says it refers to Abraham.

It cannot be speaking of those who died in the wilderness. It is as obvious as the nose on one's face that those people died because of the covenant at Horeb. They were under the law, they failed to believe the Lord, and they suffered the penalty of the law. With the exception of Moses, Joshua, and Caleb, all of them were dead since leaving Horeb.

Therefore, the term is speaking of any fathers who preceded those who were there at Sinai at the giving of the law. It includes those who lived and died in Egypt, and it includes the fathers who were before them, meaning Isaac and Abraham. But it surely even extends to those before Abraham.

The reason for this is that no group of people, going all the way back to Adam himself, was included in the covenant that Moses is referring to. The importance of this is that this law has no bearing upon any people, anywhere in the world – and at any time to the present – except those of Israel who received it.

To understand this more completely, Paul speaks of the covenant to Abraham in Galatians 3. There he says –

“Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as of many, but as of one, ‘And to your Seed,’ who is Christ. ¹⁷ And this I say, that the law, which was four hundred and thirty years later, cannot annul the covenant that was confirmed before by God in Christ, that it should make the promise of no effect. ¹⁸ For if the inheritance is of the law, it is no longer of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise.” Galatians 3:16-18

Paul speaks of a different covenant, one of Promise, that was made with Abraham. He then notes that the law came 430 years after that covenant was made.

Therefore, the “fathers” of this verse in Deuteronomy first speaks of any of Israel’s ancestors reaching all the way back to the time of Abraham. All of them lived under Promise. By stating the time interval, Paul is demonstrating this. Further, in Romans 2, Paul refers to those “without law,” saying –

“For as many as have sinned without law will also perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law will be judged by the law. Romans 2:12

By saying this, the words of Moses here then also extend to even those fathers before Abraham. Paul’s words show that the law only applies to Israel and to no other people – ever. The law may be, and it indeed is, God’s standard as is revealed in Christ, but it is only applied to those to whom it was given, meaning Israel.

The “fathers” in this verse are all in the line of Israel, all the way back to Adam, who are before the time of the giving of the law. The covenant was not made with any of them...

^{3 (con’t)} but with us, those who are here today,

There is an emphasis in the words. ki itanu anakhnu elleh poh ha’yom – “But with us – we – these here today.” The words here show that this is inclusive of the fathers who died in the wilderness. By stating, “us – we – these here today,” he is – by default – including himself.

As he was among the fathers, and as many of those with Moses now were at Sinai from birth up until nineteen years of age, it shows that Moses is referring to Israel – the people – as an “organic whole” (Keil). Though some had died, he refers to the people as a living unit – Israel. That is inclusive of...

^{3 (con’t)} all of us who are alive.

kulanu khayim – “all of us who alive.” The words are actually an exemplary note of continuance. Because most of those who were alive at Sinai were now dead, it shows the binding nature of the covenant upon not only the children who were alive at the giving of the law, but even upon those who were yet to be born.

It is thus an all-inclusive statement which speaks of those who received it, and those who continue to receive it because of the agreement by their fathers. There is an almost tragic note to the words, however.

The law is binding upon Israel as long as Israel exists, and/or until the annulling of that law for the individual within Israel, or the annulling of the law for the collective who is Israel.

No person of Israel was exempt from the weight of the law, and the nation as a whole would remain yoked under the law until all is complete. For the individual of Israel, the law ends in acceptance of Christ as one's personal Savior –

“For they being ignorant of God’s righteousness, and seeking to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted to the righteousness of God.

⁴ For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes.”

-Romans 10:3, 4

For the collective of Israel, the law will end in acceptance of Christ as their national Messiah –

“For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own opinion, that blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. ²⁶ And so all Israel will be saved, as it is written:

‘The Deliverer will come out of Zion,
And He will turn away ungodliness from Jacob;

²⁷ For this is My covenant with them,
When I take away their sins.’” Romans 11:25-27

To more fully understand this aspect of the law, Hebrews 8 must be cited. There, the author says, while first referring to the covenant given at Horeb which Moses is now speaking of –

“For if that first covenant had been faultless, then no place would have been sought for a second. ⁸ Because finding fault with them, He says: ‘Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of

Israel and with the house of Judah—⁹ not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they did not continue in My covenant, and I disregarded them, says the LORD. ¹⁰ For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put My laws in their mind and write them on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people. ¹¹ None of them shall teach his neighbor, and none his brother, saying, ‘Know the LORD,’ for all shall know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them. ¹² For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their lawless deeds I will remember no more.’

¹³ In that He says, ‘A new covenant,’ He has made the first obsolete. Now what is becoming obsolete and growing old is ready to vanish away.” Hebrews 8:7-13

In this passage, the author of Hebrews first refers to the covenant at Horeb. He then, speaking to Israel – and no one else – cites Jeremiah 31 which speaks of a New Covenant, a covenant entirely different and separate from that which came at Horeb.

He then says that in this New Covenant, the first is obsolete. However, it is only obsolete so far as the New Covenant is accepted by those under the Old. Until that occurs, Israel remains under the Old. That is explained by the words “is becoming obsolete and growing old,” and “is ready to vanish away.”

If Christ’s work annulled it entirely, without regard to Israel’s acceptance of it, the author would not have written it in the present tense some 30 or more years after Christ completed His work. Rather, it is annulled for any in Christ, and it will be annulled for the collective body when they call on Christ as a nation.

The time of that occurrence, then, is referred to by Jesus Himself in Matthew 23. In that passage, Jesus speaks to Jerusalem, signifying the seat of power and authority in Israel –

“O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, the one who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, as a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, but you were not willing! ³⁸ See! Your house is left to you desolate; ³⁹ for I say to you, you shall see Me no more till you say, ‘Blessed is He who comes in the name of the LORD!’” Matthew 23:37-39

Until this occurs, what Moses says here now in Deuteronomy 5 remains binding on this group of people – for all their generations, and to all of their people. The only way to have the burden and the yoke of the law lifted from them is to come outside the camp and to the cross of Calvary – receiving the work of Jesus in completion of this law.

As you can see, a few seemingly insignificant words, tacked onto the end of a single verse, can – and do – have the most important impact on the lives, future, and destiny of an entire group of people – Israel. It is a right, a responsibility, and it is a burden which began at a particular point in time, and it commenced with an awesome display being revealed to the eyes of the people...

⁴The LORD talked with you face to face

panim b'panim dibber Yehovah immakhem – “Face in face spoke Yehovah with you.” The word “talked” is not appropriate. There was no back and forth conversation. The Lord spoke while Israel listened. Despite the closeness of the matter, seemingly almost personal, it was still a one-way communication. This is unlike what is recorded in Exodus 33 –

“So the LORD spoke to Moses face to face, as a man speaks to his friend. And he would return to the camp, but his servant Joshua the son of Nun, a young man, did not depart from the tabernacle.” Exodus 33:11

Rather than panim b'panim, or face in face, which is said here in Deuteronomy, there it said panim el panim, face to face. The difference between the two is immense.

The communication of the Lord to Israel was direct and “in their face.” The communication of the Lord with Moses was personal and as close as one having a dialog with a dear friend. And again, the communication to Israel was...

⁴(con't) on the mountain

ba'har– “in the mount.” It speaks of the entire area where Israel was, represented by the mountain itself. None of Israel was near the mount, under pain of death. Rather, they were on the plain which surrounded it, and the presence of the Lord was atop it, as described in Exodus 19 and again in Deuteronomy 4:11, 12 –

“Then you came near and stood at the foot of the mountain, and the mountain burned with fire to the midst of heaven, with darkness, cloud, and thick darkness. ¹² And the LORD spoke to you out of the midst of the fire.”

That is again confirmed by Moses with the words...

⁴ (con't) from the midst of the fire.

mitok ha'esh – “from midst of the fire.” It is rather surprising to read commentaries on this verse and find words such as –

“...personally and immediately ... plainly and certainly, as when two men speak face to face; freely and familiarly, so as not to overwhelm and confound you.” Matthew Poole

This is completely the opposite of what was either intended or what is shown to have occurred. The Lord spoke in their face words of law. They were conveyed while accompanied with thunderings, lightnings, a thick cloud, the sound of a trumpet that was so loud the people quaked, smoke as of a furnace, and the actual quaking of the mountain. And along with all of this, the words were spoken mitok ha'esh, from midst of the fire.

The entire display was not free and familiar, and its intent was to completely overwhelm and confound the people. The voice from the fire in this manner was to convey to the people that the word of law was a word which consumes, even to absolute, complete, and utter destruction.

This is the weight, the penalty, and the burden of the law. It is the yoke which is heavy and wearisome upon the people. There is nothing light and friendly about serving under the law. But rather there is terror, anxiety, worry, and futility –

“Now all the people witnessed the thunderings, the lightning flashes, the sound of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking; and when the people saw it, they trembled and stood afar off. ¹⁹Then they said to Moses, ‘You speak with us, and we will hear; but let not God speak with us, lest we die.’” Exodus 20:18, 19

This was the point of the display, and it is what accompanied the first ten of six hundred and thirteen laws which were eventually heaped upon the people. It was to terrify them concerning the nature of this-

GREAT
AWESOME
TERRIFYING JEALOUS, AND HOLY GOD

The people feared, and rightfully so. And it is perfectly evident in the seemingly contradictory words which immediately followed...

“And Moses said to the people, ‘Do not fear; for God has come to test you, and that His fear may be before you, so that you may not sin.’” Exodus 20:20

Moses told them “Do not fear!” No, the entire display is only a test so that you will fear (Him). He uses the verb and then noun form of the same word. First, yare – to fear, and next, yirah – a fear.

They were to have “a fear” of the Lord before them for a single purpose. And that is where the rubber of the action of man meets the road of the Law of God. “So that you may not sin” (man’s action) means “so that you do not break my law” (God’s standard).

Think of it! The law was given – a law which defines sin, and a law which brings forth sin in its very issuance, and the people are told that they were to fear the Lord so that they wouldn’t sin – which is what the law causes to occur. I pray – tell me please, how is this going to help?

*With the law there is death and condemnation
It is God’s standard, which no one can meet
Who is there from any people group or nation?
Who can claim that through the law, sin he did defeat?*

*Where can we go? This law stands against us
When we heard its words, death came through our door
O God! Please send the Messiah – send us Jesus
And through Him we shall live again, yes live forevermore*

*Only He can bring us to the Holy Mountain
Only He can bring us up to the very throne of God
From Him alone can come the cleansing fountain
So that for eternal days, in Your light can we trod*

II. I Am the Lord Your God (verses 5 & 6)

The words of verse 5 that we will look at today are actually chronologically – and most certainly – intended as a time marker coming after the words which finish this chapter and before the words which begin Chapter 6.

They don't actually belong there, but they identify the train of thought concerning the events which are being reviewed. They are perfectly placed here as a parenthetical statement.

The Lord spoke out the Ten Commandments, accompanied by the immense and terrifying display. After that happened, the people came and begged Moses, imploring him that the Lord would no longer speak directly to them.

The Lord heard their words and agreed to allow Moses to receive and pass on the Lord's word to the people. And so, with that understood, even if stated out of chronological order, Moses continues with his next words.

They are words which the KJV and several other versions rightly place in parenthesis, except the last word of it. Verse 5 is, as I said, a parenthetical statement to introduce what follows it, up until a certain point. When that point is reached, the narrative will resume. That narrative is defined by the words of verse 1 –

“And Moses called all Israel, and said to them: ‘Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your hearing today, that you may learn them and be careful to observe them.’” Deuteronomy 5:1

From there, that narrative will begin again with the words which open Chapter 6 –

“Now this is the commandment, and these are the statutes and judgments which the LORD your God has commanded to teach you, that you may observe them in the land which you are crossing over to possess, ² that you may fear the LORD your God, to keep all His statutes and His commandments which I command you, you and your son and your grandson, all the days of your life, and that your days may be prolonged.” Deuteronomy 6:1, 2

Those parenthetical words of Moses now begin with...

⁵I stood between the LORD and you at that time,

To stand between two parties means to mediate. Moses will act in that position now, but only in the sense of receiving the law, transmitting it to the people, and also passing the words of the people back to the Lord.

Though he performed some priestly functions which formally established the covenant, he did not perform the mediatorial roles of a priest for the covenant. That was delegated to Aaron and his sons after him. Such a role as Aaron's was an anticipatory step only, however.

He was restricted in his allowances in many ways, and he was bound by the same precepts of law as were the other people. However, even in this anticipatory step – looking forward to Christ – the role of Israel's high priest for sin, and of Moses for receiving the law, was what Job hoped for in his life lived apart from the law. As it says in Job 9 when speaking of God –

*“For He is not a man, as I am,
That I may answer Him,
And that we should go to court together.
33 Nor is there any mediator between us,
Who may lay his hand on us both.
34 Let Him take His rod away from me,
And do not let dread of Him terrify me.
35 Then I would speak and not fear Him,
But it is not so with me.”* Job 9:32-35

Job felt the terror of God apart from His revelation of Himself at Sinai. Job knew that moral law existed, and he knew that in that moral law there was terror. How much more terror should there be when that moral law is laid out in perfectly structured words which convey the nature of God.

When the people heard that law, they begged for relief from it. And so, Moses stood between the Lord and the people – acting as a mediator to hear and then convey what he heard to Israel. It was his job, as he says...

⁵ (con't) to declare to you the word of the LORD;

The word translated as “declare” is a common word, nagad. It comes from a root signifying “to front.” Thus, it signifies making something manifest or conspicuous.

The Lord has a word to convey to Israel. Israel did not like when that word was conveyed to them directly, but the word needed to be conveyed, and so Moses will make what is unknown open and conspicuous. He will do this because, as Moses relays...

⁵ (con't) for you were afraid because of the fire,

So, the fire scared the people. In fact, it terrified them. One must wonder how dull we are to assume that when the fire isn't visible, the Lord isn't threatening, terrifying, or angry?

The law says to not exceed 40 mph. It is first given to the people at a ceremony at the courthouse. There are police officers there with guns on their hips and uniforms ordained with handcuffs. Off to the left is the county prison. It is a sobering display of the law.

So, the people say, next time we pass a law, can we do it at the baseball field? And, instead of a judge, can we have Harpo Marx tell us what we are to do. The law is still passed by the same body, it is still enforced by the same police department, and its offenders will wind up in the same place. So, does the significance of the law change because of how it is conveyed to the people? Not at all.

But this is how we perceive things. If we are on a road where there is a known speed trap that we are aware of, we will be sure to drive 40mph. If we are on a road that rarely has a speed trap, we may or we may not drive 40mph. And, if we are on a road that we are certain to have no speed trap, we forget what the words "speed limit" mean.

A fear of the Lord and of violating His law only comes if one believes in the Lord, and if they perceive that the Lord is actually watching over infractions of it. Moses standing between the Lord and Israel only deadens the minds of Israel further in many respects.

The same is true with grace unless we remember and carry with us always the thought of what that grace cost in order for it to be granted to us in the first place.

At the beginning of the law, the knowledge of the Lord was keenly on the minds of the people. They saw, they heard, they felt, and they were afraid. Moses reminds them of this...

⁵ (con't) and you did not go up the mountain.

These words, though still a part of the parenthetical thought, are intended to tell the people that it was Moses, not they, who received the law from the Lord. They were warned in Exodus 19 that they should not go up to the mountain, not even touch it, under pain of death.

At the end of the chapter, the Lord spoke again to Moses to ensure that was abided by. Moses was granted a special dispensation to ascend the mountain. They were not.

Therefore, the same Lord who terrified them by His display had conveyed His intent through Moses. Because of this, what is said after the giving of the Ten Commandments carries the same weight and authority as do those Ten Commandments.

This is the purpose of this statement. For now, the words of the Lord that Israel did hear from the Lord will next be introduced...

⁵ (con't) He said:

lemor – “saying.” The parenthetical nature of the verse ended, and this word stands outside of the parenthesis. In other words, taking verse 4 and connecting it with this, it would say –

“The LORD talked with you face to face on the mountain from the midst of the fire, saying...”

With that understood, Moses now repeats what the Lord said to the people. The words of Deuteronomy 5:6 are word for word and letter for letter, identical to Exodus 20:2...

⁶ I am the LORD

anokhi Yehovah – The words identify the Source of the terrifying display, and of the words being conveyed, as Yehovah, the self-existent Creator of all things. To more fully understand what the name Yehovah encompasses, you can go back and watch the sermon on Exodus 3:14. Suffice it to say that He is the One and only God, the true God, and yet despite that, He is not the only “god.” This is evidenced quite clearly in the next words...

⁶ (con't) your God

elohekha - Yehovah asserts the right to call Himself “your God” to the people gathered before Him – to Israel. They had agreed with their own mouths to receive Him as such in Exodus 19 –

"So Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before them all these words which the LORD commanded him. ⁸ Then all the people answered together and said, 'All that the LORD has spoken we will do.' So Moses brought back the words of the people to the LORD." Exodus 19:7, 8

Though He is the Creator of all things and the Lord of all in reality, He did not push Himself upon Israel, nor has He done so to the people of the world.

Both the Bible, and the world around us – even today – demonstrate there are many “gods.” However, there is only One true God. Based on Israel’s words of agreement, Yehovah established His right to exclusivity over them, saying, anokhi Yehovah elohekha – “I am Yehovah your God.”

It was, and thus it is, an individual address to each person as much as it is to the nation collectively. The singular is to the nation, but the nation is made up of individuals.

From that moment Yehovah claimed authority over each person of Israel and the collective body known as Israel. They now have their God and He now had peculiar people reserved for Himself. It is He, for this very purpose...

^{6 (con't)} who brought you out of the land of Egypt,

The Lord claimed the right at that time to be their God, not because He created them, but because He had redeemed them. It was they who were in Egypt, and it was He who brought them out. In bringing them out of Egypt and to Sinai, He then said that it was...

^{*6 (fin)} out of the house of bondage.

mi'beth abadim – “out of the house of slavery.” The word is ebed. It signifies slavery. Slavery signifies bondage. A slave bears a yoke, and the slave is in bondage. The three thoughts are all connected at one point or another.

Here, the Lord clearly tells the people that they were in bondage. Certainly, they were sold to sin and the worship of false gods. But even without that, they were under the oppression of the burdens of Pharaoh. They were unable to redeem themselves, and so the Lord intervened and redeemed them.

And yet, despite being brought out of the bondage of Egypt, they were actually brought into a greater and more terrifying bondage. What? How can anyone say that? Who would dare? In the New Testament, it begins with Jesus –

“Then Jesus said to those Jews who believed Him, ‘If you abide in My word, you are My disciples indeed. ³² And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.’”

³³ They answered Him, “We are Abraham’s descendants, and have never been in bondage to anyone. How can You say, ‘You will be made free?’”

³⁴ Jesus answered them, ‘Most assuredly, I say to you, whoever commits sin is a slave of sin. ³⁵ And a slave does not abide in the house forever, but a son abides forever. ³⁶ Therefore if the Son makes you free, you shall be free indeed.’”

John 8:31-36

At other times, the metaphor “yoke” is used. Jesus implored the people to take His yoke upon them. In that, they would find rest for their souls because His yoke, unlike the law, is an easy and light one. Peter understood what Jesus meant, calling the law a “yoke” in Acts 15 –

“Now therefore, why do you test God by putting a yoke on the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear? ¹¹ But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved in the same manner as they.” Acts 15:10, 11

Paul follows suit and repeatedly uses either the term “yoke” or “bondage” when speaking of the law. Israel had been brought out of one bondage, and they had been brought into another type of bondage.

Think of it! Who here fears when they fail the Lord Jesus? Who here wonders how upset He must be for the secret (or not so secret) things that you have done? Who feels the burden of his salvation slipping away because of the things you have done wrong?

Why do you feel this way? It is because of law, not because of grace! You have forgotten that your salvation was of grace, and it continues because of grace. By the law is the knowledge of sin. And by the knowledge of sin comes the penalty for sin.

If it were not so, there would be no need for such an awesome and terrible display on Mount Sinai. Rather, the Lord would have stood upon Mount Sinai in human form – something He is already recorded as having done in the book of Genesis.

And He would have come down from the mountain, maybe on a glittering fluffy cloud which radiated out the sound of birds chirping or little lambs bleating. And as He gave out the law, He might have tossed out sweet-smelling flowers and raisin cakes to the people –

“I am Yehovah. You shall have no other gods before Me (here is a carnation for you). You shall not make any images that represent Me, even though you can see Me now (here is a raisin cake). Be sure not to take My name in vain (listen to the little lambs bleating)...”

This did not happen. The Lord was making a point. He brought them out of the physically punishing bondage of Egypt, but He brought them into a new and terrifying bondage.”

The precedent was set. The Lord’s nature, and the display which came with the giving of the Ten Commandments, was revealed. It doesn’t matter a single iota that Moses later transmitted the words to the people.

The same Lord gave the words to the people, and His character remained completely unchanged, despite the mediatorial role of Moses. Remember, the symbolism given as He spoke out the law was of wrath and condemnation, not salvation.

What was implied is that the law that was to be introduced could never bring salvation. Even the true Israelite who loved God's law could never fully meet the strict standards of it. Not one could meet them perfectly.

Were it not for provisions within the law for atonement, the law would only bring wrath and condemnation. Therefore, the giving of the law was actually messianic in nature. For Israel, there is either complete obedience to the law – something only God could accomplish, or there was atonement from the guilt of the law – again something only God can accomplish.

Therefore, the law anticipates Christ, and in Christ is the end of the law. As all men are bound under sin, and as sin is of the devil, then all belong under the power of the devil. As only God can redeem man from sin, then it follows logically that Jesus must be God.

Jesus’ appeal to the people of the world, like the appeal here in the giving of the Ten Commandments, is based on redemption, not creation. Israel was redeemed from the bondage of Egypt. Jesus redeems from the bondage of the law – by which sin is imputed.

We are saved by a Savior and redeemed by a Redeemer. As this is so, then Jesus must be Yehovah – The Lord God. Paul says this in Galatians 4 -

“But when the fullness of the time had come, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the law, ⁵ to redeem those who were under the law, that we might receive the adoption as sons.” Galatians 4:4, 5

If the law was given to Israel who had been redeemed from the house of bondage, and as they were given the law based on that redemption, then why would those who had been given this law still need to be redeemed from the law? There are at least four major reasons for this –

- 1) To show us God’s perfect standard.
- 2) To show us that no person could meet that standard; all are unqualified without God’s grace and mercy being bestowed.
- 3) To show us how utterly sinful sin is to God. And,
- 4) To show us our need for something else – that grace which can only come by Someone fulfilling this law on our behalf. And as only God can do that, He sent His Son, Jesus Christ – fully God and fully Man – into the world to do so. It is the grace which we, as human beings, cannot do without.

It doesn’t matter if you are under law or not, apart from Jesus you will either perish apart from the law, or you will perish under the law. This is the bondage which man is under. The law only highlights that bondage.

Closing Verse: “Stand fast therefore in the liberty by which Christ has made us free, and do not be entangled again with a yoke of bondage.” Galatians 5:1

Next Week: Deuteronomy 5:7-16 To find a rhyme, I had to go to lengths hilariously, but I gotter done... (Learning Vicariously, Hopefully! Part I) (20th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

From Bondage to Bondage

And Moses called all Israel, and said to them:

Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments
-----which I speak in your hearing today
That you may learn them
And be careful to observe them, as to you I say

The LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb
The LORD did not make this covenant with our fathers
-----but with us
Those who are here today
All of us who are alive, and He spoke thus

The LORD talked with you face to face
From the midst of the fire, on the mountain was the place

I stood between the LORD and you at that time
To declare to you the word of the LORD, as I was led
For you were afraid because of the fire
And you did not go up the mountain. He said:

'I am the LORD your God who brought you out of the land
Of Egypt, out of the house of bondage; so you must understand

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 5:7-16 (Learning Vicariously - Hopefully!, Part I)

The word “vicarious” means to experience in the imagination or mind through either the feelings or experiences of another. Thus, the adverb “vicariously” signifies the action of such learning.

When I went around the US in 2010 and preached at all the capitols, one of my friends who had not been to all fifty states followed along on Facebook. He said, “I am living your life vicariously.” I appreciated that, knowing that he was actually a partner with me on my lonely drives and difficult trials.

He was able to see what I saw, and he was able to enjoy what I enjoyed, as long as I either wrote about it in the blog or took photos or videos of what I was seeing.

Whether we realize it or not, this is what Scripture has done for us. And we can, if we are willing to use that experience, learn a great deal. We can avoid many pitfalls, we can grow in spiritual wealth, we can find satisfaction, and we can prevent being chucked into the pit of hell – if we are simply willing to accept and act upon what we see.

Text Verse: “For whatever things were written before were written for our learning, that we through the patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope.” Romans 15:4

I don’t watch a lot of TV. There just isn’t time. But when I do, I like to live and learn vicariously. I like to watch Sergio and Rhoda’s videos because I can experience Israel. I like to watch real war, so I can experience what those men went through. I like to watch how things are made, because I can contemplate what must go on in the mind of people who developed the useful things we have all around us.

A lot of TV is just junk. When junk goes in, nothing is really added to the value of one’s life. I must admit that I do laugh when watching Get Smart or The Pink Panther. Laughter is good too. But I love to benefit beyond laughter in the few moments I get to watch things.

But the best application of vicarious learning one can find – by far – is found in the pages of Scripture. Although we will just be going through commands today, if we consider them in the greater plan of redemption, then we can truly learn a great deal from those of Israel who have gone before us.

Such wonderful lessons are to be found in God's superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Impossible Standards (verses 7-11)

Moses has reminded Israel of the covenant the Lord made with them at Horeb. He has reminded them of the way in which this occurred – having been a personal communication of His laws to the people in a direct and specific display, meaning from the midst of the fire.

And, so far, he has repeated to them the first words that the Lord spoke, "I am the LORD your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage."

With that remembered from last week, Moses will now repeat the words of law that the Lord has spoken out. These are the "ten words," or "commandments," which provide a basis for the entire law of Moses.

Much of what you will hear concerning these laws, meaning my analysis of them to you, is a close repeat of what you heard when we were in Exodus. There will be some important changes though. Concerning the repeating of these Ten Commandments, or Ten Words, the Pulpit Commentary rightly says –

"On these, as the basis of the covenant, the whole legislation rests, and therefore a rehearsal of them is a fitting introduction to a repetition and enforcement of the laws of the theocracy." Pulpit Commentary

Moses now repeats them, in order, starting with...

⁷ 'You shall have no other gods before Me.

lo yihyeh lekha elohim aherim al panaya – "No you shall have to you gods other upon my face." It is a word for word and letter for letter repeat of Exodus 20:3.

The first word. The command begins with an absolute negation – the word lo or "no." The majority of the commandments come in the negative form, stating the prohibition which is then explained. By stating them this way, the wholly forbidden nature of the act is set as the standard, from which there is to be no deviation at all.

What this signifies is that the desire to do, exactly what is forbidden in the command, already exists within man. In other words, by saying “No shall you have gods other,” the Lord understands that it is exactly what man is prone to doing.

From the first man, Adam, all the way through the ages, man has been consumed with finding every possible god that he can place in his heart before the Lord. Such commands, like the one given to Adam at the very beginning – “of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat” – point to our limitations.

Adam lacked the knowledge of good and evil; we lack the ability to properly exercise the knowledge of good and evil which we now possess. The laws then are given to us because of this. This is well explained by Paul in Romans 3 –

“There is none righteous, no, not one;
¹¹ There is none who understands;
There is none who seeks after God.
¹² They have all turned aside;
They have together become unprofitable;
There is none who does good, no, not one.” Romans 3:10-12

In the command, the verb “shall have” is singular, but the word “other” is plural. What this infers is that it isn’t speaking of just other gods, meaning deity, but other gods of any kind such as idols in thoughts, words, or deeds.

If a person was to make an idol of work, it would be a violation of this command. If a person made an idol of his intelligence, it would be a violation of this command. If a person made an idol of his personal strength, it would be a violation of this command.

Anything which is exalted by us before the Lord would be a violation of this command. As we previously saw in Exodus 20, Adam Clarke defines the sense of this first word, saying –

“This commandment prohibits every species of mental idolatry, and all inordinate attachment to earthly and sensible things. As God is the fountain of happiness, and no intelligent creature can be happy but through him, whoever seeks happiness in the creature is necessarily an idolater; as he puts the creature in the place of the Creator, expecting that from the gratification of his passions, in the use or abuse of earthly things, which is to be found in God alone. The very first commandment of the whole series is divinely calculated to prevent man’s misery and promote his happiness, by taking him off from all false dependence, and leading him to God himself, the fountain of all good.” Adam Clarke

However, although this may be the intent, if we were to stop with this first word and go no further, we can see how clearly it brings wrath. No person can say that he has fully kept this one precept without breaking it. Not only are we not good because of our inclinations, we are not good because of our actions.

Each of us has set up an idol in our heart in one form or another during our lives. We have failed by attempting to find another source of joy instead of seeking the Lord. This law can never bring salvation. It can only bring condemnation. And, as James says towards the end of the Bible –

“For whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is guilty of all.” James 2:10

Concerning the words al panaya, or “upon my face,” it is a way of saying, anywhere at any time. As the psalmist said –

Where can I go from Your Spirit?
Or where can I flee from Your presence? Psalm 139:7

Just as we cannot flee from the presence of the Lord, so we are to never have a god upon His face – at any time or in any place. But we do, don’t we? We all set up idols of one form or another before the face of the Lord. From the very first word, we are guilty of all of the law because we have broken this one point. How terrible it is to consider. As Paul says –

“I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. ¹⁰ And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death.” Romans 7:9, 10

Each individual of Israel agreed to this command, and thus each person, as well as the nation as a whole, violated it when they strayed from it. Many times, incidents of both personal and national violation are noted, but Jeremiah 2 gives a good example of Israel’s failure to meet this law –

“But where are your gods that you have made for yourselves?
Let them arise,

If they can save you in the time of your trouble;
For according to the number of your cities
Are your gods, O Judah.” Jeremiah 2:28

As far as this first word is given, something else was needed to bring life. The first word only condemns; it cannot save.

⁸‘You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything lo taaseh lekha pesel kal temunah – “Not you shall make for yourself a carved image any likeness.” With the exception of one letter, it is a word for word and letter for letter mirror of Exodus 20. The only difference is that in Exodus 20, it says, “and any likeness.” The conjunction “and” is left off here. We can put the thoughts side by side to see the difference –

You shall not make for yourself a carved image, and any likeness...
You shall not make for yourself a carved image, any likeness...

Exodus 20 thus separates the statement into two thoughts, a carved image and anything else which could be made into a likeness. Deuteronomy 5 has the words “any likeness” define what it means to not make a carved image.

By stating it both ways, it then ensures that someone cannot equivocate on what he claims to have been doing. The prohibition is all-encompassing concerning making a carved image of any likeness, or a carved image and any likeness.

The second word. The first command asserted the unity of God in Israel’s worship. This second command is intended to ensure that the first command is adhered to in a physical sense. Yehovah showed them no form of Himself and therefore no form was to be assigned to Him in worship.

Further, no form was to be worshipped as a god other than Him. As He is the Creator, then all else is created. Therefore, to worship any physical part of the creation was to worship less than the Creator. This command then shows what is to be considered unlawful worship.

The pesel is an “idol” or “image.” It comes from pasal which means “to cut” or “to hew into shape.” The next word is temunah. It signifies a “likeness” or “form.” These words combined thus signify any physical idol or image.

The command says lo taaseh lekha – “no make for yourself.” There is an important point to consider here. The Bible does not forbid the making of shaped things such as cherubim for the Ark of the Covenant. It prohibits shaped things for personal use as an idol and it will go further to explain this later.

It is an important point, because people who challenge the Bible say that the making of the things for the tabernacle is a violation of this commandment. This is not so. There is nothing contradictory between this command and the Lord’s other commands.

⁸ (con’t) that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth;

asher ba’shamayim mi’maal v’asher ba’arets mi’takhat v’asher ba’mayim mi’takhat la’arets – “which under the heavens from above, and which the earth from below, and which in the waters from below the earth.” It is an exact repeat of Exodus 20.

These words form a triple-division of the sphere of existence in the material universe. It is thus an all-encompassing statement concerning it, and it prohibits making anything resembling whatever exists in any of the spheres.

This goes from the sun, moon, and stars, to birds which fly in the sky. It goes from the plant and animal life on earth to fish in the sea or to any other part of the created order. Nothing in creation is to be likened to God, nor is any such thing to be likened as a god.

⁹ you shall not bow down to them nor serve them.

lo tishtakhaveh lahem v’lo taabedem – “No you shall bow down to them, and no serve them.” These words further define the words, “You shall not make for yourself.” When an image is made, the intent is that it will be bowed down to and served – either by the maker, or by someone else, or by both. This is forbidden.

Roman Catholics, when citing the Ten Commandments, will leave out this command. In order to maintain Ten Commandments, they then divide the tenth command concerning coveting into two separate commands. Adam Clarke poignantly sums this up –

“This corruption of the word of God by the Roman Catholic Church stamps it, as a false and heretical Church, with the deepest brand of ever-during infamy!” Adam Clarke

To manipulate the presentation of the Ten Commandments in this way is really a despicable offense. For Israel, they were certainly guilty of violating this command throughout their history. In fact, they openly sought to violate it time and again, but the Lord told them that they would suffer because of it –

“What you have in your mind shall never be, when you say, ‘We will be like the Gentiles, like the families in other countries, serving wood and stone.’”

-Ezekiel 20:32

^{9 (con't)} For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, ki anokhi Yehovah elohekha el qanna – “For I Yehovah your God; God jealous.” The Lord unambiguously claims that He is a jealous God. It is the word qanna.

This doesn't indicate jealousy of success in another. Instead, it speaks of a defense of His honor and glory. When one bows to another god, the Lord isn't jealous of that false god receiving worship. His jealousy is directed to the violation of depriving Him what He is justly due. His words in Isaiah show this –

“I am the LORD, that is My name;
And My glory I will not give to another,
Nor My praise to carved images.” Isaiah 42:8

This adjective, qanna, is only used six times – always in connection with the Lord, and only in Exodus and Deuteronomy.

^{9 (con't)} visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, poqed avon avot al banim v'al shileshim v'al riveim l'soneai – “visiting iniquity of fathers upon sons and upon third and upon fourth of those who hate me.” There are two interesting changes from Exodus 20. The word “fathers” is spelled differently here, adding in the letter vav. Also, a vav is added to the word “upon” here, changing it from “upon third,” to “and upon third.” I have no explanation to give you.

As far as the words themselves, although they are scorned by those who hate the God of the Bible, as if He is showing a vindictive nature, it is rather intended to show us consequences that naturally result from misdeeds. It shows nothing vindictive in the Lord. Rather it shows what is just.

Adam sinned and his sin continues to trouble us 6000 years later. If a person is punished for stealing, he may lose his estate and earnings. That certainly causes the next generation, and even many generations later, to receive the sentence of the offender.

The very person who dismisses God for being vindictive may sue another person for wrongdoing against him. If he does, then he will actually visit the wrongdoing of the one he sues on the subsequent generations in exactly the manner that is described here.

To argue against God who is infinitely just and righteous concerning his judgments is a small-minded thing to do for a person who probably lacks any true wisdom or knowledge at all.

¹⁰ but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.

v'oseh khesed la'alaphim l'ohavai u-l'shomere mitsvoto – “And showing lovingkindness to thousands, to those who love Me and to those keeping my commandments.” There is a difference in the written and spoken text here. The written says mitsvoto. However, when it is read aloud, the speaker says mitsvotai, as it is written in Exodus 20. I cannot explain to you why the text reads differently.

The “thousands” here are not speaking of the number of people, but the number of generations. Moses will explicitly define it that way in Deuteronomy 7:9. The length of this mercy, or loving-kindness, is for those individuals who love Him and keep His commandments. It doesn't mean the children who don't, but the individuals who do.

If a generation is conservatively said to be 40 years, then this would mean 40,000 years. As the Bible speaks of a 7000-year plan for the world we currently enjoy, then the term here is obviously meant to symbolize “forever” or “eternity.” This is demonstrated in the words of the 103rd Psalm –

“But the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting
On those who fear Him,
And His righteousness to children’s children,
¹⁸ To such as keep His covenant,
And to those who remember His commandments to do them.” Psalm 103:17

However, as none are able to meet this standard perfectly, then none can be granted such eternal mercy apart from Christ who fulfilled the law on our behalf. All those who came before Christ and trusted in the Lord's provision are covered by His future mercy. Only those who trust in Christ after His advent will be covered by His present mercy.

It was this mercy of the Lord that called for Christ to fulfill the law for fallen man. Israel individually, and as a whole, is seen throughout the Old Testament to fall short of this command. Even very quickly after the initial giving of it, the entire congregation violated it –

“And Aaron said to them, ‘Break off the golden earrings which are in the ears of your wives, your sons, and your daughters, and bring them to me.’³ So all the people broke off the golden earrings which were in their ears, and brought them to Aaron.⁴ And he received the gold from their hand, and he fashioned it with an engraving tool, and made a molded calf. Then they said, ‘This is your god, O Israel, that brought you out of the land of Egypt!’” Exodus 32:2-4

Of this command, Charles Ellicott rightly states, “As love in this verse is practical, so is hatred in the previous verse. To hate God is to disobey His commandments.”

Concerning this second word, something else was needed. The second word only condemns; it cannot save.

¹¹ ‘You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain, lo tisa eth shem Yehovah elohekha lashav – “No you shall lift name Yehovah your God to vanity.” The words are letter for letter identical to Exodus 20.

The third word. The Hebrew here is ambiguous and can be taken to mean either forbidding false swearing only, or to include profane or vain swearing. Looking to Jesus’ words in Matthew 5, it appears that false swearing is what is being referred to. He says–

“Again you have heard that it was said to those of old, ‘You shall not swear falsely, but shall perform your oaths to the Lord.’” Matthew 5:33

The word “vain” in Hebrew is shav. It means falsely, lying, vain, etc. The intent is that one should never invoke the name of the Lord in a false manner. And should they presume to do so...

¹¹ (con’t) for the LORD will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.

ki lo yenaqeh Yehovah eth asher yisa eth shemo lashav – “for not will hold him guiltless Yehovah who takes His name in vain.” It is letter for letter identical to Exodus 20.

These words do not mean that there will be immediate punishment on the offender. Rather, it is something that may come in this life as the perjured man is found out and punished, or it may be in the day of God’s judgment in the future. Malachi shows us this–

“And I will come near you for judgment;
I will be a swift witness
Against sorcerers,
Against adulterers,
Against perjurers,
Against those who exploit wage earners and widows and orphans,
And against those who turn away an alien—
Because they do not fear Me,
Says the LORD of hosts.” Malachi 3:5

Of the first three commandments, John Lange notes, “The sin against the first commandment banishes the name of Jehovah by means of idol names; the sin against the second obscures and disfigures it; the sin against this third one abuses it.”

Abusing God’s name is something that is forbidden. A transgression of this command is a violation of the entire law. And yet, the Bible demonstrates that Israel as a whole, individually and collectively, violated it –

“Run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem;
See now and know;
And seek in her open places
If you can find a man,
If there is anyone who executes judgment,
Who seeks the truth,
And I will pardon her.
² Though they say, ‘As the LORD lives,’ Surely they swear falsely.” Jeremiah 5:1, 2

Concerning this third word, something else was needed. The third word only condemns; it cannot save.

*We have set our face before the Lord our God
To make request by prayer for what we do not deserve
We have sinned in our walk that we have trod
And the Lord our God we have failed to serve*

*O Lord, righteousness belongs to You
But to us belongs only shame of face
We have acted wickedly in all that we do
And upon Your glorious name, we have brought disgrace*

*And so, the curse and the oath has come upon us
But now we turn our hearts back to You
We call out for mercy through the Lord Jesus
And He will respond, because He is faithful and true*

II. Heaping Up Guilt (verses 12–16)

¹² ‘Observe the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, as the LORD your God commanded you.

shamor eth yom ha’shabbath l’qadesh ka’asher tsivekha Yehovah elohekha – “Keep day the Sabbath, to sanctify it as commanded you Yehovah your God.”

A great change is seen between here and Exodus 20. There, it said, “Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.” Here, Moses himself states what is to be done, and only then does he remind them that it was the command of the Lord. Further, Moses tells them to shamar, or keep, the Sabbath.

In Exodus 20, the Lord said to zakar, or remember, the Sabbath. One could argue semantics about the word zakar. However, by changing it to shamar, no semantics could be employed by the Sabbath-breaker.

The fourth word. Israel was given the Sabbath in Exodus 16, at the time of the giving of the Manna. Here, they are reminded to keep it, thus sanctifying the day. This means that they were to separate the day from all others and observe it as a unique and special day, consecrated to the Lord.

The word shabbat implies rest and cessation from labor. This cessation from labor for Israel looked forward to a different type of rest. It was to be a foretaste of the blessed eternal rest which man lost. He was created outside of the Garden of Eden and was rested in the Garden to worship and serve His God. That was lost.

Everything from that point on has looked forward to the restoration of that day. And it finally arrived when Christ finished His work. In Him, the seventh day of rest is offered to all of God's people. This is why Hebrews 4, after the fulfillment of the law by Christ, says, "For we who have believed do enter that rest" (Hebrews 4:3).

¹³ Six days you shall labor and do all your work,

sheshet yamim taavod v'asita kal melaktekha – "six days you shall labor and do all your work." It is letter for letter the same as Exodus 20:9. It is an imperative. The week is divided into two sections, active work and active cessation from work. Man was not to be idle when he should be working, and man was not to be working when he should be at rest.

Things that needed to be done were to be done before the Sabbath so that no work was to be done on the Sabbath. This is, however, not to be taken as a command that one must work every day. If so, for example, it would violate the mandated feasts of the Lord when celebrated by Israel in Jerusalem. Rather, what should be done was to be done, but not on the Sabbath.

¹⁴ but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD your God.

v'yom ha'shevi' shabbath l'Yehovah elohekha – "and day the seventh Sabbath to Yehovah your God." It is letter for letter identical to Exodus 20:10.

This translation, following the KJV, is confusing and should rather read, "...but the seventh day is a Sabbath to the Lord your God." Otherwise, it seems like the Lord is even now working six days and taking the seventh off. Rather, they were to work and then rest to the Lord, honoring Him on this special day dedicated to Him.

¹⁴ (con't) In it you shall do no work:

lo taaseh kal melakah – "No you shall do all work." It reads the same as Exodus 20:10. The command is specific. The individual whom the Lord is speaking directly to shall not work on the Sabbath. The word "you" is singular.

¹⁴ (con't) you, nor your son, nor your daughter, atah u-binkha u-bitekha – “you and your son and your daughter.” Nor were they to work their children, as if the lesser in the house were exempt from the requirement, or that the work of the stronger should now devolve to the weaker.

14 (con’t) nor your male servant, nor your female servant, v’avdekha va’amatekha – “and your male servant, and your female servant.” The word “and” prior to “male servant” is not found in Exodus 20. It is a new addition here in Deuteronomy. One might try to play semantics if this “and” was not added.

Like the children of the house, the servants – both male and female – who certainly bore the majority of the burdens in the house during the week, were to be given rest. The unattended labors of the owner were not to devolve to another, even in one’s employ.

14 (con’t) nor your ox, nor your donkey, nor any of your cattle, v’sorkha v’hamorekha v’kal behemtekha – “and your ox, and your donkey, and all your beasts.” This greatly expands on Exodus 20:10, where it only says, “and your beasts.” Moses is probably being more specific because of the wickedness of the human heart.

If Exodus 20 was allowed to stand, someone may say, “Beasts doesn’t include this animal or that.” And so, such a person may actually hook a yoke up to a kitty cat, sending it out to plow the field – poor Fifi. Thus, Moses gives two specific animals, and then adds in, “and all your beasts.” There will be no fudging with Fifi.

The question is, “What is implied if an animal is put to work?” Answer – “Someone is working the animal.” Rest is to be rest. Even if someone were to hook up an animal to a grinding mill, he would have to work to do so and he would continue to be profiting from the labors of the animal.

The Sabbath was made for man as a day to the Lord God. If he was thinking about the profit he was making while the cow was grinding grain, then he wouldn’t be thinking about the things of Lord.

Also, these words show that the animal who is a servant of man, was to be given a break from its labors. Further, throughout the Bible, care for animals is noted. Even the bird of the air that falls to the ground does not do so unnoticed by God.

¹⁴ (con't) nor your stranger who is within your gates, v'gerekha asher bisharekha – “and your stranger who in your gates.” It is letter for letter the same as Exodus 20:10. The stranger within the gates implies someone not of Israel who has taken up permanent residence within a town.

This prohibition was certainly so that they wouldn't become a snare to Israel. If they saw strangers profiting and gaining advantage because they could work while others couldn't, it would become a problem for all.

Further, someone may hire a stranger to enrich himself. A stranger shows up and the man says, “We have a Sabbath, so I can't work, but my vines really need to be pruned. I'll pay you at the end of the day for getting that done.”

Or, he may simply buy something from visiting strangers who are selling things. This would be a violation of the intent of the Sabbath as well. This exact scenario is found in Nehemiah 13:16 –

“Men of Tyre dwelt there also, who brought in fish and all kinds of goods, and sold them on the Sabbath to the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.”

¹⁴ (con't) that your male servant and your female servant may rest as well as you.

l'maan yanuakh avdekha v'amatekha kamoka – “to the purpose may rest your male servant and your female servant like you.” These words are not found in Exodus 20. They are an addition by Moses at this time.

It seems as if Moses skips over everyone mentioned in these previous verses except the male and female servants, but this isn't the case. What seems more likely is that the term is being used as an all-inclusive statement.

Whether one is a son or a daughter, a donkey or a cow, a hired hand or a stranger, all are considered one's servants when they are expected to perform a work. And more, if a person rests, but the animal doesn't, it means that someone tended to it in order for it to work – be it a son or a stranger. The addition of this is to ensure that nothing, and no one, is expected to labor on the Sabbath.

¹⁵ And remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, v'zakarta ki eved hayita b'erets mitsrayim – “And remember for slave you were in land Egypt.” Moses’ reason for the giving of the Sabbath here in Deuteronomy is completely different than that given in Exodus.

There, it said, “For in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day. Therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it.”

The Lord based His commanding Israel to observe the Sabbath on Creation. However, Moses now bases it on redemption.

First, the creation of the heavens and the earth was done in a specific way for specific reasons. One is that it was to foreshadow the Sabbath day for man on the seventh day. God could have simply created all things at once, but he did it in a set way to picture something else.

And, the six days of the week followed by a Sabbath was ordained in order to show the redemptive pattern of history itself. The six days of the week prefigure the six thousand years of man working towards the reign of Christ, followed by the final thousand years of the millennium where Christ reigns; a time of rest on earth.

Now Moses says that they were to observe the Sabbath in order to remember their redemption from Egypt. They were forced into labor, but now they were to work and then remember that the Lord brought them out from that...

^{15 (con't)} and the LORD your God brought you out from there by a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm;

In Deuteronomy, it assumes that God has not only created, but redeemed. As Israel missed Christ the first time, therefore, he focuses on redemption. It is a hidden key for Israel of today to understand that they actually missed the final redemption which is found in Christ.

Why is that? Because being redeemed into the law is to be redeemed into death. As we have seen many times, by the law comes the knowledge of sin. And through sin, only death can result. This is why the author of Hebrews says this –

“Inasmuch then as the children have partaken of flesh and blood, He Himself likewise shared in the same, that through death He might destroy him who had the power of death, that is, the devil, ¹⁵ and release those who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.” Hebrews 2:14, 15

Under law, one remains in bondage. Being brought out of Egypt was only a picture of the work of the Lord Jesus – by His mighty hand and His outstretched arm – bringing us out of bondage of the fear of death...

¹⁵ (con't) therefore the LORD your God commanded you to keep the Sabbath day.

Even though the accounts differ, creation and redemption, they are tied together. Israel is to understand that the Sabbath is a sign of God’s rest following His creative efforts, which had subsequently been lost in the Garden of Eden, but it is also a sign of God’s redemption in order to bring them back to paradise as well.

Thus, there is no contradiction between Exodus and Deuteronomy. One act leads to another. The fallen world could not be redeemed unless it had first been created and then fallen. Everything is looking forward to God’s rest; a rest which can only be found in Christ. As the law could only bring a curse, then the Sabbath was only a shadow, looking forward to Christ's fulfillment of it.

With His having fulfilled the law, we do enter God’s rest. The words of Jesus, Paul, and the author of Hebrews all agree that our true rest is found in Christ and in Him alone.

The Sabbath was only a picture of what was to come. Would Israel obey? The answer is, “No.” The book of Ezekiel, in particular, notes the continual profaning of the Sabbath by Israel. Concerning this fourth word, something else was needed. The fourth word only condemns; it cannot save.

¹⁶ ‘Honor your father and your mother,

kabed eth avikha w’eth imekha – “Honor your father and your mother.” It is precisely the same as Exodus 20:12.

The fifth word. The Ten Commandments are divided up by scholars in several ways. Some see them as logically dividing between commands 1-4 and then 5-10. The first four showing love for God, the last six showing love for neighbor.

Others divide them 1-5 and 6-10. This would then show a distinction between filial and fraternal matters. The first five show obedience to the parent as children, the latter, respect for others. As parents are the image of God to the child until the child can reason out who God is, then this second division makes more sense.

It should be noted that the father is placed first here, but the mother was placed first in Leviticus 19:3 when speaking of the mandated Sabbath. This shows that both are to be regarded with a like respect, even if there is a hierarchy within the home.

The honoring of the parents is reflective of the honoring of our true heavenly Father. If one is disobedient to his parents, it goes hand in hand that he will be disrespectful towards the Lord. With this repetition from the Lord, Moses now adds in his own words...

¹⁶ (con't) as the LORD your God has commanded you, ka'asher tsivekha Yehovah elohekha – “as commanded you Yehovah your God.” Only in the repeating of the fourth and fifth commandments does Moses say this.

As all of the other commandments are negatives, “You shall not,” the reason for Moses’ inclusion of “as the Lord your God commanded you” must be because of that. They are positive commandments – observe and honor – just as the Lord your God has commanded.

At times, it certainly must be harder to remember to do something than to not do something. Therefore, Moses stresses the doing of these commandments. In the doing of this particular command, Paul notes in Ephesians 6 that it is the first command with a promise attached to it...

^{*16} (fin) that your days may be long, and that it may be well with you in the land which the LORD your God is giving you.

Though the same general idea is expressed here as in Exodus 20, Moses expands on it. There it said, “that your days may be long upon the land which the LORD your God is giving you.” Moses adds in, “that it may be well with you.”

As far as the command itself, some look at this as a national blessing for Israel. That if they were honoring of their parents, they would be nationally blessed with the land of Israel. This is incorrect. First, the word “land” here is not the usual term for the land of Israel, which is eretz. Instead, it is adamah. Adamah signifies the ground. It is the same as when cited in Ephesians 6.

Whatever ground the people possessed, they would possess it more fully if they were honoring of their parents. Second, the command is spoken in the singular to the individual, not in plural to all, just as it is in Ephesians 6 when Paul cites this.

And third, both here and Ephesians 6:3 explain the thought with words indicating long life. In essence, “That it may be well with you and you may live long on the earth.”

Thus, it is a general statement that one will prosper through the honoring of the parents. The world of man in which we live is governed by general laws of God, not by laws which are universal. This promised blessing is one that is therefore generally to be expected, but not necessarily universally received.

Despite being a simple command and one which is almost universally accepted as right, Israel failed to keep it. Both Old Testament and New shows the people’s failure to honor their parents. From Ezekiel 22 –

“In you they have made light of father and mother; in your midst they have oppressed the stranger; in you they have mistreated the fatherless and the widow.” Ezekiel 22:7

Concerning this fifth command, something else was needed. The fifth word only condemns; it cannot save.

As we have seen, out of just the first five commandments, Israel failed completely. But they had already failed in some of them since leaving Horeb. And, based on the Lord’s words to Moses later in Deuteronomy, He already knows that they will fail in them again, as we will see in our closing verse.

If this is so, and it certainly is, then the promise of life made in verse 4:1, is already nullified, even if it has to take place in reality for it to be so. The Lord’s knowledge of this, however, has to be played out in time and experience for us to know that it is so.

But when it does occur, we can then understand what Paul later will say with the words, “I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. ¹⁰And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death” (Romans 7:9, 10).

God already knows all things. One might think that He would just tell us those things in advance, and we would avoid the errors and heartaches. But... that doesn’t work either.

Don't you remember? Your mother told you not to touch the hot stove, and you did. Your father told you to watch your step on the wet floor, and you didn't. They even told you what would happen, and yet you did it anyway.

But more, the precedent of not listening was given in the first recorded words ever spoken by God to man –

“And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, “Of every tree of the garden you may freely eat; ¹⁷ but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.” Genesis 2:16, 17

We are not geared to learn without being given actual examples to live by. If mom tells you and your older brother to not touch the stove, and he beats you to the stove as soon as mom walks out, it is he, not you, who will become the tangible lesson for both of you. You will see his pain, tears, and melted skin and say, “Whew, lesson vicariously learned!”

This is the purpose of Israel, and this is the purpose of the law. It is to teach Israel through experience that the law is an impossible weight to carry. And we can learn that lesson by watching and learning from our wayward brother.

Unfortunately for Israel, they not only burned their hand, but they did so, and they failed to learn. They will go through another attempt and another failure under the law. Let us not be so dull. Whether Jew or Gentile, let us learn the lesson from the word, and let us apply it to ourselves now.

Forget trusting in your attempts to be justified by the law. Instead, put your faith in Christ Jesus – the fulfillment and embodiment of this impossible weight for man to carry. He took the pain and punishment of the law so that you can hopefully vicariously learn from Him and live.

Closing Verse: “And the LORD said to Moses: “Behold, you will rest with your fathers; and this people will rise and play the harlot with the gods of the foreigners of the land, where they go to be among them, and they will forsake Me and break My covenant which I have made with them. ¹⁷ Then My anger shall be aroused against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will hide My face from them, and they shall be devoured. And many evils and troubles shall befall them, so that they will say in that day, ‘Have not these evils come upon us because our God is not among us?’ ¹⁸ And I will surely hide My face in that day because of all the evil which they have done, in that they have turned to other gods.” Deuteronomy 31:16-18

Next Week: Deuteronomy 5:17-22 To make this rhyme, one must almost act nefariously; it is true... (Learning Vicariously, Hopefully!, Part II) (21st Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Learning Vicariously (Hopefully!)

⁷ ‘You shall have no other gods before Me.

⁸ ‘You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; ⁹ you shall not bow down to them nor serve them. For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, ¹⁰ but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.

¹¹ ‘You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain, for the LORD will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.

¹² ‘Observe the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, as the LORD your God commanded you. ¹³ Six days you shall labor and do all your work, ¹⁴ but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD your God. In it you shall do no work: you, nor your son, nor your daughter, nor your male servant, nor your female servant, nor your ox, nor your donkey, nor any of your cattle, nor your stranger who is within your gates, that your male servant and your female servant may rest as well as you. ¹⁵ And remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and the LORD your God brought you out from there by a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm; therefore the LORD your God commanded you to keep the Sabbath day.

¹⁶ ‘Honor your father and your mother, as the LORD your God has commanded you, that your days may be long, and that it may be well with you in the land which the LORD your God is giving you.

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 5:17-22 (Learning Vicariously - Hopefully!, Part II)

We only evaluated five of the Ten Commandments last week, and we saw rather clearly how Israel failed at meeting them. Today, we'll look at the last five, and consider them in relation to Israel as well. And in doing so, we can consider them in relation to our own actions also. In fact, we would be stupid to not do so.

God has a standard, and that standard must be met. Even if we – meaning the people of the world apart from Israel – are not under law, we still have to meet God's standard of perfection. As we are born in sin, that won't be possible. But we can learn from Israel's failure that – just as they needed something more – we need Jesus.

It is He who embodies this law, and it is He who can impute the righteousness of it to us because He came under the law, He lived it out perfectly, and He died in fulfillment of it. And so, what He did is not only available to those of Israel, it is available to all who call out to Him in faith.

Text Verse: *"And now the LORD says,
Who formed Me from the womb to be His Servant,
To bring Jacob back to Him,
So that Israel is gathered to Him
(For I shall be glorious in the eyes of the LORD,
And My God shall be My strength),
⁶Indeed He says,
'It is too small a thing that You should be My Servant
To raise up the tribes of Jacob,
And to restore the preserved ones of Israel;
I will also give You as a light to the Gentiles,
That You should be My salvation to the ends of the earth.'" Isaiah 49:5, 6*

Israel thought, and they still think, they are the sole focus of God's attention, and yet, Isaiah showed them that this wasn't so. But consider it. Israel had the law. The nations of the earth did not. If this is so, and it clearly is, then it cannot be that the Servant of the Lord was coming to save Israel because of the law. Rather, He came to save them despite the law, and – yes – even from the law.

If He was going to “restore the preserved ones of Israel,” it had to be because of something other than the law. All of Israel had the law, and neither Israel collectively, nor any of Israel individually, was obedient to the law.

If people could just read the word properly, and from its intended perspective – meaning as given to us by God to show us the story of redemption – we could then put the law in its proper place. And, we could put Israel in her proper place. But in failing to do so, we mess both up, and the story of redemption – very quickly – becomes about us and about our efforts. Let’s not make this mistake. Or, if we already have, let us not continue to do so.

God’s story of the redemption of mankind is marvelous. And, it all centers on one Person – Jesus Christ. If we can keep that in mind, we will be in the sweet spot. Such glorious truths are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. I’ve Never Done That! (verses 17 & 18)

¹⁷ ‘You shall not murder.

lo tresakh – “no you shall murder.” It is an identical match to Exodus 20:13.

The sixth word. Like the majority of the other commands, this one begins with an absolute negation, lo, or “no.” What follows then is utterly forbidden.

As we saw last week, these Ten Commandments are divided up by scholars in various ways. Some see them as logically dividing between commands 1-4 and then 5-10. The first four showing love for God, the last six showing love for neighbor.

Others divide them 1-5 and 6-10. This would then show a distinction between filial and fraternal matters. The first five show obedience to the parent as children, the latter, respect for others. Either way, as parents are the image of God to the child until the child can reason out who God is, then the fifth commandment is an excellent transition verse for either of these views.

In our interpersonal relationships, this sixth command, you shall not murder, is given because it respects the very life of those we are to love as ourselves. And, because this command deals with interpersonal relationships, it also deals with our duties to God directly as well.

Genesis 1:26 tells us that man is made in the image of God. As this is so, then an attack against God's image-bearer is, therefore, an implicit attack against the One whose image he possesses.

As this is so, murder is not something that can simply be dismissed as merely being on a human level. It is rightfully considered an attack against God. But this command is still rightly considered under the precept of loving one's neighbor.

The word ratsakh, or murder, was introduced into the Bible at the giving of the Ten Commandments in Exodus 20. When we evaluated that, I cited Albert Barnes, who said, "This properly denotes taking the life of another with malice, or with an intention to murder him. The Jews understood it as meaning no more."

That must be amended. It is true that it speaks of intentional taking of life with malice, but it is incorrect that this was understood "as meaning no more." In Numbers 35, the same word, ratsakh, was used time and again concerning the manslayer – regardless as to whether the killing was intentional or unintentional.

Therefore, the word is better defined as "the unsanctioned taking of human life." The command itself is certainly referring to the intentional slaying of another, but the word extends to accidental slaying of another.

Thus, there was the need for cities of refuge to be designated in order to protect those who did take life without sanction, but who did so without malice. To get a fuller and more detailed understanding of this, one should really go watch the Numbers 35 sermon which details these things.

Having now understood this, we can see that translating this sixth command as "kill," rather than "murder," as the KJV does, can only confuse the meaning.

Elsewhere, the Bible mandates that capital offenders such as murderers are to be executed. Further, the killing of another in battle is considered sanctioned killing. Therefore, using the word "kill" instead of "murder" here has led to both a misunderstanding of the intent of the command and a misuse of it against what the law actually prescribes in the execution of offenders or towards soldiers who are legally engaging in warfare.

Because of such a faulty translation, this has even been stretched to imply by some the nonsensical idea that the killing of animals is wrong. This is a complete misuse of the command. In Exodus 12:21, the people were told to “kill the Passover.”

Since then, a jillion times the Bible has spoken of slaughtering animals for both sacrificial and personal uses. Those verses always use entirely different words than the one used here.

As just noted, using the word “kill” here would set up other contradictions in the Bible. Israel has been and will be instructed to destroy certain people groups in battle. These instances are not to be considered as ratsakh, or “murder.” When in Exodus 20, we cited the Pulpit Commentary who said concerning this precept –

“The Israelites are told that to take life is a crime. God forbids it. As usual, no exceptions are made. Exceptions appear later on; but the first thing is to establish the principle.”
Pulpit Commentary

That was and is incorrect. Exceptions, which precede the giving of the law, already existed. In Exodus 17, the Lord told Moses, “Choose us some men and go out, fight with Amalek.” After that, it said, “So Joshua defeated Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.”

The incident predated the law. Therefore, a distinction is made between “killing” and “murder.” The word “kill” is far too broadly rendered, and thus it is a most unfortunate translation. It ignores both previous precedent, and it contradicts later instruction and refinement.

It is noted that all known codes of societal conduct include this precept, either implicitly or explicitly. It is also a precept which predates the law as well. In Genesis 9, after the flood of Noah, the Lord said to Noah –

“Whoever sheds man’s blood,
By man his blood shall be shed;
For in the image of God
He made man.” Genesis 9:6

The willful, intentional murder of another human is forbidden. In order for us to know our own hearts, and the depravity found there – a depravity which is universal in man, we can learn vicariously from Israel about what our own inclinations are.

Israel failed in this command, both individually and collectively, throughout their history. King David, the beloved of the Lord and Israel's sweet psalmist, violated this precept when he had the husband of Bathsheba murdered. Likewise, the people as a whole, on several occasions, are noted for their murders –

“Hear the word of the LORD, O children of Israel, for the LORD has a controversy with the inhabitants of the land.
There is no faithfulness or steadfast love,
and no knowledge of God in the land;
2 there is swearing, lying, murder, stealing, and committing adultery;
they break all bounds, and bloodshed follows bloodshed.” Hosea 4:1, 2 (ESV)

The law was given to show us God's perfect standard. Israel failed in meeting that standard. Concerning this sixth word, something else was needed. The sixth word only condemns; it cannot save.

¹⁸ ‘You shall not commit adultery.

v'lo tneph – “And not shall you commit adultery.” Very few translations get this verse right. Unlike the Seventh Commandment of Exodus 20:14, which says, “You shall not commit adultery,” this one says, “And, you shall not commit adultery.” The KJV paraphrases it by saying, “Neither shall you commit adultery.”

The seventh word. The word naaph, which was introduced into scripture in the giving of the Ten Commandments, deals with literal adultery, but it is also used figuratively in the sense of apostatizing from true faith in the Lord.

As with other commands, this one is in the absolute negation, beginning with v'lo or “And no.” John Lange noted an interesting connection between the first and second command and the sixth and seventh command –

“This commandment holds the same relation to the sixth as the second to the first. Idolatry proper[ly] corresponds with the murder of one's neighbor, the latter being an offence against the divine in man. Image-worship, however, corresponds with adultery, as this too rests on a subtle deification of the image of man; it is spiritual idolatry, as image-worship is spiritual adultery.” John Lange

And so, following the prohibition against murder, the respecting of the bonds of marriage is highlighted. The act of adultery is a violation of the sanctity of marriage and is as if an invasion has been made upon the household.

When a contract of marriage is made, adultery dissolves the intent behind the contract. The offended party no longer has the ability to trust that any other part of that contract applies. This act is so universally accepted as wrong that almost every society known to man has, at one time or another, laws against it and punishments, up to death, associated with those laws.

Only in a society of moral decay and increasing wickedness is this sin considered as acceptable. But in God's eyes, the command remains in force as much today as when it was first given. And in the case of the Bible, the further defining of adultery will show that this is not just a sin targeted against the woman, but the man as well. For example, Leviticus 20 says -

“The man who commits adultery with another man's wife, he who commits adultery with his neighbor's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress, shall surely be put to death.” Leviticus 20:10

In taking another man's wife, the offender has failed to honor and love his neighbor. For his willful act against God and man, he was to be executed along with the woman.

As the word naaph, or adultery, was used for the first time in Exodus 20, it is a good time to consider that until a command is given, there can be no imputation of sin.

It is certain that many people had committed adultery before the giving of the command, but there could be no imputation of sin for the act. Paul explains this in Romans 5 –

“Therefore, just as through one man sin entered the world, and death through sin, and thus death spread to all men, because all sinned—¹³ (For until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed when there is no law.” Romans 5:12, 13

What this means is that from the time the command was given, any committing of adultery carried with it the imputation of sin, and thus guilt. As Paul notes later in Romans 7 –

“I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. ¹⁰ And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death. ¹¹ For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me. ¹² Therefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good.” Romans 7:9-12

Paul is specifically speaking about any command which is given. For whatever reason a command is given, because of our failure to meet the requirements of it, death is the result. This is what occurred in the Garden of Eden. Man was given one command, and it was in the negative –

“Of every tree of the garden you may freely eat; ¹⁷ but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.” Genesis 2:16, 17

Had the Lord not given Adam this command, when Adam ate of the fruit, there could have been no imputation of sin. But because the command existed, sin was imputed. Now consider again, before the command to not commit adultery existed, there could be no imputation of sin for the act.

But from the time the command was spoken forth, any act of adultery would result in the imputation of the sin. As we continue to see, the law does not bring life, it only brings death. It shows us how utterly sinful sin is to God. When a violation occurs, we stand condemned because of our misdeed.

But more, Jesus the Lord, who gave the command to Israel, further explained it to them when He came and taught among them –

“You have heard that it was said to those of old, ‘You shall not commit adultery.’ ²⁸ But I say to you that whoever looks at a woman to lust for her has already committed adultery with her in his heart.” Matthew 5:27, 28

Can anyone of us say that we have fulfilled this law in the manner He set forth? Of course not! But even without Jesus’ further explanation of it, we can consider Israel in relation to the command.

Was Israel free from guilt concerning this commandment? The answer is a definite “No!” Like murder, Hosea 4 shows that the people of the land reveled in sin, including the sin of adultery –

“Hear the word of the LORD,
You children of Israel,
For the LORD brings a charge against the inhabitants of the land:
“There is no truth or mercy
Or knowledge of God in the land.
² By swearing and lying,
Killing and stealing and committing adultery,
They break all restraint,
With bloodshed upon bloodshed.” Hosea 4:1, 2

But Israel was even guiltier because they were told that not only was adultery to be considered a sin of the flesh against one’s fellow man, it was also a sin when committed against God. The prophets, time and time again, told the people that when they bowed to other gods, they committed spiritual adultery against the Lord.

And throughout the Old Testament, the people are shown to have committed exactly this against Him. They had forsaken their Husband and gone after others. They had violated the marriage contract that He established with them in the giving of the law; the law that they agreed to.

We can learn vicariously from Israel by paying heed to both the law and to Israel’s inability to keep the law – even one point of it. The record of their history is one of abject failure. But Israel is simply given as an example of all people in all cultures.

As is evidenced throughout Israel’s history, concerning this seventh word, something else was needed. The seventh word only condemns; it cannot save.

As an extra note, repeated from our Exodus 20 sermon on this command – it is not true that Jesus abrogated it when he had mercy on the adulteress in John 8. The law demanded that she was to be stoned for her crime. When He was asked for His guidance, the response He gave has been often twisted to justify tolerance in the matter–

“He who is without sin among you, let him throw a stone at her first.” ⁸ And again He stooped down and wrote on the ground. ⁹ Then those who heard it, being convicted by their conscience, went out one by one, beginning with the oldest even to the last. And Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst. ¹⁰ When Jesus had raised Himself up and saw no one but the woman, He said to her, ‘Woman, where are those accusers of yours? Has no one condemned you?’

¹¹ She said, 'No one, Lord.'

And Jesus said to her, 'Neither do I condemn you...'” John 8:7-11

If that were the end of the account, which is often where the morally deficient leave off with it, then we may come to a different conclusion about the matter. However, there were a few more words to her before He finished. He said, "...go and sin no more" (John 7:11) What is implied is that Jesus called her actions sinful and that she was to not continue in her sin.

*Murder, me? No, I've never done that Only bad people do that kind of stuff
I've said some mean things though, during an angry spat
But calling that murder, it's just not enough*

*Adultery? No! I've never strayed from my wife
She's so good to me; I just stay at home
Sure, I think about the girl at the store every day of my life
But,, nope! Never from my wife did I roam*

*Wait, I never noticed this before...
The Bible says whoever hates his brother, a murderer is he
And he who looks at a woman in lust, is an adulterer for sure
I've done both of those things... O! Woe is me!*

*Because of this law, I'm digging an awful deep hole
A pit which is set to consume my very soul*

II. Offenses Abound (verses 19 & 20)

¹⁹ 'You shall not steal.'

v'lo tgenov – "And no you shall steal." Once again, unlike Exodus 20:15, the word "And" begins the verse. Other than that, it is identical.

The eighth word. This commandment corresponds to the third. In the making of, and bowing down to, carved images we in essence rob God of His just due. Likewise, when we steal from others, we deny them of what they have a right to. In this, we can see that the structure of the commands is not arbitrary. Instead, it is precise and purposeful.

The word ganav means to carry away, secretly bring, steal away, or get by stealth. What is obvious is that something is being removed in an improper fashion. The word was used several times before the giving of the law. It is what Rachel did when she stole her father's household idols.

It is also what the brothers of Joseph denied doing when they had been accused of taking his cup used for divination. In both of these instances, and in the giving of the command itself, there is the implied concept of "personal property."

The Bible takes this precept as an axiom and then solidifies it in this command. People have a right to their possessions. To unjustly deprive them of what they own is theft.

In the pre-law biblical references, in the moral guidelines of civilized culture, and even in the simple knowledge of right and wrong instilled in man, the concept that stealing is wrong is testified to.

In our Exodus 20 sermon, I cited Charles Ellicott's analysis of this command. It is worth citing again –

"Here, again, law has but embodied natural instinct. The savage who hammers out a flint knife by repeated blows with a pebble, labouring long, and undergoing pain in the process, feels that the implement which he has made is his own, and that his right to it is indisputable. If he is deprived of it by force or fraud, he is wronged. The eighth commandment forbids this wrong, and requires us to respect the property of others no less than their person and their domestic peace and honour." Charles Ellicott

It would be hard to argue that the flint knife made by that man belonged to anyone but him. And yet, the one who is stronger, thus the one in power – whether he has earned the right to it or not – will come and rob what is not his.

This is what governments do all the time. But just because the government has the ability to take away one's personal possessions, it does not mean that it is morally right for them to do so. This is why there is a divide in this matter. On one side, there are conservatives, and on the other, there are liberals.

Conservatives hold that one who earns his keep should retain it. Liberals hold that the shiftless, who do nothing to earn their keep, should be entitled to take from those who have earned it. This is what divides the two in this regard, and it comes down to that one word – power.

When liberals are in power, they pass laws which benefit their own personal agenda at the expense of the efforts of the private individual. This is theft. At what point something which is good for all, such as proper taxation for the continuance of the government, becomes theft may be debatable, but such a point does exist.

Unfortunately, by the time that point is passed, and normally by the way it comes about, there is nothing that the individual can do about it. Adam Clarke rightly states it this way –

“Crimes are not lessened in their demerit by the number, or political importance of those who commit them. A state that enacts bad laws is as criminal before God as the individual who breaks good ones.” Adam Clarke

He is right and it shows the immense guilt of those in power, especially the left, who steal from the rich to give to the poor. Albert Barnes notes that, “The right of property is sanctioned in the eighth commandment by an external rule: its deeper meaning is involved in the tenth commandment.”

The idea that the deeper meaning of the tenth commandment, meaning coveting, is affected by the right to private property is beautifully seen in the account of King Ahab and the vineyard of Naboth in 1 Kings 21.

He coveted Naboth’s vineyard, he had others lie in order to bring accusation against him, and he then had him murdered because of the lie. After that, he stole the property that was left. The violation of one command often results in the violation of several.

Reading about Ahab, and indeed other such accounts like it from the Old Testament, helps us to learn vicariously of what is right and proper, and of what is dastardly. The record is there, if we will just pick it up and read it.

But in reading the word, we not only see the acts committed, but we also see how the Lord takes note of each instance. In Jeremiah 7, we read this –

““Will you steal, murder, commit adultery, swear falsely, burn incense to Baal, and walk after other gods whom you do not know, ¹⁰ and then come and stand before Me in this house which is called by My name, and say, ‘We are delivered to do all these abominations’? ¹¹ Has this house, which is called by My name, become a den of thieves in your eyes? Behold, I, even I, have seen it,’ says the LORD.”” Jeremiah 7:9-11

As with the previous seven words, Israel proved that the law of the Lord only brought guilt. Sin was imputed for their thefts because the law had instructed them that they were to not steal. Concerning this eighth word, something else was needed. The eighth word only condemns; it cannot save.

²⁰ 'You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.

v'lo ta'aneh bereakha ed shav – “And no you shall bear in your neighbor witness empty.” There are two differences here from Exodus 20:16. The first is that this, again, begins with “And.” Secondly, the word false is now changed from sheqer to shav.

The word sheqer signifies an untruth, and by implication a sham or something without cause or justification. The word here, shav, signifies deception or vanity, or that which is empty. It is the word used in Exodus 20:7 –

“You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain, for the LORD will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.” Exodus 20:7

That was repeated here in Deuteronomy 5:11 with the verses that correspond to the Exodus account. It was also used in Exodus 23 concerning circulating a false report.

The ninth word. In Psalm 12, David says –

“Help, LORD, for the godly man ceases!
For the faithful disappear from among the sons of men.
²They speak idly everyone with his neighbor;
With flattering lips and a double heart they speak.” Psalm 12:1, 2

It is a word used quite a bit by David and others in the psalms and elsewhere, and in various applications, but it is always in a negative way. When the Lord speaks, there is purpose, there is substance behind what He says, and what is said is then enduring.

To speak words without substance is a lie. One could speak empty words about himself – “I was a navy seal.” It is harmful because it deprives those who were actually navy seals of the efforts they expended to earn that title. This would then, in a sense, be bearing false witness against one’s neighbor.

One can also obviously speak empty words directly about his neighbor, harming him in the process as well. In this, he can reduce the person's stature in the eyes of others, call into question his integrity, and so on. In Isaiah 59, we read –

“For your hands are defiled with blood,
And your fingers with iniquity;
Your lips have spoken lies, (sheqer)
Your tongue has muttered perversity.
⁴No one calls for justice,
Nor does any plead for truth.
They trust in empty words and speak lies; (shav)
They conceive evil and bring forth iniquity.” Isaiah 59:3, 4

In his words, Isaiah uses both words given in the two sets of Ten Commandments, sheqer and shav. In the Greek translation of this from Isaiah, the words signify lawless and empty, which are pretty close to the intent.

Whether they are direct untruths, or words of emptiness, speaking something that is nothing – and thus an untruth – violates the neighbor, and it disgraces the Lord who is perfectly true in His very being.

In fact, in the book of Titus, it explicitly says that God cannot lie. Because this is His very nature, He is asking us to resemble Him by always testifying to the truth. Further, this was given as a protection of the people. To speak either direct untruths or simply words of vanity against another does nothing to enrich the speaker, but it robs much from the one spoken against.

Not bearing false witness against a neighbor includes a whole multitude of things. We can deprive another of his right to life or property by making false claims. We can slander others, tell false tales about them, or even imply that they have committed a wrong which they have not committed.

But more, we can suppress the truth when it is known in order to harm our neighbor. That must be considered a violation of this command.

Finally, the term “neighbor” here is to be given the broadest application. It doesn't mean “next door,” but anyone in any location. And it doesn't stop with friends, but it extends to enemies. It must be considered an all-inclusive reference to humanity in general.

So far, we have seen that the first eight commandments could not save anyone. The people failed, and the Bible witnesses against them. Now, this ninth commandment does so as well. If we pay heed, and learn vicariously that this is so, we can see that the standard also speaks against us.

Israel is given as the example, we are to learn from it, and we are to reach out for grace. If we don't, we can see that we will be lost. The law was given, and it was disobeyed. Israel failed to uphold even this basic commandment. Harm was done to others, the Lord was offended through their actions, and judgment for violating the words of the covenant was due.

Once again, the law which had been given resulted not in man's blissful reconciliation with God, but rather in the imputation of sin. Concerning this ninth word, something else was needed. The ninth word only condemns; it cannot save.

*Steal? Me? No, I never did such a thing
Everything I have I earned on my own
Such an accusation, well, it makes my ears ring
All the food I have, comes from what I have grown*

*And bear false witness? Come on, not a chance
I never say anything that isn't true
My words are like a perfectly choreographed dance
It's the truth! Why would I lie to you?*

*Well, yeah, I did take that kid's toy back in first grade
And I did say things about some people that just weren't true
It's just a couple little mistakes that I've made
God doesn't care... it's all past. On a bell curve, I'm a lot better than you*

III. A Sin of the Heart (verses 21 & 22)

²¹ 'You shall not covet your neighbor's wife; and you shall not desire your neighbor's house, his field, his male servant, his female servant, his ox, his donkey, or anything that is your neighbor's.'

Again, there are differences between these words, and of those in Exodus 20:17. The verse begins, again, with "And" in the Hebrew. From there the things Moses names are listed differently than they were before –

Deuteronomy 5

Neighbor's wife
Neighbor's house
His field
And his manservant
And his maidservant
His ox
And his donkey
And all that is your neighbor's

Exodus 20

House of neighbor
Wife of neighbor
And his manservant
And his maidservant
And his ox
And his donkey
And all that is your neighbor's

The wife is placed first before house, and "field" is added. That is obvious. But, there is another difference as well. In Exodus 20, the word khamad or desire, coming from a root meaning "to delight in," is used twice when speaking of all of the items.

However, here in Deuteronomy, Moses uses the word khamad only when referring to the neighbor's wife, and then for the rest of the items, he changes to the word avah – to desire, crave, or lust after.

Both words are used negatively and positively throughout Scripture. Therefore, to have these feelings is not necessarily wrong. Rather, it is wrong when those feelings are transferred to something to which an individual has no right.

To understand the changes, the most obvious change – that of adding the field of the neighbor – should be considered. The standard reason given by most scholars is that Israel is about to enter the land of Canaan, and so Moses adds it in.

That doesn't make sense. Israel was expected to go in and possess the land forty years earlier as well. They were to possess houses and fields. Further, some of Israel had already been given their inheritance east of the Jordan. So that cannot be the reason.

One reason for this is certainly because some of them had already received their land. They were to be content with what they had been allotted now that they had their possession.

Secondly, and a little more spiritual, is that seven is the number of spiritual perfection. God originally listed seven items. Now seven items are considered under the house, just as it was in Exodus 20, but the wife is elevated above the house, making an eighth – the number of superabundance, new beginnings, and that of a new series. Each of these fits right in with the thought of Israel now obtaining the promise that they had missed 38 years earlier.

As for the addition of the new word, avah. This is given to dispel the lies one might tell himself about his own heart – “Well, I desired his field, but I didn’t lust after it.” Moses is destroying the argument of semantics. He is saying that what you look at, if it is not yours, is not to be salivated over by twenty drops off of your lip, and not by even one drop off of your lip. This is...

The tenth word. As I said, elsewhere in the Bible, the same words are used in a positive sense, such as in the 19th Psalm, where David uses khamad –

“The judgments of the LORD are true and righteous altogether.
¹⁰ More to be desired are they than gold,
Yea, than much fine gold;
Sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.” Psalm 19:9-10

Later, Isaiah uses the word avah –

“With my soul I have desired You in the night,
Yes, by my spirit within me I will seek You early;
For when Your judgments are in the earth,
The inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.” Isaiah 26:9

Therefore, the desiring of a thing is not in and of itself wrong. It is desiring a wrong thing, or desiring something in an unhealthy way, which violates this commandment. What is most important about this tenth commandment is that it is solely of intent, and thus we learn that the Lord is aware of our intent.

The Bible says nothing is hidden from the eyes of the Lord and here we have an explicit reference to that. What we covet, unless acted upon, remains in our heads alone. And yet it is not unknown to the Lord.

And though this commandment is one solely of intent, it is that very intent which can so easily lead to disaster. The first two uses of the word khamad in the Bible are found right at the beginning of it all. Just after forming the man, and even before the Bible records any words having been spoken to him, we read this, which includes the word khamad –

“And out of the ground the LORD God made every tree grow that is pleasant to the sight and good for food. The tree of life was also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.” Genesis 2:9

After this, man was given his single command -

“Of every tree of the garden you may freely eat; ¹⁷ but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.” Genesis 2:16-17

However, on the next page comes the most unfortunate of verses which uses this same word, khamad -

“So when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree desirable to make one wise, she took of its fruit and ate. She also gave to her husband with her, and he ate.” Genesis 3:6

The lust of the eyes, the lust of the flesh, and the pride of life all stepped in and took hold of the first people who existed. They coveted that which was forbidden, and the world was plunged into darkness, pain, and death.

And the same is true with the word avah. Its first two uses were after the giving of the Ten Commandments, and while the people were on their way to Canaan –

“Now the mixed multitude who were among them yielded to intense craving; so the children of Israel also wept again and said: ‘Who will give us meat to eat?’”
-Numbers 11:4

After that, we read –

“But while the meat was still between their teeth, before it was chewed, the wrath of the LORD was aroused against the people, and the LORD struck the people with a very great plague. ³⁴ So he called the name of that place Kibroth Hattaavah, because there they buried the people who had yielded to craving.”
-Numbers 11:33, 34

So much for semantics. When we desire more than what the Lord offers us, we fall into sin. The thing which seems so innocuous and so relatively unimportant compared to all the rest of the commandments is that which causes the greatest of troubles.

And what is equally surprising is that the first command ever broken, and the first command that was violated just after Israel's departure from Sinai – both of these examples – started with the last of the Ten Commandments. And each time, it resulted in death!

As this reflects an evaluation of the inner being of man, and the Lord is He who searches the hearts and the minds, then who can say they stand guiltless before God? Can Israel? The answer is, of course, "No." From the time of the giving of the law, until the very last pages of the Old Testament, Scripture is replete with the failure of both individuals and the collective whole to meet the demands of this inward test.

In Numbers 11, the congregation craved after meat; in Joshua 7, Achan the son of Carmi coveted the plunder of Jericho; in 2 Samuel 11, David coveted another man's wife; in 1 Kings 21, Ahab coveted another man's vineyard, and in Micah 2 we read this about the people -

“Woe to those who devise iniquity,
And work out evil on their beds!
At morning light they practice it,
Because it is in the power of their hand.
²They covet fields and take them by violence,
Also houses, and seize them.
So they oppress a man and his house,
A man and his inheritance.” Micah 2:1, 2

As with all of the previous commandments, Israel failed. The word of God stands as a testimony against them and as a means for us to vicariously learn how far short of God's standard we actually come.

Concerning this tenth word, something else was needed. The tenth word only condemns, it cannot save. The law itself says that the man who does the things of the law will live by them. But then the rest of the Old Testament goes on to show that no one could do the things of the law.

²² “These words the LORD spoke to all your assembly,

This means “The Ten Words,” meaning the Ten Commandments. The changes between Exodus and Deuteronomy cannot be taken as either errors or contradictions. The Lord presented the Ten to Israel, and Moses repeated the Ten to them.

22 (con't) in the mountain from the midst of the fire, the cloud, and the thick darkness, with a loud voice;

These words confirm what was already said in verse 4:11, and 4:12. Verse 4:11 describes the scene, and verse 4:12 notes that the Lord spoke out of the midst of the fire.

22 (con't) and He added no more.

This is only speaking of the verbal presentation to the people, not additional words of law. The Lord spoke out the Ten Words in the terrifying way to the people, and then He ceased from speaking. After that, He only spoke to and through Moses, and later at times to Aaron, words of law.

22 (fin) And He wrote them on two tablets of stone and gave them to me.

This actually occurred later. Moses went up the mountain to receive the tablets. While there, he also received a great deal of instruction over the next forty days. At the end of that time, as was seen in Exodus 34, and as will be seen again in Deuteronomy 9, he was then given the tablets of stone.

As we know, Israel turned from the Lord while he was on the mountain, and the first set of tablets were destroyed by Moses. It pictured Israel's failure to meet the law that they had just received. A second set of tablets was made, and these were deposited within the Ark of the Covenant, picturing Christ who both fulfilled and embodies the law.

It is only through what He accomplished that the life God promised to restore to man can be obtained. We have gone through ten basic commandments, and we have seen that Israel violated all of them – openly and as is clearly recorded.

This is for us to learn through them that what we need is less of the law and more of God's grace. When we arrogantly stand on the law for our justification, we tell God that we can do better than He has done. Let us never stand in such an unfavorable light. Rather, let us rush to Christ, receive His forgiveness, and be reconciled to God through Him.

Think of it! As the Lord's voice bellowed out each commandment, He was looking forward to the penalty for each violation of it, knowing that He would someday assume that penalty for us. The display of judgment that accompanied these Ten Words was taken upon Himself... for us, and the cup of God's wrath was drained at the cross of Calvary. Thank God for Jesus Christ.

Closing Verse: "And He was withdrawn from them about a stone's throw, and He knelt down and prayed, ⁴² saying, 'Father, if it is Your will, take this cup away from Me; nevertheless not My will, but Yours, be done.'⁴³ Then an angel appeared to Him from heaven, strengthening Him. ⁴⁴ And being in agony, He prayed more earnestly. Then His sweat became like great drops of blood falling down to the ground.'" Luke 22:41-44

Next Week: Deuteronomy 5:23-33 It's a good question, and you surely wonder why... (Now, Therefore, Why Should We Die?) (22nd Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Learning Vicariously - Hopefully! Part II

¹⁷ 'You shall not murder.

¹⁸ 'You shall not commit adultery.

¹⁹ 'You shall not steal.

²⁰ 'You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.

²¹ 'You shall not covet your neighbor's wife; and you shall not desire your neighbor's house, his field, his male servant, his female servant, his ox, his donkey, or anything that is your neighbor's.'

These words the LORD spoke to all your assembly
In the mountain from the midst of the fire, like a roar
The cloud, and the thick darkness, with a loud voice
And He added no more

And He wrote them on two tablets of stone
And gave them to me, when I was with Him alone

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 5:23-33 (Now, Therefore, Why Should We Die?)

In today's passage, the leaders of the people – having received the Ten Commandments and knowing that more laws are coming – present themselves to Moses. They have seen the terrifying display of sight and sound, and they no longer want to experience it.

They have an immense fear because of what they have seen and heard. And so, they ask that the words of the Lord will come through Moses rather than directly. Without a doubt, this is in hopes that it will lessen the effects of fear upon their lives.

But what difference does it really make? What is it about receiving the law through Moses that will make any difference at all? Today we will consider that in hopes of understanding what is being conveyed to us in this – and I mean this sincerely – really marvelous passage.

Text Verse: “Do you look at things according to the outward appearance? If anyone is convinced in himself that he is Christ's, let him again consider this in himself, that just as he is Christ's, even so we are Christ's. ⁸ For even if I should boast somewhat more about our authority, which the Lord gave us for edification and not for your destruction, I shall not be ashamed— ⁹ lest I seem to terrify you by letters. ¹⁰ ‘For his letters,’ they say, ‘are weighty and powerful, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.’ ¹¹ Let such a person consider this, that what we are in word by letters when we are absent, such we will also be in deed when we are present.”

-2 Corinthians 10:7-11

The people at Corinth had made the error of thinking that Paul's words in his letters were not a reflection of who he was as a person. When he was present with them, he appeared like a weak person, and his speech left a lot to be desired.

He also worked making tents to support himself, instead of insisting that those he ministered to support him. Everything about Paul seems unimpressive. However, when he wrote them letters, he was always much more authoritative.

Because of this, they began to think his letters were not a reflection of who he was as a person. In his words here, he corrects them of that thinking. Just because he came to the people in a timid manner did not mean he could not present himself with the commanding authority of an apostle.

In correcting them, he says that what he says in his letters when absent from them is exactly how he can be when he is with them. In fact, he had already said that to them in his first letter when he said, “What do you want? Shall I come to you with a rod, or in love and a spirit of gentleness?” (1 Corinthians 4:21).

His words were a reflection of who he was, whether he displayed himself with power or not. This is what Israel, in our passage today, and throughout the rest of their history, has failed to understand about the Lord.

It is not how one appears at any given time that people need to be concerned with. It is who the person (or in the case of Israel – the Lord) is by nature that needs to be considered. The Corinthians attempted to disassociate Paul from his words. Israel will attempt to do that today as well. But it doesn’t work that way.

Stay tuned for another exciting adventure into God’s superior word. It is coming right now. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. From the Midst of the Darkness (verses 23-27)

Moses has just finished recounting the Ten Commandments. After repeating them, he finished up that portion of the narrative with, “These words the Lord spoke to all your assembly, in the mountain from the midst of the fire, the cloud, and the thick darkness, with a loud voice; and He added no more. And He wrote them on two tablets of stone and gave them to me” (5:22).

With that fresh on our memories, we start into what occurred after that awesome display. The words of the passage ahead are an expansion of what was seen in Exodus 20. There it said –

“Now all the people witnessed the thunderings, the lightning flashes, the sound of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking; and when the people saw it, they trembled and stood afar off. ¹⁹Then they said to Moses, ‘You speak with us, and we will hear; but let not God speak with us, lest we die.’” Exodus 20:18, 19

Moses will take that short narrative, and he will go into more detail than Exodus did. It is for good reason too, as we will see. And so, he begins the passage with...

²³ “So it was, when you heard the voice from the midst of the darkness, v'hi ke-shameakhem eth ha'qol mitok ha'khoshek – “And it came to pass when you heard the voice from midst the darkness.”

Four times in the previous chapter, and four times in this chapter, the text says that the Lord God spoke mi'tok ha'esh, or “from midst of the fire.” In fact, that was said in just the previous verse, and it will be said again in the next verse to come. And yet, here it says, mi'tok ha'khoshek, or “from midst of the darkness.”

There is no contradiction here. In verse 5:22, which we just cited, it said the voice came “from the midst of the fire, the cloud, and the thick darkness.” Therefore, the voice resounded from out of the entire display – both fire and darkness. But it has been the fire that has been the main source of focus. Now it says only “the darkness.”

Such a change is not without purpose, and it shouldn't be passed over without a careful analysis of why it has been introduced. And yet, I found no commentary on the reason for the change – as if it had no bearing on the narrative.

The symbolism of the fire is obvious. The words are words of law, and with the introduction of law comes the knowledge of sin. With the introduction of that knowledge, the act of sinning becomes a foregone conclusion. With the act comes a violation of the law, and with the violation comes judgment. The voice out of the fire is one of judgment.

However, the darkness implies obscurity and a lack of understanding. There is an inability to properly comprehend. Darkness also signifies a lack of fraternity. The Bible puts light as revelation and understanding. But it also gives the sense of friendliness and a right relationship for those who draw near to it.

What this means, then, is that there is the lack of a close relationship between the voice and the hearers of the voice. And more, there is a lack of understanding by them as well. In seeing this, the words of verse 27 are explained. The people will say to Moses, “You go near and hear all that the Lord our God may say.”

As soon as that became evident, it was pretty obvious there would be a chiasm to reveal this more fully. Having laid out the verses to see if there would be one, sure enough... this is what came up –

Deuteronomy 5:23-5:27 – A Consuming Fire
When God Speaks with Man (06/22/20)

- a. “So it was, when you heard (shama) the voice from the midst of the darkness,
- b. while the mountain was burning with fire, that you came near to me (qarav)
- c. His voice from the midst of the fire. We have seen this day that God speaks with man; yet he still lives.
- d. Now therefore, why should we die?
- e. For this great fire will consume us;
- d. then we shall die
- c. the voice of the living God speaking from the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?
- b. You go near (qarav) and hear all that the LORD our God may say,
- a. and tell us all that the LORD our God says to you, and we will hear (shama) and do it.’

The people heard, but the display was terrifying and unfriendly. Therefore, they asked to hear through a mediator only. They came near to him in order to have him go near to the Lord. This is exactly what a mediator does. He is the access point between two parties that lack a close bond which would make a mediator unnecessary.

The entire passage opens us up to what is going on, simply because of a change from the words “from the midst of the fire,” to “from the midst of the darkness.”

²³ (con’t) while the mountain was burning with fire, v’hahar boer baesh – “and the mountain was burning in the fire.” While the voice proceeded from the darkness, the mountain was in the fire, and it was burning with the fire.” The mountain is a place of authority, as in a government seat. Therefore, the symbolism is that of an authoritative place of judgment.

The people grasped this. There is no sense of fraternity between the issuing forth of the law. Rather, there is only a state of judgment and of being consumed because of the words of authority issuing forth in the frightful display. And so, Moses recalls...

²³ (con’t) that you came near to me, va’tiqrevun elai – “and you came near to me.” The same word, va’tiqrevun, was seen in verse 4:11, which said –

“Then you came near and stood at the foot of the mountain.”

The people had drawn near to the place where the Lord sat and where He issued forth words of law, and that didn't go over too well. The people were overwhelmed and could not bear up under the terror of the fearful display their eyes had beheld. Because of that, the people now approached Moses. It was...

²³ (con't) all the heads of your tribes and your elders.

Here, the word shevet, or tribe is used. There are other words translated as tribe as well, but this word looks to the political aspect of the tribe. In this, it includes the heads and elders.

In other words, it wasn't just the common folk, the women, and the children who were afraid of what they saw, but even the tribal heads and elders in the community. All of them had seen what they saw, and all were filled with terror, thus...

²⁴ And you said:

va'tomeru – “And you said.” Moses had just said that it was the heads of the tribes and the elders. Now, speaking to those gathered before him, he says, “And you said.” What was spoken by the leaders of Israel is as if it is spoken by all of Israel, for all time.

If Moses were alive today, he could say the exact same thing to the people of Israel, and it would have exactly the same effect. They could say, “We weren't there at Sinai. This doesn't apply to us.” If so, Moses could say, “Yes, you said this is what you wanted, and so this is how it is.”

The giving of the law, and everything associated with it, is a one-time and for-all-time event for the people of Israel. Until the covenant is annulled in Christ for them, they are bound to it.

²⁴ (con't) 'Surely the LORD our God has shown us His glory and His greatness, and we have heard His voice from the midst of the fire.

These men – speaking for Israel – acknowledge that what they have seen was from Yehovah Elohenu, or “Yehovah our God.” There can be no denying this afterwards, as if the source of the law was out of Moses' own head.

They further acknowledge that the voice was accompanied by His glory, His greatness, and that it issued forth from the fire. These things are remembered to impress upon the minds of the new generation that Moses was not the source of the law.

Rather, its source is not only a god, as if some unseen entity, but the God, who provided a majestic display to reveal His greatness. In doing so, He has thus revealed the greatness of the law which proceeds from Him. Everything spoken here is connected to the law which is to guide Israel throughout their history.

²⁴ (con't) We have seen this day that God speaks with man;

Here it says that God speaks with ha'adam, or “the man.” It is a way of referring to humanity. There were men and women, young and old – all gathered before Him and hearing His voice. All of them came from their first father, the man, Adam.

It is a way of verifying the Genesis account to the people where the Lord God spoke to Adam in the Garden of Eden. But it also surely brought up the memories of what happened after the fall. There was no longer worry-free conversation, but fear. After they had eaten of the fruit, it said –

Then the LORD God called to Adam and said to him, “Where are you?”

¹⁰ So he said, “I heard Your voice in the garden, and I was afraid because I was naked; and I hid myself.” Genesis 3:9, 10

The people sense what Adam also understood. This is certain because they next say...

²⁴ (con't) yet he still lives.

v'khai – “and lives.” And yet, all of them lived. The people appear to have been familiar with the Genesis narrative, even at such an early time after being brought out of Egypt. If so, they knew that Adam was told that on the day he ate of the fruit, he would die.

Adam was afraid, but Adam didn't die. At least not physically. The people have made the assumption that the record was speaking of physical death, something they now also feared. But the Lord was speaking of spiritual death. Those who heard the law spoken out were already spiritually dead. The law could not fix that.

In their lack of understanding, they equated what was spoken to Adam as what would also occur to them – physical death. In order to avoid that, they continue...

²⁵ Now therefore, why should we die?

This is the center of the chiasm, and it shows the terror of being in the presence of God without an appropriate covering. Adam was in the Lord's presence covered in fig leaves. The fig signifies a connection to God, or its lack thereof. They had sewn the leaves themselves, signifying their own works. In this, they were afraid.

The people of Israel were in the same position. They heard the words of law, they were not covered in the Lord's holiness, and they knew that they would die because of it. Concerning the words, "Why should we die?", Charles Ellicott notes –

"The instinctive dread of death awakened by the Divine presence, and especially by the declaration of the Divine law, bears eloquent testimony to the truth that man was made to bear the Divine likeness, and to live a holy life." Charles Ellicott

He is correct in this. But what is more, is that the people realized that the words of the law would, in fact, bring death, and that by the law they could not live the holy life they were called to. In adhering to the law, it would be possible, but they would not be able to do so.

Thus, even at this moment in their history, only minutes after receiving the Ten Commandments, it was evident that the law was to be a tutor to lead man to Christ. In reality, nothing more could be expected of the law than that. Without Christ, there is only the anticipation of judgment. They even acknowledge it openly...

^{25 (con't)} For this great fire will consume us;

We saw in a couple of sermons from Chapter 4 that the fire, the cloud, the darkness, and the other events the people heard and saw were only displays of the Lord's power, they were not actually the Lord. Rather, He was hidden from their eyes.

Thus, it isn't the really the fire that they should have feared, but the Lord who called out from the fire. Though it will be seen that they partially understand this, they don't fully. Israel's attention was focused in the wrong place. That continues to be seen from the next words as well...

^{25 (con't)} if we hear the voice of the LORD our God anymore, then we shall die.

The people understand that the voice of the Lord God is the Source of what is to be feared. They have equated the voice of the Lord with the terrible display their ears heard and their eyes beheld. However, they will misunderstand what that means.

If the voice of the Lord was accompanied with that terrifying display, and if the voice of the Lord is a reflection of what the Lord expects, then it doesn't really matter if they actually hear the voice of the Lord or not. It is what the voice conveys that is actually to be feared. The people have only partially grasped what they needed to grasp.

And that continues on to this day in Israel. For now, the elders there before Moses continue on in their lack of fully grasping the situation by saying...

²⁶ For who is there of all flesh who has heard the voice of the living God speaking from the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

The question of the men there before Moses demands a negative answer. There is no one who had heard such things. And yet, because these things are written in the law, it is actually irrelevant if the voice of the living God speaking from the midst of the fire is literally heard or not.

In the Talmud, it is said that when the Ten Commandments were spoken out, all of the nations of the world heard the words of the law – all in their own language. There is nothing to substantiate this outside of the Talmud.

It is probable that whoever wrote that had heard about the Day of Pentecost, and how the believers in Christ spoke in all of the tongues of the peoples. In hearing that, he simply coopted the account and made the same claim about the giving of the law at Sinai. But more to the point, the law was only given to Israel – not any other country. But, as I said, it is actually irrelevant.

The words of the law are recorded – not just the Ten Commandments, but all of those received by Moses from the Lord as well. They are no less the words of the Lord, and how they are received is of far less importance than what the words say.

The display was only intended to alert the people to this fact. But it didn't sink in as it should. They only picked up on the importance of the transmission of the words, but not on the importance of the Source of the words, or of the words themselves. That continues to be evident from their next words...

27 You go near and hear all that the LORD our God may say,

These words correspond to what was said in verse 23. There, the people came near to Moses. Here, the people ask Moses to go near the Lord. They wanted to distance themselves from the Source of the words they heard. Thus, Moses was to function in a mediatorial role in receiving the words of Yehovah.

And so, there is supposedly safety both in distance and in how the words of law are transmitted to them. But, if the Lord is God, there is actually no distance between Him and the people.

And more, if the Lord is God, there is no difference in how the word gets to them. The Source is the same, and so the weight of the law remains wholly unchanged.

Remember what Paul told the Corinthians in our opening today. He is the same person, whether he is present or whether he is writing them a letter. His apostolic authority remained unchanged.

If you think about it, the people there with Moses would have been better off to have the words transmitted directly to them by the Lord. The terrifying effect would have remained, and thus the desire to not violate His word would have been ensured.

How can we know this is so? Because the cloud remained atop Sinai while Moses went up to receive the rest of the law from Him. But without being spoken to directly, they assumed that they could do as they wished. The people who received the law were the same people who made a golden calf to worship while the cloud remained right there in full view.

They asked for breathing space. Moses was to receive the words of the Lord...

27 (con't) and tell us all that the LORD our God says to you, and we will hear and do it.'

These words end the chiasm which began in verse 23. The people heard the voice of the Lord "from the midst of the darkness." There was no light, no friendliness, and no comprehension transmitted to the people, only words of law.

They are asking Moses to bring back the word in hopes of there being light, affability, and understanding. This is what a mediator is chosen for. When parties cannot meet personally, they will have a mediator to go between them.

When parties have no mutual friendliness, they will have a mediator to bring about harmony. And when parties have no ability to harmoniously communicate their words, they have a mediator to bring about peace between them.

This is all hoped for and anticipated, but they are not sending words to the Lord. Rather, the covenant is one-sided. They agreed to whatever the Lord would say. It is His covenant, and they had bound themselves to it. They were obligated to simply “hear and do” what the Lord spoke forth.

Despite this, and knowing all that would lie ahead, the Lord responds according to their words...

*When God speaks to man, “It is man’s duty to obey!”
Whatever the precept that is given, so shall it be
We are to observe all the Lord does say
And it will go well with us most certainly*

*When He says, and He does mean, “You shall not eat pork”
That is the command for that particular time
But if He later says, “All foods are clean,” stick in your fork
The previous law is no longer a crime*

*When the Law of Moses is fulfilled in Christ, it has met its end
Now a new reality for God’s chosen has been found Because from heaven, God – His grace in Christ did send
We are now free from the law, because that grace does abound*

*Thank God for Jesus Christ our Lord
From Him God’s infinite grace is outpoured*

II. That You May Live (verses 28-33)

²⁸ “Then the LORD heard the voice of your words when you spoke to me, and the LORD said to me:

The expression, “heard the voice,” signifies more than just hearing the sound. It is a way of saying, I hear, understand, and have processed what is being conveyed. The people made a proposition to Moses. The Lord both heard what they said, and the intent of the words was understood by Him. In response to this, He says...

²⁸ (con't) 'I have heard the voice of the words of this people which they have spoken to you. They are right in all that they have spoken.

The Lord's response here cannot go without being combined with what is said in Deuteronomy 18 –

“The LORD your God will raise up for you a Prophet like me from your midst, from your brethren. Him you shall hear, ¹⁶ according to all you desired of the LORD your God in Horeb in the day of the assembly, saying, ‘Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, nor let me see this great fire anymore, lest I die.’

¹⁷ “And the LORD said to me: ‘What they have spoken is good. ¹⁸ I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their brethren, and will put My words in His mouth, and He shall speak to them all that I command Him. ¹⁹ And it shall be that whoever will not hear My words, which He speaks in My name, I will require it of him.” Deuteronomy 18:15-19

Unlike Israel who has only looked at the effects of the giving of the law – meaning the terrifying display, the Lord has looked upon the entire matter. He not only gave them the effects to see and fear, He gave them the words which issued from Him – who is to be feared.

The leaders of Israel assumed that in the removing of the effects, the terror of the law would be lessened. The Lord knew it would not. Therefore, on the VERY DAY the law was given, the Lord is acknowledging that not only was the display needing to be changed, but the entire covenant was as well.

The Mosaic Covenant, by its very nature – with or without the display – was a covenant of death. Therefore, a New Covenant was needed – a Christ covenant. This isn't seen now in Chapter 5, but it is seen by including the words of Chapter 18.

Moses' mediation of the Law could not remove the terror of the law. Only in Christ's coming, fulfilling the law, and establishing a New Covenant in His blood could the terror be removed. It is that, not obedience to the law which was now being given, that the Lord next speaks of...

²⁹ Oh, that they had such a heart in them

It is the heart that the Lord evaluates. This is evident throughout Scripture. The Pharisees did the things of the law, but they didn't care diddly about the Lord who gave the law. That is evidenced by Jesus' own words.

The people observed the law, added in their own commands which twisted the law, and it didn't bother them a bit to do so. In response to this, and citing Isaiah, He said –

“These people draw near to Me with their mouth,
And honor Me with their lips,
But their heart is far from Me.
⁹ And in vain they worship Me,
Teaching as doctrines the commandments of men.” Matthew 15:8, 9

The Lord recognized that the people feared the Lord as they stood before Moses, but He also knew that this fear was not based on who He was, or what His word (which reflects His nature) said. Rather, it was based on how He presented Himself when He spoke out His word. In removing the terrible display, their hearts would no longer be moved to fear Him.

Is this so? Of course it is. The same Lord who gave this law came and dwelt among them. He also spoke out to them His word. And yet, they rejected who He was and what He said. Hence, the Lord continues, knowing it would be so...

²⁹ (con't) that they would fear Me and always keep all My commandments,

The words of Chapter 18 are exactly what the Lord is referring to here. Again...

“I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their brethren, and will put My words in His mouth, and He shall speak to them all that I command Him. ¹⁹ And it shall be that whoever will not hear My words, which He speaks in My name, I will require it of him.” Deuteronomy 18:18, 19

The Lord, in the Law of Moses, commanded the people to listen to the Prophet like Moses. That IS a part of keeping all His commandments which He now refers to in Chapter 5. To fail to fear Christ Jesus, is to fail to fear the Lord. And to fail to obey the words of Christ Jesus is to fail to keep the commandments of the Lord. One plus one will always equal two in proper theology.

It is with this thought in mind, and while citing Hebrews 12, that Charles Ellicott rightfully and beautifully states what is going on – right here in Deuteronomy 5:29 –

“But it must not be forgotten that He ‘whose voice then shook the earth’ is the very same Person who ‘speaketh from heaven’ now. He who pronounced the Law in the letter writes it on the heart by His Spirit. The Angel of the covenant and the Prophet like unto Moses are one. He who gave the Law on Sinai died under it on Calvary, and provided for its observance for ever.” Charles Ellicott

What Ellicott means is that in coming to Christ, the law is observed by us in Him. We are merited with perfect adherence to the law because Christ perfectly adhered to the law. What He did is imputed to us, and its effects are forever. We are not under law, but we are in Christ, and thus under grace.

For those in Christ, all is well. For those who do not come to Christ, such is not the case. That is why the Lord adds in this qualifier...

²⁹ (con’t) that it might be well with them and with their children forever!

It can only go well when one’s heart fears the Lord and observes His commandments. But one cannot fear the Lord, nor can he observe His commandments if He doesn’t obey His commandments – all of them.

As heeding the Prophet like Moses, meaning the Lord Jesus, is such a commandment, then only when one directs his heart to Jesus can it go well with him and his children forever.

As a point of clarity in the Hebrew, a literal translation of this verse is a bit different than the English. It says, “Who will give, and become heart this in them, to fear Me, and to keep all my commandments all the days.”

In other words, they have at this moment a heart that fears the Lord, but He knows that will not continue. And so, He rhetorically asks, “Who will give them such a heart that will be like this forever?” If they refuse such a heart, it cannot occur.

It is a marvelous verse that demonstrates the freewill of man. Israel rejected such a heart, and they set their course for the time being. However, it will happen. The answer to the question is found in Jeremiah 31, and which is then cited by the author of Hebrews –

“For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put My laws in their mind and write them on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people. ¹¹ None of them shall teach his neighbor, and none his brother, saying, ‘Know the LORD,’ for all shall know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them. ¹² For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their lawless deeds I will remember no more.”

-Hebrews 8:10-12

It is the Lord who will do so, giving them what they have lacked for so long when they call out for it. It is a marvelous promise of future restoration for Israel. For now, the Lord next says...

³⁰ Go and say to them, “Return to your tents.”

The people had been called from the dwellings to stand before the Lord. The Lord spoke, the people feared, and the leaders came to Moses on behalf of the people and made their petition. The Lord agreed to their request, and so the Lord now instructs them to return, once again, to their tents...

³¹ But as for you, stand here by Me,

Only Moses remains to hear the word of the Lord. And so, he is instructed to amad, or stand, there by the Lord. Thus, it signifies that he is to receive what the others cannot. They stood before the Lord, but they will do so no longer. Only Moses will stand...

^{31 (con't)} and I will speak to you all the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments

The translation is incorrect. It says, kal ha'mitsvah v'ha'khukim v'ha'mishpatim – “all the command (it is singular) and all the statutes and all the judgments.” The law is a codified body which is to be dutifully obeyed. It is a single command which is then defined by the statutes and judgments of which it is comprised.

^{31 (con't)} which you shall teach them,

These are to be taken down from the mouth of the Lord and transmitted to the people for their observance. Thus, he is fulfilling the role of both receiving and instruction. It is a mediatorial position as an appointed lawgiver.

^{31 (con't)} that they may observe them in the land which I am giving them to possess.'

With the record of the Old Testament and the gospels complete, we can see what Israel could not see. The record stands that they were given the law, they did cross Jordan, and they did not observe the law. This is evidenced all the way through until the work of Christ was complete.

Thus, this verse can only truly be appreciated in the knowledge of Christ. The land anticipates a return to paradise. The Jordan anticipates the life and work of Christ. Thus, observing of the law is anticipated in what Christ accomplishes.

This takes us back to Ellicott's words, "He who gave the Law on Sinai died under it on Calvary, and provided for its observance for ever." Thank God for Jesus Christ.

³² "Therefore you shall be careful to do as the LORD your God has commanded you;

The words now return from the Lord speaking to Moses back to Moses speaking to the people. He is imploring them to do as the Lord had instructed a full generation earlier.

Again, like the previous words, what is stated here can only be appreciated in Christ's fulfillment of these things. The record has been faithfully written down – from the time of Joshua, even through the words of Malachi. They were not careful to do what they had been commanded...

^{32 (con't)} you shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

This must mean more than just doing as commanded, but it surely includes not adding to what has been given. In other words, to turn one way would be to disobey the law, but to turn another would be to add to the law that which was not law. It is what Jesus really got down on the leaders for at His time.

The people failed to do as the Lord commanded, they turned aside with almost every turn of the page, and they walked in a crooked and contrary manner to the word and will of the Lord. They were not careful to do as they were so instructed, and they added instructions that then twisted the law.

Again, thank God for Jesus Christ. Israel is merely a template of each of us – wandering through our lives completely disconnected from the reality of God. And yet, He intervened in time and did what Israel could not do, and – indeed – what we have each failed to do. Thank God for Jesus Christ.

³³ You shall walk in all the ways which the LORD your God has commanded you,

Once again, Moses implores his audience to conduct their lives according to that which the Lord has commanded. In both testaments, the idea of the word “walk” is one which signifies to conduct one’s affairs.

To walk in the ways the Lord has commanded, is to conduct one’s affairs according to the commands of the Lord. And like in the giving of the Fifth Commandment, Moses adds on a note of promise for those who do so...

³³ (fin) that you may live and that it may be well with you, and that you may prolong your days in the land which you shall possess.

The words here are similar to those of verse 4:1—

“Now, O Israel, listen to the statutes and the judgments which I teach you to observe, that you may live, and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers is giving you.” Deuteronomy 4:1

However, there is a difference in the word “live.” An additional letter, a nun, is affixed to the end of it in this verse. Instead, of tikhyu, it says tikhyun. The addition of this letter gives fuller sense of the word so that it means something like “that you may have abundant life.”

Therefore, Moses is speaking plainly to the people about real life in Canaan. To be observant to the laws will bring about prosperity and abundant life, and it will bring about an extension of their time in the land without fear of exile.

But that brings us to the obvious picture of Christ. If our observance of the law is found not in ourselves, but in Christ, then it is – even from an evaluation of the Law of Moses – a note of the eternal joy and the eternal security of the believer.

The commandments in Christ are found to be fulfilled by faith in Christ. In that faith, the law is fulfilled on our behalf, and in that fulfilling, true life is found. In that, the word calls us overcomers, and in overcoming, we are sealed with a deposit which is our guarantee of redemption from this world to the land which we will possess.

How anyone can read the Bible and find only insufficiency in the work of Christ concerning the salvation of man is almost incredible. Is that what God promises us? Eternal insecurity because of the insufficiency of the cross of Christ?

No! Rather, God has done for us what we could not do for ourselves. And, all He asks us to do is to simply reach out, by faith, and accept it. Let us hold fast to the truth that what God has done is both complete, and it is fully sufficient to bring us home to Himself.

Israel was given a mediator for receiving the law of the covenant. He is a mediator that says, "You are to do these things that the Lord has instructed through me." Israel was offered another Mediator for a New Covenant. He is a Mediator who says, "I have done all that was instructed for Israel to do."

The question is, will you observe all those things that Israel was instructed to do, or will you trust that Christ Jesus has done them for you? Choose wisely. Choose Christ – to the glory of God and to the saving of your soul. Thank God for Jesus Christ. Great things He has done!

Closing Verse: "And for this reason He is the Mediator of the new covenant, by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions under the first covenant, that those who are called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance." Hebrews 9:15

Next Week: Deuteronomy 6:1-5 How does this sync with, "God gave His only begotten Son?" (The Lord our God, the Lord is One) (23rd Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Now Therefore, Why Should We Die?

So it was, when you heard the voice
From the midst of the darkness
While the mountain was burning with fire
That you came near to me, all the heads of your tribes
-----and your elders, me to address

And you said: Surely the LORD our God

Has shown us His glory and His greatness
And we have heard His voice
From the midst of the fire; we heard His address

That God speaks with man, we have seen this day
Yet he still lives, and is not taken away

Now therefore, why should we die?
For this great fire will consume us
If we hear the voice of the LORD our God anymore
Then we shall die; it shall be thus

For who is there of all flesh
Who has heard the voice of the living God
Speaking from the midst of the fire
As we have, and lived? Such a notion is flawed

You go near and hear all that may say the LORD our God
And tell us all that the LORD our God to you does say
And we will hear and do it
So we confirm to you this very day

Then the LORD heard the voice of your words
When you spoke to me, and the LORD said to me, so He did do
I have heard the voice of the words of this people
Which they have spoken to you

They are right in all that they have spoken
Oh, that they had such a heart in them; a heart so wise and clever
That they would fear Me and always keep all My commandments
That it might be well with them and with their children forever!

Go and say to them, "Return to your tents"
But as for you, stand here by Me
And I will speak to you all the commandments, the statutes
-----and the judgments
Which you shall teach them, speaking to them plainly

That they may observe them in the land

Which I am giving them to possess; so they will understand

Therefore you shall be careful to do
As the LORD your God has commanded you

You shall not turn aside
To the right hand or to the left, but the narrow path
-----shall be your guide

You shall walk in all the ways
Which the LORD your God has commanded you
-----so to you I address
That you may live and that it may be well with you
And that you may prolong your days in the land
-----which you shall possess

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 6:1-5 (The Lord Our God, the Lord is One)

In these are found words that are familiar to people who may not have ever read the Bible. Or, they may have such an impact on the world in which we live, or the theology that we espouse, that they stand alone as marvels of wonder and delight.

In our sermon today, we will have such a verse. It is considered by many Jews as the centerpiece of their morning and their evening prayer services. It was cited by Jesus in the New Testament, and it was given to reveal exactly the opposite of what many people find in it. Adam Clarke explains this for the Jews who have rejected Jesus Christ –

“When this passage occurs in the Sabbath readings in the synagogue, the whole congregation repeat the last word תַּחַד achad for several minutes together with the loudest vociferations: this I suppose they do to vent a little of their spleen against the Christians, for they suppose the latter hold three Gods, because of their doctrine of the Trinity.” Adam Clarke

Text Verse: *“Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying:
‘Whom shall I send,
And who will go for Us?’” Isaiah 6:8*

In his words, Isaiah says, va’eshma eth qol Adonai – “And I heard the voice of Adonai.” That means, he heard the voice of the Lord, Yehovah. The words of Yehovah then said, omer eth mi eshlakh u-mi yelek lanu – “Whom shall I send, and who will go for Us.”

Unless one gets what Moses is saying in today’s passage, the words of Isaiah, and indeed many of the words of Scripture, make absolutely no sense at all. But in our evaluation of the word today, we will work to make sense out of these things, and to put a right sense of reason into our theology – a God-centered reason.

In doing so, so much of what is otherwise argued and debated over will fall into its proper place. Of course, one must actually accept that the evaluation is correct, and that what Moses is saying is as we will consider it. To this day, what I will tell you is rejected by the unbelieving Jews.

But it is they who have been exiled for two thousand years, and it is they who have suffered for their unbelief. For supposed Christian denominations to follow suit in their thinking is suicidal. Let us think clearly, let us reason things out from the greater panorama of Scripture, and may our conclusions be honoring of the Lord God who has so meticulously revealed Himself to us in Scripture.

May it be so, and may it be to His glory. Marvelous wonders are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Be Careful to Observe It (verses 1-3)

The opening words of Chapter 6 follow exactly in accord with those of the previous chapter. The people had heard the voice of the Lord, they had seen the terrifying display that accompanied it, and they had heard the words of law – the Ten Commandments.

The entire display was so great and terrifying that they asked for Moses to hear the words of the Lord, and to then convey His words to them. In response, we read the following –

“Go and say to them, ‘Return to your tents.’³¹ But as for you, stand here by Me, and I will speak to you all the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments which you shall teach them, that they may observe them in the land which I am giving them to possess.” Deuteronomy 5:30, 31

While there, we saw that the translation was incorrect. It said, kal ha'mitsvah v'ha'khukim v'ha'mishpatim – “all the command (it is singular) and all the statutes and all the judgments.” The law is a codified body of law which is to be dutifully obeyed. It is a single command which is then defined by the statutes and judgments of which it is comprised.

Chapter 6 now opens with the same thought, but this time it is, almost, correctly translated...

¹“Now this is the commandment, and these are the statutes and judgments

The word “commandment” is singular, and the words “statutes” and “judgments” are plural. They are also prefixed by definite articles. There is the duty of the law, meaning the commandment, and then there are the statutes and the judgments which define that law, and which comprise it.

What may have happened in this translation is that a different set of translators was assigned to the previous chapter, or a different translator within a committee did one chapter and another did the next. Otherwise, it is hard to guess why they would translate the same words, separated by only three verses, differently.

However it came about, it is a great lesson for us once again. If we hang our hat on a single translation, we will inevitably come to erroneous conclusions about things.

It is one thing to read the word in a general form as we do each day, and it is another to do an in-depth study and rely solely on whatever translation we happen to have at the time. For example, the KJV got both of these verses wrong. Thus, an error in thinking concerning our theology can be the only result. For now, Moses continues the thought with...

^{1 (con't)} which the LORD your God has commanded to teach you,

These words, again, follow from verse 5:31. As we just cited, the Lord said, “stand here by Me, and I will speak to you all the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments which you shall teach them.”

The Lord spoke out the commandment, and Moses was instructed to then, lamad, or teach the people out of that spoken command. Moses is to be the one to goad the people, prodding them along in order that they may learn to be obedient to the Lord. And the purpose is so...

^{1 (con't)} that you may observe them in the land which you are crossing over to possess,

Again, the words follow after verse 5:31, with a noticeable difference. There, it said, “that they may observe them in the land which I am giving them to possess.” Moses changes the words slightly because he is not going into Canaan with them.

The Lord said, “which I am giving them to possess.” Moses now says, “which you are, overim, or ‘crossing over’ to possess.” It is referring to ha’yarden, or the Jordan, which means “the Descender,” and which pictures the coming of Christ.

Moses is not crossing over anything. As I have highlighted a couple times, the verb overim, or “cross over,” is identical in spelling to the noun ivrim, or Hebrew, which means “Passer Over.”

There is, seemingly, a subtle pun and an implied theological lesson for us in the words. The Passer Overs will be crossing over, but the law is not a Passer Over. If not by the law, then it must be by faith. This takes us back to Abraham, the first person noted as a Hebrew. Of him, the book of Hebrews says –

“By faith Abraham obeyed when he was called to go out to the place which he would receive as an inheritance. And he went out, not knowing where he was going. ⁹ By faith he dwelt in the land of promise as in a foreign country, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; ¹⁰ for he waited for the city which has foundations, whose builder and maker is God.”

-Hebrews 11:8-10

The same theme keeps repeating. The inheritance is not of law, but rather it comes by faith. Moses’ inclusion of the words atem overim shammah, or “you are crossing over there,” open up the passage, and they solidify the same theological message that carries throughout all of Scripture – the just shall live by their faith.

The typology is so clear. With the coming of Christ, those who are to enter heaven must do so apart from the law (pictured by Moses). They must come by faith. Deeds of the law are excluded.

For Israel, however, this does not negate that they are given law, and they must live out their lives under the law in order to instruct the people of the world concerning its need for God’s grace. And so, Moses continues...

² that you may fear the LORD your God,

The words of verse 1 were in the plural – you all who are a part of the whole. The words now transition to the singular – you, Israel, as a people who are the whole.

The teaching of the commandment and the statutes and judgments serves two purposes. The first is a proper relationship with God – l’maan tira eth Yehovah elohekha – “to the end purpose that you may fear Yehovah your God.” This was the explicit reason given by the Lord in Deuteronomy 4 –

“Gather the people to Me, and I will let them hear My words, that they may learn to fear Me all the days they live on the earth, and that they may teach their children.” Deuteronomy 4:10

This was repeated towards the end of Chapter 5 as well. Moses repeats it here, noting that this is the first and main purpose of the giving of the law. And that fear of the Lord is demonstrated in obedience. As he next says...

^{2 (con't)} to keep all His statutes and His commandments which I command you,

If a father lays out a list of things for his children to do, and they don't do any of them, or if they do only some of them (the fun stuff), or if they do a shoddy job of the things they do, then there is obviously no fear of dad, and there is no respect for dad.

But if he is a good father, the things he assigned were intended to be for the good of the family, to help them to learn respect, diligence, and to be industrious. Further, they are to keep the family mutually working towards a good goal, and for the productive, happy, and healthy living of the children who are given the instruction.

These, and reasons like them, are also the intents of the law. First and foremost, they were to excite in the people the fear of the Lord, but they were also intended for those of subsequent generations as well. As Moses says, it is for...

^{2 (con't)} you and your son and your grandson, all the days of your life,

The children of the father that doesn't pass on the value of money will – within a single generation – squander the wealth of those who came before them. The father that doesn't pass on conservative values to his children will have sniveling children who are incapable of handling the responsibilities of life.

Cherished traditions, honor, respect, diligence in work, and on and on – all of these must be trained into one's children and into the grandchildren after them. When this doesn't happen, the values set before the people in times past will be lost. And so will fear of the Lord. But this is quickly what Israel failed to do –

“So the people served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders who outlived Joshua, who had seen all the great works of the LORD which He had done for Israel. ⁸ Now Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died when he was one hundred and ten years old. ⁹ And they buried him within the border of his inheritance at Timnath Heres, in the mountains of Ephraim, on the north side of Mount Gaash. ¹⁰ When all that generation had been gathered to their fathers, another generation arose after them who did not know the LORD nor the work which He had done for Israel.” Judges 2:7-10

The people failed to heed the words of Moses, and the following generations departed from the fear of the Lord. What would be the outcome? Before we see, we need to understand the second purpose for the teaching of the commandment and the statutes and the judgments which follows logically and inevitably from the first...

² (con't) and that your days may be prolonged.

A fear of the Lord leads inevitably to prosperity, especially that of life – both quality of life and length of life. When Israel failed to do as instructed and the subsequent generations didn't know the Lord, the result was –

“Then the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served the Baals; ¹² and they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt; and they followed other gods from among the gods of the people who were all around them, and they bowed down to them; and they provoked the LORD to anger. ¹³ They forsook the LORD and served Baal and the Ashtoreths. ¹⁴ And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel. So He delivered them into the hands of plunderers who despoiled them; and He sold them into the hands of their enemies all around, so that they could no longer stand before their enemies. ¹⁵ Wherever they went out, the hand of the LORD was against them for calamity, as the LORD had said, and as the LORD had sworn to them. And they were greatly distressed.” Judges 2:11-15

Both the quality of life, and the length of the lives of many were affected through what occurred. The days of the people were not prolonged. The choice was set before Israel, and each generation had to decide how they would carry the charge set before them. For now, Moses continues...

³ Therefore hear, O Israel, and be careful to observe it, that it may be well with you,

The words remain in the singular. Moses is speaking to Israel as he would to a single person. “You, Israel, are to be careful to observe.” And there are reasons for this. The first being, “that it may be well with you.”

The implication, obviously, is that if they failed to observe, it would not go well with them. And that is what we saw, right out of the gate of their history. For the first generation after Joshua, things didn't go well with them.

Obviously, this doesn't mean everyone. There were certainly those who prospered, even while the nation was being plundered and despoiled. While some were cut down in battle, others lived long lives, never facing danger. But as a people, they faced the judgment of the Lord for having forgotten the fear of the Lord.

Moses next adds on another benefit of carefully observing the charge set before them...

^{3 (con't)} and that you may multiply greatly

For just this clause alone, the words return to the plural – v'asher tirbun meod – “and which you (all) may multiply greatly.” It only makes sense that he would change to the plural here. He is speaking to Israel as a whole, but Israel is made up of people.

And so, to entice them to careful observance of the command, he says, “Israel, do these things so that it will go well with you.” And then one can imagine him sweeping his arm across the congregation and saying, “And so that each and every one of you may multiply greatly.”

He is calling for national blessing in order to stir up national unity, but he also calls for individual blessing in order to stir up self-worth within the nation which will, in turn, further stir up national unity. Any great leader will do the same. He will focus on the whole while focusing on the individual within the whole.

^{3 (con't)} as the LORD God of your fathers has promised you—

The words of this clause, and the next, are debated by scholars. Are these words referring to what was just said – meaning long life and days being prolonged – or are they referring to the next clause, meaning “a land flowing with milk and honey. Both could be possible. The Lord has already said this to the people –

“You shall therefore keep His statutes and His commandments which I command you today, that it may go well with you and with your children after you, and that you may prolong your days in the land which the LORD your God is giving you for all time.” Deuteronomy 4:40

And, the Lord has already said this to the people –

“So I have come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up from that land to a good and large land, to a land flowing with milk and honey.” Exodus 3:8

So, it could go either way. Much of the reason for the confusion is the wording of the next clause...

³ (con’t) ‘a land flowing with milk and honey.’ eretz zavat khalav u-debash – “land flowing with milk and honey.” There is no preposition, such as “in,” even though many translations toss it in there. The NKJV adds in a long hyphen as a pause – “as the Lord God of your fathers has promised you—‘a land flowing with milk and honey.’”

Others add in commas to make it read, “because Yahweh, the God of your Fathers, has promised you a land flowing with milk and honey” (Holman).

With the varying views, it is obvious that what is said is complicated, and I don’t like complicated. And so, I would suggest to you that the entire thought of verses 2-3 is parenthetical and it should read as follows –

“Now this is the commandment, and these are the statutes and judgments which the LORD your God has commanded to teach you, that you may observe them in the land which you are crossing over to possess, (vs 1)

² — that you may fear the LORD your God, to keep all His statutes and His commandments which I command you, you and your son and your grandson, all the days of your life, and that your days may be prolonged. ³ Therefore hear, O Israel, and be careful to observe it, that it may be well with you, and that you may multiply greatly as the LORD God of your fathers has promised you — ‘a land flowing with milk and honey.’ (vs 2-3)

This highlights the two main purposes for observing the commandment – fearing the Lord and the expected blessings upon the people – to be contained within the thought of verse 1, exactly where it should be. It then ties “the land which you are crossing over to possess” directly in with “a land flowing with milk and honey.”

In this, the thought flows properly, and there is no need to finagle the Hebrew by adding in words or thoughts not in the original. And yes, the Hebrew can bear this translation. It is completely supportable.

So, the next time you come to this passage in your reading, remember that everything in verses 2 and 3 is probably parenthetical, right up to the last clause where it resumes the narrative. That is my best analysis of this for you on this otherwise difficult section.

As far as the term, “a land flowing with milk and honey,” this is the first of six times it will be seen in Deuteronomy, more than any other book in Scripture. As this is the first use of it here, and because it is such a commonly used term in Scripture, it would be good to review its meaning.

A land flowing with milk and honey implies richness and fertility. Milk comes from cows and so it means abundant pasture lands. Honey comes from bees which pollinate flowers and so it implies all sorts of fruit trees, herbs, and flowers.

And more, for Israel the term “a land flowing with milk and honey” will also possess a spiritual connotation. For them, it doesn’t just speak of the physical abundance but also of spiritual abundance because of the Lord, and because they are the Lord’s people, through whom the word of God comes.

The word of God is said to be sweeter than honey. It is also equated with milk which nourishes. Thus, this is a reference to that as well. The land would literally flow with milk and honey for sustaining Israel’s physical lives. It would also flow with milk and honey for sustaining their spiritual lives.

It is a certainty that if the promise of the Lord’s word concerning the abundance of the land is true, so should the abundance of His blessing upon them for adhering to His word – summed up in the very commandment, statutes and judgments which He is referring to right now – also be true. With this understood, we now turn to one of the most important verses in all of Scripture to consider...

*I am the Lord Your God, and I am One
There is none other than Me
But the thinking is not flawed to say I have a Son
And together with the Spirit, we are One but We are Three*

I was there before the world came to be

*And I am here now, right now, with you as well
And I shall be ever-present for all eternity
The never-ending story is the one that I tell*

*And so, you shall love the Lord your God
Love Me with all your heart and soul and might
With every step you take and on every path you trod
In Me you shall rejoice, and in Me you shall delight*

II. Sh'ma Yisrael (verses 4, 5)

⁴“Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God, the LORD is one!

shema Yisrael Yehovah elohenu Yehovah ekhad – “Hear Israel! Yehovah our God; Yehovah One!” Deuteronomy 6:4 is simply known as the Shema, or “Hear.” In this, the last letter of the first word, ayin, and the last letter of the last word, dalet, are written by scribes considerably larger than the surrounding text, thus they form the Hebrew word ed – witness.

Thus, the Shema is considered as a witness to Israel, testifying to something. Israel is to thus pay heed to what is said, learning from its instruction, and applying its truths to their national character.

The verse can be translated four distinct ways, but the two main ideas of any of these translations comes down to either 1) the unity of Yehovah; one being, or 2) the fact that Yehovah is Israel’s only God. The latter has already been established numerous times, including in the First Commandment – “I am Yehovah your God” which is followed by “You shall have no other gods before Me.”

It has also been established in Deuteronomy 4 that no image of the Lord should be made to represent Him because the people saw no form when He spoke to them from the mountain.

For these, and other reasons, this is certainly not referring to the fact that Yehovah is Israel’s only God – an already established fact – but that Yehovah is one being. Of this, Albert Barnes rightly states –

“This weighty text contains far more than a mere declaration of the unity of God as against polytheism; or of the sole authority of the revelation that He had made to Israel as against other pretended manifestations of His will and attributes. It asserts that the Lord God of Israel is absolutely God, and none other. He, and He alone, is Jehovah (Yahweh) the absolute, uncaused God; the One who had, by His election of them, made Himself known to Israel.”

Matthew Poole succinctly then states it, “One in essence, and the only object of our worship.” The statement proclaims the unity of Yehovah, and this is necessary, but it is also problematic, isn’t it, because Yehovah has already been revealed in various, otherwise contradictory ways, unless the words are taken properly.

Of the Shema, scholars give their thoughts along various lines, but many of them will – in one way or another – comment in accord with what Charles Ellicott says here –

“‘We worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity.’ But this truth, though visible in the Old Testament by the light of the New, was not explicitly revealed until it came forth in history, when the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world, and both sent the Holy Spirit to represent Him in the Church.” Charles Ellicott

Ellicott (and others) say that even though the Trinity is visible in the Old Testament, it is not explicitly revealed. This is true, but the argument is always made against the Jewish belief that there is one absolute God, meaning a monad.

In this, the analysis is faulty because Yehovah is clearly identified as a physical presence in the Garden of Eden. He is also identified as a physical being, a Man, in Genesis 18:1, 2. Moses has already shown that there is more to Yehovah than meets the eye.

This will continue to be true again in Joshua 5:15; Judges 6:15, 16; Judges 13; Isaiah 6; Zechariah 12:10, and elsewhere. Though the set “Trinity” could not be deduced from the Old Testament, a plurality within the Godhead could. Only a presuppositional bias against this premise would result in the denial of such.

The words of this verse in no way deny the possibility of a unity within a plurality, and that is the point that Moses must make, and that he is – in fact – making. If he didn’t, there would then be a contradiction in what he has already recorded within the Torah.

In order to allow for what he has already shown – such as Abraham meeting with the Man who is Yehovah, he carefully chose his words. The final word of the verse, ekhad, means one. But it is often used in the sense of one inclusive of many.

For example, Genesis 2:24, using the word ekhad, says, “Therefore a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and they shall become (l’basar ekhad) to one flesh.”

Genesis 11:6 says that the people of the world are am ekhad, one people. They are many comprising one. A cluster of grapes is one, and yet it is comprised of many grapes. However, in Genesis 22, the word yakhid is used three times to describe Isaac – “your only son.” It signifies one and only one. It is used this way throughout the Old Testament to identify a singularity with no plurality.

As Moses used ekhad, it is painfully obvious that he was making a theological point to substantiate what he already knew. He had already written out the Genesis narrative and he knew that God identified Himself in the plural in Genesis 1:26. The Lord also appeared to Abraham, and yet Moses knew that no man could see the face of the Lord and live – as he was told in Exodus 33:20.

Therefore, Moses was fully aware that Yehovah is a plurality within a unity. Hence, he chose ekhad rather than yakhid to speak forth the Shema.

Further, we can know – with all certainty – that Moses’ words here refer to the unity of the Lord and not that He is Israel’s only God, because Jesus cites the Greek translation of the Shema in Mark 12:29, affirming that it is referring to the Oneness of the Lord.

The scribe who answered him confirms this as well, showing that this is the accepted meaning of the Shema –

“Well said, Teacher. You have spoken the truth, for there is one God, and there is no other but He.” Mark 14:32

The immense importance of a plurality within the unity of Yehovah will continue to be revealed to Israel, attempting to wake them up to the coming of Messiah. This is why when Christ came and they rejected Him, it was not a mere man, but Yehovah whom they rejected. This is evidenced, for example, in the words of Matthew 22 –

While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, ⁴² saying, “What do you think about the Christ? Whose Son is He?”

They said to Him, “The Son of David.”

⁴³ He said to them, “How then does David in the Spirit call Him ‘Lord,’ saying:

⁴⁴ ‘The LORD said to my Lord,

“Sit at My right hand,
Till I make Your enemies Your footstool” ’?

⁴⁵ If David then calls Him ‘Lord,’ how is He his Son?” ⁴⁶ And no one was able to answer Him a word, nor from that day on did anyone dare question Him anymore.

-Matthew 22:41-46

Jesus plainly asked them who the Messiah would be. They knew, from their own Scriptures, that He would be the son of David. But then Jesus clearly shows them that He would be Yehovah, because He then cites the 110th Psalm, a messianic psalm.

In David’s words, it says, “Yehovah said to Adonai. Sit at my right hand.” Adonai is simply a formal way of David referring to Yehovah. Thus, Yehovah was having a conversation with Yehovah, and yet David identifies them as different entities.

What we are seeing here in Deuteronomy 6 is Israel’s schooling in the nature of God which began in Genesis 1:1 with the creation by Elohim, which continued with the creation in Genesis 1:2 by the Ruakh Elohim, or Spirit of God, and which was then further elaborated on in Genesis 1:26 which said –

“Then God said, ‘Let Us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness.’”

-Genesis 1:26

From there, it continued to be refined in Genesis 2 where Yehovah was introduced –

“This is the history of the heavens and the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens. Genesis 2:4

Each step of the way through the biblical narrative, God is revealing Himself to us a little bit at a time. It is true that the Trinity is not explicitly revealed as such in the Old Testament, but the concept of a plurality within a unity is not only revealed, it is incontrovertible.

It is this statement known as the Shema which now resolves the numerous otherwise contradictory statements thus far revealed through Moses. It shows that they are not, in any way, to be taken as contradiction, but as statements of fact which need to be considered and evaluated in light of the God who inspired Moses to write them.

From this verse in Deuteronomy, Joshua will not be considered to be a blasphemer when he worships the man with the drawn sword in Joshua 5, even though he has been instructed just one chapter earlier here in Deuteronomy to have no other gods before Yehovah, nor was he to bow down to them nor serve them.

Otherwise, the life of Joshua, within the span of less than two months, would be a completely contradictory, faithless life – destined to be cast into the pit of hell for having rejected the words of the Lord through Moses.

But through the simple use of a single word, ekhad, Moses has opened up the narrative of Scripture into one of wonder, amazement, and indeed antici.....pation concerning who the coming Messiah will be.

Instead of being stoned for blasphemy, David's words of the 110th Psalm will be pondered, contemplated, and meditated over for generations to come. And the incredible words of Zechariah 12:10 will not only make sense after they are fulfilled, they will perfectly fit with all that the other prophets testified to –

“And I will pour on the house of David and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem the Spirit of grace and supplication; then they will look on Me whom they pierced. Yes, they will mourn for Him as one mourns for his only son, and grieve for Him as one grieves for a firstborn.” Zechariah 12:10

There is one God, and one God alone. There is no other God. And He is Yehovah, the God of Israel – uncaused, eternal, and unchanging. He was, and is, and is to come. And He is Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Three persons in one Essence. Hear O Israel! The Lord our God, the Lord is one! ...

⁵You shall love the LORD your God

When Jesus cited the Shema to the people who confronted Him, He didn't just cite that and then begin to explain. Rather, citing the Shema was part of a greater discourse –

Then one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, perceiving that He had answered them well, asked Him, “Which is the first commandment of all?”

²⁹ Jesus answered him, “The first of all the commandments is: ‘Hear, O Israel, the LORD our God, the LORD is one. ³⁰ And you shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your strength.’ This is the first commandment. ³¹ And the second, like it, is this: ‘You shall love your neighbor as yourself.’ There is no other commandment greater than these.”

³² So the scribe said to Him, “Well said, Teacher. You have spoken the truth, for there is one God, and there is no other but He. ³³ And to love Him with all the heart, with all the understanding, with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love one’s neighbor as oneself, is more than all the whole burnt offerings and sacrifices.”

³⁴ Now when Jesus saw that he answered wisely, He said to him, “You are not far from the kingdom of God.” Mark 12:28-34

This is the continued thought that Moses speaks out now, saying, v’ahavta eth Yehovah elohekha – “and you shall love Yehovah your God.” The words here, and throughout the verse, continue to be in the singular. Moses is speaking to Israel as a single entity. The heart of Israel is to love Yehovah their God.

What does it mean to love Yehovah? In the context of Moses’ discourse – which is talking about observing His commandments – it means to obey His commandments.

One cannot say, “I love Yehovah,” and yet not obey His commandments. Because He is God, His words are a reflection of who He is. Unlike humans who lie for pretty much any reason, thus demonstrating a disconnect between their words and who they are, there is no disconnect between the Lord and His words.

A person may say, “I was once a navy seal,” and he could be a complete liar concerning that. We can dismiss his words, and not be unloving in the process. But when the Lord issues forth a word, it reflects His very being. Therefore, in rejecting what He commands is to reject who He is.

Unfortunately, this is taken to unintended extremes by cults all the time. For example, the Hebrew Roots movement will cite 1 John and apply those words to the law we are now looking at –

“He who says, ‘I know Him,’ and does not keep His commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.” 1 John 2:4

“For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments.” 1 John 5:3

This is an error in theology. The Law of Moses is not what John is referring to. In fact, he never refers to the commands of Moses in his writings in such a manner. He is always referring to the New Covenant in Christ, and the words commanded by Him.

Though it is perfect, and though it perfectly reveals the intent of God, the Law of Moses is only a partial and an incomplete revelation of God. Jesus Christ is the final and full revelation which the Law of Moses only anticipated.

Thus, to love God is to keep His commandments, and to do so in the context of the times in which a person lives. This is why the psalmist was well-pleasing to God. In the 119th Psalm, the psalmist says again and again that he loves the Lord's commandments, His word, His precepts, His testimonies, and His law.

He loved the Lord because He loved what the Lord had revealed of Himself. There was no disconnect between the two. With this understood, Moses next says...

⁵ (con't) with all your heart,

b'kal l'vavekha – “with all your (singular) heart.” It is the collective heart of Israel. They were to love Yehovah with all of this heart. The heart is the seat of reasoning and understanding in the Bible. Israel was to consider the commandment of the Lord and to apply it to its life. It was to be an ongoing and active process.

If someone violated a commandment, he was to offer the appropriate sacrifice for it, in obedience to the command. If a person committed a capital offense, Israel was to execute the criminal in obedience to the command. If the nation transgressed as a whole, they were to follow the precepts of the law to make right the wrong that was done.

In 1 Samuel 21, David was faced with such an infraction which had been committed by his predecessor, King Saul. David took the appropriate action to remedy it. This is what it means to love the Lord with all your heart. It is to reason out what has been done to offend, and to then act in accord with the command to rectify it.

⁵ (con't) with all your soul,

u-b'kal naphsekha – “and with all your soul.” The soul is what animates the being. The soul of Israel then is that which animates Israel. It is the life, the breath, and the determination of the people. To love the Lord their God would mean that even unto death, they would be faithful to Him.

Though not of the covenant people, Job was such a soul, saying, “Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him” (Job 13:15). Likewise, the psalmist spoke of the full confidence he had in the Lord, knowing that holding fast to Him, even in the face of death, was a reward all by itself –

“Whenever I am afraid,
I will trust in You.
⁴In God (I will praise His word),
In God I have put my trust;
I will not fear.
What can flesh do to me?” Psalm 56:3, 4

The soul of Israel was to love the Lord their God, holding nothing back. And then, finally, Moses instructs them...

⁵ (fin) and with all your strength.

u-b'kal meodekha – “and with all your strength.” The word meod signifies muchness, force, or abundance. One could consider the word vehemence. It is holding nothing back as one sets his course. Thus, the strength of Israel was to be expended on the Lord God – solely, without holding back, and entirely.

This would not lastly, but firstly, include their wealth. When people work for a set goal, it is with the strength they have to obtain what they want. If it is a person’s desire to increase in wealth, then it should also be the person’s desire to use that wealth as a way of demonstrating his love for the Lord.

Unsurprisingly, Jesus uses this exact example to show the hearts of the people in Luke 21 –

“And He looked up and saw the rich putting their gifts into the treasury, ²and He saw also a certain poor widow putting in two mites. ³So He said, ‘Truly I say to you that this poor widow has put in more than all; ⁴for all these out of their abundance have put in offerings for God, but she out of her poverty put in all the livelihood that she had.’” Luke 21:1-4

Our physical person is often completely tied up in the wealth we possess. This woman’s next meal was to be her strength, and the money to buy that meal was indicative of where her love was directed. And so, giving up her meal, and thus her source of strength, she showed that she loved the Lord her God with all of it.

In the end, to love the Lord your God is not merely to make a profession with the lips, but to then put the total source of who one is – the heart, soul, and strength – behind that profession, yielding to the Lord all of it at all times.

As a point to close on today, it must be noted that when the Scribes and Pharisees came to Jesus with their question concerning the greatest commandment, He gave His response as we noted, citing the Shema and then to love the Lord and one's neighbor.

After that, in both Matthew and Mark, the next thing that is mentioned is Jesus then asking them whose Son the Christ would be. Everything in the gospels is placed in a particular manner to form a particular context.

It is when they answered that He would be the Son of David that Jesus then cited the 110th Psalm that we looked at. He did this for a reason. He was trying to call their attention to the fact that the Shema says there is one God, and yet there is a plurality within the Godhead that is allowed by the Shema – as testified to by David.

It is the central theme of Scripture, one which goes from the very first page of the Bible even to its very last – Jesus Christ is God. In fact, the very definition of antichrist, which will be our closing verse today, is to deny this fundamental tenet of Scripture. John defines it in both 1 John and 2 John as being such.

Therefore, when we are told that God is one, and that Jesus is God, that is to be accepted and acted upon. We are to receive Him as such, glorifying God the Father through our pronouncement. And then, we are to love Yehovah our God – meaning inclusive of the incarnate Word, Jesus – with all of our hearts, souls, and strength.

We are to obey the commandments of God in order to demonstrate that we truly love God. And John shows us where the beginning of that love is found. He says, "This is the work of God, that you believe in Him whom He sent" (John 6:29).

To love God is to believe God and to do the work of God. And that work is to honor the Son whom God has sent. The passage today has shown us that there is no contradiction in the word. Rather, it is laid out, step by step and in a methodical manner, in order to reveal to us what God has been doing in the stream of time to bring us back to Himself.

Let us apply what we have learned, accept what God has revealed, and bring glory to God through the honoring of His Son. And, let us do so with all of our hearts, souls, and strength. May it be so.

Closing Verse: “Who is a liar but he who denies that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist who denies the Father and the Son. ²³ Whoever denies the Son does not have the Father either; he who acknowledges the Son has the Father also.” 1 John 2:22, 23

Next Week: Deuteronomy 6:6-15 And the crier cries out a resounding chord... (Beware, Lest You Forget the Lord) (24th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Lord Our God, The Lord is One

“Now this is the commandment, and these are the statutes
-----and judgments

Which the LORD your God has commanded to teach you
That you may observe them in the land
Which you are crossing over to possess, so you are to do

That you may fear the LORD your God
To keep all His statutes and His commandments
-----which I command you
You and your son and your grandson, all the days of your life
And that your days may be prolonged too

Therefore hear, O Israel, and be careful to observe it
That it may be well with you
And that you may multiply greatly as the LORD God of your -----fathers has promised you—
A land flowing with milk, and honey too

“Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God, the LORD is one!
You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart
With all your soul, and with all your strength
You shall do this all your days, not just at the start

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You

May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 6:6-15 (Beware, Lest You Forget the Lord)

In the passage today, Moses will carefully instruct Israel on the Source of the good things they will receive. In this, there will be no place for boasting in their own greatness. What is coming will be handed to them on a silver platter, and all they have to do is take it, and then remember where the goodness they have come from.

It won't work, and Israel will do exactly what they are admonished to not do in the years ahead. It will be a costly lesson for them. As far as Israel today, one might say it is different for them. They went into a land that was totally barren, filled with typhus, malaria, and a host of other diseases, and they subdued it.

They basically started from scratch and built it up to what it is today. Is there a difference? Can they boast in their own goodness and righteousness because of this? Well, they certainly do. They take full credit for all of their success, and they do so without acknowledging that the Lord was behind it.

But the answer to the question is, "No. There really is no difference, and no, they have no right to boast in and of themselves for what they have." Why?

It is because the Lord said, in advance, that He would return them to the land, that He would build them up and watch over them, and that their accomplishments are because He has done so. But lest we point at Israel and mock them for refusing to see this, we need to know that it is a problem in the church as well – one that goes back to its very inception...

Text Verse: "For who makes you differ from another? And what do you have that you did not receive? Now if you did indeed receive it, why do you boast as if you had not received it?" 1 Corinthians 4:7

Those at Corinth were boasting in who they aligned with – be it Peter, or Paul, or Apollos. But who is it that gave each of these leaders his ability? It was the Lord.

If a group goes into a royal palace and the one on the throne has gifts prepared for each of them. Who will they thank – the attendant who brings them the gift, or the one on the throne who offered it? The answer is obvious. Paul asked them to think.

Further, Paul's words make it clear that what they have as individuals, they received. There could be no arguing against it, and so his question was intended to be like a sharp knife, cutting away their pride. In essence, "Of course you have received all that you have, so why would you boast as if you had earned it?"

In the end, this is true for all things. If you have a big house and lots of money, it is because God gave you the time, intelligence, place, strength, and so on to earn those things. So, do you say how great you are, or do you thank God for His grace upon your life? If you understand properly, it is God who must be given the credit.

No matter what you have, it ultimately came from God. We, like Israel, need to understand this and remember it. In not remembering, we will end up as Israel did, pursuing paths which are unsound and detrimental to our walk with the Lord. Such truths as this are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Teach Them Diligently (verses 6-9)

⁶“And these words which I command you today shall be in your heart.

Moses will now give instruction concerning the law which has thus far been spoken out, and which he will continue to expound to the people that certainly includes what was just said in verses 4 & 5 –

“Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God, the LORD is one! ⁵You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your strength.”

-Deuteronomy 6:4, 5

This is to be considered a command. Thus, it cannot be taken as an emotional love, but a volitional one. The people of Israel were to make a concerted effort to love Yehovah with all of their heart, with all of their soul, and with all of their strength.

But rather than “in your heart,” the Hebrew reads al l'vavekha, or “upon your heart.” As we have learned, in the Bible, the heart is the place of intellect, reason, and understanding. The people were to commit this love of the Lord to their memory.

It was to be as if it was inscribed directly on the heart, or as if a weight was laid upon the heart in order to convict anytime they began to stray. The same term, “upon the heart,” is used in Jeremiah 31:33 when describing the effects of entering the New Covenant in Christ –

“But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put My law in their minds, and write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people.”

One can see the difference between the two. In the Mosaic covenant, the people are told to actively work to love the Lord, meaning be obedient to His commands; writing them on their hearts. In the New Covenant, the inscription of the heart is accomplished by the Lord.

One can see the superiority of the New Covenant through the use of this simple term, “upon the heart.” Who is it that does the work? And what are the effects of the work once it is done? One is a law leading to death, the other is a gift, leading to life.

⁷You shall teach them diligently to your children, v’shinantam l’vanekha – “And you shall whet them to your children.” It is a new and rather rare word in Scripture, shanan. It means to whet or to sharpen. Saying “teach them diligently” is more of a paraphrase. Finding a modern word to translate it as intended in this verse is not easy. Whet is closest, but it still needs to be explained.

The word is seen only nine times. Other than here, it is translated as whet, sharpen, or pierce. The idea, then, is to inculcate the commands into the children, but by using this word, we want to include the idea of sharpness, as if the process of instilling the commands is so personal that it is as if the parent is cutting into the child and inscribing them there.

Probably the closest we will get to a comparable translation of the word elsewhere is found in Psalm 73:21 –

When my heart was embittered,
And I was pierced within. Psalm 73:21 (NAS)

This was to be the responsibility of the parents, inscribing the commands of the law in the children. As Matthew Poole says to explain this word, “This metaphor signifies the manner of instructing them, that it is to be done diligently, earnestly, frequently, discreetly, and dexterously.” Paul uses a similar thought in Ephesians –

“And you, fathers, do not provoke your children to wrath, but bring them up in the training and admonition of the Lord.” Ephesians 6:4

Looking at the rest of the Old Testament, one can see how Israel failed in this. Thus, the Lord promised in Jeremiah 31 that He Himself would perform this for the people under the New Covenant. In order for this to be accomplished, Moses speaks on...

7 (con't) and shall talk of them when you sit in your house,

The commands of the Lord should be tied in with everything that is spoken about in a normal conversation. “It was a great day at work. We reaped innumerable sheaves of wheat. How good the Lord is to us, and how we should love Him for the bounty He provides.”

Whatever is normal conversation within the house, it was to be salted with a word concerning the Lord. In this, He would always be contained within the subject matter. He was to be an active thought from moment to moment and not just a mere afterthought.

7 (con't) when you walk by the way,

When walking on the way, the conversation may be about how school was, about what the upcoming hunt would be like, or how beautiful the scenery was. In these, or in any other conversations, the love of the Lord was to be an active part of the discussion. “Look at how majestic the mountains the Lord has created are!” “Do you see the intricacy of the spider’s web? The wisdom of the Lord is found even in this!”

7 (con't) when you lie down,

The last thoughts of the day are the thoughts that set the mind for sleep. It is right to include the Lord in them. “The Lord was very good to us today. We were safe, we ate well, and we had contentment and happiness. Thank You, Lord, for the day which has passed.” These thoughts are what will be remembered also at the dawning of a new day...

7 (con't) and when you rise up.

The parents were to instruct the children concerning the Lord at the outset of the day, reminding them that the span of life is short, and that the surety of reaching evening was unknown. Therefore, it was right to talk of the Lord in the morning, reminding them that they were accountable for their actions before Him, and to conduct the affairs of the day in a manner worthy of the name they bore – Israel, or “He strives with God.”

They could either strive with God, for God. Or, they could strive with God, against Him. Either way, the day was before them and their actions of the day would be brought to remembrance before the Lord. And so, as reminders of the presence of the Lord, and the need to pay heed to His commands, Moses speaks on...

⁸You shall bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes.

The idea here is to be taken metaphorically, not literally. This is certain, as will be seen. However, it is this verse which the Jews of Israel – at Jesus’ time, and even today – use to justify the wearing of phylacteries. In Matthew, Jesus spoke harshly of the scribes and Pharisees who prominently made such ostentatious displays –

“But all their works they do to be seen by men. They make their phylacteries broad and enlarge the borders of their garments.” Matthew 23:5

Today, these are known as tephilim. They wrap their arms with straps, and they have small leather boxes containing scrolls inscribed with verses from the Torah in them strapped to their heads. This practice is taking what is meant to be symbolic and making it literal. The way we know this is metaphor is based on other verses which reveal this.

First, the words here are similar to Exodus 13:16. Concerning the law of setting apart the firstborn of every male to the Lord –

“It shall be as a sign on your hand and as frontlets between your eyes, for by strength of hand the LORD brought us out of Egypt.” Exodus 13:16

This is obviously a metaphor that needs to be explained. But that cannot be understood properly unless Exodus 13:9 is also considered. When speaking of the observance of the Feast of Unleavened Bread, it said this –

“It shall be as a sign to you on your hand and as a memorial between your eyes, that the LORD’s law may be in your mouth; for with a strong hand the LORD has brought you out of Egypt.” Exodus 13:9

The two together explicitly tie the consecration of the firstborn to the consecration of all of the people as is represented by the Feast of Unleavened Bread. The firstborn is given for the whole. Of interest, though, there is also a contrast to this verse in the Bible.

In Christ, the Firstborn of God, the people of God enter into what the Feast of Unleavened Bread anticipates, being a group set apart to God whose sins are no longer imputed. Thus, they are “unleavened,” or “without sin” before God.

Understanding this, the same terminology is used here by Moses to represent a people whose minds are directed to the things of God, and whose actions are in accord with what is right for the people of God. To further understand this, analyzing the words is needed.

First, it says u-qeshartam l'oth al yadekha – “And you shall bind them to sign on your hand.” An oth, or sign, is something that represents something else. The hand is what accomplishes tasks. Therefore, the people are to remember the commands of the Lord in everything they accomplish – be it cleaning a bathroom or writing a sermon. It is to be done with the Lord in mind.

Next it says, v'hayu l'totaphoth ben enekha – “and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes.” The word “frontlets,” or totaphoth, is seen only three times in the Bible. It is also in Exodus 13:16 and Deuteronomy 11:8. It is derived from an unused root signifying to go around or bind.

As noted in Exodus 13, it is not to be taken literally, but as a metaphor. Taking that verse, and placing it side by side with Revelation 13:16, an interesting pattern is seen –

“It shall be as a sign on your hand and as frontlets between your eyes, for by strength of hand the LORD brought us out of Egypt.” Exodus 13:16

“He causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads.” Revelation 13:16

The place between the eyes is the forehead, and so the two correspond one to another. As we saw in Leviticus, in the Bible, the forehead is the place of conscience and identification.

Therefore, this symbolizes that a person is to set his mind on the law of the Lord. In the New Testament, it is reflective of what Paul says to the Colossians –

“If then you were raised with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ is, sitting at the right hand of God. ²Set your mind on things above, not on things on the earth.” Colossians 3:1, 2

Moses’ words now indicate the state of each person before the Lord. They are to mentally acknowledge the Lord by thinking on His law and of His handiwork in everything they do.

In contrast to this, the mark of the beast on the right hand or on the forehead of those in the tribulation period signifies an acknowledgment of the work and lordship of the antichrist which is followed by their obedience to him.

They have acknowledged him and have taken either a vow, represented by the right hand, or an oath of assertion, represented by the forehead, to the antichrist. The mark may be visible, but it represents the setting apart of the individual to the devil.

Moses, in saying this to the people, admonishes them to think on the Lord, live for the Lord, and conduct their affairs to the Lord at all times. Further...

⁹You shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates.

u-ketavtam al mezuzot betekha u-bisharekha – “And you shall write them on doorposts your house and on your gates.” The idea here is certainly metaphorical as well, even if it was literally accomplished by whoever decided to do so.

The two words of focus are mezuzah and shaar – doorpost and gate. The word mezuzah, or doorpost, comes from the same source as the word ziz, or “moving things.” That word is seen only three times – in Psalm 50 and Psalm 80 to describe beasts moving in the field, and once in Isaiah 66:11 to describe the bosom of a woman. Thus, it means that which is conspicuous.

Understanding this, the mezuzah, or doorpost, is that which is conspicuous and prominent in the life of a person. The shaar, or gate, comes from shaar meaning to calculate or reckon. That is used only once, in Proverbs 23:7 –

“For as he thinks in his heart, so is he.
‘Eat and drink!’ he says to you,
But his heart is not with you.” Proverbs 23:7

The gate is for protection of those within. A gatekeeper is one who actively decides who to let in and who to keep out. He makes a reckoning and acts upon that. Understanding these roots, the symbolism of the two words is then made obvious.

The law of the Lord is to be so ingrained in a person that it is in the prominent place of a person's life. Every major decision is to be made based on an understanding of the law of the Lord. Further, it is to be so inscribed in a person that it is what is then the basis for making life's decisions. In this, it will be a guard for the wellbeing of the individual.

One is to evaluate the circumstances set before him, consider what is to be done in relation to the law of the Lord which he is intimately familiar with, and then act upon those things accordingly.

As there are numerous laws that have been given, and that will be given, the indefinite nature of Moses' words, "You shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates," indicates that this is certainly to be taken in this metaphorical way. Nothing specific is noted, meaning that the entire law is to simply be applied to every aspect of the decisions of life.

Unfortunately, and like all things good, the Jews took this metaphorical concept and applied it literally, but only in a limited manner, and as an intended talisman, rather than as a guide for life.

The word mezuzah has now been applied to a small wood or metal container which is affixed to the right-hand post of the doorway to the house. Inside of it is a piece of rolled-up paper or parchment with Deuteronomy 6:4-9 and/or Deuteronomy 11:13-21.

As a show, it is tradition to touch the mezuzah, kiss their finger, and speak out Psalm 121:8, "The Lord shall preserve your going out and your coming in from this time forth, and even forevermore."

Like many other such things, there is nothing initially wrong with this, but it results in several problems. First, the idea, if taken literally, is to have the words visible in order to remind them of their content, not hidden away.

Secondly, it – like any other tradition – becomes a substitute for the basis of the words and it becomes an implied talisman – which, yes, the words of the Bible can easily be made into such. Thirdly, if doing this is intended as a fulfillment of the law, it actually then violates the law.

The reason this is so is because the word mezuzah, or “doorposts,” is plural – mezuzot. Therefore, to have the words of law on one post, but not on the other, is to then violate the very law that is being referred to. If you are going to take such precepts literally, they must be adhered to completely.

Unfortunately, this practice is no different than abuses by many Christians – whether true Christians or nominal Christians – in regard to either verses from the Bible, or in regard to the Bible itself.

When either of these is used as a talisman for protection, prosperity, or the like, it is no different than the practice of the Jews with their mezuzah. It becomes a show, a pretense, or a charm, but it does not serve the purpose intended by the Lord for the people of God – which is to know, meditate upon, cherish, and apply the word of God to one’s life.

And so, before we go on, let us convict our hearts. If one sees a mezuzah on the doorpost of a Jewish – or even Christian’s – house, is it shiny from having been rubbed countless times as people entered and exited the house?

If so, does the life of that person reflect the shiny state of the mezuzah? Does he know the word of God? Does he talk about it with others? Does he apply it to his life in such a manner that it is conspicuous to everyone around him? Or is it just there for show?

Likewise, what is the state of the Bible you own? Is it outwardly showy to all around you? Do you keep it in some obvious place where people can see that you own it? Etc. But what about its overall appearance – outside and inside?

Is it well worn? Are there notes, highlights, and underlinings. Or is it just the same as the day it came off the printer? Are the pages worn, stained from use, dog-eared and tattered? Or are they as smooth and clean as the day it was bound?

Although it is not always the case, the condition of one’s Bible is normally the exact opposite of the condition of one’s life. If the Bible is worn out and falling apart, the person’s life is normally tidy and sturdy. But if the Bible is in untouched pristine order, the life of the person will often be a complete ruin.

Lesson for Deuteronomy 6 verse 9 – Keep things in their proper context. Don’t be showy in your exterior religious life, but rather be well-grounded in the word of God. Know your Bible, think on your Bible, cherish the word, and love your God who speaks to you through it.

*Remember these things that I command
Keep them always in your heart
If you do this, you shall always stand
From My laws be sure to never depart*

*Write them on the doorposts of your house
And impress them upon your mind
Talk about them with your children and your spouse
For you, My people, these have been carefully designed*

*They will guide you as you walk in this life
They will be a lamp to you on the path you take
They will keep you from trouble and from strife
If these, My commands, you never forsake*

II. When You Have Eaten and Are Full (verses 10-15)

Moses has been speaking of obeying the commands from a positive viewpoint – “You shall do this, and you shall do that.” Now, he gives a warning concerning being slack in regard to that same law.

The reason for this is the condition of the human heart which quickly forgets the past, and which then presses on into the future without regard to what got that person to where he now is. Moses begins his warning saying...

¹⁰ “So it shall be, v’hayah – “And it shall be.” It is a very common expression, but the intent here is that it is not this way now. Despite this, the time is coming when it will occur. Thus, it is spoken of before it happens, and Israel cannot take credit for it, as is next seen...

¹⁰ (con’t) when the LORD your God brings you into the land

The credit for bringing Israel into the land, in advance of the event occurring, belongs to Yehovah. Therefore, it is to be acknowledged as such, and to be remembered in that light. Further, it is not because of the goodness or greatness of the people that this has come about. Rather its occurrence has nothing to do with them directly. Instead, it has to do with the vow of the Lord...

10 (con't) of which He swore to your fathers,

The Lord swore, and therefore, the Lord will perform. No other god was involved in the process, and any supposed god in Canaan could not stop what Yehovah was about to do.

Israel will enter and possess the land, but their possession of it is only a consequence of the oath which had been made long before they stood on the banks of Canaan. That oath was to the fathers, namely...

10 (con't) to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, l'avraham l'yitshaq, u-l'yaaqov – “to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.” The promise was made to each of these fathers. They would possess the land. The promise to Abraham was over 400 years earlier, and the promise to Jacob was over 200 years earlier.

The people who stood there now were to receive what had been promised, but it was the Lord who determined that it would come to pass, and to which generation of people it would come to. Moses is making a particular point in saying what he is saying...

10 (con't) to give you large and beautiful cities

latet lakh arim gedolot v'tovot – “to give you cities great and beautiful.” Moses does not say, “with cities great and beautiful.” Rather, he says latet lakh – “to give you.” A gift is not earned, and it is not deserved. If it was deserved, it would not be a gift; it would be a wage. Moses carefully chooses his words. Next, he says...

10 (con't) which you did not build,

If they did not build them, they cannot take credit for them. The Lord made a promise. The Lord brought them in. And, what they received was grace, including...

11 houses full of all good things, which you did not fill,

Within the cities will be houses already built, and in them will be the labors of the people the Lord has dispossessed, waiting for Israel to come and enjoy. There would be food in the pantry, beds already available, linens carefully woven by the women, lamps for lighting, maybe gold or money stored in a special spot, and so on. And within each city would be one or more...

11 (con't) hewn-out wells which you did not dig,

The people of the land would have dug for water – a laborious task. When water was found, they would have hewn out wells to ensure there was always fresh water on hand – another very laborious task. In this, a new word is seen khatsav, meaning to hew or cut out. The difficult and dangerous work was done.

And more, the inhabitants would have maintained the wells throughout the years as well, so there would be no need to worry about a thing in this regard. Further, there would be...

11 (con't) vineyards and olive trees which you did not plant—

Instead of being given an empty land requiring many years to begin to produce such things, the people of Canaan had already subdued the land, cleared the fields, and planted fruit-bearing trees.

The most difficult thing Israel would have to do in this regard would be to wait for the fruit to ripen depending on the plant that was already there, and then to pick it and celebrate. The most difficult part of the process would be behind them. But the most important aspect of this new life lay yet ahead...

11 (con't) when you have eaten and are full—v'akalta v'savaeta – “and have eaten and are filled up.” The word sava signifies to be sated or completely full. There is no lack at all in the person at the end of the meal. But the idea here isn't just one meal. Rather, it is speaking of a constant stream of no lack. This is certain based on the context of the next words...

12 then beware, lest you forget the LORD who brought you out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.

When the people are full and satisfied, they will be prone to doing the one thing people do so easily, which is to forget where they came from.

A person raised in a conservative family can go off to college and become a flaming liberal. A wealthy person who was born in poverty can forget the plight of those he once lived with. And Israel, filled up as sons, was bound to forget the Lord who redeemed them from slavery.

The very name Egypt, or mitsraim, means “double distress.” Sitting in Canaan living off the land they did nothing to earn, they are being warned to not forget that they once lived in double distress, even though now they were living the high life.

The parallel idea here, which is what is also typologically pictured, is that of the sinner being redeemed from his life of sin. The Lord asks Israel to not forget Him because people are prone to forget. And Peter admonishes those in Christ to do the exact same thing –

“But also for this very reason, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, to virtue knowledge, ⁶to knowledge self-control, to self-control perseverance, to perseverance godliness, ⁷to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness love. ⁸For if these things are yours and abound, you will be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. ⁹For he who lacks these things is shortsighted, even to blindness, and has forgotten that he was cleansed from his old sins.” 2 Peter 1:5-9

Unless we think on the Lord, meditate on His word, and actively love Him for all He has done, we – be it Israel or those in the church – can actually forget the Lord and all He has done for us. Rather than this, Moses implores...

¹³ You shall fear the LORD your God

The words are emphatic. eth Yehovah elohekha tira – “Yehovah your God you shall fear.” This is contrasted to the words of the previous verse. There it said, “lest you forget the LORD who brought you out of the land of Egypt.”

They were in bondage to the Egyptians who ruled rigorously over them. The Lord, in contrast, gave them freedom and abundance. But because He had the power to do so, it means He also has the power to affect their lives negatively as well. Because of this, they were to fear the Lord their God...

¹³ (con’t) and serve Him, v’oto taavod – “and Him serve.” Again, the words are contrasted to the previous verse. There, the noun eved, or slave, was used – “the house of slaves.” Here the verb form of that word, avad, or serve, is used. They were brought out of the house of slaves by the Lord, therefore, they were to serve the Lord.

Here, fear is placed before service. If the people fear the Lord – meaning with a proper, reverential fear, they would faithfully serve Him. The opposite was true in Egypt. The people were slaves in Egypt, and thus they feared the Egyptians.

In essence, Moses is giving them a choice – one of faithful service based on reverential fear, or a return to slavery to others which leads to fear. Egypt as a taskmaster was cruel and unrelenting, but the Lord was caring and gracious. All they needed to do was to remember Him and acknowledge His goodness.

This is one of the verses that Jesus cited to Satan in response to his temptings –

“Then Jesus said to him, ‘Away with you, Satan! For it is written, “You shall worship the LORD your God, and Him only you shall serve.”’” Matthew 4:10

Jesus remained faithful in worship and service of the Lord. Israel will be shown to not measure up. The lessons of the law are set before us to see and understand the majesty of what God did in sending Christ to do what Israel could not do.

¹³ (con’t) and shall take oaths in His name.

Moses builds upon the previous clause. To fear the Lord means to take oaths in His name. To vow in any other manner is to commit idolatry because it elevates something that is not God to a position that rightfully belongs to Him alone. Jesus, in Matthew 5, said the following –

“Again you have heard that it was said to those of old, ‘You shall not swear falsely, but shall perform your oaths to the Lord.’ ³⁴ But I say to you, do not swear at all: neither by heaven, for it is God’s throne; ³⁵ nor by the earth, for it is His footstool; nor by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King. ³⁶ Nor shall you swear by your head, because you cannot make one hair white or black. ³⁷ But let your ‘Yes’ be ‘Yes,’ and your ‘No,’ ‘No.’ For whatever is more than these is from the evil one.”

-Matthew 5:33-37

He was not telling the people they could not vow in any manner and at any time. The law had already provided that vows and oaths were to be made in certain legal situations.

Rather, He was referring to the making of vows for things where such a vow was unnecessary. His words even indicate this when He speaks of heaven, the earth, your head, and etc. Each of those is a part of creation. To make a vow in relation to one of those things was to then commit idolatry, elevating it to what is reserved for the Lord alone.

Unfortunately, many Christians have taken Jesus' words and refuse to make any oaths at all, even in legal situations, such as in court. This is not at all the intent of His words, as is evidenced right here in Deuteronomy. If a vow or oath is to be made, it is only to be made in the name of the Lord.

For our daily conversation, however, our words are to be so trustworthy that when we say Yes, it means Yes, and when we say No, it is to mean No. Anything more than that is, as He says, from the evil one.

¹⁴ You shall not go after other gods, the gods of the peoples who are all around you

Two things are being dealt with by Moses in these verses. The first is for Israel to not forget God because of a carefree life. The second is to not accept or even tolerate the gods of those who surrounded them. The latter is dealt with here.

To forget God, the first, leads directly to the latter. They are to fear the Lord, serve the Lord, and take oaths in His name. In doing so, they will refrain from going after other gods, serving them and swearing by them.

But the thought of going after other gods also implies the conduct of one's life. Christians go after Christ, emulating Him and serving Him. One emulates whatever god is served.

The gods of Canaan and the surrounding nations were gods of fertility, death through human sacrifice, immorality, and so on. To go after those gods would mean emulation of them. But the people of Israel were told to be holy, just as Yehovah their God is holy.

And there is a particular reason for exhibiting this conduct which Moses next explains to them once again...

¹⁵ (for the LORD your God is a jealous God among you), ki el qanna Yehovah elohekha b'qirbekha – "For God jealous Yehovah your God in midst of you." Moses repeats here what has already been said five times. Yehovah is qanna, or jealous. This is the sixth and final time this adjective is found in the Bible. All six uses have been in relation to the name Yehovah.

The jealousy is directed to the violation of depriving Him what He is justly due. Israel is warned that they cannot escape what is coming if they fail in this regard. He is in their midst, implying that He sees and knows all that happens among them. Should they reject Him, the penalty for it is found in the next words...

15 (con't) lest the anger of the LORD your God be aroused against you pen yekhere aph Yehovah elohekha bak – “lest burning nose of Yehovah your God against you.” The symbolism is that the countenance of the Lord is so angry that fire shoots out of His nostrils and burns up anything before Him.

This is the result of incurring the jealousy of the Lord. The covenant was made, as a Husband to His betrothed. To violate the covenant will arouse His jealousy. In that, there is only one inevitable outcome. As it says in the proverbs –

“For jealousy is a husband’s fury;

Therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance.

³⁵ He will accept no recompense,

Nor will he be appeased though you give many gifts.” Proverbs 6:34, 35

No offerings would appease the Lord if the people were also offering to other gods. How could they appeal to Him and also to other gods and somehow expect to escape His fury? Moses says He will pursue...

15 (fin) and destroy you from the face of the earth.

The words say, “from the face of the ground.” Utter annihilation could be expected for the people who would do such a thing. In this, it is not the utter annihilation of all of Israel, but of those who acted in such a manner. An example of that is found in Ezekiel 9:6.

The Lord has promised to preserve Israel even through the destruction of Israel. Those who offended would be sought out and utterly consumed in His wrath.

Nehemiah 9:24-31 practically mirrors what is said in the verses we have looked at today (open Bible and read that passage). At times, what Nehemiah says is almost word for word what Moses has warned against. His recounting of this shows that what occurred in their exile was solely their fault.

And yet, as he noted, the Lord did not utterly consume them. The word of the Lord, and the covenant of the Lord, will never be violated by the Lord. Israel's absolute unfaithfulness demonstrates all the more the longsuffering and patience of the Lord. And more, it highlights His grace and mercy as no other thing could.

He is the covenant-keeping God. He kept His promise to the fathers. He kept His promises of punishment within the law, and He kept His promises of the preservation of Israel, also contained in the law. Not a word of the word of the Lord will fail because He – unlike the people of the world – cannot fail.

And so, today, I would ask you to take the necessary step and call out to Him for salvation. We are all going to spend eternity somewhere, and the difference between the two options is either heaven or hell, paradise or the pit. Please choose wisely, call on Christ to save you, and then think on Him and His goodness all the days of your life. This is what will be pleasing to the God who created you for this very purpose.

Closing Verse: “But Jeshurun grew fat and kicked;

You grew fat, you grew thick,

You are obese!

Then he forsook God who made him,

And scornfully esteemed the Rock of his salvation.

¹⁶ They provoked Him to jealousy with foreign gods;

With abominations they provoked Him to anger.

¹⁷ They sacrificed to demons, not to God,

To gods they did not know,

To new gods, new arrivals

That your fathers did not fear.

¹⁸ Of the Rock who begot you, you are unmindful,

And have forgotten the God who fathered you.” Deuteronomy 32:15-18

Next Week: Deuteronomy 6:16-25 In doing these commandments, don't make such a fuss... (Then It Will Be Righteousness for Us) (25th Deuteronomy sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Beware, Lest You Forget the Lord

“And these words which I command you today
Shall be in your heart, as to you I plainly say

You shall teach them diligently to your children
And shall talk of them when in your house you sit
When you walk by the way, when you lie down
And when you rise up – keep on talking and never quit!

You shall bind them as a sign on your hand, like a prize
And they shall be as frontlets between your eyes

You shall write them on the doorposts of your house
-----so to you I tell
And on your gates you shall write them as well

“So it shall be, when the LORD your God
Brings you into the land of which He swore to your fathers
-----a land abundantly filled
To Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob
To give you large and beautiful cities which you did not build

Houses full of all good things, which you did not fill
Hewn-out wells which you did not dig
Vineyards and olive trees which you did not plant—
When you have eaten and are full; not like a skinny twig...

Then beware, lest you forget the LORD, your Creator Spouse
Who brought you out of the land of Egypt, from the bondage house

You shall fear the LORD your God and serve Him
And shall take oaths in His name; so you shall do
You shall not go after other gods
The gods of the peoples who are all around you

(For the LORD your God is a jealous God among you)
Lest the anger of the LORD your God
Be aroused against you and destroy you
From the face of the earth that you trod

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 6:16-25 (Then It Will Be Righteousness for Us)

Our verses today speak of righteousness. So far in the books of Moses, the noun “righteousness” has only been seen three times in Genesis. The noun “righteous” has been used several times in Leviticus and once in Deuteronomy, but that speaks of something that is just, right, or fair. It doesn’t refer to the state of righteousness a person may possess.

And so, in our verses today, the first note of such possessed righteousness is seen since the giving of the law. And, it is given in relation to adherence to the law, or so it would seem. As we come to the end of the verses today, we will arrive at that particular verse and we will analyze it to see what Moses is telling the people.

Before we get there, we will come to a set of verses that describe why the Lord redeemed Israel from Egypt. In one of them, Moses says that “He brought us out from there, that He might bring us in.” Israel was freed from bondage.

What does freedom mean? In the captivity of Judah, Jeremiah was set free. He was perceived as no threat to the Babylonians, and he had spoken the word of the Lord to the people, telling the king to surrender to the king of Babylon’s princes. Understanding this, Jeremiah was not taken captive but was given his freedom.

Text Verse: “See, all the land is before you; wherever it seems good and convenient for you to go, go there.” Jeremiah 40:4

Unlike these words to Jeremiah, Israel was freed from bondage, but the intent was that it was to then bring them into the land of Canaan. For them, it meant living under law and all that went along with that.

However, for the Christian, we have also been brought out from bondage. Jesus and the apostles say that explicitly. When one is bound by sin, he is in bondage. Only in being freed from sin can one then be brought into what Canaan only typologically anticipates – meaning a restored relationship with God and access to His paradise once again.

This is what Jesus offers to the people of the world, and the law was only a step in that process. Until the time when the law was fulfilled, man had to wait for that true freedom to come. When He came, Christ brought us out, so that He could bring us in.

But it is not into more bondage through the law. It is into the freedom which is truly free. It is where we can again cry out to our heavenly Father, “Abba!” This is what awaits those who have come to God through Christ.

Before we get into our verses today, we can look over a chiasm which I found while doing this sermon. It will help us to unpack what is going on, and it will help us to have more confidence in the word. This is especially so after I give you a quote from the scholars at Cambridge. One must wonder why there are Bible scholars out there who do their very best to destroy the document they spent their life analyzing. But they are there.

Deuteronomy 6:17-25 – What is the Meaning?
To Keep is to Observe (17/8/2020)

- a. You shall diligently keep the commandments of the LORD your God, His testimonies, and His statutes
- b. That it may be well with you
- c. Possess the good land of which the LORD swore to your fathers
- d. To cast out all your enemies from before you (The Lord’s action)
- e. When your son asks
 - x. What is the meaning of the testimonies, the statutes, and the judgments which the LORD our God has commanded you?’
- e. Then you shall say to your son
- d. He brought us out from there, that He might bring us in (The Lord’s action)
- c. To give us the land of which He swore to our fathers.
- b. For our good always, that He might preserve us alive
- a. If we are careful to observe all these commandments before the LORD our God

Chiasms, righteousness, the wonder of Jesus Christ – O my! There is so much treasure be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. That It May Be Well With You (verses 16-19)

¹⁶ “You shall not tempt the LORD your God as you tempted Him in Massah.

In the previous sermon, the Lord cautioned the people concerning disobedience. To understand the context concerning this verse, we will review the previous six verses –

“So it shall be, when the LORD your God brings you into the land of which He swore to your fathers, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give you large and beautiful cities which you did not build, ¹¹ houses full of all good things, which you did not fill, hewn-out wells which you did not dig, vineyards and olive trees which you did not plant—when you have eaten and are full— ¹² then beware, lest you forget the LORD who brought you out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage. ¹³ You shall fear the LORD your God and serve Him, and shall take oaths in His name. ¹⁴ You shall not go after other gods, the gods of the peoples who are all around you ¹⁵ (for the LORD your God is a jealous God among you), lest the anger of the LORD your God be aroused against you and destroy you from the face of the earth.” Deuteronomy 6:10-15

In the last verse, verse 15, the nouns are all in the singular. Now, Moses returns to the plural (you all) here. Here, he refers to an incident that occurred mere moments after leaving Egypt, that of the events at Massah which is recorded in Exodus 17 –

Then all the congregation of the children of Israel set out on their journey from the Wilderness of Sin, according to the commandment of the LORD, and camped in Rephidim; but there was no water for the people to drink. ² Therefore the people contended with Moses, and said, “Give us water, that we may drink.” So Moses said to them, “Why do you contend with me? Why do you tempt the LORD?”

³ And the people thirsted there for water, and the people complained against Moses, and said, “Why is it you have brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our livestock with thirst?”

⁴ So Moses cried out to the LORD, saying, “What shall I do with this people? They are almost ready to stone me!”

⁵ And the LORD said to Moses, “Go on before the people, and take with you some of the elders of Israel. Also take in your hand your rod with which you struck the river, and go. ⁶ Behold, I will stand before you there on the rock in Horeb; and you shall strike the rock, and water will come out of it, that the people may drink.”

And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel. ⁷ So he called the name of the place Massah and Meribah, because of the contention of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, “Is the LORD among us or not?”

-Exodus 17:1-7

The words of this verse in Deuteronomy, translated as “tempt” and “tempted,” come from the word nasah. It signifies, “to put to the test.” In 1 Kings and 2 Chronicles, the Queen of Sheba is said to have come to prove Solomon with difficult questions. This is what Israel did.

They were brought out of bondage in a magnificent way by the Lord, but as soon as a little hardship arose, the people attempted to “prove” if He was truly capable of handling things for them. They almost spitefully said, “Is the LORD among us or not?” Thus, the place was named Massah, the word comes from nasah, and it means, “Testing.”

What Moses is conveying is that by going after other gods, they will arouse the anger of Yehovah. They are to trust in Him who is invisible rather than the false gods they could see. It is this verse, Deuteronomy 6:16, that Jesus refers to in Matthew 4 when He was tempted by the devil –

“Then the devil took Him up into the holy city, set Him on the pinnacle of the temple, ⁶ and said to Him, “If You are the Son of God, throw Yourself down. For it is written:

‘He shall give His angels charge over you,’ and,

‘In their hands they shall bear you up,

Lest you dash your foot against a stone.’”

⁷ Jesus said to him, “It is written again, ‘You shall not tempt the LORD your God.’”

Matthew 4:5-7

Jesus prevailed by holding fast to the law. This is unlike Israel, who will later be shown to fail in these admonitions from Moses. Where Jesus held to the Lord God alone, Israel went about seeking many “gods” in their recorded history.

As a note concerning this verse, especially concerning the changes here from singular to plural, Cambridge says the following –

“Another interruption by the Pl. Because of this; because the reference to Massah is hardly relevant to the context, and because the perfect, he hath commanded, [vs. 17] is not yet true of the separate laws; these sentences seem to be a later editorial insertion. The return to the Sg. at their close is explicable by the attraction of the Sg. in Deuteronomy 6:18.” Cambridge

Cambridge flippantly states that “the reference to Massah is hardly relevant to the context.” In fact, it is the point of the surrounding context. They then say these words are a “later editorial insertion.” This would mean they are not the words of Moses, and thus not true words of Scripture. And yet, it is of these words that Jesus says, “It is written.”

Further, verse 17 is a part of the chiasm that spans the rest of the verses of this passage. Thus, it clearly demonstrates that it is original, and not a later insertion.

What will it be like for the people who authored this commentary when they are brought before the Lord after having said that what is stated here is “irrelevant” and that they are not His words? If they understand the word “mercy,” they will need a great deal of it for their treatment of this precious and sacred word.

17 You shall diligently keep the commandments of the LORD your God,

Shamor tishmerun eth mitzvoth Yehovah elohekhem – “Keeping, you shall keep, the commandments Yehovah your God.” The word translated as “you shall keep” contains a pargodic nun at the end of it which is added to express additional emphasis. One might imagine Moses saying, “Keeping, you shaaaaaalllll keep.”

He is stressing to them the importance of not letting up, but of constant vigilance in holding strictly to the Lord’s commandments. Also, this clause begins the chiasm of the passage. It corresponds to the words of verse 25. Included in the stress of keeping His commandments are...

17 (con’t) His testimonies, and His statutes which He has commanded you.

Here, the words of Moses transition back to the singular in saying “commanded you.” That will carry on in the next verse. Rather than being later insertions, the instruction – varying between the plural and the singular – shows intent and purpose. If someone was to insert words later, they would certainly follow with the same person, not change it right in the middle of a verse.

Concerning the words here, the testimonies and the statutes must be considered as a part of the commandments based on the words “which He has commanded you.” Though individual ideas, they all fall under the category of commands. The Lord speaks forth the law in various forms, but all that is said is to be equally obeyed and adhered to. Further...

18 And you shall do what is right and good in the sight of the LORD, v'asita ha'yashar v'ha'tov b'ene Yehovah – “And you shall do the straight and the good in eyes Yehovah.” Here, for the first of seven times in Deuteronomy, Moses uses the word yashar, or right. It means “straight,” and gives the idea of being unwavering on the path. As the Lord’s eyes watch the conduct of the person, this is what He will look for – both a walk on the good path, and a straight walk on that same good path. And Moses notes that there is a reason for this...

¹⁸ (con’t) that it may be well with you, l'maan yitav lak – “to the end purpose it may be well with you.” One can see the play on words here. When one does the good, good returns to that person – it will be well with him. Moses then explains what that means...

¹⁸ (con’t) and that you may go in and possess the good land

u-bata v'yarashta eth ha'aretz ha'tovah – “and you will go, and you will inherit the land the good.” Again, the play on words continues – “when you do good, good will come to you, and you will inherit the good land.” It is this good land, which contains houses full of good things (verse 11) that will be inherited by you – the one who does good.

The entire verse is a promise that is to be understood with what will be said in the next verse. In other words, the Lord has promised these things to the people and they will come upon them if they are obedient in the land.

They will cross the Jordan. Moses knows this. But how much of the land will they possess? And how well will it go with them in the land they do possess? The answer to those things is up to them. If they do good, they will continue to possess more and more of the land. And if they do good, they will be blessed in the land they do possess. This fact is later seen in Judges 2 –

“Then the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel; and He said, “Because this nation has transgressed My covenant which I commanded their fathers, and has not heeded My voice, ²¹I also will no longer drive out before them any of the nations which Joshua left when he died, ²²so that through them I may test Israel, whether they will keep the ways of the LORD, to walk in them as their fathers kept them, or not.” ²³Therefore the LORD left those nations, without driving them out immediately; nor did He deliver them into the hand of Joshua.”

-Judges 2:20-23

The people failed to do the good Moses now speaks of, and possession of the good land is, in part, withheld. It is the land...

18 (con't) of which the LORD swore to your fathers,

The Lord swore to the fathers – Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob – that they would possess the land. But the possession of that land is conditional on obedience. The land is theirs, and it remains theirs, but owning something and possessing that thing are not the same.

The Lord has made this clear, and Moses continues to make it clear. Israel's right to inhabit the land is not unconditional. When they do what is proper, the Lord will lead them...

19 to cast out all your enemies from before you, as the LORD has spoken.

Moses uses the word hadaph here and in verse 9:4. It signifies to push or thrust. Further, the verb is infinitive, "to the casting out of all your enemies." In other words, the previous verse said, "that it may be well with you." How will it be well? "It will be to the casting out of all your enemies."

After they went into the land, and after Joshua's death, they forsook the Lord and began to serve the Baals. The natural reaction to this is that it would no longer go well with them, and the casting out of the enemies would cease.

With this thought in mind, Moses then returns to the thought of verses 1 and 2. Moses set out to teach Israel the commandment, the statutes, and the judgments. As it is a written record, it is for – as verse 2 says – "you, you and your son and your grandson."

This then, in turn, goes back to verses 4:9 & 10. Take what is written and teach it to your children and your grandchildren. It is no good to have a written record that is not conveyed to those it pertains to.

Our government is based on a constitution which contains important rights belonging to the people. If they don't know what those rights are, those same rights can be trampled on by the very government which is limited by that constitution.

With Israel, there are certain commandments that are to be adhered to. In not adhering to them, it will not go well with the people. And more especially, if the people are not taught those commandments, they cannot be obedient to them. Therefore, it logically follows that it will not go well with them.

And so, Moses expects that this word would be passed on to the next generation, as we will see in a moment.

*This is your righteousness before Me
When you accept the word that I speak
Nothing else will do, I tell you plainly
It is the same righteousness for the strong and the weak*

*No matter what great thing you do before Me
If faith doesn't accompany it, such is just waste
The motives behind it I can see
And without faith, it is putridity to My taste*

*But the deeds done by a person of faith
Are deeds that are pleasing in My sight
Hear the word that to you I saith
Such a person's soul before Me is upright*

II. He Brought Us Out, That He Might Bring Us In (verses 20-25)

²⁰ “When your son asks you in time to come, saying,

Moses presupposes that the children will feel the weight of the law. In this, they will ask the obvious question, “Dad, why do we have to do all this stuff? Those kids visiting from Lebanon don’t need to do it. The Jebusites don’t have to do it. Why do we have to do it?”

Understanding this, the child asks specific questions. This questioning forms the middle of the chiasm...

²⁰ (con’t) ‘What is the meaning of the testimonies, the statutes, and the judgments which the LORD our God has commanded you?’

The question here is not the child’s words. Rather, Moses is citing the substance of what the child will ask. This is certain, because the word “you” is plural. Otherwise, it would say, “us.” The Greek translation actually says “us” in order to make it the child’s question.

But what Moses is doing is saying to the people, “What is the meaning of these things the Lord our God has commanded you? Your son is going to ask you about it. He might ask about any particular aspect of this law, and you need to explain to him why we do these things.” When he does, Moses continues with...

²¹ then you shall say to your son:

To ask a question about something you are required to do implies that it is required. If it is required, then it is – by default – a burden. It may be the most enjoyable thing on the planet for a person to do. Reading for example. Some people love to read. Well, it says in the Law of Moses –

“Also it shall be, when he sits on the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write for himself a copy of this law in a book, from the one before the priests, the Levites. ¹⁹ And it shall be with him, and he shall read it all the days of his life, that he may learn to fear the LORD his God and be careful to observe all the words of this law and these statutes, ²⁰ that his heart may not be lifted above his brethren, that he may not turn aside from the commandment to the right hand or to the left, and that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he and his children in the midst of Israel.” Deuteronomy 17:18:20

The king may enjoy reading more than eating durian. He may do it constantly. But... this is a law. He must do it. Today, he is terribly pressed for time. He is irritable. His wife is nagging him. His children are not being good little princes and princesses. What is his favorite thing to do has, today, become a burden.

If eating durian every day were a part of the law, and everyone loves durian as we know, it would still be a burden when someone had a bad stomach. It would also be a burden when durian got so expensive that it caused difficulty on the family finances.

But the law is the law. What is good – no matter how good it is – when it is a law, will naturally be a burden at some point. We all know this when it comes to speed limits. Some more than others.

Again, as we have cited in many Deuteronomy sermons already, Paul speaks of just this—

“For I delight in the law of God according to the inward man. ²³ But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. ²⁴ O wretched man that I am! Who will deliver me from this body of death? ²⁵ I thank God—through Jesus Christ our Lord!” Romans 7:22-25

His words are true even when we not only delight in the law, but they are true when we delight in some particular aspect of the law that we absolutely love (normally). “I literally LOVE to have Saturdays off. Thank God for the Sabbath! But today, the Sabbath has become really problematic for me. Here’s why...”

If this is true about the things we really enjoy, how much more so is it about the things that we are not all giddy about. Paul then takes this further. We may be good and fine with the law because it restrains people who are otherwise out of control. In 1 Timothy 1:8-11, he writes –

“But we know that the law is good if one uses it lawfully, ⁹ knowing this: that the law is not made for a righteous person, but for the lawless and insubordinate, for the ungodly and for sinners, for the unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers, ¹⁰ for fornicators, for sodomites, for kidnappers, for liars, for perjurers, and if there is any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine, ¹¹ according to the glorious gospel of the blessed God which was committed to my trust.”

We may say, “Boy do I agree with the law. Otherwise Tom next door would be driving 100mph down the road with all these kids playing on it. The 10mph speed limit makes us happy on account of someone else’s tendencies.

However, an infraction of the law is an infraction of the law. Anyone who has had to drive 10mph knows how hard it is to not go 11. But the cop on the corner does not care if you “tried” to do 10. The ticket says you did 11.

Because this is so, and because your child is going to ask about the burden of the law, Moses tells them why the law – which they don’t understand – is so good. And he does it by taking them back to their past, beginning with...

²¹ (con’t) ‘We were slaves of Pharaoh in Egypt,

“Son, you cannot even imagine. We were under a yoke. We were crushed. We were bound in chains. It was hot, it was tiring, there was no relief. We were used up and cast aside.”

“And more, we were slaves of Pharaoh. He ruled our bodies, he had us cast our boys into the Nile, and he took our women for himself.”

“And more, this was in Egypt. We were in a land not our own. We had no property rights. What we grew was taken from us. There was always lack, heat, want, and anguish. This was our state. Son, Egypt means “double distress,” and you simply cannot imagine how true that was.”

²¹ (con’t) and the LORD brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand;

“Son, you cannot see Him, but He is there. We couldn’t redeem ourselves. Pharaoh had an army, chariots, weapons, and food to sustain them. We had nothing. The impossibility of our situation extended in all directions and into the future.

We were without hope, except... in the promise to our fathers from the Lord we could not see. But even though we cannot see Him, we saw the things He did – things that eye never imagined nor mind could ever conceive. The Lord did these things for us, to redeem us as a people prepared for Himself.”

The substance of what Moses has said, and will say, was first conveyed to Moses by the Lord just prior to the giving of the Ten Commandments. In Exodus 19, it says –

“And Moses went up to God, and the LORD called to him from the mountain, saying, “Thus you shall say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel: ⁴ ‘You have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I bore you on eagles’ wings and brought you to Myself. ⁵ Now therefore, if you will indeed obey My voice and keep My covenant, then you shall be a special treasure to Me above all people; for all the earth is Mine. ⁶ And you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation.’ These are the words which you shall speak to the children of Israel.” Exodus 19:3-6

Concerning this, Charles Ellicott rightly states –

“The keeping of the Law of Jehovah by Israel as a nation in the land that He gave them was the final cause of their national existence. This fundamental fact must never be forgotten. This alone would justify what had been done to Egypt. Hence the neglect of the Law must inevitably bring down the Divine vengeance.” Charles Ellicott

Moses is conveying his words now as instruction for the fathers to relay to their children. It is why they must accept and obey the things the child now asks about. With this understanding, Moses continues with...

²² and the LORD showed signs and wonders before our eyes,

Here, it is said the Lord showed ototh u-mophtim, or “signs and wonders.” A sign is something that stands for something else. For example, the blood applied to the doorposts and lintel of the houses was a sign of and for protection.

In the case of Pharaoh, the Lord afflicted him with the plagues, but he did not afflict Israel. That stood as a sign that the Lord was Israel’s God, that He is a God, and that Pharaoh’s gods were ineffective against Him. The sign is not the thing or occurrence, but the meaning conveyed by it.

A wonder is a thing, and it is that which is evident in itself. It is something that extends beyond what is normal and is thus considered miraculous. When it is done, it is to be attributed to the Lord because there was no other explanation for it to occur.

“Son, these things happened before our eyes. Our fathers beheld them, and the events were recorded for us to read and believe.” These things were...

^{22 (con’t)} great and severe, gedolim v’raim – “greats and evils.” It is the adjectives gadol, or great, and ra, or evil. But in making them plural, it enhances what is conveyed. These great and severe wonders and signs were...

^{22 (con’t)} against Egypt, Pharaoh, and all his household.

People have been oppressed by other people since the very beginning. Israel’s fate in Egypt is no more severe than the fate of many other nations in history. And yet, the Lord has not intervened in their affairs. He has allowed the nations to continue on in their way. However, the Lord personally acted against:

Egypt – the nation in which His people were in bondage.

Pharaoh – the leader of Egypt and who determined the fate of those under his rule.

His household – Not only did the Lord punish Pharaoh, but he also took action against his household, limiting their ability to effect retribution against Israel into the future.

All of this was to secure Israel for Himself, protect Israel from those who had once controlled them, and to provide for Israel in the land He had promised to their fathers. He first performed these signs and wonders...

²³ Then He brought us out from there, that He might bring us in,

The Lord didn't simply bring Israel out of bondage because He felt sorry for them. If that was the case, He could have stopped right there and said, "You all are free! Go live your life as free men." It would have been a pretty sweet deal, but it would have left many uncertainties for the people.

Where do you go with your freedom? Do you stay together, or do you separate? Will you argue over who will rule? Will the strong immediately subjugate the weak? Rather, there was a purpose for what the Lord did. It says, v'otanu hosi misham l'maan havi otanu – "and us brought out from there to the end purpose bring in us."

There is an emphasis in the words, beginning with, and ending in, "us." It is a particular group of people that was focused upon. The Lord determined that it is they whom He would favor, and thus He acted.

And, He brought the people out specifically so that they could then be brought in. This was the purpose of bringing them out. They were not brought out to simply be given freedom, but to serve the Lord's purposes in redemptive history. The first aspect of that was to demonstrate that the Lord God keeps His word...

²³ (con't) to give us the land of which He swore to our fathers.

The Lord swore to the fathers – Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob – that He would give the land to their descendants –

"Then the LORD appeared to Abram and said, 'To your descendants I will give this land.' And there he built an altar to the LORD, who had appeared to him.”

-Genesis 12:7

“Dwell in this land, and I will be with you and bless you; for to you and your descendants I give all these lands, and I will perform the oath which I swore to Abraham your father.” Genesis 26:3 (To Isaac)

“And behold, the LORD stood above it and said: ‘I am the LORD God of Abraham your father and the God of Isaac; the land on which you lie I will give to you and your descendants.’” Genesis 28:13 (To Jacob)

The Lord spoke, and the Lord fulfilled His promise. This is what is to be conveyed to the children when the question is asked: “Why do we do these things?” “Well son, here is why. The Lord swore that He would give this land to us. When we were in bondage, He fulfilled that promise by redeeming us from it and bringing us into this land...”

²⁴ And the LORD commanded us to observe all these statutes, to fear the LORD our God, for our good always, that He might preserve us alive, as it is this day.

This is the second aspect of why He did this. It wasn't just to prove that the Lord keeps His word to the fathers in giving them the land, but that He might also preserve them in the land – which is another aspect of the promise.

In Genesis 13:15, Exodus 32:13, and elsewhere, the land was not only said to be given to the descendants, but that it was to be forever. One can, and indeed many will, debate what “forever” means, but as long as these descendants of Israel are preserved –which means even until today – the promise must stand.

And so, the law, meaning the observance of all of these statutes, was given to direct the people, keep them united, and to preserve them as a people.

One way of keeping them united was by observing certain statutes which looked back – such as the Passover. In directing them to look back, it kept them in the mindset of being a united people with a common heritage and salvation. Other statutes were observances within the normal patterns of human existence – be it from moment to moment, day to day, weekly, or annually.

These were to keep them dependent on the Lord, cognizant of the Lord, anticipating the Lord's hand in their lives, and so on. And, there are statutes found in the law and the prophets that were future looking. In Deuteronomy 18:18, 19, Moses said that the Lord would raise up for Israel a prophet like him –

“I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their brethren, and will put My words in His mouth, and He shall speak to them all that I command Him. ¹⁹ And it shall be that whoever will not hear My words, which He speaks in My name, I will require it of him.”

This was a set statute and it was to keep them as a people as well. They knew the Lord had made the promise, and so it could serve as both a means of sifting out false claims and also strengthening the true claim. Thus, uniting the people in a unique way. In fact, we know this is certain because it says this in John 1 –

“Now this is the testimony of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, ‘Who are you?’

²⁰ He confessed, and did not deny, but confessed, ‘I am not the Christ.’

²¹ And they asked him, ‘What then? Are you Elijah?’

He said, “‘I am not.’

‘Are you the Prophet?’

And he answered, ‘No.’” John 1:19-21

The people, in asking these questions, were being obedient to the words of law. In observing all such statutes, they would demonstrate a fear of the Lord their God – meaning a reverential fear of Him – and this would be for their good as long as they maintained that state. Understanding this, it is what the fathers were to tell their sons.

This was not because of who they are, but because of who He is. They did nothing to earn the land He had given them, the place they occupied, the family they were born into, or any other thing they possessed.

It was all due to what He had done for them, and therefore, they were under obligation to return their allegiance to Him. The father was then to finish this thought, saying ke-ha’yom ha’zeh – “as the day, the this.”

The implication is that they were still in the land because of the Lord. Thus, it means that their dwelling in the land – by default – must be conditional.

“Son, we are doing these things because this is what the Lord has done for us, and we continue to do them to this day. Should we neglect this service, the Lord has spoken other things to us as well – things we do not want to have to face. Therefore...”

25 (fin) Then it will be righteousness for us, if we are careful to observe all these commandments before the LORD our God, as He has commanded us.’

The word of Moses speaks of their righteousness in their faithful observance of all these commandments. It is the same word which was used for the first time in Scripture in Genesis 15 –

“And behold, the word of the LORD came to him, saying, ‘This one shall not be your heir, but one who will come from your own body shall be your heir.’⁵ Then He brought him outside and said, ‘Look now toward heaven, and count the stars if you are able to number them.’ And He said to him, ‘So shall your descendants be.’⁶ And he believed in the LORD, and He accounted it to him for righteousness.”

-Genesis 15:4-6

Paul uses that passage in Romans 4 and Galatians 3 to demonstrate that Abraham’s righteousness was not of works of the law, but of faith. This is because the law wasn’t introduced until long after Abraham had died. But more, he even received this righteousness before he was circumcised.

And so, the question here is, “What is the source of righteousness?” If Moses says that the fathers are to tell the sons that doing all these things were righteousness for them, then does that mean that righteousness can come from within?

The answer is, “No.” Moses has, and will continue to, make the “righteousness of the law” so dependent on the condition of the heart that it is summed up – completely and entirely – in the word “faith.” Could someone go up to John the Baptist and ask if he were the Prophet if he didn’t have faith in what the law said? No!

In fact, it is solely by faith in what the Lord said concerning the matter that anyone would even assume someone could be the Prophet. But that is true then with the entire law. One must have faith that it is from God in order to believe they are pleasing the Lord by doing the things He instructs.

If this is not so, then the observance of the law becomes a self-based righteousness – exactly what the Pharisees trusted in. Instead of “I am doing these things to please the Lord and to be pleasing to the Lord,” their attitude was, “I am doing these things because the Lord is pleased with me.”

They looked first to their own righteousness, and how they could exalt themselves in the eyes of men even more through the law. But the true Israelite looked to what the Lord had done for them, despite themselves. They were in bondage; He set them free. They were lowly; He exalted them. They had no home; He gave them the land.

Whether under law or not, what pleases the Lord is faith first, and only then working out that faith in whatever manner the Lord has prescribed. We know this is true because David delighted in the law of the Lord, and yet he is shown to have failed in works of the law.

It wasn't the battles he won, it wasn't the sacrifices at the temple that he offered, and it wasn't the wealth he amassed that the Lord was pleased with. Rather, it was his complete dependence upon the Lord, despite all of those things.

From his time as a shepherd boy in Bethlehem, to his reigning as king over all of Israel, he was a man after God's own heart because his heart followed after God. The same is true with all of the greats of the Bible. They are not remembered for the things they did, except as how those things were in relation to – meaning products of – their faith.

As I sat typing this sermon on August 17, 2020, it was the day after the first sermon in our short break from Deuteronomy. The week after that, we introduced David into the narrative. And how exciting it was to prepare for that!

But the reason wasn't because he was going to slay a giant, showing how great he is. Rather, it is because he was going to trust in the Lord, despite how insignificant he is. It is the honor of the Lord, faith in His hand of providence, and a surety that the honor of the Lord is what is needed to win that battle, that set David apart from all the other men of Israel.

And in the typology of those sermons, we saw that he was only prefiguring a far greater figure in the redemptive narrative, our Lord Jesus. It is He who not only defeated the enemy of God, but He did so without ever sinning in the process. David was just a shadowy type of what was to come in Christ.

Now, with Christ's having come, we have so much more than those under the law had. We have the fulfillment of this law, in every single detail, in the Person of Jesus Christ.

And so, we do not have to bear our fruit of the righteousness we possess by doing deeds of the law.

Rather, the fruits of righteousness for Christians are displayed in our ongoing faith in what Christ did under the law, and in how we then live our lives in accord with that. And so, let us bear fruit to God in this manner – to His glory.

But in order to do so, we must first be true Christians. Have you met the standard? What sets you apart from the world as a Christian? Christ came to bring you out, so that He might bring you in. You are sold as a slave, and He has come to give you freedom as a son. Let's make sure you have that right first...

Closing Verse: “But what things were gain to me, these I have counted loss for Christ. ⁸ Yet indeed I also count all things loss for the excellence of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them as rubbish, that I may gain Christ ⁹ and be found in Him, not having my own righteousness, which is from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith; ¹⁰ that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being conformed to His death, ¹¹ if, by any means, I may attain to the resurrection from the dead.” Philippians 3:7-11

Next Week: Deuteronomy 7:1-8 Why did the Lord these things do? (Because the Lord Loves You) (26th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Then It Will Be Righteousness for Us

“You shall not tempt the LORD your God
-----as you tempted Him in Massah
You shall diligently keep the commandments, so you shall do
Of the LORD your God
His testimonies, and His statutes which He has commanded you

And you shall do what is right and good in the sight of the LORD
-----that it may be well with you
And that you may go in and possess the good land of which

----- the LORD swore to your fathers – His personal token
To cast out all your enemies from before you
As the LORD has spoken

“When your son asks you in time to come, saying
When these words to you he is relaying...

‘What is the meaning of the testimonies, the statutes
-----and the judgments too
Which the LORD our God has commanded you?

Then you shall say to your son: ‘We were slaves of Pharaoh
-----in Egypt
And the LORD brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand
And the LORD showed signs and wonders before our eyes
Great and severe, against Egypt, Pharaoh, and all his household
-----His deeds were gloriously grand

Then He brought us out from there, that He might bring us in
To give us the land of which He swore to our fathers
-----for all our days
And the LORD commanded us to observe all these statutes
To fear the LORD our God, for our good always

That He might preserve us alive, as it is this day
Then it will be righteousness for us; yes, it will be a plus
If we are careful to observe all these commandments
Before the LORD our God, as He has commanded us

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 7:1-8 (Because the Lord Loves You)

The day I typed this sermon started out, as always, with my morning Bible reading. A part of what I read was Deuteronomy 28. In that passage is the woeful reminder to Israel of what got them into the pickle they were in when exiled to Babylon, and then what got them into the pickle they have been in for the past two thousand years. Their troubles have been a self-inflicted wound.

Until they realize this, there will be no change for them. They project outward at the world over every infraction against them, and indeed many are unjustified. But none of the ills they face would come to pass if they had been obedient to the covenant that they agreed to.

As I will point out today, and continue to point out again and again, this covenant anticipates its own ending, and the introduction of a New Covenant.

In rejecting Christ, they were disobedient to the Mosaic Covenant, and they are outside of the New Covenant. Such is the state they have been in, and that they will continue to be in, until the day they – as a nation – call out to Him.

But, even in life under the Old Covenant, as is recorded in the Bible, God has used the misdeeds of Israel to bring glory to Himself. An example of this will be explained later when we hear about Rahab the harlot.

Something occurred in the account concerning her which is in violation of the word given by Moses today. That is a bad thing. However, the result of that bad thing led to good things. Even Israel under the law could figure that out from their writings.

And so, they could – perversely – say, “We brought glory to God through our misdeed. Therefore, what we do as a people – right or wrong – is an instrument to bring glory to the Lord.” Sounds unreasonable, doesn't it?

Text Verse: “For if the truth of God has increased through my lie to His glory, why am I also still judged as a sinner? ⁸ And why not say, “Let us do evil that good may come” — as we are slanderously reported and as some affirm that we say. Their condemnation is just.” Romans 3:7, 8

Unfortunately, this is the attitude of many in Israel, and that attitude continues in the church today. Is it evil to violate Scripture? Are Paul's words Scripture? When Paul says concerning theological matters that a woman is not to teach or have authority over a man, is that prescriptive or descriptive? Is it optional or mandatory?

But many females have become pastors. Some have great insights, lead people to Christ, and run what would otherwise be considered important ministries. And yet, it is exactly what Paul argues against in our text verse – “Let us do evil that good may come.” The end cannot justify the means, and God cannot reward open disobedience to His word.

We will learn about that today. We will also learn a lot more. So buckle your seat, and put on your helmet. There is a lot to learn and it will come at you quickly. Great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Make No Covenant with Them (Verses 1-5)

Moses had given a brief review of some of Israel's history in Chapters 1-3, highlighting events from leaving Sinai until the spot where they now sat, across the Jordan from Canaan.

In Chapter 4, there was a bit more review, but the chapter focused on idolatry and being sure to obey the commands of the Lord, forsaking any such idolatry. At the end of that chapter, the defeat of Sihon and Og was again repeated, even though it had been reviewed in Chapters 2 and 3. They and their people were exterminated, and that was the expectation west of Jordan as well.

Chapter 5 again commanded obedience as the Ten Commandments were repeated. They also warned against idolatry as well as the other major points of the law, focusing on love for the Lord and love for one's neighbor.

Chapter 6 continued to stress love for the Lord and holding fast to Him in obedience. At the end of Chapter 6, Moses explained that the meaning of all of these testimonies, statutes, and judgments was based on the Lord having delivered Israel from Egypt, from the house of bondage.

It was a land of idolatry and bondage, but they were brought out from that in order that He might bring them into their own land. One can see that Chapter 6 expanded upon the first command –

“I am the LORD your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

⁷ ‘You shall have no other gods before Me.’” Deuteronomy 5:6, 7

Understanding this progression of thought, Moses now opens Chapter 7 saying –

¹“When the LORD your God brings you into the land which you go to possess,

The purpose of bringing them out is so that He might bring them in. They were held in a land they did not possess; they were being given a land of their own to possess. In this, there were certain obligations that needed to be performed to keep them from violating the very commands that have been so heavily stressed.

One of those commands was to dispossess the inhabitants of Canaan. Moses says that it will be the same Lord who brought them out who will now accomplish that task...

^{1 (con’t)} and has cast out many nations before you,

Here, Moses uses a rather rare word, nashal – to slip off, draw off, or clear away. It has only been used so far in Exodus 3:5 –

“Do not draw near this place. Take your sandals off your feet, for the place where you stand is holy ground.” Exodus 3:5

Moses promises that the Lord will be the one to draw the people off of the land, just as a person draws off his shoe. Those who will be ejected are...

^{1 (con’t)} the Hittites

ha’khiti – “the Hittite.” It should be noted now that all seven of the named people groups are in the singular, not the plural. Hittite means, Terrible or Fearsome. They were introduced into the Bible in Genesis 15. They are referred to throughout the Old Testament writings, and the name will last be seen in Ezekiel 16:45 when speaking of Jerusalem –

“You are your mother’s daughter, loathing husband and children; and you are the sister of your sisters, who loathed their husbands and children; your mother was a Hittite and your father an Amorite.”

1 (con’t) and the Girgashites v’ha’girgashi – “and the Girgashite.” The exact meaning of the name is unknown. It may mean, “Dweller in a Clayey Soil.” They are sparsely noted between Genesis 10:16 and Nehemiah 9:8.

1 (con’t) and the Amorites v’ha’emori – “and the Amorite.” The name means, “Spoken Of” and thus, “Renowned.” They are noted many times throughout the Old Testament, from Genesis 10:16 until Amos 2:10. They are, at times, used as a catchall name to describe the inhabitants of the land of Canaan. The same is true with...

1 (con’t) and the Canaanites

v’ha’kenaani – “and the Canaanite.” The name Canaanite may mean Merchant or Servant. The latter is more likely. They were cursed by Noah as the lowest of slaves, and they also picture those who bring others into slavery.

Canaan was the firstborn of Ham, and his name identifies with the land and people groups in the land. The name is mentioned throughout the Old Testament and even into the New, beginning in Genesis 9:18 and seen last in Acts 13:19.

1 (con’t) and the Perizzites v’ha’perizi – “And the Perizzite.” The name means Villagers, or Dwellers in the Open Country. They are seen mostly in the Books of Moses and the writings of the Old Testament from Genesis 13:7 until Nehemiah 9:8.

1 (con’t) and the Hivites v’ha’khivi – “And the Hivite.” Hivite might mean “Tent Villagers.” They are also seen in the Books of Moses and the writings from Genesis 10:17 until 2 Chronicles 8:7.

1 (con’t) and the Jebusites, v'ha'yebusi – “And the Jebusite.” The name means “Treading Down” or “Trodden Underfoot.” They are found mostly in Moses and the writings, but Zechariah mentions them also, going from Genesis 10:16 until Zechariah 9:7. It was the Jebusites who held the main body of Jerusalem until the time of King David. Of these people groups, Moses says they are...

^{1 (con't)} seven nations greater and mightier than you,

It should be noted that ten people groups were mentioned as possessing the land in Genesis 15:18-20. That was when the Lord promised the land to Abraham. At times, even in Deuteronomy, the names of the people groups will vary from this list now. For example, Deuteronomy 20 will say –

“But of the cities of these peoples which the LORD your God gives you as an inheritance, you shall let nothing that breathes remain alive, ¹⁷ but you shall utterly destroy them: the Hittite and the Amorite and the Canaanite and the Perizzite and the Hivite and the Jebusite, just as the LORD your God has commanded you, ¹⁸ lest they teach you to do according to all their abominations which they have done for their gods, and you sin against the LORD your God.”
Deuteronomy 20:16-18

There, only six groups are named. The Girgashite is left out. Therefore, the list is to be taken as a general list speaking of all of the inhabitants, even if not all are named at all times. The words of Moses, “seven nations greater and mightier than you,” are certainly intended to mean that each, by itself, is mightier and greater. Despite this, Moses continues...

² and when the LORD your God delivers them over to you,

Here it is clearly stated by Moses that the Lord will, in fact, deliver the inhabitants to them. This is an important statement because the Lord’s deliverance of the peoples precedes the destruction of them. Because the Lord is God, this cannot be considered either indiscriminate or unsanctioned killing.

And more, because He will deliver them, there is no excuse for any to survive. This is especially so concerning the next words. The Lord will deliver them, and they must then take action...

^{2 (con't)} you shall conquer them and utterly destroy them.

v'hikitam hakharem takhrim – “and you shall strike them and accursing them, you shall make them accursed.” The word is kharam, and it signifies to devote to destruction as an offering to God. When kharam is pronounced, whatever the Lord included as kharam was to be utterly destroyed.

For example, Jericho was to be completely destroyed. All people, all possessions, all animals – everything. The only thing to be spared is noted in Joshua 6, saying, “But all the silver and gold, and vessels of bronze and iron, are consecrated to the LORD; they shall come into the treasury of the LORD.”

At times, the animals might be spared. Or maybe the people were to be killed but the city could be inhabited. It was the Lord’s decision and whatever level of kharam was determined, it had to be accomplished to the last thread or stone.

In case of the inhabitants of Canaan, all were to be completely exterminated. None were to survive. As it next says...

² (con’t) You shall make no covenant with them nor show mercy to them.

The command is given and thus it is a point of law. The words say, “You shall not cut with them a covenant.” The idea surely extends to treaties or making alliances. The reason is obvious. They were to be exterminated in order to prevent taking up their idolatrous practices. Thus, making a covenant with them would preclude this.

In having a covenant with them, the land would not be a solely Israelite possession. There would be the constant warring over whose land it was, what rights did the inhabitants have, and so on.

Israel was to move in, dispossess the inhabitants, and thus be the sole possessors of the land – unhindered by the idolatry which would be sure to arise without these mandates being fulfilled.

One would think that not cutting a covenant would even extend to swearing an oath of protection for someone who sides with Israel. The Lord said to destroy all, and there is no caveat presented to make exceptions.

As this is so, it would be logical to assume that the shevua or oath sworn to Rahab the harlot to spare her and her family would fall under this. Either way, it is absolutely certain it extends to the treaty that Joshua made with the Gibeonites.

They were a clan under the Hivites mentioned in verse 1 who came in through deception. Joshua, without checking with the Lord, made peace with them and cut a covenant with them (it is the same words as are used in this verse now). Thus, the law was violated in their actions.

Despite this, we see later that Rahab came into the line of David, and thus into the line of Christ. The Gibeonites are seen still among Israel, even after the exile in the book of Nehemiah, helping to repair the wall and governor's residence in Jerusalem.

The failings of Israel are still used for good purposes by the Lord, demonstrating that His plan includes even the countless failings of His people. As we sit here today, that includes each of us. We fail, and yet the Lord works out a good end despite it. It is a marvelous lesson we can learn and cling to, knowing that He has it all figured out, even if we grieve over our own faithlessness or incompetence.

³ Nor shall you make marriages with them.

Of the previous verse, concerning utterly destroying the inhabitants, Joseph Benson (and others) says –

“That is, in case they continued obstinate in their idolatry, they were to be destroyed, as nations, or bodies politic. But if they forsook their idolatry, and became sincere proselytes to the true religion, they would then be proper objects of forgiveness, as being true penitents.” Joseph Benson

Now, of this verse concerning marriage, Joseph Benson says –

“From this prohibition it has been justly inferred that the Canaanites, as individuals, might be spared upon their repentance and reformation from idolatry. For on the supposition that nothing that breathed was to be saved alive, but that all were to be utterly destroyed, there could be no occasion for this injunction. What end could it answer to forbid all intermarriages with a people supposed not to exist?” Joseph Benson

It is hard to understand how scholars can insert into the text something which is not to be found. Moses says, “utterly destroy,” not “utterly destroy unless...” No exceptions were to be made.

The answer to Benson's question is, “The people were set for destruction and yet Israel failed to carry through with the command. Thus, intermarriages were forbidden, even if those people still existed.” This is perfectly evident from examples such as Solomon, even more than four centuries later –

“But King Solomon loved many foreign women, as well as the daughter of Pharaoh: women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Sidonians, and Hittites— ²from the nations of whom the LORD had said to the children of Israel, ‘You shall not intermarry with them, nor they with you. Surely they will turn away your hearts after their gods.’” 1 Kings 11:1, 2

The failure to be obedient to one command allowed for Solomon’s failure to be obedient to another one. Hittites are under the ban now mentioned in this passage.

The Bible, whether in the Old or the New Testament, is not a book of personal exceptions when convenient. It is the word of God, and it is to be accepted as such. The context is to be maintained, and when the context commands or forbids something in that context, it is to be adhered to.

³ (con’t) You shall not give your daughter to their son, nor take their daughter for your son.

The pronouns are singular – “to his son, nor take his daughter.” This is speaking of the inhabitant, whoever he may be.

Again, John Gill qualifies the words of verse 3, saying, “Unless they became proselytes...” There is no qualifier given by the Lord or by Moses. The point of the later exceptions is not to say that such exceptions are ok. It is to show that the Lord can still work through Israel’s disobedience for a good end.

This does not mean that we should think it is acceptable to marry a Muslim or a Buddhist, for example, knowing that God can use our disobedience for a good end. The New Testament shows that believers are to marry believers. Anything else than that is disobedience.

And yet, I personally know Christians who have disobeyed this precept and good has come out of it in the conversion of the spouse. The end, however, does not justify the means. There will be a loss of reward for the disobedience, and there will also be joy in heaven despite it.

This precept is what Paul spoke against in our Text Verse today, “Let us do evil that good may come.” Such is actually perverse thinking. The marvel of God, however, is that He can turn our perverse ways into a marvelous part of the beautiful tapestry He is weaving in the unfolding plan of redemption. For now, Moses explains his words, and in a rather exceptional way...

⁴ For they will turn your sons away from following Me,

Again, this needs correction. It says, “For he (singular) will turn away your son (singular) from following Me.” It is speaking of the foreigner, whoever he may be. However, the interesting part of the verse is that it is Moses who is speaking, and yet, he says, “from following Me.”

The two possibilities are that 1) he is referring to the body of law coming from him (aka the Law of Moses), or 2) he says “Me” as if the Lord is speaking in order to ensure that the words “he will turn” is not speaking of the Lord, but of the foreigner.

The second option is certainly what is being conveyed. Moses, speaking under inspiration, has transferred his words to be as if those spoken directly by the Lord in order to ensure clarity. It is in not following after the Lord that they will turn...

^{4 (con't)} to serve other gods;

This is the whole point of the passage so far, and as we saw, this passage continues in thought from the previous chapter, and that passage continues in thought from Chapter 5 where it said –

“I am the LORD your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. ⁷ ‘You shall have no other gods before Me.’”

-Deuteronomy 5:6, 7

Intermarriage will result in turning away from the Lord. Turning away from the Lord will result in turning to serve other gods. Remember what we read about Solomon in the previous verse. What was the result of what he did? The very next verses say –

“And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines; and his wives turned away his heart. ⁴ For it was so, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned his heart after other gods; and his heart was not loyal to the LORD his God, as was the heart of his father David. ⁵ For Solomon went after Ashtoreth the goddess of the Sidonians, and after Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites.” 1 Kings 11:3-5

The same chapter directly credits Solomon’s faithlessness in this to the division of the nation. And yet, the Lord used both the division of Israel, and one of Solomon’s marriages to continue marvelous events in the redemptive narrative. One of the wives, an Ammonite, became the mother of Rehoboam, and thus entered into the genealogy of Christ as noted in Matthew 1:7.

But just because good comes out of such things, it does not mean that the Lord is pleased with our disobedience. As Moses says...

⁴ (con’t) so the anger of the LORD will be aroused against you and destroy you suddenly.

Again, the ends do not justify the means. The Lord brought good out of many instances of Israel’s disobedience. In fact, the Redeemer of man came through some of them. But that is because of the Lord’s overarching sovereignty.

But our negative decisions will negatively affect ourselves and those around us. God does not impose His will on us, be it in who we marry, or whether we choose Christ for salvation or not. Those are personal, free-will choices.

When those choices are against the stated will of the Lord, that disobedience against the Lord will be judged. In the case of this verse, the “you” is plural. He is speaking to the people, “You all will be destroyed.” The very thing they were to do to the peoples in Canaan will come upon them. To avoid this, Moses continues...

⁵ But thus you shall deal with them: you shall destroy their altars, and break down their sacred pillars, and cut down their wooden images, and burn their carved images with fire.

Moses now turns from the people to what the people worship. And yet, they are united as one thought. The people are intimately connected to that which they worship. And so, each was to be destroyed according to what it is.

The altars were to be torn down. The matstsevah, or pillars were to be broken in pieces. The Asherim, or wooden images, were to be gada, or cut down. Here Moses introduces this word into Scripture. It means to cut off or cut down.

And, finally, the pasil, or carved images (another new word in Scripture, coming from a verb meaning “to cut”) were to be burned in the fire. In the Hebrew, a special emphasis is placed on burning these carved images by the addition of a suffix on the word.

As for the thought of these words, similar words have already been put forth by the Lord –

“You shall not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do according to their works; but you shall utterly overthrow them and completely break down their sacred pillars.” Exodus 23:24

But the Lord spoke even more precisely in Exodus 34, where He ties all of these things together as Moses now repeats here –

“Take heed to yourself, lest you make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land where you are going, lest it be a snare in your midst. ¹³ But you shall destroy their altars, break their sacred pillars, and cut down their wooden images ¹⁴ (for you shall worship no other god, for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God), ¹⁵ lest you make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they play the harlot with their gods and make sacrifice to their gods, and one of them invites you and you eat of his sacrifice, ¹⁶ and you take of his daughters for your sons, and his daughters play the harlot with their gods and make your sons play the harlot with their gods.” Exodus 34:12-16

The people are tied to their altars, and a covenant with the people means that a covenant has been made with their false deities. The resulting chaos, and turning from the Lord, is thus inevitable. The jealousy of the Lord will be aroused, And, in the arousal of His jealousy will come forth His anger. Moses next explains why these things were to be so...

*Be obedient to what I say
Even if not doing so will turn out for good
It is not right for you to ever disobey
Be sure that this is perfectly understood*

*If My word is violated, and good comes from that
It is because I ordained that it would be this way
But your disobedience only makes you a brat
Even if good comes from it, you have no right to disobey*

*Turn from disobedience, and always do right
Do not use the excuse that, "Things will turn out ok!"
That is wickedness in My sight
There is never a time when it is right to disobey*

II. A Special Treasure (verses 6-8)

⁶"For you are a holy people to the LORD your God; ki am qadosh attah l'Yehovah elohekha – "For people holy you to Yehovah your God."

The words of this verse, with differences, comes in thought from the words of the Lord in Exodus 19:5, 6 –

"Now therefore, if you will indeed obey My voice and keep My covenant, then you shall be a special treasure to Me above all people; for all the earth is Mine. ⁶ And you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation.' These are the words which you shall speak to the children of Israel."

-Exodus 19:5, 6

There, the Lord made the words conditional, "if you will indeed obey My voice and keep my covenant, then you shall be..." Here, Moses simply says, "you are." There, the Lord says, "a holy nation." Here, Moses says, "a holy people."

The words beg for us to consider them. The Lord says, "if/then" in order to be a holy nation. Moses says, "you are a holy people." What is obvious is that a people can be holy – meaning set apart to God, and yet not be a holy nation – meaning a nation which is set apart to God.

Israel is set apart as holy, whether they act like it or not. But Israel can be unholy even in their being set apart. The resolution to the two states is obeying the Lord's words and keeping His covenant. In understanding this, it resolves one of the greatest misunderstandings concerning Israel in the world today.

Israel misunderstands it, the church – in large part – misunderstands it, and the world at large misunderstands it. Israel is a holy people, regardless as to how they act. The Lord has set them apart, He has put His name on them – Israel – and He has covenanted with them. That has not changed, nor will it change.

Israel as a nation thinks it is holy, meaning right with God, because they are Israel the people. This is incorrect. As a nation, they are right with God when they are obedient to the Lord. As a people, they are to be obedient to the Lord in order to be holy as a nation.

If I adopt a child, we could say he is set apart (holy) to the family. He is to act as a member of the family in order to be right with (holy to) the family. If he doesn't act in accord with the rules of the family, it doesn't mean he isn't a child of (holy to) the family. It means that he is an unholy child.

This is where Israel fails to understand their obligations. It is also where the church fails to understand Israel. The church says Israel is no longer a holy nation. They have disobeyed the Lord, and thus they are also not now the Lord's people. The theological categories are thus mixed.

That is entirely incorrect. Israel is a holy (set apart) people to the Lord – forever. But they are not a holy nation to the Lord. The latter does not negate the status of the former. It simply means they, as a holy people, are not a holy nation.

Israel looks at themselves as a holy people, and thus they are a holy nation. Many in the church look at Israel as an unholy nation, and thus they are an unholy (meaning not the Lord's) people. Both are incorrect, and both require correction. They are category mistakes.

The world at large (meaning the nations who reject the God of Israel – from either testament) looks at Israel as an unholy nation, and an unholy people. To them, they are not set apart by God as a people, because their God is not the true God. And, they are even disobedient to the word of their God which they claim gives them holiness. Thus, the nations view them as double unholy.

Each of these, and you can see there is overlap between views – be it positive or negative – is an error in thinking. The nations, in general, are in error because they reject the God of the Bible. People in the church, in general, are in error because they fail to understand the unconditional decrees of God. And Israel, the nation, is in error because, as a people, they fail to conduct themselves in the manner which is in accord with who they are as set apart by God – meaning to Himself. Moses continues to show this, saying...

⁶ (con't) the LORD your God has chosen you to be a people for Himself,

The words here, and in the next clause, are rendered in various ways. We will put two side by side to see this – the LORD your God has chosen you to be a people for Himself, a special treasure above all the peoples on the face of the earth. NKJV

The LORD your God has chosen you to be a people for his treasured possession, out of all the peoples who are on the face of the earth. ESV

The NKJV gives two separate designations, “a people for Himself,” which is then qualified by “a special treasure above all peoples.” The ESV gives one, saying, “a people for his treasured possession, out of all the peoples.”

The words read lihyot lo l'am segulah mikol ha'amim – “to for Him to people treasure from all the peoples.” It comes down to the word l'am, or “to people.” Is it “for Him to people, a treasure,” or is it “for Him, to people treasure.”

The meaning is similar in either case, but I wanted you to be aware of the Hebrew, because either way, they – as a people – are set apart to the Lord. Thus, the error of thinking by all can be corrected if they accept 1) the God of the Bible, 2) that God's decrees are unconditional, and 3) that being set apart as a holy people does not mean that the holiness is “in the people” but “as the people.”

Because the Lord has chosen Israel as a people for Himself, they are to Him...

⁶ (con't) a special treasure above all the peoples on the face of the earth.

The word is segulah. It signifies possession or property, coming from an unused root meaning “to shut up” as in wealth. One would take something precious, like treasure, and shut it up and keep it close by. Thus, it is variously translated as peculiar treasure, possession, jewels, special possession, and so on.

Moses says that they, as a people, are this treasure. And yet, as a nation, in order to be so they must be obedient to His commandments. Thus, it is both conditional and unconditional, depending on the context. Peter, speaking to the Jews who have come to Christ, cites these words in his first epistle, saying –

“But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, His own special people, that you may proclaim the praises of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvelous light; ¹⁰ who once were not a people but are now the people of God, who had not obtained mercy but now have obtained mercy.”

-1 Peter 2:9, 10

Paul uses the same word in Ephesians 1:14 concerning the Gentiles who have been brought into the commonwealth of Israel. We have become a possession of the Lord through obedience to, meaning calling on, Christ.

More directly, however, Paul uses the same phrase, laon periousion, in Titus 2:14 that is used in the Greek translation of this verse in Deuteronomy –

“For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men, ¹² teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present age, ¹³ looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, ¹⁴ who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself His own special people, zealous for good works.” Titus 2:11-14

Vincent’s word studies notes of this, “The phrase was originally applied to the people of Israel, but is transferred there to believers in Messiah – Jews and Gentiles.”

The people of the church have been redeemed in order that we can become a special people to God, just as Israel is. In this act, and in the use of this term by Paul, many scholars unfortunately then make the jump in logic that this means that the Church has now replaced Israel, thus becoming “spiritual Israel.”

This is a category mistake, and it is gigantic error in theology. Just because we in the church have become a special people to God, it doesn’t mean that we have replaced God’s chosen people, Israel. We have simply joined into the commonwealth of blessing of which they already participate in.

Others will use Paul’s words to justify that there are two gospels, one for the Jews and one for the Gentiles – a heresy known as hyperdispensationalism. That is proven false by Paul’s words in verse 2:11 where he says, “the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men.” There is one gospel for all.

However, to understand how the church did not replace the people Israel, we can make a simple example. The church was once predominantly Jewish. It later became predominantly Gentile. In this, we can think of two separate baskets of olives.

God chooses one basket and draws it out for Himself, Israel. He takes the fruit out of it as needed for His oil. At some point, however, the olives in the basket which are good are so few in number that He then draws out from another basket, Gentiles.

That basket has an immense supply of good fruit, so much so that it becomes the predominant fruit used for the oil. The oil running into the bottles is mixed with an almost insignificant amount of Jewish oil. However, that is still coming from the basket of Israel. The two baskets remain separate and distinct.

Now, over the many centuries, the basket of Gentile fruit is starting to wane. The number of good olives is rapidly diminishing, but the number of Israel fruit is on the increase. The categories have never changed, and one did not replace the other.

It simply has become the predominant source of oil for a period of time. It's not a perfect analogy, but one can see that each basket remained the same. One did not replace the other. Israel as a people is set apart unto the Lord. But only those of Israel who do what the Lord expects are of use by the Lord.

Someday, the set-apart people of Israel will, as a nation, come to Christ (a precept anticipated in the Mosaic Covenant) through the New Covenant, and they – as a nation – will be holy to the Lord.

Israel, as a people, was selected by the Lord as His own, and for His own good purposes. They, and no one else, were offered the Mosaic Covenant, and they accepted it. They are a physical group of people united to the Lord in this manner.

The church, as a people, is received by the Lord as His own, and for His own good purposes. All, without any exceptions, are offered the New Covenant. Those in the church are those who have accepted its offer. They are a spiritual group of people united to the Lord in this manner. As for Israel...

⁷The LORD did not set His love on you nor choose you because you were more in number than any other people,

The word translated as “set His love” is khashaq. It comes from a word meaning “to cling to.” In the construction of the tabernacle, it was translated as “bands” which bound two things together. Here, it is as if the Lord bound Himself to Israel through an act of love. However, He didn't do it based on their size as a nation.

Many groups descended from Terah, Abraham's father – the people of Edom, Moab, Ammon, and Ishmael, for example. However, the line of promise from Abraham to Isaac to Jacob started slowly. For example, Ismael gave Abraham twelve grandsons. However, it wasn't until Jacob that there were twelve tribes, meaning Abraham's great grandsons.

And not only that, Isaac was sixty when he had Esau and Jacob. And Jacob was over 85 when he started having children. Despite the smaller numbers, God had chosen this line and had sovereignly watched over it, binding Himself to it, nurturing it, and loving it.

⁷ (con't) for you were the least of all peoples;

God upturns the thinking of man. We look to large numbers and see greatness. We expect that God would do the same. But where is the glory for Him in that? He called a small and insignificant group of people for Himself, and He brought them into a situation where they would greatly multiply.

However, in their multiplication, they were in bondage. And yet, the Lord brought them out, destroying a greater and mightier nation in the process. The glory belongs to the Lord. Such is true with every aspect of what the Lord does. He uses that which is considered less to glorify His greatness. The same thought transfers to those in the church. As Paul says –

“For you see your calling, brethren, that not many wise according to the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called.²⁷ But God has chosen the foolish things of the world to put to shame the wise, and God has chosen the weak things of the world to put to shame the things which are mighty;²⁸ and the base things of the world and the things which are despised God has chosen, and the things which are not, to bring to nothing the things that are,²⁹ that no flesh should glory in His presence.³⁰ But of Him you are in Christ Jesus, who became for us wisdom from God—and righteousness and sanctification and redemption—³¹ that, as it is written, “He who glories, let him glory in the LORD.” 1 Corinthians 1:26-31

It must be understood what Paul's words are conveying. The calling of the Lord is what is responded to by the individual. It is generally those who are of low esteem who will humble themselves and admit they need a Savior. The call is made, but it is a call that is generally responded to by the lowly.

Israel's calling was active; the calling to the church is passive. But both are to what would otherwise seem unimpressive, lowly, etc. For Israel, it was not because of their size...

⁸ but because the LORD loves you, ki me-ahavat Yehovah etkem – “Because for love Yehovah for you.” In Chapter 4, the Lord says it was because of love for their fathers –

“And because He loved your fathers, therefore He chose their descendants after them; and He brought you out of Egypt with His Presence, with His mighty power, ³⁸ driving out from before you nations greater and mightier than you, to bring you in, to give you their land as an inheritance, as it is this day.”

-Deuteronomy 4:37, 38

In Chapter 9, Moses says it is not because of their righteousness, but because of the wickedness of the nations that the Lord was giving them Canaan. Further, he says that it is in order to fulfill His word to the fathers. He then ensures they understand this by calling them stiff-necked.

Understanding that the Lord's love for Israel is originally based on His love for the fathers, there is nothing intrinsically worthy of that love in them. Rather because of His nature – which is love – it is then directed to those of the covenant promises. As Moses says...

^{8 (con't)} and because He would keep the oath which He swore to your fathers,

The Lord spoke an oath, and therefore He must perform. His very nature demands that His word will be fulfilled. Therefore, His word must come to pass. Because of this...

^{8 (fin)} the LORD has brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you from the house of bondage, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

The idea of these words, from both verses 7 and 8, is that the Lord bound Himself to this people in order to love them and in order to keep His oath. Both have a divine motive behind them. It's not that He loved Israel for who they were, but because of who He is.

We could say, “I'm not loving you for who you are, but for who you could be in relation to Me.” When the Lord saves a person, it is because He is love. The saving is in anticipation of the relationship, not the other way around – because the relationship did not exist until the saving.

This is how it is with Israel. Because of who He is, He brought Israel out from the house of bondage. Because of who He is, He sent His Son to die for us. The love extends from God to us. Only when we rightly respond to that love does the relationship begin.

What we see in this final verse is Israel's selection and calling being equated directly to the individual believer. We are in sin. We are in bondage. And, we can do nothing to redeem ourselves. But more, we have no idea about the love of God. It is foreign to us.

Israel was brought out, and that act was to alert them to the fact that God is covenant-keeping, and that He is loving. They were to respond in kind because of that understanding.

We are told the message of Christ, that He has potentially redeemed us from our bondage. When we understand that God did that as an act of love, we are to respond, accepting what He has done, and thus making that redemption actual. It is the acceptance of the love of God that is found in Jesus Christ.

This is what this passage today tells us. God is sovereign over the process, be it in exterminating the inhabitants of Canaan, using Israel's failure to do so in unique and glorious ways – such as the saving of Rahab the harlot – or be it in the offer of Jesus for the sins of the world.

No person can question what God is doing. We can only accept that what He is doing is for the greatest good of all. If you don't believe that, then you have misunderstood the significance of the cross. Contemplate what God has done, and then accept it for what it is. And then, receive it by faith. The offer stands open for any and all who will reach out and receive it.

Closing Verse: “Love has been perfected among us in this: that we may have boldness in the day of judgment; because as He is, so are we in this world. ¹⁸ There is no fear in love; but perfect love casts out fear, because fear involves torment. But he who fears has not been made perfect in love. ¹⁹ We love Him because He first loved us.” 1 John 4:17-19

Next Week: Deuteronomy 7:9-16 That it is wonderful is beyond controversy... (The Covenant and the Mercy) (27th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Because the Lord Loves You

“When the LORD your God
Brings you into the land (as He promised to do)
Which you go to possess
And has cast out many nations before you

The Hittites and the Girgashites and the Amorites
And the Canaanites and the Perizzites
And the Hivites and the Jebusites
Seven nations greater and mightier than you; a bunch of “ites”

And when the LORD your God
Delivers them over to you
You shall conquer them
And utterly destroy them, so you shall do

You shall make no covenant with them
Nor show mercy to them, not even one
Nor shall you make marriages with them
You shall not give your daughter to their son, nor take -----their daughter for your son

For they will turn your sons away from following Me
To serve other gods, so I tell you plainly
So the anger of the LORD will be aroused
Against you and destroy you suddenly

But thus you shall deal with them
You shall destroy their altars, and down their sacred pillars
-----you shall break
And cut down their wooden images
And burn their carved images with fire, for goodness sake

“For you are a holy people to the LORD your God
The LORD your God has chosen you with joy and mirth
To be a people for Himself
A special treasure above all the peoples on the face of the earth

The LORD did not set His love on you
Nor choose you because you were more
In number than any other people
For you were the least of all peoples, such is the score

But because the LORD loves you
And because He would keep the oath, please understand
Which He swore to your fathers
The LORD has brought you out with a mighty hand

And redeemed you from the house of bondage
-----out of his grasp, you He stripped
From the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 7:9-16 (The Covenant and the Mercy)

In our verses today, Moses refers to the covenant and the mercy that the Lord swore to Israel's fathers. When we read something like that, as we have seen in previous sermons, it isn't always easy to know what "fathers" are being referred to.

Scholars make their analyses, and each presents the case as to what he believes is being said. At times, one case seems as possible as another and a third just as likely as the first two. The same is true with what Moses says today. It can be confusing, because there are various ways that the term "fathers" can be defined.

Is it those who received the law? Is it the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? Or, is it all of them or some other group? Sometimes deciding is made easier by later passages in the Bible, and sometimes they may muddy the waters to us even more. Not because the word is conflicted, but because we are.

This is especially true because we may come at the Bible with our own presuppositions. If so, we will refuse to see what is otherwise plain and obvious. I'm certainly as guilty of this as anyone else. There are certain things I believe about God, about His word, and about His relationships with various peoples at various times. Because of that, I'm sure that my judgment is – in one point or another – clouded. I would hope this isn't the case, but if it is, I wouldn't be able to identify it in myself very easily. None of us could.

Text Verse: *"Blessed is the Lord God of Israel,
For He has visited and redeemed His people,
⁶⁹ And has raised up a horn of salvation for us
In the house of His servant David,
⁷⁰ As He spoke by the mouth of His holy prophets,
Who have been since the world began,
⁷¹ That we should be saved from our enemies
And from the hand of all who hate us,
⁷² To perform the mercy promised to our fathers
And to remember His holy covenant,
⁷³ The oath which He swore to our father Abraham:
⁷⁴ To grant us that we,
Being delivered from the hand of our enemies,
Might serve Him without fear,
⁷⁵ In holiness and righteousness before Him all the days of our life." Luke 1:68-75*

Did you see any similarities in those words to the sermon text we read a minute ago? If so, how are you going to analyze what is said in one passage in relation to what is said in the other?

Did the church replace Israel? Is there one covenant for Israel and another for the Gentiles? Why does one speak of a land grant and the other doesn't? Does the promise of land go hand in hand with the other promises to Israel? Can it be separated from them? Are the Gentiles included in any land grant?

On and on, we have to evaluate the word as best we can. We can't ignore any of it, but we have to consider it in relation to what the Lord intends. It's not always that easy, and one error in analysis can lead to many others. As always, what I have evaluated for you to consider today should be supplemented by your own study and consideration.

It's important because this is God's word. As such, it presents what He has done, intends to do, and to whom He intends to do it – at any given time. We all fit into the picture somewhere, but we don't fit into it everywhere. So, keeping things in their context is necessary.

In understanding the context, we can then determine what God will do for us and with us. Isn't that exciting? It's all to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

There is a chiastic structure to verses 9-12 that I plucked out of those verses the day this sermon got typed. So you are aware of it, here it is –

Deuteronomy 7:9-12 – The Covenant and the Mercy
A Promise and a Warning (08/31/2020)

- a. He is God, the faithful God who keeps covenant and mercy
 - b. For a thousand generations with those who love Him and keep His commandments
 - c. And He repays those who hate Him to their face
 - x. He will not be slack with him who hates Him
 - c. He will repay him to his face
 - b. Therefore you shall keep the commandment, the statutes, and the judgments which I command you today, to observe them
 - a. That the LORD your God will keep with you the covenant and the mercy

With that in view...

I. Therefore You Shall Keep the Commandment (verses 9-11)

⁹“Therefore know that the LORD your God, He is God, v’yadata ki Yehovah elohekha hu ha’elohim – “And know for Yehovah your God, He, the God.” The words are emphatic, but the emphasis is left out of English translations. There is a definite article before the word God. In other words, Moses is stating unambiguously that not only is Yehovah Israel’s God, but He is THE GOD.

This is one of only five times in the book of Deuteronomy that the definite article is placed before the word Elohim, or God, in this exact manner. It was seen twice in Chapter 4, and it will be seen once in Chapter 10 and once in Chapter 33.

As Moses says He is THE GOD, and as simple logic tells us that there can be only one God – meaning in the sense of the Creator God and not a “lesser god” – then this One God is Yehovah. That this is evident is understood from the theological points known as the 12 First Principles. Points 7 and 8 state –

7. Only Necessary Being Can Cause a Contingent Being ($B^n \rightarrow B^c$). This is known as the Positive Principle of Modality. What it means is that there is a Being that cannot Not exist. He must exist. As we exist, and as we are certainly not necessary, but rather are created beings, then God must exist. The principle is reducible to the undeniable. Understanding this, we then turn to point 8 –

8. Necessary Being Cannot Cause A Necessary Being ($B^n > B^n$). This is known as the Negative Principle of Modality. Again, the principle is undeniable. Only one Necessary Being can exist. Any being which exists apart from a Necessary Being is contingent and could Not exist. It is self-evident. In other words, because a Necessary Being must exist (point 7), and because only He is necessary, then only He is God.

Without giving the logical explanation for it, this is what Moses is conveying to the people of Israel. His words simply proclaim it is true, and they ask us to logically consider them (as we have done), and to accept that if Yehovah is that Necessary Being, then He is THE GOD.

That thought brings in the obvious next thought. How do we tell “if Yehovah is that Necessary Being?” Can it be some other “god” that some culture or another follows?

How do we find out? The gravity of getting this wrong is such that only a fool would not want to be sure.

The answer is to be found in several logical steps. The first would be to contemplate all twelve of the First Principles. In understanding them, it is possible to weed out all of the false gods, and also the false presentations of the true God.

But that only eliminates, it doesn't confirm. And so, man next evaluates whatever has not been eliminated – which is the God of the Bible, Yehovah. We can know that all other gods are false, but that does not prove Yehovah is THE GOD.

In comparing Scripture with logic, we will find that nothing about the God of the Bible is contradictory to logic. From there, we can go further and see that not only is the God presented in the Bible supported by such logic, but He goes beyond it, telling what He will do before it comes to pass – meaning He gives us the prophetic word.

This prophetic word includes what God has done, is doing, and will do with a particular group of people – Israel. Thus, the God of the Bible not only reveals Himself as possibly being the true God, but He then confirms that possibility through His actions. One of those actions, which came through Israel, is the incarnation of Jesus Christ.

In that, nothing is contrary to the logical principles which have been set forth, it was spoken of in advance, and it is therefore a confirmation of who Yehovah is, and of the word He has given. When we place our faith in Jesus Christ, we have a sound and reasonable faith. And this continues to be true for Israel, even though Israel rejected Him. Why? Because Yehovah is...

⁹ (con't) the faithful God

ha'el ha'neeman – “the God, the faithful.” I said that ha'elohim, or “the God,” is seen just five times in Deuteronomy. I was referring to that exact expression. Here, there is – again – an article before el, or God. This is one of just two times this expression is used in Deuteronomy, once here, and once in Chapter 10.

Moses then qualifies that by saying, ha'neeman, or “the faithful.” The word signifies to confirm or support. In other words, God is faithful – confirming His words. They are to be trusted. In the case of Israel, what will be said in the coming words and verses indicates that Israel could, and indeed, will be cut off for disobedience.

But we find elsewhere that this is never permanent. God's covenant with them will stand, even in their breaking of it. He will never break His own side of it. For now, Moses continues describing THE GOD...

⁹ (con't) who keeps covenant and mercy

shomer ha'berit v'ha'khesed – “keeping the covenant and the loyal love.” It is tragic how out of 27 translations referred to for this sermon, only one included the definite articles – “the covenant and the mercy.” Moses is being especially careful to describe the actions of Yehovah and how they relate to Israel.

The use of the article before the verb “mercy” gives it the force of an adjective, showing that He is to be trusted because it is His very nature. He will keep the loyalty to His mercy faithfully.

⁹ (con't) for a thousand generations with those who love Him and keep His commandments;

l'ohava u-l'shomere mitsvotav l'eleph dor – “to those who love Him and keep His commandments to thousandth generation.” This is similar to the second commandment found in Exodus 20 and Deuteronomy 5 –

“For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, ¹⁰ but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.” Deuteronomy 5:9, 10

There is a difference in this verse though, which very few translations pick up on. The word “generations” is in the singular – “to thousandth generation.” It is as if Moses is looking ahead in time and anticipating the faithfulness of God, counting each generation and seeing that His lovingkindness is not missing toward even one of them. However...

¹⁰ and He repays those who hate Him

There are those who hate God, and then there are those who hate God. Some hate Him for whatever reason they think is justified. They may hate Him because He took away a beloved spouse or a child. They may hate Him because they lost a great fortune. They may hate Him because they were born crippled.

People find their own reasons that God is to be hated based on who they are, meaning that they feel they are deserving of better. Thus, their hatred of Him ultimately demonstrates that they believe it is they, and not He, who is the center of the universe.

Then, there are those who hate God not explicitly, but implicitly. They may say, “Yes, I just love God. He and I are in tight.” But it is a lie because they don’t obey His precepts, whatever they may be, demonstrating that they have no love for Him.

If one has no love for God, they – by default – hate God. There are not the usual gradations of love and hate that we may express towards a person we can see, touch, and so on. This doesn’t mean, however, that someone who exactly fulfills God’s law loves Him, nor does it mean that someone who fails to exactly fulfill God’s law hates Him.

David failed to fulfill the law, and yet his love of God is revealed throughout his life, his actions, his writings, and so on. And the Lord’s love for him is seen as well.

The Pharisees and Sadducees meticulously kept the law, and yet they had no love for God. And, the words of Jesus, who is God, shows that the Lord had no love for them as well.

Because of these things, the words of this passage need to be considered in their proper context, which is a heart relationship towards the Lord and a heart attitude towards His law. When the hatred toward God is seen, either actively or implicitly, he will repay them...

¹⁰ (con’t) to their face, to destroy them.

It is debated what el panav, or “to their face,” means. Some views are “openly and publicly,” or “at once,” or “in their lifetime.” But it is evident that many who hate the Lord, whether explicitly or implicitly, lived long, trouble-free lives. Job speaks about that.

What Moses is surely conveying is that man will be judged, and he will personally know that his judgment is from God, regardless of the day it comes. This is certain because Moses next says...

¹⁰ (con’t) He will not be slack with him who hates Him;

These words make it sound like the earlier option of the Lord's judgment coming "at once" is the most likely. However, the alacrity of the Lord is not conditioned on our expectations, but His foreknowledge, wisdom, and purpose. Peter makes this evident –

"But, beloved, do not forget this one thing, that with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. ⁹The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness, but is longsuffering toward us, not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance."

-2 Peter 3:8, 9

We may look at the promise of the Lord to repay an offense to someone's face as only fulfilled if it comes in his life. But that is because we want justice in that manner. But to God, that is unnecessary. It is He who will judge, and He will do so in a manner which is the most perfectly executed.

And how good that is for many of us who openly rebelled against God for much of our lives! And yet, that open rebellion was met with the judgment of grace and mercy. It is judgment, nonetheless, but it was judgment brought down upon His Son in our place.

Can anyone say that the Apostle Paul had his hatred of the Lord repaid in the way we expected from our reading of Deuteronomy 7? Probably not. Despite his zeal for the law (which he admits in both Acts and Philippians), it cannot be said that he loved the Lord, because the law foretold of the coming of Christ.

It told what He would be like, what He would do, how He would do it, and so on. And yet, Paul rejected the obvious when Christ came. In rejecting Christ, he demonstrated hatred toward the Lord. The repayment of that, at least for Paul, was one of the most incredible displays of "before your face" that anyone could ever imagine –

"Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting Me?"

⁵And he said, "Who are You, Lord?"

Then the Lord said, "I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting. It is hard for you to kick against the goads."

⁶So he, trembling and astonished, said, "Lord, what do You want me to do?"

Then the Lord said to him, "Arise and go into the city, and you will be told what you must do." Acts" 9:4-6

How the Lord handles His affairs is solely up to the Lord. How He repays any given person is also solely up to Him. As Paul says elsewhere, “But indeed, O man, who are you to reply against God?”

The Lord will have mercy on whom He has mercy, but that mercy is still in the form of a judgment. No infraction against Him will be treated otherwise. But the mercy on those who received it is taken out as judgment on Another who did not. Either way...

10 (con't) He will repay him to his face.

No person's hatred of God will go unpunished. It may appear that way when we see the wicked and corrupt continuously getting away with their actions, but they are actually only heaping up greater guilt for the day of their judgment, whenever it will be, and in whatever manner He determines for it to come about.

For those who truly wish to please the Lord and not see judgment either in themselves or in a Substitute, Moses implores the people (Oh, thank heaven, it's)...

11 Therefore you shall keep the commandment, the statutes, and the judgments

The NKJV gets it right this time. The word “commandment” is singular, not plural. The words “statutes” and “judgments” are plural. They are also prefixed by definite articles. There is the duty of the law, meaning the commandment, and then there are the statutes and the judgments which define that law, and which comprise it.

Moses is giving the law with its many details in anticipation of the people hearing and responding. As he next says...

11 (con't) which I command you today, to observe them.

These words show, quite clearly, that hating the Lord can be either active or passive. In failing to observe the commands, it demonstrates a hatred toward the Lord. But again, and as we already saw, this is not to be taken in the absolute sense, nor is it necessarily to be taken in the reciprocal either.

Just because someone observes the law, it doesn't mean they love the Lord. It may be a self-love looking for the approval of others. And just because someone fails to observe the law perfectly, it does not mean that his heart does not love the Lord. In both, the attitude of the heart is considered. This is true throughout the rest of the Bible. For example, from Isaiah –

“To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices to Me?”

Says the LORD.

“I have had enough of burnt offerings of rams
And the fat of fed cattle.

I do not delight in the blood of bulls,
Or of lambs or goats.

¹² “When you come to appear before Me,
Who has required this from your hand,
To trample My courts?” Isaiah 1:11, 12

The answer is that the Lord required them in the law, but He did so in the context of what we are looking at today – faithful observance, not rote observance. Isaiah goes on to speak of the feasts, the Sabbaths, the assemblies – all being repulsive to the Lord because the people’s hands were tainted with blood and their lives were filled with evildoings.

*The Lord your God, He is the God
He is ever faithful and true
Of His great deeds we shall forever applaud
When He at last all things makes new*

*He keeps the covenant and the mercy
He shall never forget those who trust in Him
Let there be no controversy
Because of the Lord, the devil is done in*

*No longer does Satan have the power
To tear God’s people away from Him
Christ is our protection and our high tower
Because of Christ our Lord, the devil is done in*

II. Which He Swore to Your Fathers (verses 12-16)

¹² “Then it shall come to pass, because you listen to these judgments, and keep and do them, v'hayah egev tishmeun – “And it shall be, following after, you listen.” It is a somewhat rare word, egev. In Deuteronomy, it will only be seen here and in the next chapter. It speaks of consequence and so “because” is fine. But the word’s etymology will help understand what is being conveyed.

It comes from the verb aqav, meaning the hind part, or following after. That comes from the noun aqev, meaning the heel, or a footprint. At times, such as in Psalm 19, it is translated as a “reward.” What Moses is conveying is that one thing will be the consequence of the other. Just as there is anticipated repayment for those who hate Him, there is expected reward for those who heed, demonstrating that they love Him.

Moses gives the commandment and the statutes and the judgments. From there, the people listen (meaning hearken) to these judgments, and then they keep and do them –

You (all – it is plural) listen
And you (all – it is plural) keep and do
Then, in the footprints of that action...

^{12 (con’t)} that the LORD your God will keep with you the covenant and the mercy which He swore to your fathers.

The words revert from the plural to the singular – the Lord your (singular) God will keep with you (singular) the covenant and the mercy which He swore to your (singular) fathers.

The wording, going from the plural to the singular, is precise and beautiful. Israel can expect the reward, but they cannot expect it if the people pursue the word willy nilly. “This group does, and this group doesn’t, but who cares?”

The people (all of them) must listen, keep, and do. In this, the people (Israel) will receive the blessing. One can see the rejection of Jesus as an example. Some of Israel received Him. But the people (all of them) did not. The blessing for corporate Israel was not received.

That is why it repeats the same phrase as in verse 9, but which is translated correctly by the NKJV this time: ha'berit v'eth ha'khesed – “the covenant and the mercy.” It is this which Moses says, “which He swore to your fathers.” This then is ultimately speaking of the covenant of Messiah, and the loyal love which stems from Him.

This was never truly realized in Israel, and the blessings they received –as seen in Scripture – were only shadowy reflections of what was promised, and which will ultimately come to pass at some future point when they acknowledge Christ as Lord.

We can be absolutely certain this is correct because it is exactly what Zacharias prophesied by the Holy Spirit in our text verse today, and which reverts all the way back to Abraham. This is not merely speaking of the Mosaic Covenant, but the fulfillment of it in Christ, and thus the promised blessing to all peoples which was made to Abraham.

Israel will receive that someday because Moses is speaking not to the Gentile world, but to Israel alone. In the Song of Moses of Chapter 32, however, Moses says, “Rejoice O Gentiles with His people.”

One could argue that is only speaking of the Gentiles because the word “with” is inserted. But Paul repeats that in Romans 15:10, and he clearly indicates that “with” is to be understood in Deuteronomy. Moses next says what this reaction of the Lord will be...

¹³ And He will love you and bless you and multiply you;

The “love” follows on from the promise to Abraham –

“By Myself I have sworn, says the LORD, because you have done this thing, and have not withheld your son, your only son— ¹⁷ blessing I will bless you, and multiplying I will multiply your descendants as the stars of the heaven and as the sand which is on the seashore; and your descendants shall possess the gate of their enemies.” Genesis 22:16, 17

Israel would receive the promise of Abraham, because it was ordained to be so. The inclusion of “love” here signifies that they are obedient to the words of Moses and accepting of the promise based on that. In other words, the love will be displayed when they receive the One whom the commandment anticipates. Until then, the love is imperfect and conditional. At some point, it will be a complete and fully realized love.

¹³ (con’t) He will also bless the fruit of your womb and the fruit of your land,

The two are necessarily stated together to show blessing upon blessing. In impoverished nations, the rate of babies being born normally doesn’t decrease. However, without the fruit of the land, it becomes a double curse, rather than a blessing. And so, to mention the fruit of the land implies anticipated health to the fruit of the womb. The fruit of the land is then further explained as...

13 (con't) your grain and your new wine and your oil,

Here, Moses promises blessing upon the dagan or “grain.” That comes from dagah, meaning to multiply or increase. Also, the tirosh, or “new wine,” which comes from yarash, meaning to take possession of or inherit. Thus, it is fresh, unfermented, wine. And also, the yitshar, or “fresh oil.” That is from tsohar, or midday. Thus, it is as if oil that produces light.

13 (con't) the increase of your cattle

The word translated as “increase,” is sheger. It is only seen in Exodus 13 and four times in Deuteronomy. It signifies offspring of beasts. The word translated as “cattle” comes from a root signifying “to learn.” Thus, Moses is referring to animals which are tamed and yoked, learning to be obedient to the master.

13 (con't) and the offspring of your flock,

Here, the word “offspring,” ashtaroth, is a rare plural word. It is introduced here, and it will only be seen three more times in Deuteronomy. It comes from a root signifying to either be or become rich. Thus, in their multiplication, one amasses wealth.

These blessings are promised to the people, but more, they are promised to be...

13 (con't) in the land of which He swore to your fathers to give you.

This is the greatest of all of the promises, even though it simply appears tacked onto the end as if an afterthought. The land promise is what makes the rest of the blessings possible, and that land promise is only possible if the people are living in accord with the Lord as Moses puts forth in this passage.

At times, the people lived in the land while suffering under deprivation, hostility from their enemies, and so on. At other times, the people were exiled from the land. In this, they were cut off from all but the most basic covenant promises – that of being kept as a people.

However, while in the land, they could – if they were obedient to the word in a proper, heart-directed way – experience these promised blessings of the Lord.

Understanding this, we again see that the exile of Israel, and all of the woes that have come upon them, are because they failed to heed the word. If the Lord is God, and indeed He is, then their failure to receive Christ as their Messiah is what brought all of the calamity upon them.

The Mosaic covenant is incomplete without the coming of Christ, and in His coming, it is fulfilled in Him. Thus, all of these promises are denied to Israel in their fullest sense until they realize this and call out to Him. When they do...

¹⁴ You shall be blessed above all peoples;

As has been noted, at times, these promises came upon Israel in a limited way, and for a limited time. During the reign of Solomon, this was as close to being realized as at any other time in Scripture. But it was still an imperfect blessing even then. Solomon departed from the Lord, and trouble ensued.

One could argue then, that this is only a hopeful anticipation which is never fully realized. This is especially so because in the coming of Christ, the people of the church are on an equal status with the Jews, all being one in Christ.

However, that is not what this is referring to. It is referring to the status of Israel among all peoples. That is not a promise which is set aside in the coming of Christ and their acceptance of Him. Rather, it is the fulfillment of this promise now.

The countless promises of the messianic blessings upon the people of the land of Israel have never been fulfilled. But they will come to pass. Israel being above all peoples in this capacity is seen again and again in Scripture. One obvious example is found in Zechariah 14 –

“And it shall come to pass that everyone who is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the Feast of Tabernacles. ¹⁷ And it shall be that whichever of the families of the earth do not come up to Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, on them there will be no rain. ¹⁸ If the family of Egypt will not come up and enter in, they shall have no rain; they shall receive the plague with which the LORD strikes the nations who do not come up to keep the Feast of Tabernacles. ¹⁹ This shall be the punishment of Egypt and the punishment of all the nations that do not come up to keep the Feast of Tabernacles.”

-Zechariah 14:16-19

The promises have come to pass during Israel’s infrequent times of obedience, but they shall come to pass – in their fulness – in Israel’s acknowledgment of the Lord Jesus. And, Moses next says...

¹⁴ (con’t) there shall not be a male or female barren among you or among your livestock.

Again, as with verse 13, Moses promises that the blessing of (or toward) the womb will be assured. This will be upon both males and females, and upon both man and beast. Here, the word is aqar. It signifies being barren, and it is almost always referring to the barren womb of a woman. However, in the case of a man, it signifies being sterile. The words of this verse follow after the earlier promise made in Exodus 23 –

“No one shall suffer miscarriage or be barren in your land; I will fulfill the number of your days.” Exodus 23:26

Throughout the Bible, the ability to procreate is considered a blessing, and to not be able to is considered exactly the opposite. It was a cause of shame. Moses promises that this will never be the case to the people who are faithfully obedient to the commandment of the Lord. Further...

¹⁵ And the LORD will take away from you all sickness,

Here is another new word, kholi, or sickness. It signifies any malady, anxiety, disease, or even grief that a person may experience. It is used when speaking of Christ and of the people of Christ in Isaiah 53 –

“He is despised and rejected by men,
A Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.
And we hid, as it were, our faces from Him;
He was despised, and we did not esteem Him.
⁴ Surely He has borne our griefs
And carried our sorrows;
Yet we esteemed Him stricken,
Smitten by God, and afflicted.” Isaiah 53:3, 4

It certainly can't be said that there was any time in all of Israel's history that this could be considered as truly fulfilled. And yet, the words of Moses say that such a state is anticipated in rightful obedience to the law. But, because this state was not realized before Christ's coming, as is clearly evidenced from Isaiah 53, and because it says that Christ bore our griefs, then it again shows where the disconnect for Israel stands – in their rejection of Christ.

Such an ideal time is promised in the writings of the prophets when Christ dwells among Israel for one thousand years. However, the final realization of this is actually stated towards the end of Revelation –

“And God will wipe away every tear from their eyes; there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying. There shall be no more pain, for the former things have passed away.” Revelation 21:4

This is the ultimate point of Christ's coming. It isn't just an earthly reign of Christ among Israel, but an eternal heavenly reign of Christ among all of the redeemed from all of humanity. For now, Moses says...

^{15 (con't)} and will afflict you with none of the terrible diseases of Egypt which you have known,

Here is another new word, madveh, or disease. It will only be seen here and in Deuteronomy 28. The word comes from davah, which is used in Leviticus 12:2 to signify a state of uncleanness which defiles a woman. Thus, one can assume the diseases mentioned here are such that a person would become defiled.

The term, “the diseases of Egypt,” is specifically mentioned as such three times in the Bible. The first was in Exodus 15 where it used a different word, makhaleh –

“If you diligently heed the voice of the LORD your God and do what is right in His sight, give ear to His commandments and keep all His statutes, I will put none of the diseases on you which I have brought on the Egyptians. For I am the LORD who heals you.” Exodus 15:26

This now is the second time the diseases of Egypt are mentioned, using this new word instead. The Lord promises to withhold such diseases from the people in their faithful compliance to the commands now given. What is possible, is that the sanitary laws found within the law would, ostensibly, prevent these. In not obeying the law, this would be the inevitable result of their disobedience.

Whether this is correct or not, the people had known these diseases, and Moses promises that they will know them no more if they are faithfully obedient. Instead...

¹⁵ (con't) but will lay them on all those who hate you.

Those who hate the Jews would also naturally hate the practices of the Jews. As this is so, then the diseases prevented by adherence to the law would naturally cling to them. Thus, this does not necessarily mean the Lord actively places them on their enemies, but it occurs because of their own rebellion against what is contained within the law itself.

This is, obviously, conjecture. But the many washings and inspections for skin ailments, molds, and the like – as well as the laws for sexual morality – does point to a cleanly society, and this would only be the case through obedience to what the law prescribed for such things.

And, as I said, there is one more specific reference to the diseases of Egypt. It uses the same word as here, and it is also found in Deuteronomy 28 –

“If you do not carefully observe all the words of this law that are written in this book, that you may fear this glorious and awesome name, THE LORD YOUR GOD, ⁵⁹ then the LORD will bring upon you and your descendants extraordinary plagues—great and prolonged plagues—and serious and prolonged sicknesses. ⁶⁰ Moreover He will bring back on you all the diseases of Egypt, of which you were afraid, and they shall cling to you.” Deuteronomy 28:58-60

In adherence to the law, these diseases would be kept from them. In failing to observe the law, the diseases would cling to them. One can hardly think that anything but the meticulous care of the hygiene and sexually moral verses of Leviticus being adhered to, or not adhered to, would bring about the stated result of the words of Moses.

As those laws would be shunned by the inhabitants of the land, it is another reason for what Moses next says...

¹⁶ Also you shall destroy all the peoples whom the LORD your God delivers over to you;

v'akalta eth kal ha'amim – “And you shall eat up all the peoples.” Moses was probably thinking of the disaster of their first time at the door of Canaan. When the twelve spies were sent to inspect the land, upon their return a bad report was sent among the congregation so that they began to rebel. At that time, Joshua and Caleb called out –

“The land we passed through to spy out is an exceedingly good land. ⁸ If the LORD delights in us, then He will bring us into this land and give it to us, ‘a land which flows with milk and honey.’ ⁹ Only do not rebel against the LORD, nor fear the people of the land, for they are our bread; their protection has departed from them, and the LORD is with us. Do not fear them.” Numbers 14:7-9

They called the inhabitants “their bread.” Here Moses says that the people are to eat up the inhabitants. Thus, it means to utterly consume them, like bread. In this, he says...

¹⁶ (con't) your eye shall have no pity on them;

This takes us back to verse 2 where it said, “and when the Lord your God delivers them over to you, you shall conquer them and utterly destroy them. You shall make no covenant with them nor show mercy to them.” The reasons for this are many, but one of them must be tied to the last verse.

In being unclean, they would bring their unclean habits among Israel. The very diseases the Lord was to keep them from would infect them. This would be because their own morals would become slack, their own adherence to the law would wane, and so on. Another obvious reason completes our words today...

^{*16} (fin) nor shall you serve their gods, for that will be a snare to you.

In allowing the inhabitants to live, an inevitable result would be departing from the Lord and serving other gods. It had already happened more than once outside the land. Once they were happily settled into the land, it would be sure to come about, just as the rest of the Old Testament testifies to.

In this, there would be sin heaped upon sin. The people would first disobey the command to consume the inhabitants, and then they would resultingly start to serve their gods. One step would lead naturally to another, because sin is – as it notes – a moqesh, or snare.

That word comes from yaqosh, meaning to lure or lay bait. In other words, the people would actually be baiting themselves into sin by committing the first sin of failing to do as instructed. There is never a time that sin doesn't affect more than just the initial act. It will always spread beyond itself in some way or another.

The best way to understand that is to simply look at what occurred in Eden. The bait was laid, the trap was set, and man sinned. But that one sin didn't just have one negative effect. Rather, through that one sin, every single evil thing that we have ever faced – in all of human existence – arose.

This is how sin works. And the tool by which it has its hold on us is the law. Not that the law is bad, but that the law allows for sin to take place. Our own evil desires trap us, we disobey the law, and sin is the result.

This is why Jesus is so very important for us. The law was given, the law was violated, and sin entered the picture. But with the entrance of that sin came death, and that death has transmitted to all people. As we continue to see, week after week, the Law of Moses does not solve that problem, it only magnifies it – it is like a mirror reflecting back on us all of our defects.

But in Christ, the law reflects back only the purity of God's perfection. Without sin, the law highlights His perfect goodness. It radiates it out like a beacon for us to come and participate in it. And so, what do we do? We come to Christ and His perfection covers us.

When we are in Christ, we can look at the mirror and only see His perfection, and that is what God sees as well. The law, this giant and impossible body of writings, can no longer condemn us because we are imputed His righteousness. That is the sweetest deal of all. Now, when we look at the law, we can see the greatness of what God has done.

Israel will too, someday. For now, we are continuing on through this book, seeing where they failed and thus, honestly, seeing where we too fail. Let us remember this and let us come to Christ and participate in the ultimate victory of God's people. May it be so for you, and may it be today. Amen.

Closing Verse: “For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed with our habitation which is from heaven, ³ if indeed, having been clothed, we shall not be found naked. ⁴ For we who are in this tent groan, being burdened, not because we want to be unclothed, but further clothed, that mortality may be swallowed up by life. ⁵ Now He who has prepared us for this very thing is God, who also has given us the Spirit as a guarantee.” 2 Corinthians 5:2-5

Next Week: Deuteronomy 7:17-26 What is it by which we are most awed? (The Great and Awesome God) (28th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Covenant and the Mercy

“Therefore know that the LORD your God, He is God
The faithful God who keeps covenant and mercy always
For a thousand generations with those who love Him
And keep His commandments all their days

And He repays those who hate Him to their face
To destroy them, so to you I say
He will not be slack with him who hates Him
He will him to his face repay

Therefore you shall keep the commandment
The statutes, and the judgments, to them you shall be true
Which I command you today
To observe them, just as I am instructing you

“Then it shall come to pass, because you listen to these judgments
And keep and do them; to you they are no bore
That the LORD your God will keep with you
The covenant and the mercy which He to your fathers swore

And He will love you and bless you and multiply you
He will also the fruit of your womb bless
And the fruit of your land
Your grain and your new wine and your oil from the press

The increase of your cattle and the offspring of your flock, it is true

In the land of which He swore to your fathers to give you

You shall be blessed above all peoples
The Lord's special flock
There shall not be a male or female barren
Among you or among your livestock

And the LORD will take away from you all sickness
And will afflict you with none (this word is true)
Of the terrible diseases of Egypt which you have known
But will lay them on all those who hate you

Also you shall destroy all the peoples
Whom the LORD your God delivers over to you, so you shall do
Your eye shall have no pity on them
Nor shall you serve their gods, for that will be a snare to you

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 7:17-26 (The Great and Awesome God)

There is a lot of repetition in our ten verses today from verses going all the way back to Exodus. And much of what is said here will also be connected to a lot of what is coming in the time of the law. The Lord carefully weaves His word together in this way so that we will have a better grounding on what we might have misunderstood elsewhere.

In other words, we may have come to some thought or word that was difficult – maybe because it was new or rare. In that, people could debate if what the Lord said is really the way we are interpreting it.

But when the Lord restates things in various ways, and in adding in complementary thoughts to items he is repeating, we can be much surer of being accurate, if we are willing to look through the entire picture.

Unfortunately, that is a lot of laborious, tedious, and mentally taxing work. It is something that few ever do. Because of this, we have all kinds of incorrect interpretations about how things work or what things mean. This is also why it is such a treasure for me personally to preach to the people who attend the Superior Word, or who watch the videos later.

Although it doesn't need to be said, simply by looking at the numbers one can tell that each of you is a rare breed. Sermons are intended to be an analysis of God's word, but they often are not. And even if they are, they don't contain as much detail as you all find rewarding. So, my hat is off to you.

As you know, we have been in the five books of Moses now since 1837, or somewhere around then. And we are steadily plugging through them. Some find no value in the law at all. Others find it too convicting. For whatever reason, people find other things to do than pursue what is stated in the books of Moses.

However, they serve many great purposes, as we have seen over the past years. For the law itself, in Galatians, Paul gives us a couple of the many good reasons why we should know it.

Text Verse: “What purpose then does the law serve? It was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was appointed through angels by the hand of a mediator.”²⁰ Now a mediator does not mediate for one only, but God is one.

²¹ Is the law then against the promises of God? Certainly not! For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law. ²² But the Scripture has confined all under sin, that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. ²³ But before faith came, we were kept under guard by the law, kept for the faith which would afterward be revealed. ²⁴ Therefore the law was our tutor to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. ²⁵ But after faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor.” Galatians 3:19-25

Paul says the law was added because of transgressions. That actually makes it a kind of downer if that is all there is. But it's not. He also tells us that the law is our tutor to bring us to Christ. When he said that, he was writing to the Galatians – a Gentile church that was never under the law. And yet, he used the word “our.”

The instruction is for everyone, if we will just pay heed. In knowing the law, and its many, many limitations, we can then more fully understand and appreciate the grace found in Jesus Christ. Yes, Paul makes sure he tells us that we are no longer under a tutor, meaning the law, but how sad it is that many reject that premise.

In truly knowing the law, we can then truly be appreciative of what the grace of God in Jesus Christ means. We'll see some of that in relation to our conscience. What is impossible under the law because of conscience, is allowable under grace because of the same thing.

We needed this tutor to understand that. It is one of many wonderful truths we will see today, truths that are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. You Shall Not Be Terrified of Them (verses 17-21)

¹⁷ “If you should say in your heart,

The verses today begin with an idiom, ki tomar bilvavekha – “If you should say in your heart.” In the Bible, the heart is not the seat of emotions as it is with us. Rather, it is the seat of reasoning. One considers a matter and reasons it out.

This is a personal, inward reflection. However, the words here, like those of the previous verse which ended us last week, are in the singular. It is the heart of the entire nation which is reflecting on a matter and considering it. And that matter is...

17 (con't) ‘These nations are greater than I;

The entire nation’s heart is questioned. “We are Israel, and what we are to face in these many peoples is a sum that is far larger and more powerful than we are.” The reasoning is made, and therefore the obvious question is next asked...

17 (con't) how can I dispossess them?’—

The nations we face are greater, they are larger, they are more powerful, they dwell in fortified cities, they have supplies and weapons, they know the land, and so on. The reasoning out of the matter causes Israel to question. It is the prudent thing to do under normal circumstances. Even Jesus spoke of this –

“Or what king, going to make war against another king, does not sit down first and consider whether he is able with ten thousand to meet him who comes against him with twenty thousand? ³² Or else, while the other is still a great way off, he sends a delegation and asks conditions of peace.” Luke 14:31, 32

This is what is normally expected. Battle means death, possible defeat, and thus subjugation and possibly more death. However, in the case of Israel as they consider their entrance into, and subduing of, Canaan the Lord next says...

18 you shall not be afraid of them,

lo tira mehem – “No you shall be afraid of them.” What Israel sees, and what Israel considers of their own size, state, and abilities in relation to their foes is not even to be considered. Rather, they are to exhibit full confidence in their situation. It is a reminder that has often been repeated already, such as –

“Look, the LORD your God has set the land before you; go up and possess it, as the LORD God of your fathers has spoken to you; do not fear or be discouraged.”

-Deuteronomy 1:21

This state of confidence, however, is not based upon who they are in relation to the enemy, but in relation to who their God is...

18 (con't) but you shall remember well

zakor tizkor – remembering, you shall remember. The repetition of the word is given as a way of saying, “You shall continuously call to mind the matter.” Israel was to never forget what had transpired in their past so that they would always be prepared for their future.

18 (con't) what the LORD your God did to Pharaoh and to all Egypt:

Again, the words are reflective of often-repeated earlier words –

“The LORD your God, who goes before you, He will fight for you, according to all He did for you in Egypt before your eyes.” Deuteronomy 1:30

Israel was a nation of slaves, held in bondage, and unable to free themselves. And yet, in this state, they were brought out from that by the Lord. Pharaoh’s rule over them ended, Egypt was destroyed as a military power, and Israel was freed – all without their own effort.

As this was so while in slavery, then it was a note of surety that the Lord had intentions for them that made it certain they would endure and prevail in whatever else He directed them to do. Whatever was set before them, as long as it was ordained by Him, could not fail.

Likewise, whatever they chose to do that was not authorized by Him was sure to fail. Moses will not touch on this now, but it is a certain truth that should be called to mind. It is reflected in what was said in Numbers, and as was repeated in Deuteronomy 1 –

“Then you answered and said to me, ‘We have sinned against the LORD; we will go up and fight, just as the LORD our God commanded us.’ And when everyone of you had girded on his weapons of war, you were ready to go up into the mountain.⁴² “And the LORD said to me, ‘Tell them, “Do not go up nor fight, for I am not among you; lest you be defeated before your enemies.’⁴³ So I spoke to you; yet you would not listen, but rebelled against the command of the LORD, and presumptuously went up into the mountain.⁴⁴ And the Amorites who dwelt in that mountain came out against you and chased you as bees do, and drove you back from Seir to Hormah.⁴⁵ Then you returned and wept before the LORD, but the LORD would not listen to your voice nor give ear to you.”

-Deuteronomy 1:41-45

Israel's actions are to be conducted solely by how the Lord directs them. In telling them to go, they are to go, and they will prevail. In telling them to stand fast, if they disobeyed that, they would fail. All of this is taken from the view of what occurred in Egypt.

It is the lesson of being released from the bondage of Egypt that was to be the preeminent reminder of their future conduct at all times. As Moses next says...

¹⁹ the great trials which your eyes saw, ha'masoth ha'gedoloth asher rau enekha – “the trials, the greats, which saw your eyes.” Moses will now focus on events that actually occurred. Israel was in a foreign land, they were unable to free themselves, no other group or people defeated Egypt, and yet they were freed. It was solely by the divine workings of the Lord that it came about.

Here Moses begins a list of five descriptors concerning this magnificent event. The first is ha'masoth ha'gedoloth, or the trials, the greats. Masah is a word derived from the verb nasah which signifies “to try.”

This is probably speaking of the trials the people faced before Moses' arrival. Israel was in hard bondage, they were afflicted, and they were tested. In this state, Exodus 2 says –

“Then the children of Israel groaned because of the bondage, and they cried out; and their cry came up to God because of the bondage. ²⁴ So God heard their groaning, and God remembered His covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. ²⁵ And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God acknowledged them.” Exodus 2:23-25

It is obvious that they could not free themselves. They were in anguish and cried out because of it. From there, the Lord heard and responded. Moses next tells them how. Israel also saw...

¹⁹ (con't) the signs

v'ha'othoth – “and the signs.” Othoth, or signs, are things given to represent something else. The Lord gave Moses three signs to give to Israel – the rod which turned into a snake, the leprous hand, and the water which turned to blood. He also gave signs to Pharaoh concerning what would come upon them as the Lord accomplished His work. Next...

19 (con't) and the wonders, v'ha'mophetim – “and the wonders.” Mopheth, or wonder, comes from yaphah, or beautiful. Therefore, they speak of that which is conspicuous and amazing. This word then refers to the plagues that came upon the land.

But equally wondrous is the fact that Israel was spared at the same time. While Egypt was destroyed, Israel survived through the plagues. Each such occurrence was a wonder in itself. Next...

19 (con't) the mighty hand v'ha'yad ha'khazaqah – “and the hand, the mighty.” The hand is what accomplishes things. Moses is saying that it was by the strength of the Lord’s hand – His power which is mighty – that these things came about and how they were displayed. And more...

19 (con't) and the outstretched arm, v'ha'zeroa ha'netuyah – “and the arm outstretched.” The zeroa, or arm, comes from the word zara, meaning “to sow” or “scatter seed.” One can see the arm extending as it does. In this, you can think of the Lord reaching out over all of Egypt.

Nothing was hidden from His reach to destroy, and nothing was left as an obstacle before Israel once His arm had cleared the way. As it next says...

19 (con't) by which the LORD your God brought you out.

asher hotsiakha Yehovah elohekha – “which brought you out Yehovah your God.” It is speaking of all five of the descriptors mentioned in this verse. Together, the Lord combined them into one awesome display of His ability and capability to accomplish the feat of bringing Israel out from under the huge weight and burden of Egyptian bondage.

It cannot go without reminder at this point that the Lord, bringing Israel out of Egypt, is a direct analogy to Him bringing each person out of their bondage to sin. We have to constantly remind ourselves of this as we progress through Deuteronomy.

Israel was in physical bondage; we were in spiritual bondage. The Lord accomplished the great trials, signs, and wonders, and He did it by a mighty hand and an outstretched arm. It was by His power and His clearing the way for us that this was made possible.

In this passage, Moses is asking His people to not fear the enemies that they will face. Likewise, in Christ, we are to not fear the enemies we face, even and up to our greatest enemy, death. As Paul says –

“So when this corruptible has put on incorruption, and this mortal has put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written: ‘Death is swallowed up in victory.’

⁵⁵ ‘O Death, where is your sting?

O Hades, where is your victory?’

⁵⁶ The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. ⁵⁷ But thanks be to God, who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

⁵⁸ Therefore, my beloved brethren, be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.”

-1 Corinthians 15:54-58

The Bible, for example in Ephesians 6, says that we are in a battle against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places. What we are seeing in Israel being admonished to not fear the enemy because the Lord has already proven Himself to them, we are likewise to see concerning not fearing our enemies because the Lord has already proven Himself to us. The battle, and the victory, belong to the Lord. As Moses next says...

¹⁹ (con’t) So shall the LORD your God do to all the peoples of whom you are afraid.

In verse 18, Moses said, “you shall not be afraid,” using the verb yare – “be afraid.” Here it says, “the peoples of whom you are afraid,” using the adjective yare – “fearful.” This is just how we are as well.

We are fearful of sickness. We are fearful of wicked people. We are fearful of death. But we are told to not be afraid of them. As the Lord has done to sickness, the wicked, and death at the cross, so He will do for us when the time for Him to bring us across into the promise arrives.

It is certain that soldiers of Israel died in battle, but Israel survived. We may “die” in our battle, but we shall also survive. Where the enemy is seen to get the upper hand in humanity, it is only a temporary thing for the redeemed of the Lord.

²⁰ Moreover the LORD your God will send the hornet among them

Here, the tsirah, or hornet, is mentioned for the second of three times in the Bible. The verb comes from tsara which means to be leprous. Also, it is a singular noun with an article in front of it – “the hornet.” Thus, the language is to be taken metaphorically, although some scholars demand a literal interpretation.

However, similar terminology is used concerning bees in Deuteronomy 1:44 and Psalm 118:12. There, they are equated with one’s enemies, not literal insects. Secondly, Joshua says that this was fulfilled in the case of the Amorites in Joshua 24:12 –

“I sent the hornet before you which drove them out from before you, also the two kings of the Amorites, but not with your sword or with your bow.”

There it said it was the hornet that drove out the two kings of the Amorites. And yet, Moses, speaking of the same battle, shows that it was, in fact, Israel who defeated them–

“And at that time we took the land from the hand of the two kings of the Amorites who were on this side of the Jordan, from the River Arnon to Mount Hermon...” Deuteronomy 3:8

This was repeated in Deuteronomy 4:47 and it was referring to the kings Sihon and Og. My take on it is that this is referring to a connection between the hornet and its associated word meaning leprosy.

The Lord promised health and long life to Israel if they held to His laws. As they were going into a land defiled by those things which are opposed to a healthy lifestyle, the enemy had been, or would be, afflicted with disease to the point where they were incapable of standing up to Israel’s armies.

Thus, “the hornet” is a metaphor for God’s judgment of sickness upon them, preparing them for destruction by Israel. The Bible records that Israel actually faced these foes in battle, and so, it is a reasonable explanation for the term “the hornet” which is said to have gone before them.

²⁰ (con’t) until those who are left, who hide themselves from you, are destroyed.

ad avod hanisharim v’ha’nistarim – “Until destroyed the remainers and the hiders from you.” It shows that the words “the hornet” are to be taken figuratively. Indiscriminate killing of people around the land of Israel by hornets is far less likely than the effects of being in hiding from the forces of Israel turning into deprivation, disease, and physical bodily ailments.

The same types of effects are noted upon the people of Israel during their own times of siege from the enemies who came against them. The overall evidence pretty clearly shows that the words “the hornet” are speaking of the effects upon the people as a result of the destruction of them and their cities by Israel, as the Lord led them. This is again noted by Moses’ next words...

²¹ You shall not be terrified of them;

lo taarots mipenekhem – “No you shall be terrified from their faces.” This isn’t simply speaking of their mean countenances, but of their numbers. Moses is still speaking to Israel in the singular and as a collective body. But he refers to the enemy in the plural. It is a way of saying, “It may be one against many, but do not be terrified.” This is because...

^{21 (con’t)} for the LORD your God, the great and awesome God, is among you.

Ki Yehovah elohekha b’qirbekha el gadol v’nora – “For Yehovah your God, in your midst – God great and to be feared.” It is an adjective and then a verb which are used to describe the Lord. Moses reminds them that He is in the midst of Israel, ever-present with them. It is a note of absolute assurance that He can be relied upon in the battle.

I would personally take these words as a warning to Israel though. In verse 18, they were told not to fear using the verb yare. Here, it says that the Lord is feared, using the same word. One must choose who he will fear.

This is especially so because the final two verses of the chapter indicate that the Lord is watching the actions of Israel at the same time that He is actively working for Israel in the destruction of their enemies.

As long as Israel fears the Lord, they will not fall under the judgment of the Lord. But when they turn to the images and idols of the people they are instructed to destroy, they are no longer showing a fear for the One who is to be feared. Israel cannot have it both ways, nor can we.

As long as we fear the consequences of our actions, we will not conduct ourselves in negative ways. But when one fears a negative outcome, he will remain vigilant to ensure that doesn't come about. The same God who ruled over Israel, and who continues to do so today, is the same God we are each accountable to for our own actions. As for Israel entering Canaan, Moses continues...

*With a mighty hand and an outstretched arm
The Lord brought you out of Egypt the land
Through it all, you suffered no harm
And now at Canaan's door you stand*

*Do not fear what the inhabitants can do
The Lord has shown you His greatness already
He will remain constant and faithfully true
So do not fear; rather, remain sure and steady*

*Do not fear and do not be afraid
The great and awesome God is among you
Do not be so easily swayed
The Lord our God is faithful and true*

II. An Accursed Thing (verses 22-26)

²² And the LORD your God will drive out those nations

v'nashal Yehovah elohekha eth ha'goyim ha'el – “And will clear away Yehovah your God the nations the these.” Moses uses the same rare word that he used in verse 7:1, nashal. It means to slip off, draw off, or clear away.

He again promises that the Lord will be the One to draw the people off of the land, just as a person draws off his shoe. Moses says to Israel that they are those who are...

²² (con't) before you mipanekha – “from your face.” In the previous verse, he told them not to be terrified mipenekhem, or from their faces. Now he tells Israel they will be removed mipanekha, or from your face. It is beautifully worded showing the complete contrast between the two. Next he says the Lord will do this...

²² (con't) little by little;

meat meat – “little little.” This tells them that the process will be solely at the direction of the Lord. It is a certainty that the inhabitants are to be driven out. However, there is an incremental process which is to take place.

All advances will be when He determines, not all at once as Israel would certainly be inclined to want to do. How often we look at the Lord’s plans as if He is slacking, but this is not the case. It is only from our short life spans and eagerness to get on with things that we decide things should move more quickly. Understanding this, Moses says...

²² (con’t) you will be unable to destroy them at once, lest the beasts of the field become too numerous for you.

The same basic thought of this verse in Deuteronomy is also given in Exodus 23, but there are differences –

“I will not drive them out from before you in one year, lest the land become desolate and the beasts of the field become too numerous for you. ³⁰ Little by little I will drive them out from before you, until you have increased, and you inherit the land.” Exodus 23:29, 30

One difference is that here it says, “you will be unable to destroy them,” and in Exodus 23 it said, “I will not drive them out from before you.” It is obvious that the actions of Israel are said to be ultimately accomplished by the Lord. What He does not want to come to pass will not come about.

Also, here in Deuteronomy it leaves off the thought of the land becoming desolate. But it is an important point to be reminded of. If all of the inhabitants were taken out at once, the land would become desolate.

The land of Canaan was inhabited. There were fields, crops, fruit trees, wells, houses, and so on. If all the people were taken out at once, there would have been an insufficient number of people to take them over. All of that productivity would have been lost.

But more, with land standing idle and not being properly cultivated, animals would multiply. The word translated as “beasts” signifies living things. If you have fruit trees that aren’t tended to, rats will multiply. If you have rats, you will have disease.

And other animals feed on rats, so they too will quickly multiply – cats, dogs, and so on. Very quickly, you would have many animals, some of them disease-filled, and so on. This exact scenario occurred after the exile of the northern tribes of Israel, as is seen in 2 Kings –

“And it was so, at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they did not fear the LORD; therefore the LORD sent lions among them, which killed some of them.”

-2 Kings 17:25

Lions are but one species that would quickly multiply as they fed off the rats and other little animals that were busy feeding off of unattended fruit trees and the like. This is also documented in more recent history after wars where areas were highly depopulated.

The Lord knew these things would occur and so He determined to methodically take care of the occupation of Canaan...

²³ But the LORD your God will deliver them over to you, u-netanam Yehovah elohekha lephanekha – “And will give them Yehovah your God to your face.” It is a note of surety following on after the note of gradual accomplishment. Moses is assuring them that even if it seems that the process is slow, it will be accomplished according to the will of the Lord.

The fact that this later does not fully come to pass does not mean that the Lord failed. Rather, it means that Israel failed. What he will warn about in the coming verses is exactly what Israel will fail to do. When that occurs, the Lord will then amend the process according to their disobedience. That will be seen as we continue.

For now, Moses says that the Lord will deliver these people over to Israel, but then he continues by saying...

^{23 (con't)} and will inflict defeat upon them until they are destroyed.

v'hamam mehumah gedolah ad hishamedam – “And confusing, disquietude greatly until they are destroyed.” The words are full of action and life as they proceed from a verb followed by a noun and then to an adjective.

Here is a new word in Scripture, mehumah, which I have translated as “disquietude.” It is a noun signifying tumult, confusion, disquietude, discomfiture, and the like. Both it, and the previous word, hamam, come from the same root, hum. That signifies murmur, roar, agitate, make an uproar, and so on.

Thus, both words are onomatopoeic expressions where the sound gives the sense of what is going on. There is turmoil, panic, and so on as the Lord brings great agitation and uproar among them. The divine judgment of the Lord that is anticipated upon the inhabitants is marvelously vocalized by Moses.

And, this divine judgment will not be limited to any single class of people. From the least, even to the greatest, all of the people of Canaan are promised to be delivered into the hand of Israel...

²⁴ And He will deliver their kings into your hand, v’natan malkehem b’yadekha – “and will give their kings into your hand.” As has been the case throughout this passage, Moses continues to speak in the singular – “their kings into your (singular) hand.” Israel is one, they are many. And yet, Israel will prevail. Once the king is subdued, it is taken as an axiom that the people are likewise subdued.

This conquering of the kings is poignantly noted in Joshua 10 –

“Then Joshua said, ‘Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings to me from the cave.’” ²³ And they did so, and brought out those five kings to him from the cave: the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Eglon.

²⁴ So it was, when they brought out those kings to Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said to the captains of the men of war who went with him, “Come near, put your feet on the necks of these kings.’ And they drew near and put their feet on their necks. ²⁵ Then Joshua said to them, “Do not be afraid, nor be dismayed; be strong and of good courage, for thus the LORD will do to all your enemies against whom you fight.” Joshua 10:22-25

The account goes on to say that Joshua then struck the kings, killing them, and then they were hanged on five trees until evening. This was in compliance with the next words...

²⁴ (con’t) and you will destroy their name from under heaven;

v'haabadta eth shemam mi'takhat ha'shamayim – “And cause to perish their names from under the heavens.” The word “heavens” is plural. Here, it is not speaking of heaven in the sense of the Lord’s dwelling place, but of everywhere under the skies.

And more, this is not saying that their names will literally perish as to never be heard again. They are clearly recorded in Scripture for us to know who they were. The idea is that there will be no continuance of them, such as in progeny. Their names were to die with them. This is what is explicitly said to be done to Amalek later in Deuteronomy 25:17-19 –

“Remember what Amalek did to you on the way as you were coming out of Egypt, ¹⁸ how he met you on the way and attacked your rear ranks, all the stragglers at your rear, when you were tired and weary; and he did not fear God. ¹⁹ Therefore it shall be, when the LORD your God has given you rest from your enemies all around, in the land which the LORD your God is giving you to possess as an inheritance, that you will blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven. You shall not forget.

There was to be nothing left of Amalek, just as there was to be nothing left of the names of any of the other peoples and kings who dwelt in the land of Canaan. They were to be destroyed until they were completely eradicated. And it was fully possible because the Lord promises it would be so...

²⁴ (con’t) no one shall be able to stand against you until you have destroyed them.

lo yityatsev ish b'phanekha ad hishmidkha otam – “no shall stand man in your face until you have destroyed them.” As always, the words “in your face,” or similar phrases, are a literal translation meaning “before” or “in the presence of.”

Moses assures Israel that not only will the kings be destroyed, but not even a man of any state or stature will be able to stand before Israel. However, the promise is conditional. It required faith that the words of Moses were true.

In this, we see the abject failure of the ranks of Israel who stood listening to Goliath’s taunts for forty days. He was one man, but every man in all the ranks of Israel failed to simply trust the Lord and take the words of Moses at face value.

That is, until a young shepherd boy on a mission from his father called this precept to their attention, and then who followed through with his own example of his faith in what Moses now says. To believe Moses is to believe the Lord who inspired Moses to issue forth these words. And he continues with...

²⁵ You shall burn the carved images of their gods with fire;

pesile elohehem tishrephun baesh – “Carved images their gods you shall burn in the fire.” In this clause alone, the words go from the second person singular to the second person plural. And more, the verb “you shall burn” is, like in verse 7:5, accentuated with a suffix, causing it to be emphasized.

There was to be no tolerance for allowing them to continue in the form they were in. Further...

^{25 (con't)} you shall not covet the silver or gold that is on them,

The act of coveting is forbidden in the tenth commandment. Therefore, to simply covet what was on an idol would be sin. But more, the fact that it was on an idol only exacerbated the problem. If the idol was kept, that would be sin. If only what was on the idol was kept, it would lead to other problems next noted...

^{25 (con't)} nor take it for yourselves, lest you be snared by it;

Here is a new word, the verb yaqosh. It signifies to lay a bait or a snare. Why would taking the precious part of the carved image while destroying the rest of it be a snare?

It is understood by Moses how precious both silver and gold are. It would normally seem right to melt the metal off of the idols and then reuse it for something else. However, this is absolutely forbidden. At times, the precious metals taken from devoted villages could be claimed by Israel. For example –

“Now the city shall be doomed by the LORD to destruction, it and all who are in it. Only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all who are with her in the house, because she hid the messengers that we sent. ¹⁸ And you, by all means abstain from the accursed things, lest you become accursed when you take of the accursed things, and make the camp of Israel a curse, and trouble it. ¹⁹ But all the silver and gold, and vessels of bronze and iron, are consecrated to the LORD; they shall come into the treasury of the LORD.” Joshua 6:17-19

The silver and gold and other metals could be saved and reused, but, all idols and carved images were devoted to the ban and were to be utterly destroyed. This included anything they were plated or adorned with.

If such were reused, it would enter into the public monetary system, and it would be known – for example – that the silver of idols was acceptable to be used in the payment of temple taxes and so forth. Such could never be the case, simply for conscience sake.

The snare that was laid is that of knowing that what was intended for the worship of false gods was acceptable to be used towards offerings to the true God. There was to be no hint of mixing the profane with that which is holy. The heavy stress of this is explained with the next words...

²⁵ (con't) for it is an abomination to the LORD your God.

ki toavat Yehovah elohekha hu – “For abomination to Yehovah your God it.” The Lord detested what it was. Changing its form doesn’t change what it was previously used for in the minds of the people. Gold is gold and silver is silver. But when the people know the source of it, the conscience of the people is defiled. In this, the Lord cannot be placed alongside that which is profane in the minds of His people.

The precept is clearly explained by Paul concerning meats in 1 Corinthians 8 –

“Therefore concerning the eating of things offered to idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is no other God but one. ⁵ For even if there are so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth (as there are many gods and many lords), ⁶ yet for us there is one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and through whom we live.

⁷ However, there is not in everyone that knowledge; for some, with consciousness of the idol, until now eat it as a thing offered to an idol; and their conscience, being weak, is defiled. ⁸ But food does not commend us to God; for neither if we eat are we the better, nor if we do not eat are we the worse.” 1 Corinthians 8:4-8

Paul goes on to say in 1 Corinthians 10 –

“Eat whatever is sold in the meat market, asking no questions for conscience’ sake; ²⁶ for ‘the earth is the LORD’s, and all its fullness.’

²⁷ If any of those who do not believe invites you to dinner, and you desire to go, eat whatever is set before you, asking no question for conscience' sake. ²⁸ But if anyone says to you, 'This was offered to idols,' do not eat it for the sake of the one who told you, and for conscience' sake; for 'the earth is the LORD's, and all its fullness.' ²⁹ 'Conscience,' I say, not your own, but that of the other. For why is my liberty judged by another man's conscience? ³⁰ But if I partake with thanks, why am I evil spoken of for the food over which I give thanks?" 1 Corinthians 10:25-30

As you can see, in this case, what is an abomination to the Lord in the Mosaic Covenant is so because of conscience. The law, as was clearly seen in our text verse, is simply a tutor to instruct the people in the propriety of proper conduct before the Lord, meaning a life of proper conscience.

Earlier, I said that the promise of the Lord's driving the people out was conditional. The words of this verse, and the destroying of such forbidden things, shows that this is so. In Judges 2, we read –

“Then the Angel of the LORD came up from Gilgal to Bochim, and said: ‘I led you up from Egypt and brought you to the land of which I swore to your fathers; and I said, “I will never break My covenant with you. ² And you shall make no covenant with the inhabitants of this land; you shall tear down their altars.” But you have not obeyed My voice. Why have you done this? ³ Therefore I also said, “I will not drive them out before you; but they shall be thorns in your side, and their gods shall be a snare to you.” ⁴ So it was, when the Angel of the LORD spoke these words to all the children of Israel, that the people lifted up their voices and wept. ⁵ Then they called the name of that place Bochim; and they sacrificed there to the LORD. ⁶ And when Joshua had dismissed the people, the children of Israel went each to his own inheritance to possess the land.” Judges 2:1-5

The people failed to do what the Lord said. They did what was contrary to His will and therefore He altered the promises given by Moses now.

Unfortunately, they continued to suffer through this type of disobedience until there was no remedy left and they went into exile. Their rejection of the law brought about many woes upon them, and that continues to this day – whether they realize it or not.

²⁶ Nor shall you bring an abomination into your house, lest you be doomed to destruction like it.

We come to the last verse of the chapter with these words. Moses uses the same word, translated as “abomination,” as in the previous verse. The word extends beyond just carved images to anything the Lord proclaims is detestable or abominable.

The people were to separate themselves from such things. If they failed to do so, they would come under the same ban that was to be levied upon the banned thing. This is exactly seen in the account of Achan in Joshua 7. He failed to heed and thus he and his entire household were utterly destroyed.

Moses warns in advance, but it took a painful life lesson for the truth of the words to be revealed. In hopes of avoiding that, however, Moses proceeds with...

^{26 (con't)} You shall utterly detest it shaqets teshaqetsenu – “detesting, it you shall detest it.” The emphasis is given to highlight the importance of the act. Further...

^{26 (con't)} and utterly abhor it, v'taev tetaavenu – “and abhorring, you shall abhor it.” It is a new word in Scripture derived from the word translated as “abomination” in the previous verses. They were to actively find abominable that which the Lord declares an abomination. Moses then explains why...

^{*26 (fin)} for it is an accursed thing.

ki kherem hu – “For devoted thing it.” The word kherem signifies devoted to a particular purpose. In this case, it is in the sense of being banned or under a curse, and thus devoted to God through destruction. A New Testament equivalent would be the word anathema.

Something in this state is intolerable to God and must be destroyed. In the Old Testament, as a tool of learning for Israel, things as are described here are noted as such. In the New Testament, Paul equates one who abuses the gospel as such. We will see that in our closing verse today.

The Lord has given man certain instructions at certain times in redemptive history, but the lesson continuously points to the same truths – faith, conscience, reliance on the Lord and not ourselves, and a complete and total trust in, reliance on, and adherence to His word.

Whatever we do that is not in accord with that, we will fall into error. It happened in Eden, it happened with the covenant people, it happened throughout the time of the Mosaic Law, and it continues on today – literally throughout His church.

The word is given, a context is to be maintained, and within that context, we are to live out our lives in His presence. But, throughout all of the times of man's failings, for those who are within the covenant offered by the Lord, there is also the opportunity to receive His grace.

This is the best part about it all. Man is limited and troubled by time, circumstance, stresses, temptation, and so forth. God understands this, and He is there with us – knowing what we are going through because He Himself was willing to share in our humanity.

Because of this, we have a great High Priest who can sympathize with us. He understands our failings and offers us His grace when we come to Him. Without it, all there is left for humanity is remaining under the ban and being consigned to the trash heap of human history. I would hope for better for you.

Receive God's offer of pardon in the giving of His Son and be reconciled to Him to live out better days – eternal days – in His glorious presence.

Closing Verse: "I marvel that you are turning away so soon from Him who called you in the grace of Christ, to a different gospel, ⁷ which is not another; but there are some who trouble you and want to pervert the gospel of Christ. ⁸ But even if we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel to you than what we have preached to you, let him be accursed. ⁹ As we have said before, so now I say again, if anyone preaches any other gospel to you than what you have received, let him be accursed." Galatians 1:6-9

Next Week: Deuteronomy 8:1-9 Understanding this, you will be in the sweet zone...
(Man Shall Not Live by Bread Alone) (29th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Great and Awesome God

“If you should say in your heart
‘These nations are greater than I; how can I dispossess them?
-----from me my life will be stripped!
You shall not be afraid of them
But you shall remember well what the LORD your God did
-----to Pharaoh and to all Egypt:

The great trials which your eyes saw
The signs and the wonders when you gave a shout!
The mighty hand and the outstretched arm
By which the LORD your God brought you out

So shall the LORD your God do as in those acts He displayed
To all the peoples of whom you are afraid

Moreover the LORD your God will send the hornet
Among them until those who are left
Who hide themselves from you are destroyed
Of their lives they will be bereft

You shall not be terrified of them; this you shall not do
For the LORD your God, the great and awesome God
-----is among you

And the LORD your God will drive out
Those nations before you little by little; so He will do
You will be unable to destroy them at once
Lest the beasts of the field become too numerous for you

But the LORD your God will deliver them over to you
-----this tactic will be employed
And will inflict defeat upon them until they are destroyed

And He will deliver their kings into your hand
And you will destroy from under heaven their name
No one shall be able to stand against you
Until you have destroyed them; such is the aim

You shall burn the carved images of their gods with fire
You shall not covet on them the silver or gold
Nor take it for yourselves, lest you be snared by it
For it is an abomination to the LORD your God
-----so you have been told

Nor shall you bring an abomination into your house
Lest you be doomed to destruction like it; hear what I say
You shall utterly detest it and utterly abhor it
For it is an accursed thing; yes, hear my words this day

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 8:1-9 (Man Shall Not Live by Bread Alone)

A correction I have made in previous sermons, and which I will make again in this one, is what the term “live,” as in “that you may live,” means. Joseph Benson, commenting on these verses, says it means, “Comfortably and prosperously, for life, in the Scripture phrase, signifies more than bare life, namely, happiness and prosperity.”

He then went on to cite various verses which have nothing to do with the context here. And, he is not alone. It is the generally accepted commentary on such verses. But it is wrong. We have seen this several times in Deuteronomy, and it was painfully obvious when we evaluated Leviticus 18:5, “You shall therefore keep My statutes and My judgments, which if a man does, he shall live by them: I am the Lord.”

In fact, a right interpretation of that verse is so important, that Paul uses it in both Romans 10:5 and again in Galatians 3:12. To “live” in this context means to not “die.” The meaning of that then has to be derived from the surrounding context.

Text Verse: “I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. ¹⁰ And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death.” Romans 7:9, 10

Paul is obviously speaking of spiritual death here. He is speaking in general terms of those who have law and who violate that law – such as Adam and Eve. They were alive, the law was introduced, and they died.

This is what Paul is referring to here in a general sense. Moses is speaking of physical life. Christ never died spiritually, having never violated the law. And yet He died physically. But that was on behalf of those who were spiritually dead.

Because this is so, He came out of the tomb, proving He had not violated the law. He could not stay dead – it was impossible. Therefore, Moses is saying that to be obedient to the law means to live. If you have participated in more than five sermons in Deuteronomy, you have certainly heard this. And it is sure that you will hear it again, and again. This is because it is important.

How do we find life? The answer is dealt with once again in today’s passage. It cannot be said enough, and so let us pay heed. For now, a small treat for you, a chiasm found by our friend Sergio about four years ago. He had actually forgotten he found it. I didn't. It will help us to make our way through the chapter.

Deuteronomy 8:3-16 - Beware that you do not forget the Lord your God

In Abundance, Keep his Commandments, Judgments and Statutes (Discovered by Sergio Voitenko - 03/09/2016)

a 3 "humbled you.. And fed you with manna.. Nor did your fathers know"

b 4 garments did not wear out, foot didn't swell for 40 years

c 6 "Keep the commandments of the Lord, walk His ways, fear Him"

d 7-9 you will lack nothing

e 10 "when you have eaten and are full"

x 11 "beware that you do not forget the LORD your God" e 12 "lest when you have eaten and are full"

d 13 when in abundance of everything

c 14 "when you forget the Lord your God"

b 15 the Lord who led you through the great and terrible wilderness a 16 "who fed you in the wilderness with manna which your fathers did not know.. And Humbled you"

Great things, such as chiasms, are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. God Led You All the Way (verses 1-5)

¹"Every commandment

kal ha'mitsvah – "All the commandment." The words of this verse are appropriately divided in order to begin chapter 8, even though they fit with the thought of the previous chapter. Chapter 7 began with, "When the Lord your God brings you into the land to possess..." That same thought is provided in the second clause of this verse in Chapter 8.

After that opening thought of Chapter 7, many thoughts concerning possessing the land were given, and then in the final verses, the Lord gave specific commands concerning the possession of the land to sum the chapter up –

"And He will deliver their kings into your hand, and you will destroy their name from under heaven; no one shall be able to stand against you until you have destroyed them. ²⁵You shall burn the carved images of their gods with fire; you shall not covet the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it for yourselves, lest you be snared by it; for it is an abomination to the LORD your God. ²⁶Nor shall you bring an abomination into your house, lest you be doomed to destruction like it. You shall utterly detest it and utterly abhor it, for it is an accursed thing.”

-Deuteronomy 7:24-26

Because of this, one might think that verse 8:1 should have closed out Chapter 7. Indeed, some think the division should have come after verse 8:1. But by starting this chapter here, it calls to mind the previous words and then sets the tone for what lies ahead in the new direction it will take in verse 8:2.

Despite being a new direction, possession of the land and the thought of obedience to the commandments is still a central theme of Chapter 8. Understanding this, the words begin with, “All the commandment.”

Some translations say, “All the commandments.” This is incorrect. It is singular. Each individual commandment is united in thought as one body of law. The idea is that breaking one part of the commandment nullifies the entire commandment. It is what James refers to, saying, “For whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is guilty of all” (James 2:10).

By dividing the thought as “All the commandments,” it can give the incorrect idea that as long as everything comes out in the end, then missing the mark on the details is acceptable. It is not. Understanding that, Moses next says...

¹ (con't) which I command you today

The “you” is singular. It is the corporate body of Israel being told that obedience is required across the board. The phrase, “which I command you today,” is repeated again and again in Deuteronomy. It is saying that what Moses speaks out, during the entire time of the giving of this book, is included in “today.”

Therefore, Moses isn't dividing up the portions of law into sections to be individually obeyed, but he is rather continuing on with a body of law that comprises each and every section into one unit.

Each “which I command you today” simply adds onto the already impossible weight of law that began when Moses first opened his mouth to start conveying it. Despite this, the entire body of law is that which...

1 (con’t) you must be careful to observe, tishmerun laasot – “you shall keep to observe.” From this point on, the addressee goes from the singular “you” to the plural “you all.” In other words, “All the commandment that I command you (Israel) today, you (all) shall keep to observe.

Here the importance of the difference between “All the commandment” and “All the commandments” is highlighted. The entire body of law, of which what Moses spoke of until now, and of which he will add to now, and of which he will continue to add to throughout Deuteronomy, must be observed.

What is not observed is not a simple slip of a law, but it becomes a transgression of the law. Guilt comes upon the entire body because of such a transgression, whether they know it or not. This takes the reader back to Leviticus –

“Now if the whole congregation of Israel sins unintentionally, and the thing is hidden from the eyes of the assembly, and they have done something against any of the commandments of the LORD in anything which should not be done, and are guilty; ¹⁴ when the sin which they have committed becomes known, then the assembly shall offer a young bull for the sin, and bring it before the tabernacle of meeting.” Leviticus 4:13, 14

In that same chapter, there are offerings for individual sins, sins committed by a ruler, and even sins committed by the high priest. In the case of the high priest, it said, “...if the anointed priest sins, bringing guilt on the people, then let him offer to the Lord for his sin which he has sinned a young bull without blemish as a sin offering” (Leviticus 4:3).

When the high priest failed to uphold a precept of the law, he brought guilt on all of the people. This is because he was the mediator between God and them. In his guilt, the mediation was harmed. God saw his imperfection, and that imperfection was transferred to those he mediated for. The importance of being free from sin, a precept already brought forth several times, is...

1 (con’t) that you may live and multiply,

I'maan tikhyun u-rebitem – “to end purpose you may live and multiply.” The idea of living does not mean “full and abundant life.” It means “not dying.” The law’s purpose was to give life. Paul makes that abundantly clear in Romans 7:10, which was our text verse.

Obviously, this couldn’t be understood by the people of Israel at the time, but it is a truth that is confirmed in the overall body of Scripture both implicitly and explicitly. Israel (and indeed most readers of the Bible) looked to Moses’ words as a promise of full and abundant life, and great multiplication of the people.

But the typology clearly shows that it is referring to true life, meaning not dying, and greatness of reward. The word rabah can speak of many descendants, much increase, a length of time, of greatness of reward, and so on. The greatness of reward is seen, for example, in the promise to Abram –

“After these things the word of the LORD came to Abram in a vision, saying, ‘Do not be afraid, Abram. I am your shield, your exceedingly great reward.’”

-Genesis 15:1

The intent of the law is life. Violation of the law then means death. The lesson we are repeatedly seeing in Deuteronomy is that the law is given as an instrument of learning for the people of the world. Life was lost in Eden, life was promised to come again, but it is not by law that life will come about, except in the fulfillment of it by the God/Man. As Paul says –

“Is the law then against the promises of God? Certainly not! For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law. ²² But the Scripture has confined all under sin, that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. ²³ But before faith came, we were kept under guard by the law, kept for the faith which would afterward be revealed. ²⁴ Therefore the law was our tutor to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. ²⁵ But after faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor.”

-Galatians 3:21-25

The continual repetition of the same thoughts, in sermon after sermon, is to remind you that these things are so. This is what Moses is doing, and thus, this is what we are to do – to contemplate the lesson of the law.

Of this process, John Lange says, “It is less a repeated, than a continuous (this day) enduring law-giving.” The many pronouncements equal one law and that one law is to be fully obeyed. The reward of perfect obedience to the law is next noted...

^{1 (con't)} and go in and possess the land of which the LORD swore to your fathers.

For Israel, the idea is that the possession includes not just crossing the Jordan, but obtaining all of the promise – from north to south and from east to west. However, the typology of Israel crossing the Jordan is seen in Christ.

To cross the Jordan is to cross through Christ. To cross through Christ means possession – complete and finished possession. The singular “you” which is then changed to the plural is given to show Israel that as an obedient body, national salvation will result.

Thus, they must get the relationship with Christ right first. Obedience to the law means all of the law. And only in coming to Christ can perfect obedience to the law be imputed.

Just note the order – observe / you may live and multiply / and go in and possess. Keeping the law comes first, not last. One receives Christ’s fulfilment of the law, then life and greatness comes, then comes possession. And how evident that is from the next words...

² And you shall remember that the LORD your God led you all the way these forty years in the wilderness,

The words return to the second person singular – you (Israel). In this, Moses returns to the time of wilderness wanderings. It is the time of receiving the law, and then punishment for disobedience of the law. But despite their disobedience, the Lord continued to lead them, meaning keep them as a people.

In saying, “the way,” it isn’t referring to a particular path that they took, but how the Lord conducted them. In other words, during the entire time of punishment, He still gave them manna, water, relief from the poisonous snakes, and etc.

Despite being consigned to die in the wilderness, they were also brought through the wilderness alive as a people. The covenant promises to them were upheld by the Lord, despite their own covenant unfaithfulness.

Those years of wandering are typical of the time after rejecting Christ. They have been punished as a people, and yet they have been given the grace of being kept as a people. Whether they acknowledge it yet or not, it is the Lord who has so kept them. The words of this clause are remembered by the psalmist –

“To Him who led His people through the wilderness,
For His mercy endures forever;” Psalm 136:16

This leading them in the manner in which He did was for a set and good purpose. It was...

² (con't) to humble you and test you, l'maan anotekha l'nasotekha – “to end purpose chasten you to test you.” The people had disobeyed. They had failed to go up into the land (a picture of receiving Christ) in Numbers 14. In their refusal, the Lord set about to chasten them as a means of testing.

But the fact is, those twenty and above were set to die without entering Canaan. But they were provided the opportunity to look to the bronze serpent and live. Thus, while Israel collectively was punished, individuals could obtain life. Therefore, they would have passed the test.

As a whole, the chastenings were intended to eventually bring them to the point where they would voluntarily cross the Jordan (picturing coming to God through Christ) as a nation. As this has not yet happened, even though Israel is, even today, in the land of Canaan, it is evident that living in the land is not the promise.

Rather, coming to Christ and finding life through Him is. Their chastening, in other words, is ongoing. And it will continue until the day they call out to Christ – “Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord.” Understanding both the literal, historical record and also the typological pictures, Moses continues...

² (con't) to know what was in your heart,

This is not for the Lord to learn something He did not know. Rather, it is to bring to light what the heart conceals. As Charles Ellicott says, “What God Himself knows by omniscience He sometimes brings to light by evidence for the sake of His creatures.” This is, for example, what He did to King Hezekiah –

“However, regarding the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, whom they sent to him to inquire about the wonder that was done in the land, God withdrew from him, in order to test him, that He might know all that was in his heart.”

-2 Chronicles 32:31

In the case of Israel, Moses says it was to know...

² (con't) whether you would keep His commandments or not.

Here, Moses uses the same word, shamar, that he used in the previous verse. He told them they shall “keep to observe” all the commandment so that they could enter the land. Now, he says the Lord tested them to see whether they would keep His commandments during the wanderings.

They failed to do so, and so he chastened them to test them. If they did not enter Canaan before because they did not believe (have faith in) the Lord, then their keeping His commandments cannot be what will bring them in this time either. Rather, it must come through faith.

The chastening of Israel to test them concerning the keeping of His commandments, then, cannot be for granting them life. It is obviously a way of showing them that life is not possible through it. As Paul says, the law is a tutor to lead people to Christ.

John Lange, at least partially, picked up on this when he said, “...thus the pedagogical significance of the wilderness agrees well.” The wanderings were intended to teach them what they otherwise could not learn.

Everything we are seeing here must be taken in relation to the work of Christ. He came. He fulfilled the law. They rejected Him. They were punished to test them concerning the law. They failed, are failing, and will fail, to meet its demands. Only when they meet it through Christ’s perfect obedience will they find life. That continues to be seen in the next words...

³ So He humbled you, allowed you to hunger,

This verse begins the chiasm we saw during the introduction. The humbling mentioned here precedes the giving of the law. The Lord led Israel out of Egypt, and purposefully waited until they were hungry before providing for them.

In their hunger, they moaned against Moses and Aaron. But it wasn't they who resolved the matter. Rather, it was the Lord. He humbled them. He allowed them to hunger...

^{3 (con't)} and fed you with manna which you did not know nor did your fathers know,

In their hunger, the Lord then did something completely unique by feeding them with ha'man, or the manna. In this, Moses reminds them that what was provided was completely unknown before or since. In saying, "the manna," it provides an emphasis. The word comes from mah, or "what." Thus, Moses calls it "the whatness." It is completely set apart from anything else.

The manner in which the manna came, the volume in which it was provided, the way that it degraded in a night for five days but lasted over Friday and the Sabbath, and so on – all of this was to separate the manna as something completely unique and wholly of the Lord.

And this is parallel to Christ, the true Manna. Though a Man, there is a "whatness" about Him that sets Him completely apart from all others. The manner in which He came, the abundance He provided, the fact that He was crucified on Friday and yet did not see corruption through the Sabbath etc., – all of it showed that He was the fulfillment of the pictures from Israel's past. This was so...

^{3 (con't)} that He might make you know that man shall not live by bread alone;

In this, there are two articles that should be considered, "the man," and "the bread." Also, the word "by" should read "on" or "upon." The Lord is teaching "the man," meaning the Adam in every man, that he shall not live on "the bread" alone.

In providing the manna, the Lord was showing that what He spoke is what comes to pass. To eat, then, isn't what ultimately sustains a person. That which has come to pass – meaning anything that we see, feel, eat, smell, and so on – came to pass because the Lord spoke it into existence.

The manna is a demonstration of this. It never existed, nobody ever knew of it, and yet it appeared. As it came at the command of God, just as the universe came at His command, then the truth is that man lives not by bread that is a result of the command, but from the spoken word (the command) itself. As Moses says...

^{3 (con't)} but man lives by every word that proceeds from the mouth of the LORD.

ki al kal motsa pi Yehovah yikhyeh ha'adam – “for upon all outgoing mouth Yehovah lives the man.” These are the words Christ Jesus spoke back to the tempter. The exchange said –

Now when the tempter came to Him, he said, “If You are the Son of God, command that these stones become bread.”

⁴But He answered and said, “It is written, ‘Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God.’” Matthew 4:3, 4

Jesus prevailed where Israel failed. They had the manna, and yet they continued to complain against the Lord. Jesus, understanding that the manna only existed because the word caused it to exist, conveyed to the tempter that the bread was only a part of God’s proclamation.

To default to commanding the stones to become bread in order to satisfy His personal hunger would be to not rely on all that proceeds from the mouth of God. But later, we see that the manna was only a shadowy type of Christ Himself – the Word of God –

“And Jesus said to them, ‘I am the bread of life. He who comes to Me shall never hunger, and he who believes in Me shall never thirst.’” John 6:35

As Christ is the Word of God, He is everything that is needed to have life. The bread of the world can sustain life, but it cannot make man live. God who gave the manna in the wilderness showed that He can sustain a man apart from the common food of man. As He can do this, then He can make man live. How does the man live? He lives through Christ.

⁴Your garments did not wear out on you, nor did your foot swell these forty years.

The obviously miraculous intent of the words here are all but destroyed by most commentators. Many commentators try to diminish the miraculous by saying that the supplies for making clothes didn’t run out, or something stupidly similar to that.

Others, following Jewish fables, say that the clothes of the children actually grew with them like a snail’s shell. Neither of these matches the obvious nature of the words.

Rather, the simple and understandable reading is exactly what happened. The clothes that people wore did not wear out. It would be ridiculous to speak of the manna in one verse, a unique and miraculous event, and then to speak of something plain and common like obtaining supplies to make new clothes.

For added surety of this, a complementary verse is found in Deuteronomy 29:5 –

“And I have led you forty years in the wilderness. Your clothes have not worn out on you, and your sandals have not worn out on your feet.”

The obvious reason for the change from feet swelling to sandals not wearing out is to show that both occurred, and both were miraculous. Otherwise, if Moses only spoke of clothes and sandals, it might be assumed by those who came later that it was just speaking of an ample supply of material always being available.

In this verse, the words are still in the singular. The Lord is speaking to Israel collectively. Like the manna, it was a lesson concerning the Lord’s faithfulness, even in Israel’s time of punishment.

There is one new and rare word introduced, batseq. It is found only here and Nehemiah 9:21, where Nehemiah cites this verse. It is from a primitive root, and it means maybe to swell or blister.

Their garments not wearing out, and their feet not swelling or blistering, was a clear demonstration to Israel that they were being sustained by the Lord as a people, even as they were dying in the wilderness. The same lesson should be learned by Israel today, if they will just think.

They rejected Christ, they are under the punishment of the curses of the law, and yet they are being sustained as a people. As miraculous as garments not wearing out and feet not swelling (or blistering) for forty years, so is the miracle of Israel’s continued existence over these past two thousand years.

They rejected Him, and they have neglected His word, but He has neither rejected them, nor neglected them. That this is the correct interpretation of this is found in the next words...

*Many years you wandered after failing to believe
And during that time, you fell in the wilderness
My promised blessing you did not receive
But you failed to consider how you got in that mess*

*For many generations, you lived in the land
And there were times of want and times of prosperity
But through it all, you failed to understand
That your state was a result of your treatment of Me*

*And so, for many years you wandered after failing to believe
And during that time, you fell in a global wilderness
I held out nail-scarred hands to you that you failed to receive
And even today, you still won't consider how you got in that mess*

II. In Which You Will Lack Nothing (verses 5-9)

⁵You should know in your heart that as a man chastens his son, so the LORD your God chastens you.

The context of their being provided the manna, their garments not wearing out, and their feet not swelling, is that it is done through chastening.

The lesson of the chastened son is explained in Hebrews. There, the author writes to Israel, specifically believing Jews, but He carefully shows how Israel – the collective whole – experiences God’s redemptive hand of blessing, cursing, judgment, salvation, and so on. Of this group, he says –

“My son, do not despise the chastening of the LORD,
Nor be discouraged when you are rebuked by Him;

⁶ For whom the LORD loves He chastens,
And scourges every son whom He receives.

⁷ If you endure chastening, God deals with you as with sons; for what son is there whom a father does not chasten? ⁸ But if you are without chastening, of which all have become partakers, then you are illegitimate and not sons. ⁹ Furthermore, we have had human fathers who corrected us, and we paid them respect. Shall we not much more readily be in subjection to the Father of spirits and live? ¹⁰ For they indeed for a few days chastened us as seemed best to them, but He for our profit, that we may be partakers of His holiness. ¹¹ Now no chastening seems to be joyful for the present, but painful; nevertheless, afterward it yields the peaceable fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it.”

-Hebrews 12:5-11

What is clearly evident is that Israel, under the chastening hand of the Lord during this dispensation, is considered a son. They are being corrected by the Lord to teach them the lesson they will eventually learn.

This is all the more evident because the word Moses uses for “chasten” is the same word used three times in Leviticus 26 for the punishment Israel would receive in their rejection of Him.

And yet, at the end of that passage, the Lord promises that He would remember the covenant that He made with their ancestors when He brought them out of Egypt. Their rejection of Christ is not the end of their story. With that understood, Moses again turns to the law...

⁶“Therefore you shall keep the commandments of the LORD your God, to walk in His ways and to fear Him.

We have been talking about Israel and their relationship to the Lord. The reason for their exile (meaning rejecting Christ), and God’s faithfulness to them, even in their time of punishment. How can it be, then, that if their rejection of Christ was the reason for their exile, that Moses now, again, harps on them concerning keeping the commandments of the Lord?

If Christ offers grace, how does keeping the commandments of law fit into that? It is, as we have seen – time and again – because the Law of Moses anticipates both the coming of Christ and the ending of the law. Hence, to “keep the commandments of the Lord your God” is to believe in Christ unto salvation. As it says in Deuteronomy 18:18, 19 –

“I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their brethren, and will put My words in His mouth, and He shall speak to them all that I command Him. ¹⁹ And it shall be that whoever will not hear My words, which He speaks in My name, I will require it of him.”

This is further anticipated by Jeremiah, a prophet under the Mosaic Covenant, who said that the Lord would cut a New Covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah. Therefore, to obey the commandments of the Lord God is to come to Christ – the One who embodies, fulfilled, and annuls the Mosaic Covenant.

It is this act which then will bring Israel into the harmonious relationship with God. Theirs will finally be a heavenly promise, of which crossing the Jordan into Canaan only anticipated...

⁷ For the LORD your God is bringing you into a good land,

Moses now describes what is an almost idyllic setting. And it is intentionally meant to be that way. The description of Eden and its garden is described no more beautifully than what Moses speaks of now. Further, Moses ensures that they know it is the Lord their God who brings them in.

They rejected Canaan the first time by simply not believing the Lord. They will enter only through believing the Lord. It takes us back to verse 1. They were to observe so that they would live, receive the reward, and go in and possess.

But if this is speaking of only Israel's entering Canaan, it makes no sense. Moses will speak out the words of the law, ascend Mt. Nebo, and there he will die. There will be a period of mourning for him, and then Israel will enter Canaan.

The obvious typology is that the observing of the command is to receive Christ by faith and then enter the promise. That will become as obvious as the nose on one's face in Joshua. For now, the description of the land continues. It is...

^{7 (con't)} a land of brooks of water, erets nakhale mayim – “land wadis water.” This speaks of flowing water, typically of wadis that run during the times of rain.

^{7 (con't)} of fountains and springs, ayanoth u-tehomoth – “eyes and depths.” The ayin, or literally “eye,” speaks of a spring that issues forth water from the ground. The tehom, or “depth,” would be the much larger fountains that produce a river right at its issuing forth. It is where vast amounts of water gush forth to water the land.

^{7 (con't)} that flow out of valleys and hills;

yotseim babiqah u-bahar – “flowings out in the valley and in the mountain.” The meaning is that at any point in a given valley or mountain, there may be either, or both, of these flowing forth to water the land. And that then leads to other abundance...

⁸ a land of wheat and barley, erets khitah u-seorah – “land wheat and barley.” There is promised both grains – the greater and the lesser. The wheat is for standard human consumption and the barley for both the poor and for cattle and horses.

The story in Genesis 26 of Isaac reaping one hundred-fold would be happily anticipated by those to whom it had been conveyed. The labors would be well-rewarded for those who entered the promise.

Because there are two crops, it means two harvests. The barley began around Passover and the wheat began around Pentecost. The account of the supplies for King Solomon in 1 Kings 4:22 shows the magnificent abundance the land could produce.

^{8 (con't)} of vines and fig trees and pomegranates, v'gephen u-teenah v'rimmon – “and vines, and figs, and pomegranates.” The vines for grapes can be found in every climate of Israel, from the wettest to the driest spots. Each produces its own special grape for its own particular use/taste.

The fig is mentioned throughout the rest of the Old Testament and in almost every book. It is noted abundantly in the New Testament as well. The prominent use of it carries its own symbolic meaning – that of a connection to God, or its lack. This can be seen as one winds through the Bible and notes its many uses.

The pomegranate is derived from a word that signifies high or exalted. It gives the sense of mental maturity. It is seen much less in the Old Testament than the fig, but it is highlighted in the little book the Song of Solomon where it is mentioned six times – more than any other book in the Bible.

^{8 (con't)} a land of olive oil and honey;

erets zeyit shemen u-debash – “land olive oil and honey.” Olive oil has multiple uses and much value, and the land is filled with areas where it grows in abundance. Again, the account of King Solomon and his dealings shows the immense amount of oil that was used and traded as a commodity.

Honey signifies both abundance and health of the land. Where there is honey, it means bees have been productive. Cross-pollination occurs, the flowers will bloom, the fruit will come out, and the byproduct of honey can be gathered.

However, the term honey can mean more than just bee honey, it is also believed to extend to dates, and even syrup made from grapes. The word comes from a root meaning to be gummy, so all are possible.

After the first exile, the people had returned from Babylon and were still in troubled times in the land. However, the Lord spoke through Haggai of the blessing He would again pour out upon the people, speaking of all of these commodities except honey, He said to them –

“Consider now from this day forward, from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, from the day that the foundation of the LORD’s temple was laid—consider it: ¹⁹ Is the seed still in the barn? As yet the vine, the fig tree, the pomegranate, and the olive tree have not yielded fruit. But from this day I will bless you.”

-Haggai 2:18, 19

This is what Moses’ words now anticipate – a land of the Lord’s blessing. And that only looks forward to the true land of promised blessing which can only be realized for humanity through God’s provision of Jesus Christ. For now, Moses continues...

⁹ a land in which you will eat bread without scarcity, erets asher lo b’mskenuth tokal bah lekhem – “land which no in scarcity you will eat in bread.” Here is a word found only this once in the Bible, miskenuth.

It comes from misken, meaning poor. Thus, there will be a great abundance which anticipates wealth and prosperity if rightly handled. Therefore, there will always be bread on the table and abundance for the family. It is a complete contrast to what the Lord promises when they reject Him –

“When I have cut off your supply of bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and they shall bring back your bread by weight, and you shall eat and not be satisfied.” Leviticus 26:26

Again, Moses continues with a greater note of abundance...

^{9 (con't)} in which you will lack nothing;

Certainly, the words here extend to more than just what the land produces, but to that which can be traded for. In other words, a great amount of trading is noted in the Old Testament. So much so that there were commodities not available in the land that could still be easily acquired.

In this, the people would have no lack at all. The ground would be so fertile and productive that there would be a superabundance by which to amass even greater wealth. And finally, of these promises of the abundance, Moses continues with...

^{9 (con't)} a land whose stones are iron

Some scholars see the term “whose stones are iron” as referring to basalt stones, meaning dark volcanic stones. There is no reason to accept this. Iron, even if limited in quantity, is noted throughout the Old Testament. The words simply mean that iron will be available to mine and to use by the general populace. And finally...

^{*9 (fin)} and out of whose hills you can dig copper.

u-meharareha takhtsov nekhoshet – And out of whose hills you dig copper. Copper mines have been found in the Timna Valley in southern Israel. Copper mines have been found in the countries surrounding Israel as well.

As a note of correction, if your Bible says, “thou mayest dig brass” (KJV), please underline that, note that it is in error, and correct it to read “copper.” Brass is an alloy produced by man. It is not found naturally. Copper is dug up and then combined with other metals to produce such alloys.

The point of Moses’ words is that the land promised to Israel was one of abundance, and in which that abundance would keep the people from any lack at all. This is first, and immediately, speaking of the truth that Israel will prosper if they heed the Lord and are obedient to His law.

It is, however, more fully anticipating the abundance that is found in Christ and what He promises His people. Israel was rarely obedient to the Lord. At times, they prospered, and at others, they did not. The time of the law was a time for our learning.

Israel was the object lesson, and we are the recipients of that. Rote observance of the law, without a heart for the Lord, was as unacceptable to Him as ignoring His law. The lesson is given through Israel in many ways, showing that we simply cannot do without grace.

In Christ's coming, that grace is offered. For Jew or Gentile alike, that offer comes by simply calling out to Him and believing the gospel. For Israel as a nation, that will come when they call out to Him collectively and submit to Him.

Next week, we will take what we have learned concerning the promises today, and we will again evaluate the warnings that come with such abundance and blessing.

The back and forth lessons of Deuteronomy are necessary to have a full and complete understanding of what made life for Israel so difficult over these past millennia. In this, it will allow us as individuals to avoid such great pitfalls.

Closing Verse: You crown the year with your bounty, and your carts overflow with abundance.

¹² *The grasslands of the wilderness overflow;
the hills are clothed with gladness.*

¹³ *The meadows are covered with flocks and the valleys are mantled with grain;
they shout for joy and sing. Psalm 65:11-13 (NIV)*

Next Week: Deuteronomy 8:10-20 If you don't do it, you will be a complete clod... (And You Shall Remember the Lord Your God) (30th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Man Shall Not Live by Bread Alone

“Every commandment which I command you today
You must be careful to observe
That you may live and multiply, and go in and possess the land
Of which the LORD swore to your fathers; from these things
-----you shall not swerve

And you shall remember that the LORD your God
Led you all the way these forty years in the wilderness
-----that terrible trying spot
To humble you and test you, to know what was in your heart
Whether you would keep His commandments or not

So He humbled you, allowed you to hunger
And fed you with manna which you did not know
-----nor did your fathers know
That He might make you know that man shall not -----live by bread alone
But man lives by every word that proceeds
-----from the mouth of the LORD, not a word he shall forgo

Your garments did not wear out on you
Nor did your foot swell these forty years; such it did not do

You should know in your heart that as a man chastens his son
So the LORD your God chastens you; and you are better off
-----in the long run

“Therefore you shall keep the commandments of
-----the LORD your God
To walk in His ways and to fear Him, on the path that you trod

For the LORD your God is bringing you into a good land
A land of brooks of water – just imagine the daffodils!
Of fountains and springs
That flow out of valleys and hills

A land of wheat and barley, of vines and fig trees
-----and pomegranates too
A land of olive oil and honey; marvelous delights for you

A land in which you will eat bread without scarcity
In which you will lack nothing; the place is over the top
A land whose stones are iron
And out of whose hills you can dig copper

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 8:10-20 (And You Shall Remember the Lord Your God)

Introductory comments are the last thing I normally type for each sermon. Some days, it's hard to figure what to say so that we can smoothly blend into the content of what is being given in the sermon text. As I was typing this sermon, Sergio and I were doing what we occasionally do. He was working on a video; I am typing the sermon.

He will say, "I have 4 minutes of a 15-minute video to go." I will say, "I am on verse 2 of 10 verses." In that, we have a competition to see where we each will end when the first person is done. While messaging back and forth (and to frustrate him into thinking he was getting way behind), I said, "I just finished verse XX."

Just a few short minutes later I said, "I just finished verses XX and XX." This would be an otherwise impossible message. One verse can take up to an hour. I snickered for a moment.

Then I copy and pasted the two verses. Under the first verse, I typed, "blah, blah, blah." Under the second I typed, "yada, yada, yada." After that, I said, "I bet nobody will notice."

After sending it, I couldn't help thinking that there are some people who actually treat the word like that. As sad as it is, the goal for them doesn't include remembering that this is the word of God. Nor is it that they care about the Lord who gave the word. They simply put something together to make people feel good on Sunday morning, and it doesn't matter if it conforms in the least to what the Lord is actually conveying. It breaks my heart.

Text Verse: "Yet I am the LORD your God

Ever since the land of Egypt,

And you shall know no God but Me;

For there is no savior besides Me.

⁵*I knew you in the wilderness,*

In the land of great drought.

⁶*When they had pasture, they were filled;*

They were filled and their heart was exalted;

Therefore they forgot Me." Hosea 13:4-6

When our hearts get lifted up, we tend to think more highly of ourselves than we should. In that, we forget the Lord our God. There are other ways to forget the Lord as well. We can do it out of sheer negligence, we can do it out of spite, we can do it because we are just too busy with life.

But I want to tell you today, that for those who are the Lord's, He will never forget us. He will never break the covenant promises to us that He has agreed to. This doesn't mean that we should not worry about our walk with the Lord. On the contrary, I will take you to a passage in the New Testament at the end of our sermon today to show us just the opposite.

But the great thing about the Lord is that, even if we do forget about Him – for whatever reason – if we are His (meaning saved by the Lord Jesus), He will never turn His back on us. As I have said before, national Israel is a template for each of us concerning our own state before the Lord. Today, you will see the faithfulness of the Lord in a way that your Bible fails to show you. Of this, I am pretty sure.

But when you see it, I hope it stirs you as much as it stirred me on 21 September 2020. Great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. And All That You Have Is Multiplied (verses 10-13)

The words of verse 10 fit marvelously into what was said in the previous verses of the chapter. Verse 1 referred to possession of the land. This one does as well. Verse 2 spoke of remembering what the Lord had done for the people in the wilderness. Here, that is contrasted with blessing the Lord in the land.

Verse 3 spoke of hungering in the wilderness and then being granted manna. Here, it speaks of being full because of the produce of the land given by the Lord. Verses 4 & 5 spoke of the Lord's care of the people in the wilderness, including His chastening of them. Here, His care of them in the land of their possession is highlighted.

Verses 7-9 spoke of the things by which the land would be considered good. Here it acknowledges that it is, in fact, a good land. This is a marvelous summary verse of that entire set of verses.

In all of this, it is the Lord, not Israel, who is the center of focus. Israel is the recipient of the Lord's favor, but without the Lord, or with the Lord as an enemy, Israel would not exist. It is not by their hand, their power, or their abilities that the goodness they possess comes about, but by the graciousness of the Lord. As it says...

10 When you have eaten and are full, v'akalta v'savaeta – “And you shall eat, and you are satisfied.” This is the contrast to verse 3 where it noted that the people hungered in the wilderness. At that time, they complained against Moses and Aaron, which means they complained against the Lord.

Here the words are a statement of fact – “you shall eat,” and “you are satisfied.” Just as they complained in their hunger, they are now actually commanded to do the opposite in the times when they are filled...

10 (con't) then you shall bless the LORD your God

u-berakhta eth Yehovah elohekha – “and you shall bless Yehovah your God.” It is to be taken as a positive command, not simply a general principle. In receiving, you are to bless. To not do so, then, must be considered a transgression of the law. This is shown to be exactly fulfilled by Christ, even before His meal and being filled, in the gospels. When feeding the multitudes, it says –

“And He took the seven loaves and the fish and gave thanks, broke them and gave them to His disciples; and the disciples gave to the multitude.” Matthew 15:36

Likewise, it says that He blessed the bread on the night of His crucifixion as well. The law is given, and the Lord was obedient to the precept.

10 (con't) for the good land which He has given you.

al ha'arets ha'tovah asher natan lakh – “upon the land, the good, which He has given you.” In this, Moses uses the word al – “upon the good land,” not “for the good land.” It isn't that they possess a piece of land in another area that they go to visit from time to time, and from which abundance is received. Rather, it is a land upon which they live and receive constant benefit from.

The Lord gave them the land, it is a good land, and the Lord has provided for them from that same land. They are to remember, and they are to actively bless the Lord for that which they receive from the land upon which they reside.

The idea is that the Lord was always to be at the center of their attention. It is not the land, and it is not those who dwell upon the land, but rather it is the Lord who gave the land who is to be praised. And there is an important reason for this command...

11 “Beware that you do not forget the LORD your God

In the Hebrew, the words from now until verse 18 are one long, continuous sentence. It is a detailed explanation of what is sure to come, and a warning of what not to forget when it does come.

Blessings lie ahead, but in the abundance of those blessings will come an assumption that what has been received has come about through personal effort and not through the blessing of the Lord. In this, Moses first warns them with the word shamar – to keep, watch, or be attentive to.

In this, they are to be attentive to not forgetting Yehovah their God. He then explains how they will, in fact, forget Him. It is...

11 (con’t) by not keeping His commandments, His judgments, and His statutes

The word commandment is singular. The commandment, judgments, and statutes are from the Lord. It logically follows that in remembering what He has commanded to do, the people will remember the One who has so commanded.

In other words, we know the difference between federal crimes and state and local crimes. If someone carries a gun into a post office, the penalties will be different than if he carries a gun into a 7-11 in a town where that is not allowed. We remember the source of the law when we remember to observe the law.

To shamar, or be attentive to, those various laws means that we are showing regard for the source of them. We may keep the federal laws because we might otherwise be sentenced to many years in federal prison, but we may neglect the local laws because the penalty is a slap on the wrist.

The respect given to the laws of the Lord thus signifies whether a person has a fear of the Lord, a love of the Lord, or some varying degree of contempt for the Lord. And the individual's attitude toward the Lord will inevitably be tied up in the leader's attitude toward the Lord.

When the leaders of a nation have no fear of the Lord, the people will follow in that same attitude. The leader is the enforcer of the laws. If he will not enforce the laws set forth, then the people will not either. This is the lesson of the kings of Israel, and it is seen again and again in their record, such as –

“Now it came to pass, when Rehoboam had established the kingdom and had strengthened himself, that he forsook the law of the Lord, and all Israel along with him.” 2 Chronicles 12:1

The opposite attitude was seen in the record of King Asa –

“So they gathered together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa. ¹¹ And they offered to the LORD at that time seven hundred bulls and seven thousand sheep from the spoil they had brought. ¹² Then they entered into a covenant to seek the LORD God of their fathers with all their heart and with all their soul; ¹³ and whoever would not seek the LORD God of Israel was to be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or woman.”
-2 Chronicles 15:10-13

Of these commands of the Lord, Moses says...

¹¹ (con't) which I command you today,

Here, the concept of divine inspiration is once again clearly presented. Moses says that what he conveys are the commandment, statutes, and judgments of the Lord, and yet it is he who is commanding them to Israel. Jesus clearly confirms this as well when He asks, “What did Moses command you,” or something similar. It is both the word of Moses and the law of the Lord.

¹² lest—when you have eaten and are full,

Here is a contrast to the manna. The people simply received what the Lord provided. They couldn't take credit for it at all. Rather they received it, knowing exactly where it came from. They could, and in fact they did, complain about the manna, but they could not deny its Source.

Here, the food has come from the ground. Vines were pruned, trees were trimmed, land was tilled, stalks of grain were cut and threshed, and so on. Man's labor was involved in the process. In the exercise of the labor, it is easy to forget the ultimate Source of the good things that fill the stomach. Further...

¹² (con't) and have built beautiful houses and dwell in them;

Again, there is the contrast to the time in the wilderness. The people dwelt in tents, and they moved at the command of the Lord. There was no tending to farms and gardens. There was a reliance on the Lord. It is reminiscent of the family of Rechab who is mentioned in Jeremiah –

“But they said, ‘We will drink no wine, for Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, commanded us, saying, ‘You shall drink no wine, you nor your sons, forever.’⁷ You shall not build a house, sow seed, plant a vineyard, nor have any of these; but all your days you shall dwell in tents, that you may live many days in the land where you are sojourners.’⁸ Thus we have obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, or our daughters,⁹ nor to build ourselves houses to dwell in; nor do we have vineyard, field, or seed.¹⁰ But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.”

-Jeremiah 35:6-10

These Rechabites were used by the Lord as an object lesson to Israel of failing to adhere to this exact premise now being set forth by Moses in Deuteronomy.

¹³ and *when your herds and your flocks multiply,

Animals take effort. They have to be tended to, fed and watered, and stores need to be set aside for the winter when the land isn't producing. The more herds and flocks a person has, the more people he will need to tend to them.

The more people beneath a person, then for that person feelings of greatness tend to result. Further, in having an abundance, one tends to trust in that abundance. He forgets the commands of the Lord to have an open hand to the needy. This is what happened with Nabal in 1 Samuel. David came forth looking for assistance in a time of need. Nabal's response was –

“Shall I then take my bread and my water and my meat that I have killed for my shearers, and give it to men when I do not know where they are from?”

-1 Samuel 25:11

Nabal was a man who did not care about the law of the Lord, because he failed to care about the plight of his fellow Israelite. He trusted in his wealth and forgot the Source of that wealth.

13 (con't) and your silver and your gold are multiplied,

The possession of silver and gold means that the person's wealth extends beyond the property and that which subsists from the property. A person with silver and gold has increased so much from the property that he now has sufficiency beyond the annual harvest season.

If there is drought, the money is a buffer for such a time. If the equipment breaks down, it can be fixed by paying someone who is handy in that way. And so on. In the possession of silver and gold, that which is otherwise out of reach becomes readily available. In such a state everything else increases as well...

13 (con't) and all that you have is multiplied;

With the coming of surplus, if one is wise, more can be obtained – more land to produce more crops; more animals to produce more meat, wool, leather, and so on; more wives to increase the stress; more children to help with the chores.

The cycle of increase leads to personal gain as well – extra shoes, more garments, extra rooms which can then be rented out. The multiplication of an industrious man can be great. But for most, that leads naturally to another state...

Where does your ability come from?

A day at the gym and eating right?

Is that the place from whence these come?

And also, from getting a good sleep at night?

*Is your wealth amassed high because you are great?
Do you have expensive things because of your skill?
Is filled your cupboard, and is overflowing your plate?
How did it happen? Tell me the drill?*

*But if you say, "It was because I am great."
Or if you say, "It was because of my skill."
I say to you, "Empty is your plate."
You will be unable to pay the final bill*

*Call on the Lord Jesus, and include Him in every detail Bless the Lord for each thing He provides
And when you are weighed on His judgment scale
You will receive all the wonder His heaven provides*

II. Parsing Matters (verses 14-20)

¹⁴ when your heart is lifted up, v'ram l'vavekha – “And lifted to your heart.” The heart is the seat of reason, understanding, and intelligence. In the acquisition of many things, a person thinks within himself, “Look at all that I have, and all that I have done.” It is the sin of pride which takes credit for that which one is blessed with. In this...

¹⁴ (con't) and you forget the LORD your God

There is room for only one in the heart of a prideful man. If he is consumed with himself, then he will not remember the Lord his God. It is a certainty. Only a man of humility through and through can avoid the trap of thinking that what he possesses is solely because of his own efforts and greatness.

Moses knows this, and so his warning is also a reminder. It isn't just that the Lord is on high and blessing people who were already industrious and blessed to start with. Rather, he notes that Israel is the people of Yehovah, the God...

¹⁴ (con't) who brought you out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage; ha'motsiakha me-erets mitsraim mibeth abadim – “who the bringing out of you from land Egypt, from house slavery.” The people of Israel, from the least even to the greatest, were all as one in Egypt. Egypt means “Double distress.” They were in bondage, and they had no way of obtaining their freedom. Their lot was permanent misery.

But in the impossibility of their situation, and with no chance of relief from it, Yehovah brought them out. Thus, whatever they possessed, from a thread to a sandal strap, or from a boundary stone to a king’s palace – all of it was because the Lord had first delivered them to it, and then He had delivered it to them.

The words here are prophetic in nature. It’s not just that such might happen. Moses knows it is certain to happen. And it did. 2 Chronicles 26 details the greatness of King Uzziah and how it came about. It says there, “as long as he sought the Lord, God made him prosper.”

What is then said of him mirrors the thought of verses 11-13. So exactly that after the many received blessings it then says –

“But when he was strong his heart was lifted up, to his destruction, for he transgressed against the LORD his God by entering the temple of the LORD to burn incense on the altar of incense. ¹⁷ So Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him were eighty priests of the LORD—valiant men. ¹⁸ And they withstood King Uzziah, and said to him, ‘It is not for you, Uzziah, to burn incense to the LORD, but for the priests, the sons of Aaron, who are consecrated to burn incense. Get out of the sanctuary, for you have trespassed! You shall have no honor from the LORD God.’” 2 Chronicles 26:16-18

Though the king of Israel, and a man of wisdom and great achievement, Uzziah was a son of slaves. Were it not for the Lord, he and his people would still be in bondage. Were it not for the Lord, his line would not have ascended to the throne. Were it not for the Lord, Jerusalem would not be the city of Israelite kings, but the city of the Jebusites.

There is no part of the existence of Uzziah, or any of us for that matter, that is separate from the Lord’s hand in our lives. Our very breath is derived from Him and will someday return to Him. And yet we look to our own greatness and forget the Lord our God.

Most importantly, we were in bondage, we could not save ourselves, and yet He intervened to free us unto Himself. And even in our salvation, we are still not free from the world in which we live. Our walk is one of trial to this day, just as Israel’s was...

¹⁵ who led you through that great and terrible wilderness, ha'molikakha bamidbar ha'gadol v'ha'nora – “who the leading of you in the wilderness, the great, and the terrible.” This is referring to the march from Egypt to Sinai and then to the border of Canaan. It may also include the time after turning from Canaan under punishment, but that is not necessarily so.

The term ha'gadol, or “the great,” speaks of the vastness of the area. The term ha'nora, or “the terrible,” speaks of that which is fearful or awesome. The location is so barren and dry that it cannot be plowed and planted. It is a vast wasteland leading to a land of abundance and promise. This wilderness is a land...

^{15 (con't)} in which were fiery serpents and scorpions and thirsty land where there was no water; nakhash saraph v'aqrav v'tsimaon asher ein mayim – “serpent fiery, and scorpion, and thirsty ground which no water.” These words are given to parallel the words “the wilderness, the great, and the terrible.” In them, there are no articles and the nouns, except “water,” are singular. This then emphasizes and highlights the terrible nature of the land.

Here, the word tsimmaon, or thirsty ground, is introduced. It comes from tsame, meaning “thirsty.” It will only be seen three times. It is concerning this horrifying, terrifying, and deadly spot that Moses recalls the Lord’s caring hand for Israel...

^{15 (con't)} who brought water for you out of the flinty rock;

ha'motsi lekha mayim mi'tsur ha'khalamish – “who the bringing forth for you water from rock the flinty.” Bringing Israel out of Egypt was only a part of the process. There was the wilderness to traverse, and that wilderness was both inhospitable and unforgiving. And yet, the Lord was the Leader of them and the Bringer forth of water. In other words, their Guide and Sustainer.

As before, the parallel to Christ should not be missed. Christ certainly led us out of bondage, but He also leads and sustains us on the path to glory. As Paul says in Philippians 1:6, “being confident of this very thing, that He who has begun a good work in you will complete it until the day of Jesus Christ.”

No matter how difficult the trek is, He is there for His people, and He will see them through to the end of what He has purposed for them. If this is not true for Israel, it is true for none of us. And neither Israel's disobedience, nor ours, will affect the final outcome of what is promised.

In this verse is another new word, khalamish, or "flint." It will be seen five times. It comes from khalam, meaning to be strong or healthy, or to dream. Not only did the Lord bring water from the flinty rock, but Moses says it was He...

¹⁶ who fed you in the wilderness with manna, ha'maakilkha man bamidbar – "who the feeding of you manna in the wilderness." In the wilderness, the land is barren. Without water, nothing will grow. Without the growth of vegetation, there is nothing to eat. And yet, Israel survived through the ordeal. The Lord Himself became the Feeder of Israel through the giving of manna.

From verse 14 to verse 16, Moses ascribes four aspects of the care of Israel by the Lord. He is –

- the bringing out of you from land Egypt, from house slavery (14)
- the leading of you in the wilderness, the great, and the terrible (15)
- the bringing forth for you water from rock the flinty (15)
- the feeding of you manna in the wilderness (16)

One can see Christ in each description. He redeems us from bondage to sin – meaning from the power of the law (Galatians 3:13); He leads us through the trials of this earthly life (Philippians 1:6); He gives us of the Spirit (1 John 4:13); and He feeds us with Himself (John 6:54). As is consistently seen in such passages, Israel as a collective is given as a type of each one of us.

¹⁶ (con't) which your fathers did not know,

This is a general repeat of verse 3. The manna was to be instructive. The fathers had never known it, nor had those who received it known it. It was something entirely new. In a place where no food could be obtained, food was made available. This was so...

¹⁶ (con't) that He might humble you and that He might test you, to do you good in the end—l'maan anotekha u-l'maan nasotekha l'hetivkha b'akharitekha – “to end purpose He might humble you, and to end purpose He might test you, to do you good in your latter end.” Everything about the process has an end goal and is thus given with a set purpose.

The “end” spoken of here, then, is to be the result of the time of humbling. Thus, it is entry into the promise. The humbling and the manna, however, began before the giving of the law. Therefore, the manna was to be a step into the time of the law.

But Israel failed even after the giving of the law. They did not enter the promise. And yet, they continued to be sustained for the entire forty years in the wilderness. Thus, the “end” obviously speaks of their actual entry into the promise.

Understanding this, the only two references to the manna in Deuteronomy are in this chapter. The first was in verse 3, and now Moses refers to it again here –

 So He humbled you, allowed you to hunger, and fed you with manna which you did not know nor did your fathers know that He might make you know that man shall not live by bread alone; but man lives by every word that proceeds from the mouth of the LORD.

 who fed you in the wilderness with manna, which your fathers did not know, that He might humble you and that He might test you, to do you good in the end.

In the end, the purpose of the humbling, the hungering, and the manna was a test. How does one do good? By living by every word that proceeds from the mouth of the Lord, and by a continued dependence on the mercies of the Lord.

As we know, Christ is the Word of God. He is the embodiment of all that proceeds from the Godhead, and He is the fulfillment of the law. Therefore, for God to do good to Israel “in the end” means that Israel must come to the One who embodies the words now being given by Moses.

David lived by the word of the Lord, even if he didn't always obey it. Others obeyed the word of the Lord, but they didn't live by it. Others did neither. Thus, as much as anything else, the precept spoken here by Moses is one which ultimately involves faith and a right condition of the heart. That is clearly seen in the next words...

¹⁷ then you say in your heart, v'amarta bilvavekha – “And you say in your heart.” The thought now returns to the words of verse 14 (when your heart is lifted up) and the time in Canaan. Moses has explained that which led up to entry into Canaan and the purpose of everything that occurred in the process. But the tendency of man is to look around, see all of his wealth and his many possessions and to say...

¹⁷ (con't) ‘My power and the might of my hand have gained me this wealth.’

Again, and again, the record of Israel reveals this attitude. It happened to Rehoboam, it happened to Uzziah, and it happened to King Hezekiah –

“In those days Hezekiah was sick and near death, and he prayed to the LORD; and He spoke to him and gave him a sign. ²⁵ But Hezekiah did not repay according to the favor shown him, for his heart was lifted up; therefore wrath was looming over him and over Judah and Jerusalem.” 2 Chronicles 32:24, 25

This is the lesson that Moses is conveying to the people. The Lord put them through times of want in order for them to remember Him in the times of abundance. Essentially, he is saying, “Remember where you came from. If not for the Lord, you would still be there. Remember the goodness of the Lord.” As he next says...

¹⁸ “And you shall remember the LORD your God,

For Israel, everything is contingent on remembering the Lord, the God of Israel. If they forget Him, then everything else falls to the wayside. The relationship is broken, and they will suffer. If they remember Him, then all will be well with them. Again, Moses confirms this...

¹⁸ (con't) for it is He who gives you power to get wealth,

Moses now uses the same words (power and wealth) that he used in the previous verse. There, he spoke as if one of Israel, “My power and the might of my hand have gained me this wealth.” Here he says it is otherwise. It is the Lord who gives you power to get wealth.

Only in the recognition that the Lord is the Giver of the ability will Israel be right with Him. And Moses says that they are to acknowledge this so...

18 (con't) that He may establish His covenant which He swore to your fathers, as it is this day.

The covenant Moses is referring to is that which was sworn to Abraham, and then to Isaac, and then to Jacob, as He said in Exodus 33 –

Then the LORD said to Moses, “Depart and go up from here, you and the people whom you have brought out of the land of Egypt, to the land of which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, saying, ‘To your descendants I will give it.’”

-Exodus 33:1

That is repeated in Leviticus 26, also while the law was being given –

“...then I will remember My covenant with Jacob, and My covenant with Isaac and My covenant with Abraham I will remember; I will remember the land.”

-Leviticus 26:42

The words, “as it is this day,” mean that Israel is right on the banks of the Jordan. The promise is established, and in a short amount of time, they will cross over into the land. And yet, Moses has been speaking about the time in which Israel is in the land.

Thus, the words, “He may establish His covenant,” are ongoing. The covenant is established, and it will remain so as long as Israel remembers the Lord. That is evidenced by the next words...

19 Then it shall be, if you by any means forget the LORD your God, and follow other gods, and serve them and worship them, I testify against you this day that you shall surely perish.

There is a stress in the Hebrew that is missed in the English. Twice, Moses repeats the same word to intensify the warning – “If forgetting you forget...perishing you will perish.”

However, the first repetition is second person singular – “if you, Israel, forget,” while the second repetition is second person plural – “you (all) of Israel will perish.” It is a hugely important change. The Lord does not say that Israel will perish, only those of Israel will perish.

Israel the nation must be attentive to the words being presented to them. If not, punishment will come upon Israel the people.

The Lord will only establish His covenant with the fathers as long as Israel remembers the Lord. In forgetting Him, and in serving other gods, the promised curses of the Mosaic covenant will be meted out upon them.

This was true in the exile by the Assyrians, it was true in the exile by the Babylonians, and it was true in the exile by the Romans. Israel perished because they forgot the Lord. And again, Moses says to them...

²⁰ As the nations which the LORD destroys before you, so you shall perish,

The word translated here as “nations” is goyim. It is the plural of goy, meaning a gentile. Thus, it can mean nations, gentiles, people, heathen, etc. It is even used to speak of Israel as a people at times, such as in Exodus 19:6 (and etc).

Out of twenty-seven translations checked for this sermon, all twenty-seven say “nations.” And they are all incorrect. Moses is being absolutely specific. If Israel (the nation) forgets, Israel (the people) will perish.

Now in this verse, it says, “As the gentiles (or people) whom the Lord destroys before you (plural), so you (plural) shall perish.” A comparison is not being made to the nation of Israel, but to the people of Israel. Otherwise, it would mean that Israel (the nation) would perish like all the other nations.

The importance of this is immense. Moses has been speaking to Israel in the singular since we started today, and indeed since verse 1 of the chapter when the only other second person plurals were used.

Only in the last clause of verse 19 does he switch to the plural. That continues here. The change is so obvious and striking, and yet it is completely passed over by the hand of the translators, as if the Lord could be unfaithful to His promises. Such will never be the case.

What is happening, is that Moses is now telling the people that they are actually no different as individuals than the people of the nations whom they are to dispossess.

They will be treated exactly the same. Though Israel, the nation, is peculiar and unique, Israel the people are... just people – something I'm sure they would hate to hear. Moses tells them that they, like the peoples whom the Lord destroys before them, will likewise be destroyed...

20 (fin) because you would not be obedient to the voice of the LORD your God.

Here Moses uses the word eqev, or “because,” for the second and last time in Deuteronomy. It was used in verse 7:12, and now here. It speaks of consequence and so “because” is fine. But I will again explain the word’s etymology to help you get its meaning.

It comes from the verb aqav, meaning the hind part, or following after. That comes from the noun aqev, meaning the heel, or a footprint. What Moses is conveying is that one thing will be the consequence of the other. Just as the peoples of the land were vile and were set to perish, the people of Israel can expect the same for their conduct. Where one foot steps, so will the next.

As I was typing the sermon for you today, I came to verse 19 and the change to the plural and it brought tears to my eyes. Before reading the Hebrew, I couldn't reconcile in my mind how the nation could be treated the same as the other nations.

When I realized the change to the second person, plural, I was moved enough to message Sergio, and he and I shared a few messages as I conveyed the faithfulness of God to him concerning Israel.

The word of the Lord is about many things, but one of the things it is clearly and unambiguously about is God's faithfulness. The Lord made a covenant with Israel, and He will never, never, never break faithfulness with them. As a nation, they will stand. Salvation came at their calling and it continues on forever.

As a group of people, they will perish – not entirely, but in relation to their conduct before Him. Looking for a New Testament parallel to the passage we have looked at today, we come to 2 Peter 1. There, Peter speaks of the calling of each person, the call to put their faith into practice, and of the consequences for not doing so.

Like national Israel, the Lord has made a covenant with us that He will never break. This goes so far as our actually forgetting the Lord completely. Like Israel who has done just that, and remains a nation, we can go so far from the Lord that we actually forget we were once saved, but He never will. When the terms of the covenant are met, the salvation is guaranteed. Here is how Peter explains it –

Grace and peace be multiplied to you in the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord, ³ as His divine power has given to us all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him who called us by glory and virtue, ⁴ by which have been given to us exceedingly great and precious promises, that through these you may be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

⁵ But also for this very reason, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, to virtue knowledge, ⁶ to knowledge self-control, to self-control perseverance, to perseverance godliness, ⁷ to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness love. ⁸ For if these things are yours and abound, you will be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. ⁹ For he who lacks these things is shortsighted, even to blindness, and has forgotten that he was cleansed from his old sins.

¹⁰ Therefore, brethren, be even more diligent to make your call and election sure, for if you do these things you will never stumble; ¹¹ for so an entrance will be supplied to you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. 2 Peter 1:2-11

The God we serve is awesome, glorious, and beautiful. He is ever faithful to His unfaithful people, and He will never, never, never forsake those who come to Him by faith. If you want proof of that, look to Israel. If you want reassurance of that, come back to Deuteronomy 8, verses 19 and 20 and remind yourself of this fact.

Thank God for Jesus Christ our Lord who has given us an eternal hope and an absolute guarantee of our salvation. Praise be to God for Jesus Christ our Lord. And all of God's people say....

Closing Verse: “For who makes you differ from another? And what do you have that you did not receive? Now if you did indeed receive it, why do you boast as if you had not received it?” 1 Corinthians 4:7

Next Week: Deuteronomy 9:1-6 If it were up to you, your state would be a mess... (Not Because of Your Righteousness) (31st Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

And You Shall Remember the Lord Your God

When you have eaten and are full
Then you shall bless the LORD your God
For the good land which He has given you
To Him you shall shout with joy and applaud

“Beware that you do not forget the LORD your God
By not keeping His commandments, His judgments, and His
-----statutes which I command you today
Lest—when you have eaten and are full
And have built beautiful houses and dwell in them
----- as to you I say

And when your herds and your flocks multiply
And your silver and your gold are multiplied too
And all that you have is multiplied
Listen to the warning I give to you

When your heart is lifted up and you forget the LORD your God
Who brought you out of the land of Egypt, from your distress
From the house of bondage
Who led you through that great and terrible wilderness

In which were fiery serpents and scorpions
And thirsty land where there was no water to drink
Who brought water for you out of the flinty rock
You must stop, consider, and think

Who fed you in the wilderness with manna
Which your fathers did not know
That He might humble you and that He might test you
To do you good in the end—even so

Then you say in your heart, cunningly and by stealth
‘My power and the might of my hand

-----have gained me this wealth

“And you shall remember the LORD your God
For it is He who gives you power to get wealth, so to you I say
That He may establish His covenant which He swore
To your fathers, as it is this day

Then it shall be, if you by any means forget the LORD your God
And follow other gods, and serve them and worship them
I testify against you this day that you shall surely perish
Famine, destruction, and mayhem

As the nations which the LORD destroys before you
So you shall perish on the path you trod
Because you would not be obedient
To the voice of the LORD your God

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 9:1-6 (Not Because of Your Righteousness)

Insightfully, and right off the bat, Albert Barnes comments on this chapter saying, “The lesson of this chapter is exactly that of Ephesians 2:8, ‘By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast.’”

As obvious as that seems once you have somebody tell you, it is not something one would normally think of while toiling away through the Law of Moses. The people have been given law, they will be given more law, and in the process, they are told – again and again – that adherence to the law is necessary for them.

However, throughout the law, and even in the passage today, more than mere observance of the law is defined. Living out the law, without an upright heart, means nothing. That is testified to elsewhere – outside of the covenant people – as we will briefly look at today.

And so, as we progress, we continue to see hints of what God is up to in our return to the paradise we lost so long ago. Adam was covered by the Lord after he demonstrated faith in the Lord’s promise. Abraham was counted as righteous by simply believing the Lord; accepting His word at face value.

People outside of the covenant line are considered upright and blameless by the Lord. And even those who were under the law have found righteousness apart from the law by a mere act of faith, as Paul says in our text verse today –

Text Verse: “Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers, beware of the mutilation! ³ For we are the circumcision, who worship God in the Spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh, ⁴ though I also might have confidence in the flesh. If anyone else thinks he may have confidence in the flesh, I more so: ⁵ circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews; concerning the law, a Pharisee; ⁶ concerning zeal, persecuting the church; concerning the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

⁷ But what things were gain to me, these I have counted loss for Christ. ⁸ Yet indeed I also count all things loss for the excellence of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them as rubbish, that I may gain Christ ⁹ and be found in Him, not having my own righteousness, which is from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith; ¹⁰ that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being conformed to His death, ¹¹ if, by any means, I may attain to the resurrection from the dead.” Philippians 3:2-12

Israel is being schooled on what pleases the Lord. Through Israel’s schooling, we too can be instructed. Their history is recorded for exactly that reason, and it is a history that calls out for something more than anything they, or we, can bring out of ourselves.

Rather, it calls out for a yielding to God and a submission to what He offers at whatever time in history we live. We will see that today, and we will also begin a short chiasm with our last verse from our text today. As it begins there, we will lay it out today and then go through the rest of it next week.

Deuteronomy 9:6-13 – Breaking the Covenant

While Moses was on the mountain of God (6/3/2008 – refined in 2020)

a 9:6 You are a stiff-necked people

---- b 9:7, 8 You who came out of Egypt provoked the LORD to wrath

-----c 9:9, 10 I received two tablets of stone when on the mountain 40 days and nights

X 9:10 the words which the LORD had spoken to you on the mountain from the midst of the fire

-----c 9:11 At the end of 40 days and nights, the LORD gave me the two tablets of stone

----b 9:12 The people who came out of Egypt acted corruptly and disobeyed the LORD

a 9:13: Indeed, they are a stiff-necked people

Great things such as justification by grace through faith, and interesting patterns such as chiasms, are just a few wonderful aspects of the marvels to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today, and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. As the Lord Has Said to You (verses 1-3)

¹“Hear, O Israel: You are to cross over the Jordan today,

shema Yisrael atah ober ha’yom eth ha’yarden – “Hear, Israel: you are passing over today the Jordan.” The words of Moses are as if it is happening right at the moment, and thus it is as if the action is already assured – it is happening, and it is today. Because of this, the word “today” is to be taken as at a point in time, and not literally on the day the word is spoken.

It places the speaking out of Deuteronomy in the light of one moment in time – regardless as to how long that time is. When we speak of “the Day of the Lord,” it doesn’t mean a single day, but a period of time that is set before the people of the world, regardless as to its actual length.

This then takes us back to the thought of the previous chapter. Moses reminded the people to observe the commandment of the Lord when they went in to possess the land. He recounted the Lord’s care of the people in the wilderness, showing them that their chastening was a part of their instruction.

Just as the Lord cared for them, so He would do so in Canaan, but they were to remember that it was the Lord who brought them in, not they themselves. To complete the chapter, he said –

“And you shall remember the LORD your God, for it is He who gives you power to get wealth, that He may establish His covenant which He swore to your fathers, as it is this day. ¹⁹ Then it shall be, if you by any means forget the LORD your God, and follow other gods, and serve them and worship them, I testify against you this day that you shall surely perish. ²⁰ As the nations which the LORD destroys before you, so you shall perish, because you would not be obedient to the voice of the LORD your God.” Deuteronomy 8:18-20

Now, Moses continues the instruction of “this day” by explaining what those nations the Lord will destroy before them are like...

^{1 (con’t)} and go in to dispossess nations greater and mightier than yourself,

The thought here rotates back to the words of Chapter 7 –

“When the LORD your God brings you into the land which you go to possess, and has cast out many nations before you, the Hittites and the Girgashites and the Amorites and the Canaanites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than you,” Deuteronomy 7:1

Moses has already said who they will face. He has also explained that not only are the inhabitants jointly greater and mightier than Israel, they are individually greater and mightier than they are. And yet, they will possess the land because they will dispossess the inhabitants of the land. And this, despite them having...

¹ (con't) cities great and fortified up to heaven,

arim gedoloth u-betsuroth bashamayim – “cities great and fortified in the heavens.” Here Moses uses the exact same words that the moaners of Israel spoke in Deuteronomy 1:28, as they complained about the land when it was first presented to them –

“The people are greater and taller than we; the cities are great and fortified up to heaven;” Deuteronomy 1:28

Like at that time, Moses’ words now contain no article before “cities.” Also, the word “heavens” is plural and prefixed by an article – “in the heavens.” The words would normally be expected to elicit awe and fear as Moses repeats this hyperbolic statement that goes all the way back to Genesis 11. There, it said that the people determined to build a tower “whose top is in the heavens.”

The idea is that to any other army, those in Canaan would seem like gods, dwelling in inaccessible strongholds that could not be defeated. However, the Lord was to be with Israel, and so the victory was assured. Paul uses Moses’ terminology in Ephesians 6 to make a spiritual application of what is stated here –

“For our battle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the world powers of this darkness, against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavens.” Ephesians 6:12 (Holman)

Paul, being trained in the Law of Moses as a Pharisee, and then coming to Christ who is the fulfillment of the law, was able to see the direct connection between what occurred with Israel in a temporal way and what believers now face on a spiritual level.

Just as Moses reminds Israel that it is the Lord who made the victory possible, and who was then due the glory of it, so Paul makes the same connection, saying that we prevail when we put on the whole armor of God. If it is the armor of God that makes the victory possible, then it is the Lord who is to receive the glory. With this advanced understanding, Moses continues...

² a people great and tall, the descendants of the Anakim,

Again, Moses reaches back to the second clause of the same verse from Deuteronomy 1–

“moreover we have seen the sons of the Anakim there.” Deuteronomy 1:28

He is taking the words of the pusillanimous people who stood at the door of Canaan, and he is turning them around for this new generation to consider and understand. The Lord is, in fact, with Israel. They didn't just have the Exodus from Egypt, but they also had the Lord's care of them throughout the wilderness wanderings.

This is why in Chapter 7 Moses so carefully explained the Lord's care of them in the wilderness. As we saw then, it was to demonstrate 1) His greatness in not destroying them for rejecting Him, 2) that it is by His power that the inheritance is acquired because they are the “least of all the peoples,” 3) His love for them as a people, and 4) His faithfulness to the oath He swore to their fathers.

As was noted then concerning the third point, the Lord's love for Israel is one originally based on His love for the fathers. There is nothing intrinsically worthy of that love in them, but rather because of His nature – which is love – He then directs it to those of the covenant promises.

Before going on, we have to remind ourselves of what all of this is typologically representing, meaning salvation and obtaining a heavenly inheritance in Christ.

Israel had rejected the Lord's offer of Canaan after they left Mount Sinai. Because of that, they were sent into exile in the wilderness. And yet, they were preserved as a people through that exile. The land now stands before them, but it must be acquired through faith – the same faith that their fathers lacked.

That scenario pictured Israel's rejection of Christ, their exile among the nations, their preservation as a people because of the four points just noted a minute ago, and His offer to them – once again – to enter the inheritance.

What the Gentiles received, by faith, two thousand years ago, will be offered once again to Israel. It is good to keep reminding ourselves of the typology so that we don't get too far from what the Lord is telling us.

For those in the world who have never received Christ, or who are attempting to earn God's favor through the law, the offer is being shouted out for them to consider – “Just look at the Lord's faithfulness to unfaithful Israel! Consider it, take it to heart, and come to Christ through faith. The inheritance awaits!” For now, we return to Moses' ongoing words to the people...

² (con't) whom you know, and of whom you heard it said, 'Who can stand before the descendants of Anak?'

The words of Moses bear an emphasis, asher atah yadata v'atah shamata – “which you know and you heard.” The people standing before Moses now had heard the words of their fathers after the spies' report, which said –

“There we saw the giants (the descendants of Anak came from the giants); and we were like grasshoppers in our own sight, and so we were in their sight.”

-Numbers 13:33

The spies described the Anakim, and out went the word throughout the camp. Though it is not recorded before, Moses ironically repeats what the people called out, “Who can stand before the descendants of Anak?”

Egypt had been destroyed, water came from the rock, manna came to the people daily, the law had been received accompanied by the terrible and awesome display of the Lord, and on and on... and yet! The people worried about the descendants of Anak!

In their faithless conduct, they were rewarded for that conduct – death in the wilderness. And it was those standing before Moses now who had seen these things with their own eyes. They had watched their grandparents and parents die in the wilderness...

³Therefore understand today that the LORD your God is He who goes over before you as a consuming fire.

The Hebrew bears a strong emphasis and uses a verb to describe the Lord: v'yadata ha'yom ki Yehovah elohekha hu ha'ober lephanekha esh okelah – “And understand today, for Yehovah your God, He, the Passer Over before your face, fire consuming.”

In other words, “What your fathers failed to accept, you are to now understand and to acknowledge. The Lord is the One who is the Passer Over before you. He is the consuming fire.

The sight of the Lord on the mountain was, to the people, like a consuming fire. The fire of the Lord came out to consume the offerings on the altar, the fire of the Lord consumed the moaners at Kibroth Hattaavah, and the fire of the Lord consumed the two hundred and fifty rebels.

The people had seen these and other such things, and they had survived. If the Lord wanted to, He could have destroyed them all. The fact that they were there on the shore of the Jordan after the many years in the wilderness testified to the fact that the Lord both had positive intentions for them, and that He had the power and ability to destroy their enemies before them. As Moses says...

³ (con't) He will destroy them and bring them down before you;

Again, the Hebrew is emphatic: hu yashmidem v'hu yakniem lephanekha – “He will overthrow them, and He will humble them before your face.” The path will be cleared, and every obstacle will be removed from before Israel.

Further, in the use of the word translated as “bring them down,” Moses is making a pun. The word is kana, the root of Canaan. It signifies to humble. The Lord is the one who will humble those who are humbled. In this, it will allow for what will then be a synergistic accomplishment, as is seen in the next words...

³ (con't) so you shall drive them out and destroy them quickly,

Using two different words than the previous clause, Moses says, v'horashtam v'haabadtam maher – “and you shall dispossess them, and you shall annihilate them quickly.” The words are not in any way contradictory to Chapter 7, where it uses the same word as here which is translated as “quickly” –

“And the LORD your God will drive out those nations before you little by little; you will be unable to destroy them at once, lest the beasts of the field become too numerous for you.” Deuteronomy 7:22

It is a subjective term, used the first time in the sense of the overall process of clearing out the inhabitants of the land. Here, it is referring to the destruction of the various nations as they are brought forward for individual destruction, highlighted by the Anakim who were just mentioned. They will be destroyed quickly.

What is important about the words stated here is that the previous clause said the Lord would accomplish the destruction. Now Israel is said to be the instrument by which that occurs – “you shall.” Thus, there is a synergy between the two.

The question before us is, “Has Jesus accomplished everything necessary for us to enter the promised inheritance?” The answer is, “Yes.” And yet, if we do not act, there will be no reception of the inheritance. The lie of the monergistic model of salvation is exposed in these Old Testament passages.

The Lord paved the way for Israel to enter the promise, but they at first rejected that path. He now sets before them the same opportunity, but Israel must choose to believe the Lord and cross the Jordan. And so, it is true with our own spiritual walk now, even after salvation.

The Lord has saved us. It is a done deal. And yet, there are battles that must be fought. We can lie down before the enemy, just as Israel could have, or we can take up the implements (Ephesians 6) of our salvation and use them to actively go forward.

Have we heard the truth? Have we been given the breastplate of righteousness? Have we been provided the gospel of peace? And so on. Of course, we have! The Lord has already accomplished all of this for us, and He has already made these things available to us.

And yet, we must do our part. As Paul says, we must “stand,” we must “gird,” we must “put on.” If we don’t, we will remain ineffective in our salvation just as Israel became ineffective in the possession of the land of their inheritance.

And when we do our part, we cannot take a mote of credit for it. We simply did what we were supposed to do because of what He has already done for us. And this is what Israel must face in the future as well. They must acknowledge that the entire process is solely of the Lord, and yet they must do their part in order to receive what the Lord has already provided.

For Israel ready to enter Canaan, they must remember the past and act upon it. Crossing the Jordan and subduing the land is as simple for them as trusting the Lord’s past performance, and then acting upon that.

For Israel in relation to Christ Jesus, they must remember the past and act upon it. They rejected Him, they went into exile, and yet they were tended to and maintained as a people through that. They will be brought forward to the place where they must face Him again. Israel must learn from their past failures, acknowledge that the Lord has faithfully proven Himself, and respond accordingly...

^{3 (con’t)} as the LORD has said to you.

Not only has He said it, He has done so repeatedly both from His own mouth, and through Moses who speaks forth His word –

“If you should say in your heart, ‘These nations are greater than I; how can I dispossess them?’ — ¹⁸ you shall not be afraid of them, but you shall remember well what the LORD your God did to Pharaoh and to all Egypt:” Deuteronomy 7:17

Understanding these things, and reflecting on them – whether speaking of Israel in Canaan, or a believer in Christ – all need to consider why the Lord does these things. It is not that Israel was righteous, nor is it because we are righteous. None should ever come to that conclusion...

*Our God is a consuming fire
He will destroy the enemies arrayed against you
Though their fortifications go up higher and higher
They will be torn down, and you shall go through*

*What have you to fear? The Lord is on your side
He has promised that He will carry you through
He will bring you near; the one without pride
It is just as He has promised to do*

*Nothing in all of creation can separate you
From the love of God that is found in Jesus Christ our Lord
Be confident of this; God will carry you through
There at the end stands our glorious Reward*

II. You are a Stiff-necked People (verses 4-6)

⁴ “Do not think in your heart, al tomar bilvavekha – “Not do say in your (singular) heart.” Translating this as “think” is perfectly fine, because the heart is the seat of reasoning and understanding. To “say” in one’s heart implies thinking something is so. Because of this, the heart is the source of many woes for incorrect thinking. As Jeremiah says –

“The heart is deceitful above all things,
And desperately wicked;
Who can know it?” Jeremiah 17:9

Moses is careful to admonish Israel (the collective – as indicated by the singular “heart”), in advance, of the error of incorrect thinking concerning what is happening in relation to their entry into Canaan. It is a lesson we also need to consider as we continue. What is the inevitable conclusion Israel is bound to make...?

⁴ (con’t) after the LORD your God has cast them out before you,

Israel will go into a land that the Lord prepared for them. It is a good and productive land, it is a land that had everything necessary for them already available to just pick up life as if they had been there for generations, and it will come through their simply acting in obedience to what the Lord told them to do.

What is it that will inevitably go through their minds, unless they are told – in advance – that it is otherwise? The answer is that they will be...

⁴ (con’t) saying, ‘Because of my righteousness the LORD has brought me in to possess this land’;

“Look at all the Lord has done for us! We must be pretty swell for the Lord to have done it. We must be deserving of what has happened, and because the Lord is righteous, we must – likewise – be righteous! We are the cat’s meow and the bee’s knees.”

Examples of this type of thinking are found throughout the Old Testament. Isaiah 65 provides a beautiful example –

“I was sought by those who did not ask for Me;
I was found by those who did not seek Me.
I said, ‘Here I am, here I am,’
To a nation that was not called by My name.
² I have stretched out My hands all day long to a rebellious people,
Who walk in a way that is not good,
According to their own thoughts;
³ A people who provoke Me to anger continually to My face;
Who sacrifice in gardens,
And burn incense on altars of brick;
⁴ Who sit among the graves,
And spend the night in the tombs;
Who eat swine’s flesh,
And the broth of abominable things is in their vessels;

⁵Who say, 'Keep to yourself,
Do not come near me,
For I am holier than you!
These are smoke in My nostrils,
A fire that burns all the day.'" Isaiah 65:1-5

Paul uses Isaiah's words to describe Israel –

"But to Israel he says:
'All day long I have stretched out My hands
To a disobedient and contrary people.'" Romans 10:21

But who is the New Testament's premier example of self-righteousness? The Pharisees. They looked to their selves as the epitome of righteousness and favor with God. They were of the covenant people, they possessed wealth and status, and therefore they thought that the Lord must truly be pleased with them.

But from what tradition did Paul arise? Yes! From the Pharisees, just as we saw in our text verse today. Did Paul deserve the inheritance? Was it because of his righteousness that it came about? On the contrary, he said, "and be found in Him, not having my own righteousness."

Paul understood that the inheritance was not because of who he was, what culture he came from, what schooling and instruction he had, or in his obedience to the law. He obtained the inheritance by faith. He crossed the Jordan, or believed in what Christ did, and nothing more. And so, in obtaining the inheritance, he wasn't there because of his righteousness. Nor was it so for us in Christ or for Israel in Canaan...

⁴ (con't) but it is because of the wickedness of these nations that the LORD is driving them out from before you.

A new noun, rishah, is introduced here. It will be used again in the next verse. It signifies a wrongdoing, but especially in the moral sense. Thus, it is wickedness. The Lord has a land of promise where Israel is to dwell. He will dwell with His people in that land. But the Lord is holy and therefore His people are to be separate from unholiness. He is righteous, and therefore the people are to be righteous.

The assumption of Israel, and the assumption of many in the church, is that because we are selected to participate in this state of holiness and righteousness that we must possess our own righteousness. This is the lie that our heart is brimming over with.

It was (and remains to this day) an infection in Israel, and it is an infection in the hearts of the church right now. But Moses is telling Israel, in advance, that they are not to claim it is because of their righteousness at all. Rather, there is wickedness that must be purged from the land.

And that wickedness is reflected in those things that are contrary to the holiness of the Lord. If Israel participates in those unholy things then they will, by default, demonstrate their own wickedness. The law is supposedly given to avoid that. As Leviticus says –

“For I am the LORD who brings you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God. You shall therefore be holy, for I am holy.” Leviticus 11:45

Why would the nations of Canaan need to be exterminated if Israel was already righteous? They have the Law! If that were a means to righteousness, then the inhabitants would not need to be exterminated. Israel could do its thing and the nations could do their thing, and everything would be fine. But such is not the case.

Now put the church in place of Israel. We are given the inheritance. That is assured already. And yet, we cannot claim it was because of our righteousness. The fact that we accepted Christ because He died for our sins means that we were sinners.

And the fact that we – we who have entered the inheritance – must put on the whole armor of God, shows us that we are still unrighteous in and of ourselves.

Israel’s position in Canaan was as a holy people to the Lord. Because of this, they were to conduct themselves in righteousness before the Lord – driving out the wicked in order to be kept from their unrighteousness.

Our position is a holy people of the Lord. Thus, we are to display His righteousness to the people among whom we dwell. The way we do that is to drive out the wickedness from ourselves, conforming ourselves to Him.

Israel is the template, the law is the standard, and perfect execution of the law is the expectation. Israel failed because the expectation was impossible for them to meet. We (Israel someday and we today) will prevail because the expectation is realized in Christ – who alone is our righteousness. This is what Israel will someday realize –

“Behold, the days are coming,” says the LORD,
“That I will raise to David a Branch of righteousness;
A King shall reign and prosper,
And execute judgment and righteousness in the earth.
⁶In His days Judah will be saved,
And Israel will dwell safely;
Now this is His name by which He will be called:
THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Jeremiah 23:5, 6

Israel is being schooled in the Source of righteousness, it is something they – in and of themselves – did not possess...

⁵ It is not because of your righteousness or the uprightness of your heart lo b'tsidqatekha u-b'yosher l'vavekha – “Not in your righteousness, and in uprightness to your heart.” Now, another new noun is introduced, yosher, or uprightness. That comes from the verb yashar, signifying what is straight or right.

Moses is rewording the previous verse to ensure that not only does Israel not think to themselves that it is because of their righteousness, but so that they know that the notion is entirely excluded.

But in these words, he goes further. In saying, “or the uprightness of your heart,” he is showing that righteousness is not an externally achieved state. In other words, as Keil says, it is “to indicate briefly that outward works do not constitute true righteousness.”

Rather, works must be of faith. If they are not of faith, then they are useless. This is more fully fleshed out by the author of Hebrews, and then the examples are used by James in some of the most misunderstood verses of the Bible.

Everything comes back to the heart and its properly directed faith in, and love of, the Lord. Understanding this, Moses says...

^{5 (con't)} that you go in to possess their land,

The pronoun is emphatic, atah ba lareshet eth artsam – “you go in to possess their land.” Not only should Israel not think the Lord is dealing with them because of their righteousness, such is definitely not the case. In them, there is absolutely no reason that they are preferred above anyone else.

The Lord could have chosen any people group and there would have been as much righteousness in them as in Israel. Rather, they are being brought in for an entirely different reason. Actually, two reasons, beginning with...

^{5 (con't)} but because of the wickedness of these nations that the LORD your God drives them out from before you,

The first reason is based on the moral nature of the Lord in relation to the conduct of the land’s inhabitants. It goes all the way back to Genesis 15, but it is also connected to the second reason. The Lord said to Abraham that He is Yehovah who brought him out of Ur of the Chaldeans to give him the land of Canaan. After that, He said –

“Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. ¹⁶ But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.” Genesis 15:15, 16

The Lord had a set marker placed upon the Amorites who dwelt in Canaan. That marker was one of incurred iniquity. When the level of their iniquity had risen to the height of His marker, as is based upon His moral character, the time for their judgment was set.

This shows the gracious and patient nature of the Lord. The promise to Abraham was made, but it would not be implemented until the Amorites had been given the chance to seek Him while He could be found.

We can know this is true because Job, a man not of the covenant people, was considered a blameless and upright man before the Lord. Among others, who were outside of the covenant line, Job was considered a “son of God” through faith in the promise of the coming Messiah, as is recorded in Job 1:6.

Moses is clear that the Lord was driving out the inhabitants of the land because of the people’s wickedness, not because of either Israel’s righteousness, or because of the uprightness of their heart. But there is a second reason, notably connected to the first...

^{5 (con't)} and that He may fulfill the word which the LORD swore to your fathers, u-l'maan haqim eth ha'dabar asher nishba Yehovah la'avotekha – “and to the end purpose to confirm the word which swore Yehovah to your fathers.” The words here are based on the Lord’s love for the fathers (Deuteronomy 4:37), and on His covenant-keeping faithfulness to them (Deuteronomy 7:8).

It is the covenant faithfulness that Moses highlights here. The love is what leads to the word, the word of the Lord is an oath, and the oath must stand because it is the word of the Lord. This oath to the fathers was specifically...

⁵ (con't) to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

l'avraham, l'yitshaq, u-l'yaaqov – “to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.” It wasn’t just to Abraham, which was then inclusive of Isaac and Jacob, but rather it was to each of them in turn. The word which the Lord swore to these men was given, it was binding, and it continues to this day.

And this brings in an important point. If the promise is made to these fathers – all three of them – and that promise is of the land inheritance, and if that land inheritance is typologically picturing Christ and the inheritance of the heavenly kingdom, then how can it be that the church has replaced Israel?

If the promise were only made to Abraham, one could make that argument, and indeed the world is full of such people. But because the promise is to Isaac and Jacob as well, and because Israel is the recipient of that promise, then it cannot be that the church has replaced Israel. No land promise is given to the gentile-led church.

The author of Hebrews specifically says that entering the land of Canaan did not equate to entering the promised rest. He proves that by citing David who wrote his words many years after Joshua was dead. Israel, the collective whole, is who is being addressed in these verses by Moses. They are consistently in the singular.

Though the earthly inheritance of Canaan is being referred to, it is only given as a typological picture of the final inheritance found in Christ. And it will come upon them someday when they come to understand what Moses finishes our verses with...

⁶ Therefore understand that the LORD your God is not giving you this good land to possess because of your righteousness,

Moses again repeats the same thought. The good land set before them is being given to the people not because of their righteousness. Rather, because of the continued repetition, such an idea is wholly excluded.

And it thus typifies the salvation of each one of us. Again, as Paul says, “For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God,⁹ not of works, lest anyone should boast.” Israel had done nothing to merit what they were being given, and the believer has done nothing to merit what is bestowed upon us by God.

These words in Deuteronomy shout out that Moses is truly the author. Any other person would have lessened the force of the constant repetition we have seen, and they would certainly have excluded our final words of the day...

6 (fin) for you are a stiff-necked people.

ki am qesheh oreph atah – “for people stiff neck you.” This is a favorite expression of both the Lord and of Moses concerning them. It is used by one or the other eight times in the books of Moses.

The phrase is normally explained as being obstinate, but it is more than that. It signifies a perverse people who want to behave in a way that is both unacceptable and unreasonable, even in spite of the consequences they will face.

It is a metaphor which finds its source in an animal which will not submit itself to yoke or bridle. It stiffens itself against the pull of the rein, even if it hurts.

These closing words of today set the stage for the many charges against Israel that Moses will lay out in the coming verses, proving to them that the term “stiff-necked” is both appropriate and just. His words will also confirm the fact that they are lacking any righteousness at all.

They are the sons of their fathers who acted corruptly from the moment they left Egypt. Moses will instruct them in how they can avoid continuing on in that vein and to be considered as right and acceptable before the Lord.

And though Moses will speak out words of law to them through the rest of the book, it will not be that law that will bring them closer to the Lord. It will be the right and pleasing state of their heart which softens their neck and makes them pliable to the reins of their Master.

Until that state is realized, the battle between the two will continue. It is a battle which continues for them today, and it is a battle that continues on in the lives of most of the world as well. The Lord has done the work, He has laid out the path to glory, and He stands as the door at the end of it for any to come through.

And yet, man stubbornly turns his neck and attempts to walk his own path. Like unreasoning animals, we buck against the goads, and we only harm ourselves in the process. The Lord cannot accept us in such a state. Only when our hearts are willing to acknowledge that we need the righteousness of Christ can we then call out for what He offers.

The good news for us is that when we do, He will hear, He will respond, and He will give us our part in the inheritance offered to His people. May you yield your stiff neck to Him today.

Closing Verse: “But now the righteousness of God apart from the law is revealed, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets,²² even the righteousness of God, through faith in Jesus Christ, to all and on all who believe. For there is no difference;²³ for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God,²⁴ being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.” Romans 3:21-24

Next Week: Deuteronomy 9:7-17 While the people stayed below, Moses climbed up higher... (And the Mountain Burned with Fire) (32nd Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Not Because of Your Righteousness

“Hear, O Israel: You are to cross over the Jordan today
And go in to dispossess nations, at least seven Greater and mightier than yourself
Cities great and fortified up to heaven

A people great and tall
The descendants of the Anakim, but don't be in shock
Whom you know, and of whom you heard it said
'Who can stand before the descendants of Anak?

Therefore understand today
That the LORD your God – He who is infinitely higher
Is He who goes over before you
As a consuming fire

He will destroy them and bring them down before you
So you shall drive them out, so you shall do
And destroy them quickly
As the LORD has said to you

"Do not think in your heart, after the LORD your God has cast
-----them out before you, saying
'Because of my righteousness the LORD has brought me in
-----to possess this land
But it is because of the wickedness of these nations
That the LORD is driving them out from before you
-----please understand

It is not because of your righteousness
Or the uprightness of your heart that you go in to possess their land
-----that He will so do
But because of the wickedness of these nations
That the LORD your God drives them out from before you

And that He may fulfill the word (His word is true)
Which the LORD swore to your fathers, to Abraham, Isaac
-----and Jacob too

Therefore understand that the LORD your God
Is not giving you this good land
To possess because of your righteousness
For you are a stiff-necked people; so you shall understand

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word

Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 9:7-17 (And the Mountain Burned with Fire)

In today's passage, Moses takes us through the account of what occurred when he was on Mount Sinai after the initial giving of the Ten Commandments. Moses is recounting this story to give weight to a point that he made in the passage we looked at last week.

For Israel, they should pay heed to what is said because it still applies to them today – in several ways. They have the same nature and character that Moses proclaimed then, and which he will explain today. They also have the same need for mercy that was needed towards the end of our passage.

It is the repeated theme of the Bible, man needs release from sin, sin comes through law, and therefore, man needs release from the law. If that doesn't happen, all that man can expect is a sad ending when he is forever separated from the goodness of God.

But please understand, this is our default position because of what Adam did. God doesn't want it this way. That is evidenced in the fact that He has gone through the entire plan of redemption, as is outlined in the Bible, to have our default setting changed. For those of us who have come to Christ, that is done. For Israel as a people, that time is yet ahead...

Text Verse: "Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah—³² not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt, My covenant which they broke, though I was a husband to them, says the LORD. ³³ But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put My law in their minds, and write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people." Jeremiah 31:31-33

Israel, the people who God covenanted with, failed to see the importance of Christ Jesus. In their rejection of Him, they remained (and remain to this day) a people bound to the law. It is a law that demands a penalty for violating it.

Moses understood that, and today he will begin to take action to rectify it for his people. But they remained a people under the law. Yes, they were granted temporary release, year by year, under the provisions of the renewed covenant they received, but even that only anticipated a future, final, and full release that can only be found in their Messiah. Someday, they will get it right.

For now, the lesson of the law continues, as does a short chiasm that we began last week. We can look at that in review before we get into our sermon verses –

Deuteronomy 9:6-13 – Breaking the Covenant

While Moses was on the mountain of God (6/3/2008 – refined in 2020)

a 9:6 You are a stiff-necked people

---- b 9:7, 8 You who came out of Egypt provoked the LORD to wrath

-----c 9:9, 10 I received two tablets of stone when on the mountain 40 days and nights

X 9:10 the words which the LORD had spoken to you on the mountain from the midst of the fire

-----c 9:11 At the end of 40 days and nights, the LORD gave me the two tablets of stone

----b 9:12 The people who came out of Egypt acted corruptly and disobeyed the LORD

a 9:13: Indeed, they are a stiff-necked people

As you can see, the center of the chiasm speaks of the words of the Lord that were spoken from the midst of the fire. And, you can see that the outer parts of the chiasm speak of Israel as a stiff-necked people. The two thoughts together don't bode very well for Israel.

Do they want to remain under this law? Do you? The very thought is suicidal because we are all a bit like Israel. We are stiff-necked and incapable of submitting ourselves to such a weight and a burden.

We all have choices to make, and we will continue to look over the choice of the law today. Hopefully you will decide to opt for another avenue, one with a light and easy yoke that you can readily submit to. That is the one Christ Jesus offers. It is a precious truth that is to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today, and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Written with the Finger of God (verses 7-10)

⁷“Remember! Do not forget

The translation is correct. There is a stress on the words: zakor al tishkakh – “Remember! Do not forget.” The words are second person singular. Moses is speaking to the people collectively. He is heavily stressing his words in order to ensure that Israel does not ever feel they deserve what they have received. In fact, exactly the opposite is true. Not only did they not deserve being granted the inheritance, the opposite is the case.

The promise was to the fathers, and they, as a group, were the recipients of it. And yet, it is they, Israel, who should have been completely destroyed for their behavior. Moses wants them to not only know it for what he will convey concerning their past actions, but for their state at any given time in the future...

7 (con't) how you provoked the LORD your God to wrath

The words of this verse take us back to last week's passage –

"It is not because of your righteousness or the uprightness of your heart that you go in to possess their land, but because of the wickedness of these nations that the LORD your God drives them out from before you, and that He may fulfill the word which the LORD swore to your fathers, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. ⁶Therefore understand that the LORD your God is not giving you this good land to possess because of your righteousness, for you are a stiff-necked people."
-Deuteronomy 9:5, 6

Moses said that inheriting the land was not because they were righteous or upright in heart. Rather, they are a stiff-necked people. He is now reminding them of that fact. It is they, Israel, who provoked the Lord their God to wrath. Again, the words are in the singular. He is the Lord God of Israel, and it is they as a nation that provoked Him to wrath. But more, it was...

7 (con't) in the wilderness.

Israel had been in bondage in Egypt. The fact that they were in the wilderness meant that they were not in Egypt any longer. That didn't come about by their own power – for they had none. Rather, as Moses said to them in Chapter 7 –

"...you shall remember well what the LORD your God did to Pharaoh and to all Egypt: ¹⁹the great trials which your eyes saw, the signs and the wonders, the mighty hand and the outstretched arm, by which the LORD your God brought you out." Deuteronomy 7:18, 19

Moses is building his case, step by step, to solidify the facts of Israel's history, its state before the Lord, and their state as the people of the Lord. They are, but it is only because of His covenant promises, and not because of anything of value in them. They had proven it to be otherwise...

7 (con't) From the day that you departed from the land of Egypt until you came to this place,

A transition takes place in these words. The Hebrew says, "l'min ha'yom asher yatsata meerets mitsrayim ad boakem ad ha'maqom hazeh – from the day which you (singular) departed from land Egypt until you (plural – you all) came to the place, the this."

This change to the plural will continue into Chapter 10. He goes from speaking to all the people collectively to speaking to them all individually. In essence, "from the day that you, Israel, departed from the land of Egypt until all of you Israelis came to this place."

The words of this clause define the term of the previous clause, "in the wilderness." They provoked the Lord to wrath when they left Egypt, and they continued to do so, even until the place where they now sat, right on the border of the inheritance. The period extends throughout the entire time of their specific calling as a people.

As this is so, it also includes their time since the giving of the law. They had entered into the covenant with the Lord, and yet they continued to provoke Him to wrath after that.

7 (con't) you have been rebellious against the LORD.

Rather than "'against' the Lord," it reads mamrim heyitem im Yehovah – "rebellious you have been with Yehovah." Using the word im, or with, makes the act especially personal. They are His people, and He is their God, and yet they were constantly rebellious with Him.

It is reflective of the meaning of the name Israel, or He strives with God. The striving can be with God, for God, or with God, against God. Moses notes they had been rebellious with Him, against Him. As this happened even until the present time, it means that the law was not something that brought them any nearer to Him. Rather...

8 Also in Horeb

u-b'khorev – "And in Horeb." The sense of the word "and" is "even." In other words, "Even in the very sight of the mountain where the Lord's glory was on display, and where you received the law. Even there..."

8 (con't) you provoked the LORD to wrath,

It is the same word that was just used in verse 7 –

7 – “You (singular, Israel) provoked the Lord your God to wrath.”

8 – “You all (plural) provoked the Lord to wrath.

Moses is probably doing this to let every person know that they are equally to blame. They cannot blame their fathers. They cannot blame “everyone else.” And, they cannot blame just a few miscreants. Rather, each and every person must shoulder a part of the blame of provoking the Lord to wrath. There He was, on top of the mountain, right in full sight. As it said in Exodus 24 –

“The sight of the glory of the LORD was like a consuming fire on the top of the mountain in the eyes of the children of Israel. ¹⁸ So Moses went into the midst of the cloud and went up into the mountain. And Moses was on the mountain forty days and forty nights.” Exodus 24:17, 18

Just because Moses was the only one at that time receiving the law, the presence of the Lord was right there, in full sight. Despite this, they provoked the Lord to anger even then...

8 (con't) so that the LORD was angry enough with you to have destroyed you.

Here Moses uses a word, anaph, that he introduced into the Bible in verse 1:37. He used it again in verse 4:21. It comes from a primitive root meaning, “to breathe hard.” In both instances, he was referring to the anger of the Lord against him, but on account of the doings of the people.

Now, he says that the anger was bakem, or “in you,” meaning with the people themselves. The Lord’s fury was so great that it was as if He was huffing against them for what they had done. Moses now recounts exactly what brought that about, saying...

⁹ When I went up into the mountain ba’aloti ha’harah – “In my going up the mountain.” Saying, “In my going up,” it ties the words to the previous verse which said, u-b’khorev, or “And in Horeb.”

The last thing Moses would have considered is that in His going up the mountain, the very mountain in which the people were located and where they saw the awesome display of the Lord – while he was up there – they would fall into apostasy. In fact, Moses highlights the reason for his going up. It was...

⁹ (con't) to receive the tablets of stone,

These words were specifically stated in Exodus 24 –

Then Moses went up, also Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel, ¹⁰ and they saw the God of Israel. And there was under His feet as it were a paved work of sapphire stone, and it was like the very heavens in its clarity. ¹¹ But on the nobles of the children of Israel He did not lay His hand. So they saw God, and they ate and drank.

¹² Then the LORD said to Moses, “Come up to Me on the mountain and be there; and I will give you tablets of stone, and the law and commandments which I have written, that you may teach them.” Exodus 24:9-12

Not only had the people seen the display of the Lord, but Aaron, Aaron’s two oldest sons, and seventy chosen leaders of Israel had also gone up and eaten a meal in the presence of the Lord. This is especially important to remember when we get to verse 20. It was only after these events that Moses then ascended alone with Joshua to receive...

⁹ (con't) the tablets of the covenant which the LORD made with you,

lukhot ha'berit asher karat Yehovah imakem – “tablets the covenant which cut Yehovah with you (plural).” Moses is continuing to make this personal for each and every person before him now. It is true that many were born after the event happened, and yet he is indicating that they are all complicit in what occurred.

The Lord had cut a covenant with them, Moses was going to get the tablets that contained the very words of that covenant, and to bring them back as a witness to the people of what they had agreed to. Moses next describes his situation during that time...

⁹ (con't) then I stayed on the mountain forty days and forty nights.

This is recorded in Exodus 24:18. It was during this time that Moses received all of the details for the construction of the tabernacle and everything associated with it, including who would fabricate everything, who would minister as priest, and so on.

The number forty in Scripture signifies “a period of probation, trial, and chastisement.” This was certainly the case for Israel while Moses was on the mountain. They were under probation and they failed to measure up. They stayed below, eventually committed their great sin, and as it says in Exodus 32 –

“‘Tomorrow is a feast to the LORD.’⁶ Then they rose early on the next day, offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.” Exodus 32:5, 6

While they were below with their false god feasting, Moses was on the mountain with the Lord fasting. As he says...

⁹ (con’t) I neither ate bread nor drank water.

This was not previously recorded in the Exodus account. Moses fills this detail in for the people to see the contrast between themselves and their conduct, and him and his conduct, before the Lord. This time of probation and trial parallels that which Jesus faced after He was baptized –

Then Jesus was led up by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted by the devil.² And when He had fasted forty days and forty nights, afterward He was hungry.³ Now when the tempter came to Him, he said, “If You are the Son of God, command that these stones become bread.”

⁴ But He answered and said, “It is written, ‘Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God.’”

⁵ Then the devil took Him up into the holy city, set Him on the pinnacle of the temple,⁶ and said to Him, “If You are the Son of God, throw Yourself down. For it is written:

‘He shall give His angels charge over you,’

and,

‘In their hands they shall bear you up,
Lest you dash your foot against a stone.’”

⁷ Jesus said to him, “It is written again, ‘You shall not tempt the LORD your God.’”

⁸ Again, the devil took Him up on an exceedingly high mountain, and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world and their glory. ⁹ And he said to Him, “All these things I will give You if You will fall down and worship me.”

¹⁰ Then Jesus said to him, “Away with you, Satan! For it is written, ‘You shall worship the LORD your God, and Him only you shall serve.’”

¹¹ Then the devil left Him, and behold, angels came and ministered to Him.

Matthew 4:1-11

¹⁰ Then the LORD delivered to me two tablets of stone written with the finger of God,

After the Lord laid out the details of the law, He delivered a written copy of it to Moses. The words are similar to Exodus 31 –

“He gave Moses two tablets of the Testimony, tablets of stone, written with the finger of God.” Exodus 31:18

In Exodus 31, it calls them shene lukhot even – “two tablets stone.” Here it says shene lukhot ha’abanim – “two tablets the stones.” This shows us that the words are not simply copied from Exodus, but that Moses is recalling to mind what he was given.

It is a subtle proof of Mosaic authorship. If this was written by another person who simply copied the Exodus account, it would have said the same thing both times. In both, however it says ketuvim b’etsbah Elohim – “written in finger of God.” This term, “in finger of God,” is then explained in Exodus 32 –

“The tablets were written on both sides; on the one side and on the other they were written. ¹⁶ Now the tablets were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God engraved on the tablets.” Exodus 32:15, 16

It is God who accomplished the task of writing the words upon the stone. It is not that Moses received the words and then chiseled out what he was told, but that the Lord Himself engraved the words upon the stone. In this, the same word for write, katav, is used both here and in Jeremiah 31 – our text verse.

The Lord wrote the law upon the tablets of stone, and He promised that He would write His law upon the people’s hearts. Each step of the process is intended to show us our need for Christ, and of how God will work through Him to make our reconciliation complete.

¹⁰ (con't) and on them were all the words which the LORD had spoken to you on the mountain

In other words, the tablets contained the Ten Commandments that were spoken out by the Lord in the presence of all of the people. Just what was conveyed to them was exactly what was written.

What this means is that what was recorded there was to be feared. The people feared the display of the Lord, but the display was to alert them to the nature of the Lord in relation to His law. The words of this clause and the next form the center of the chiasm we looked at earlier. The terror and power were conveyed because of the giving of the law. That is seen in the next words...

¹⁰ (con't) from the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly.

The people were assembled to hear the law. The fire accompanied the speaking forth of the law, and it is from where the words issued forth. The fire was to impress upon their minds the nature of the word of the Lord. As it says in Jeremiah 23:29, “‘Is not my word like a fire?’ says the Lord.”

*The word of God, written on tablets of stone
It is His word and we must obey
But for our sins, He will atone
Yes, our transgressions and sin He will put away*

*This is possible when we have faith in His promise
It is what pleases Him – faith in His word
When we are not like a doubting Thomas
He grants forgiveness when our faith is heard*

*This is the marvel of what God has done in Christ
He offers us life where once death reigned
He set the value and the condition has been priced
Through faith in His Son, eternal life can now be gained*

II. You Had Sinned Against the Lord Your God (verses 11-17)

¹¹ And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tablets of stone, the tablets of the covenant.

One can see the purpose of the set period of forty days here. As noted, it is a period of probation, trial, and chastisement. Moses didn't know this. He simply went up the mountain and received the law. He was totally unaware of what was occurring at the base of the mountain, and his reaction shows that he never expected such a thing to occur.

He, representing the law, thought that obedience to the law was possible. But the Lord already knew that this was not the case. The Lord had set the period of time, that period was now complete, and He gave to Moses the tablets as a witness to the fact that what the people heard was exactly what the people had violated.

In fact, He ties the handing over of the tablets to Moses in with exactly that thought, as is seen in the next words...

¹² “Then the LORD said to me, ‘Arise, go down quickly from here,

The words follow closely after Exodus 32:7, 8 and they carry a sense of urgency: qum red maher mizeh – “Arise! Descend quickly from this (place).” This is then followed by the same surprising words from Exodus...

¹² (con't) for your people whom you brought out of Egypt have acted corruptly;

The Lord says ammekha, “your people.” As seen in Exodus, this carries one of two possibilities – 1) The Lord is telling Moses that the people have sinned and they require a mediator to intercede for them. Or, 2) the Lord has disavowed them. The covenant which united them was broken and they are no longer His.

It is actually a mixture of both. The Lord distanced Himself from the people, but He knew the tie of Moses' blood relationship was permanent. In verse 14, He offers a new beginning through Moses, but because of Moses' faithfulness to his people, the Lord will continue the covenant between Himself and Israel. For now...

¹² (con't) they have quickly turned aside from the way which I commanded them;

saru maher – “they have turned aside quickly.” Using the same word, maher, or quickly, the Lord is tying in the command to Moses with the actions of the people. If they have turned so quickly from the proper path, you must quickly appear before them. Time is of the essence, because...

¹² (con't) they have made themselves a molded image.'

Not only had they made a molded image, but they had substituted it for the Lord. Aaron had said, "This is your god, O Israel, that brought you out of the land of Egypt!" After that, he said, "Tomorrow is a feast to the Lord." In other words, he had equated the calf to Yehovah.

The irony of this action was immense. Israel had waited for the Lord's promise to Abraham for over four hundred years. And yet, they could not wait for Moses' return from the Lord for a mere forty days. Their shortsightedness and rebellion reflected the nature of their hearts. Moses continues, showing this...

¹³ "Furthermore the LORD spoke to me, saying, 'I have seen this people, and indeed they are a stiff-necked people.

The Hebrew doesn't say "spoke," it says, "And the Lord said to me, saying." The difference is minor but significant. When using amar, or said, it signifies participation by the one being addressed. In this case, the participation will be revealed in the next verse.

For now, these words close out the chiasm that began in verse 6. Moses told the people that they were stiff-necked. He then set about to explain to them why this was so. Even at the most important of all times, while camped around the mountain of God – and just after having received the law from the midst of the fire – the people rebelled against the Lord and provoked Him to anger.

If nothing else were to be held against them, this would be enough to prove that they were, in fact, stiff-necked, just as the Lord had said, and just as Moses had repeated. They were unwilling to bend their necks and submit to the yoke of the Lord's law. Such an attitude rightly deserved the Lord's punishment...

¹⁴ Let Me alone,

hereph mimeni – "Desist from me." The word is raphah. It conveys the idea of letting go or to slacken. The Lord begins testing Moses through this word. "If you will back off, I will take action against them..."

¹⁴ (con't) that I may destroy them and blot out their name from under heaven;

The Hebrew is plural – “heavens.” It says in both Exodus and Deuteronomy that the Lord spoke to the assembly from the heavens. That was from the fire, and so now the meaning behind the fire is revealed. The Lord who spoke to them from the fire out of the heavens would turn that display of fire into judgment, blotting out their name from under those same heavens. Next...

¹⁴ (con't) and I will make of you a nation mightier and greater than they.'

This is where the use of amar is significant. The Lord “said” to Moses. That includes a sense of participation. After completing His destruction of Israel, the Lord would then build up a new nation through Moses. If Moses desisted from the Lord and stood back while He destroyed Israel, the Lord would then build up a house through him. But Moses was having none of that...

¹⁵ “So I turned and came down from the mountain, and the mountain burned with fire;

It is two separate clauses, but the symbolism has to be taken as a whole. The mountain represents the governmental authority of the Lord. Moses, or He Who Draws Out, draws out from the Lord the law of the Lord. It is he who descends from the place of governmental authority where, as it says, v'hahar boer baesh – “and the mountain is burning in the fire.”

The same fire of verse 10, where the Lord spoke mitok ha'esh, or “from midst the fire,” is referred to here. Moses represents the law coming from that place of government authority in judgment. As it says...

¹⁵ (con't) and the two tablets of the covenant were in my two hands.

u'shene lukhot ha'berit al shete yadai – “And two tablets the covenant upon two my hands.” The wording is precise and specific. The tablets were resting upon his hands. Unless they were teeny, or unless he worked out with Schwarzenegger – neither of which would be the case, and both for obvious reasons – they were on his hands and resting upon his breast as he carried them down the mountain.

The symbolism is perfectly clear. The law, the law broken by Israel – open and in full view – is coming down the mountain of governmental authority from the fire of judgment, and thus only judgment should be expected. The voice spoke from the fire, the words of command were given, and the people feared greatly.

But their fear was misplaced. It wasn't in the law, but in the display that accompanied the law. However, the display only came because of the giving of the law. Lesson: the law can only bring judgment; it cannot bring life.

¹⁶ And I looked, and behold,

The translation is precise. Moses was literally astonished at what he beheld. He had gone up the mountain to receive the word of the Lord at their request. When they made that petition, the Lord said –

“I have heard the voice of the words of this people which they have spoken to you. They are right in all that they have spoken. ²⁹ Oh, that they had such a heart in them that they would fear Me and always keep all My commandments, that it might be well with them and with their children forever!” Deuteronomy 5:28, 29

Moses was surely proud of them for their heart, and he left them feeling secure that they would persevere in that state while he was gone. And yet...

^{16 (con't)} you had sinned against the LORD your God—had made for yourselves a molded calf!

Here is Moses coming down, as instructed, with the tablets of stone. What is written in stone is permanent; it cannot be erased. The very words inscribed on the tablets were broken by the people who had agreed to them.

The law stood as a witness against them, and against what they had done. The first two of the Ten Commandments testified to this. They had another god before the Lord, and they had made it as an image, calling it the Lord. Within the span of a mere forty days, they had failed in their probationary test...

^{16 (con't)} You had turned aside quickly from the way which the LORD had commanded you.

Moses repeats the word of the Lord to him from atop the mountain. The people had turned aside maher, or quickly. Earlier, we saw that Jesus was baptized and then He immediately went through his forty days of testing. This is what happened to Israel, as Paul says in 1 Corinthians –

“Moreover, brethren, I do not want you to be unaware that all our fathers were under the cloud, all passed through the sea, ² all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea, ³ all ate the same spiritual food, ⁴ and all drank the same spiritual drink. For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ. ⁵ But with most of them God was not well pleased, for their bodies were scattered in the wilderness.

⁶ Now these things became our examples, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things as they also lusted. ⁷ And do not become idolaters as were some of them. As it is written, ‘The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.’” 1 Corinthians 10:1-7

The people had been baptized into Moses in the cloud and the sea. They were driven into the wilderness and presented with the law, and within forty days they failed. Jesus was baptized into Moses (to fulfill all righteousness) by John, a prophet of the Law of Moses. He was driven into the wilderness while under the law, and through forty days of testing, He prevailed. For now, Moses says...

 17 (fin) Then I took the two tablets and threw them out of my two hands and broke them before your eyes.

In Exodus, it says that Moses broke these at the foot of the mountain. Here, it says that he broke them before their eyes. They must have seen him coming at some point, and jointly looked towards him. At this time, and because of his anger at what he saw, he threw them down in their sight.

This shows that his act was purposeful. He didn't just drop them in a fit of passion, but what he did was intentional and specifically for them to see him do it. It, thus, signifies the annulment of the covenant.

In their agreeing to the law and then breaking it, the word of God was made of no effect. But just as important, it is actually a petition for mercy. If he wanted Israel destroyed, as the Lord suggested He would do, Moses would have brought the tablets forward and held them over the people, showing them that the coming punishment was just and asking for it to be meted out.

Rather, in their breaking of the covenant, Moses, as the designated mediator, was anticipating its annulment by destroying what the Lord had written on the tablets. This act of breaking the tablets is never mentioned in the negative by God later. In other words, it is to be considered as a justifiable act by Moses. As the mediator, the Lord has seen his actions and will next hear his petition for mercy.

But what we see here is giving us a picture of a portion of the story of redemption. It is a picture of our spiritual state. The laws of God are fixed and unchanging, but they can be annulled. In this, God knew that Moses would break them.

This first set of tablets pictures Adam. The tablets were made by God and engraved by God. Adam was created by God and he was given a law by God, but he broke that law. What Adam needed after that was mercy. What Israel needs is mercy as well. This is what Moses will petition for in our next set of verses and it is what will be granted.

In Chapter 10, we will see how this will be accomplished in another pictorial display. What is important to understand here is that the law of God is set. It cannot be amended by man. It can either be adhered to, or it can be annulled by God who gave it, but we either have to meet the law, or we will face the judgment of God. This is the message of the Bible.

God has given law to man, man has broken that law, and man stands condemned before God because of that. Israel's reception of the Law of Moses only highlights that fact. It is God's standard, and it must be met. But God gives us an option as to how that can come about.

We can attempt to meet His standard on our own, or we can meet it vicariously, through another. God does give us that option. In the first option, we will fail, and we will be condemned. In the case of the second option, if we choose the right Substitute to fulfill its demands for us, we will be saved.

And the only suitable Substitute for that to accomplish this is Jesus Christ. Only He was born without original sin, and only He fulfilled the law perfectly. It is only through Christ that we can meet God's perfect standard, and so I would ask you today to consider this and to be sure that you settle your eternal destiny with God right away. Call on Christ, be forgiven for the sins of your soul, and be reconciled to God through the perfection of His Christ, our Lord Jesus.

Closing Verse: "You are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read by all men; ³ clearly you are an epistle of Christ, ministered by us, written not with ink but by the Spirit of the living God, not on tablets of stone but on tablets of flesh, that is, of the heart." 2 Corinthians 3:2, 3

Next Week: Deuteronomy 9:18-29 During this time, will Israel be restored? (Forty Days and Forty Nights Before the Lord) (33rd Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

And the Mountain Burned with Fire

“Remember! Do not forget how you provoked
The LORD your God to wrath in the wilderness
From the day that you departed from the land of Egypt
-----until you came to this place
You have been rebellious against the LORD; you are such a mess

Also in Horeb you provoked the LORD to wrath
So you remember, and as you did do
So that the LORD was angry enough
With you to have destroyed you

When I went up into the mountain to receive the tablets of stone
The tablets of the covenant which the LORD made with you
Then I stayed on the mountain forty days and forty nights
I neither ate bread nor drank water; neither did I do

Then the LORD delivered to me two tablets of stone
-----written with the finger of God
And on them were all the words, from the day when you all
-----were trembly
Which the LORD had spoken to you on the mountain
From the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly

And it came to pass
At the end of forty days and forty nights, as time does track
That the LORD gave me the two tablets of stone
The tablets of the covenant, to take back

“Then the LORD said to me, ‘Arise, go down quickly from here
For your people whom you brought out of Egypt

Have acted corruptly; they have quickly turned aside from the way
-----which I commanded them
They have made themselves a molded image; into idolatry
-----they have tripped

“Furthermore the LORD spoke to me, saying
‘I have seen this people, and indeed they are a stiff-necked people
-----what more about them can I say?
Let Me alone, that I may destroy them and blot out their name
-----from under heaven
And I will make of you a nation mightier and greater than they

“So I turned and came down from the mountain
And the mountain burned with fire on that day
And the two tablets of the covenant
Were in my two hands as I headed your way

And I looked, and behold, you had sinned against
-----the LORD your God
Had made for yourselves a molded calf! A terrible thing to do
You had turned aside quickly from the way
Which the LORD had commanded you

Then I took the two tablets
And out of my two hands them I threw
And broke them before your eyes in my outburst
Because of my anger at you

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 9:18-29 (Forty Days and Forty Nights Before the Lord)

While going through our verses today, for those who did not follow the Numbers sermons – or for those who have forgotten what they said – we need to remember the symbolism of the law and those who are under it.

And this is not some stretch made up out of someone's head to fit a personal theology. Rather, it is exactly what God is revealing in Scripture. The symbolism of Israel's rejecting entry into Canaan in Numbers 14 is that of their rejection of Christ.

They were led from Sinai (meaning Horeb) to Kadesh Barnea, spies were sent in to inspect the land, the spies came back with a bad report, and the people rebelled. The typology was and is clear – that of being presented Christ Jesus. From there, they went into two thousand years of the punishments of the law. Paul indicates this when he describes those under the law in Galatians 4 –

Text Verse: “Tell me, you who desire to be under the law, do you not hear the law?”²² For it is written that Abraham had two sons: the one by a bondwoman, the other by a freewoman.²³ But he who was of the bondwoman was born according to the flesh, and he of the freewoman through promise,²⁴ which things are symbolic. For these are the two covenants: the one from Mount Sinai which gives birth to bondage, which is Hagar—²⁵ for this Hagar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, and corresponds to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children—²⁶ but the Jerusalem above is free, which is the mother of us all.” Galatians 4:21-26

Israel received the law, symbolic of giving birth to bondage. Israel was under that bondage until the time God set forth for the Messiah to come and deliver them from it. Christ Jesus came, they rejected Him, and the curses of the law came upon them.

However, in His faithfulness to the covenant, He has kept them as a people. His faithfulness is seen to have been established in our verses today. The words are clear, precise, and unambiguous.

Despite this, we are going to have to go back and forth and back and forth, and then we will have to go back and forth again throughout the books of Exodus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy to really get this. Don't get bogged down in it. It is typed, and it is always there for you to refer to should you forget the layout.

For now, sit back and enjoy in an hour what took me an entire, tiring, day to put together. But it was worth it. Throughout the day, I called out loud to the Lord – again and again – “Thank You, Lord. I love Your word.” It is a joy and a delight to have sermon typing day set before me. And it is a joy to have the fruits of that to set before you. And so, I now present the passage to you.

Wonderful things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. But the Lord Listened (Verses 18-24)

In the previous passage, we ended with these words –

“So I turned and came down from the mountain, and the mountain burned with fire; and the two tablets of the covenant were in my two hands. ¹⁶ And I looked, and behold, you had sinned against the LORD your God—had made for yourselves a molded calf! You had turned aside quickly from the way which the LORD had commanded you. ¹⁷ Then I took the two tablets and threw them out of my two hands and broke them before your eyes.” Deuteronomy 9:15-17

Moses now continues with the events, but he leaves out all of the detail concerning what happened at the foot of Sinai after he broke the tablets. That is recorded from Exodus 32:20-30. With that context understood, Moses continues with the narrative to this generation, explaining the events that followed, saying...

¹⁸ And I fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights;

The words, “as at the first,” could refer to either the words, “And I fell down before the Lord,” or “forty days and forty nights.” Both are true. First, Moses interceded before the Lord in Exodus 32, just before descending the mountain. There it said –

Then Moses pleaded with the LORD his God, and said: “LORD, why does Your wrath burn hot against Your people whom You have brought out of the land of Egypt with great power and with a mighty hand? ¹² Why should the Egyptians speak, and say, ‘He brought them out to harm them, to kill them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth’? Turn from Your fierce wrath, and relent from this harm to Your people. ¹³ Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, Your servants, to whom You swore by Your own self, and said to them, ‘I will multiply your descendants as the stars of heaven; and all this land that I have spoken of I give to your descendants, and they shall inherit it forever.”¹⁴ So the LORD relented from the harm which He said He would do to His people.

-Exodus 32:11-15

However, Moses' first time before the Lord was also forty days and forty nights. That is recorded in Exodus 24 –

“Now the glory of the LORD rested on Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days. And on the seventh day He called to Moses out of the midst of the cloud.¹⁷ The sight of the glory of the LORD was like a consuming fire on the top of the mountain in the eyes of the children of Israel.¹⁸ So Moses went into the midst of the cloud and went up into the mountain. And Moses was on the mountain forty days and forty nights.” Exodus 24:16-18

As you can see, the timeline is rather hard to follow. He came down from the mountain, went through the events recorded in Exodus 32, and then went back up the mountain. But even here in Deuteronomy, he will speak of those events, while off the mountain, in just a couple verses. The narrative goes back and forth, and it is not always chronological.

For now, Moses simply states that a second period of trial and probation is now set before Israel. They had to wait below as Moses ascended a second time to the Lord atop the mountain. Of this time, he says...

¹⁸ (con't) I neither ate bread nor drank water,

This is referring to the ascension to receive the second set of tablets. That is specifically recorded in Exodus 34 –

“So he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights; he neither ate bread nor drank water. And He wrote on the tablets the words of the covenant, the Ten Commandments.” Exodus 34:18

This period of ascension will be the subject of the narrative at the beginning of Chapter 10 as well.

¹⁸ (con't) because of all your sin which you committed in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke Him to anger.

The major sin was that of the making of the golden calf, but the words kal khatatkem, or “all your sin,” signifies more than just that. It includes unbelief, idolatry, ingratitude, and so on. Further, the word “your” is plural.

It wasn't just Israel as a nation, but the people individually. They had done ha'ra, or “the evil,” in the sight of the Lord. Their wickedness was so great that Moses knew he had to intercede for them. As he says...

19 For I was afraid

Here, Moses introduces a new word into Scripture, yagor, or to be afraid. It is an uncommon word found only five times total. By introducing a new word, it is its own stress. Moses truly dreaded what might be the outcome of the matter.

19 of the anger and hot displeasure with which the LORD was angry with you, to destroy you.

mipene ha'aph v'ha'khemah asher qatsaph Yehovah alekem l'hashmid etkem – “from face the nose and the hot displeasure which furious Yehovah with you to destroy you.” The sentence is full of descriptive language. The idea is that the face of the Lord was burning with rage to the point of shooting forth flames of fury and entirely consuming the people. And yet...

19 (con't) But the LORD listened to me at that time also.

The words gam ba'paam ha'hiv, or “also in the time that,” reflect more than just his petition before going down the mountain. They include Moses' intercession for the people when they moaned in Exodus prior to arriving at Sinai, and even his intercessions for them after they left Sinai.

This is certain because he will refer to the events after leaving Sinai in just a few verses. He is speaking to the people in an after-the-fact manner, reminding them that they have been disobedient moaners and evildoers all along, and he has had to intercede for them again and again.

But, we cannot allow ourselves to get too far from the typology. Moses is shown to be the mediator of the covenant. As this is so, he is a type of Christ who is the more perfect Mediator of the New Covenant. If the Lord was willing to forgive the transgressions of Israel because of the mediation of Moses, how much more secure are we in the mediation of the New Covenant in Christ!

As Israel the nation is a pattern of individual salvation, we can be completely confident in holding to the doctrine of eternal salvation for believers. The Bible teaches nothing less.

²⁰ And the LORD was very angry with Aaron and would have destroyed him;

The words are emphatic: u-b'aharon hitanaph Yehovah meod l'hashmido – “and in Aaron was enraged Yehovah, greatly to destroy him.” This is the last time Moses will use the word anaph, or enraged. It is from a primitive root meaning, “to breathe hard.”

In verse 9:8, he used this word, saying the Lord was enraged at the people for what they did while he was on the mountain receiving the law. Now, he singles out Aaron for that same infraction, emphasizing the severity of what he did.

Not only had the people seen the display of the Lord, at the giving of the Ten Commandments, but Aaron, Aaron's two oldest sons, and seventy chosen leaders of Israel had gone up and eaten a meal in the presence of the Lord before they had made the golden calf.

Aaron not only saw the display of God in the magnificent effects that came with the giving of the law, but he had seen the Lord and dined before His glory. Could he be saved after doing such a thing as trading the glory of the Lord for a worthless idol?

²⁰ (con't) so I prayed for Aaron also at the same time.

It is wholly apparent, without it being said, that Aaron was singled out by the Lord. He had been with Moses throughout the miracles from the time prior to the exodus, he had been with Moses throughout all of the miracles since the time of the exodus, he had been at the foot of the mountain to see the sight and hear the words of law, he had been on the mountain to have a meal in the presence of the Lord, and yet, he had led the people into the sin of worshipping the golden calf.

He had not just partially, but completely walked away from the faith. His actions were wholly inexcusable and could not be any more exactly described than those Paul speaks of concerning certain believers –

“This charge I commit to you, son Timothy, according to the prophecies previously made concerning you, that by them you may wage the good warfare, ¹⁹ having faith and a good conscience, which some having rejected, concerning the faith have suffered shipwreck, ²⁰ of whom are Hymenaeus and Alexander, whom I delivered to Satan that they may learn not to blaspheme.” 1 Timothy 1:18-20

Aaron had suffered a complete shipwreck of the faith, and yet Moses interceded for him, and the Lord responded. Again, if this is what Moses was able to do as a mediator of a law of sin and death, how much more Christ who is the Mediator of the gospel that brings life!

²¹ Then I took your sin, the calf which you had made,

The word “then” is not correct. The Hebrew reads v’eth and should say, “And I took your sin.” The intercession for Aaron comes later in the chronology, not before. Concerning the words, “your sin,” that is explained by the next words, “the calf which you had made.” Their sin was a tangible fact that stood before them.

^{21 (con’t)} and burned it with fire and crushed it and ground it very small, until it was as fine as dust;

One can feel the anger in Moses’ words – “and burned it in the fire, and crushed it, grinding thoroughly, until that fine to dust.” He was utterly appalled at what they had done, and his actions – and his words of memory now – were a testimony to the magnitude of the offense.

As great as their idol supposedly was, he was determined to turn it into exactly the opposite – utter nothingness. When he could do no more to reduce it in size, he says...

^{21 (con’t)} and I threw its dust into the brook that descended from the mountain.

The result of this is explained in Exodus 32. The two accounts must be taken together to understand Moses’ intent –

“Then he took the calf which they had made, burned it in the fire, and ground it to powder; and he scattered it on the water and made the children of Israel drink it.”
-Exodus 32:20

Their source of drinking water would become the reminder of their sin. Each time they went there, it would be as if they were drinking in a reminder of what they had done to offend the Lord.

Yehovah their God, their true Source of life, was at the top of the mountain in smoke and fire. Their false idol, and the source of their shame, was there at the bottom of it drowned in the water they had to come to daily in order to drink and stay alive.

They were to remember the contrast between the two all the days they remained at the mountain. However, Moses next reveals to them that as soon as they left the mountain, they again forgot the Lord and failed to respond to Him in faith...

²² “Also at Taberah

u-ve-taverah – “and in Taberah.” Moses now continues the narrative of Israel’s constant failings. In verse 9:7, he had said –

“Remember! Do not forget how you provoked the LORD your God to wrath in the wilderness. From the day that you departed from the land of Egypt until you came to this place, you have been rebellious against the LORD.” Deuteronomy 9:7

That took them from Egypt to Sinai. In 9:8 until 9:22, he described their failings while at Sinai. Now, he progresses on to the next stage of their ongoing failings, speaking first of their time just after leaving Horeb (Sinai).

The departure of Israel from the mountain is recorded in Numbers 10. In the turn of the page, and – literally – one verse after their departure was explained, it says in Numbers 11:1 –

“Now when the people complained, it displeased the LORD; for the LORD heard it, and His anger was aroused. So the fire of the LORD burned among them, and consumed some in the outskirts of the camp.” Numbers 11:1

Without the water from the brook to remind them of their failing, they immediately began to complain, once again, against the Lord. In response, fire came out from the Lord against Israel. At that time, Moses had to intercede for them again –

“Then the people cried out to Moses, and when Moses prayed to the LORD, the fire was quenched. ³ So he called the name of the place Taberah, because the fire of the LORD had burned among them.” Numbers 11:2, 3

The name Taberah signifies a part of the area they stopped at, not the name of the entire encampment. Before going forward in time from this event, Moses quickly goes back to the last event before arriving at Sinai, saying...

22 (con't) and Massah

u-ve-massah – “and in Massah.” This was the last stop before arrival at Sinai (Horeb). There the people complained about having no water, and so the Lord provided them with water from the rock. In other words, what we see in the first two names of this verse – Taberah and Massah – is that Mount Sinai is the center of the thought.

Nothing changed in their attitude during their entire time at the sacred mountain. The receiving of the law, and the cutting of the covenant with them did not change the people.

With that sobering thought in mind, Moses next more precisely names the first recorded stop after leaving Sinai, saying...

22 (con't) and Kibroth Hattaavah you provoked the LORD to wrath.

Taberah is a part of the location named Kibroth Hattaavah. Not only did the outskirts of the camp complain, but all of them did – lusting after the foods they had left behind in Egypt. In response, the Lord sent them quail to feed them, but before the quail was finished, it says –

“the wrath of the LORD was aroused against the people, and the LORD struck the people with a very great plague. ³⁴ So he called the name of that place Kibroth Hattaavah, because there they buried the people who had yielded to craving.”

-Numbers 11:33, 34

The name Qivroth comes from qever, a grave, or a place for burial. Ha is the definite article, and taavah means desire. Thus, the place means Graves of the Lusting. Instead of craving the Source of all life, the people craved what they had left behind when they were in their bondage.

It is a perfect picture of us, being saved by Christ and yet continually going back in our hearts and desires, longing for the things Christ redeemed us from. For now, Moses is not yet done with his chiding of the people. After their short journey from Sinai (Horeb) to their arrival at the very border of the land of promise, he continues with the mournful words...

²³ Likewise, when the LORD sent you from Kadesh Barnea, saying, ‘Go up and possess the land which I have given you,’

This is the spot where, in Numbers 13, the twelve spies were sent out from to see the land and bring back a report to the people. Upon their return, they were to provide their report and then accept the word of the Lord and go forth to possess what had been promised – even since the time of Abraham. However...

^{23 (con’t)} then you rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God,

The translation is incorrect. Instead, it says: va’tamru eth pi Yehovah elohekem – “and you rebelled mouth of Yehovah your God. No command was given to go up to the land. The Lord spoke and He expected them to believe. This is confirmed by the author of Hebrews, saying, “So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief” (Hebrews 3:19).

The typology is important because coming to Canaan pictures Israel coming to the time of Christ. He came and offered them the New Covenant and eternal life. They rejected the words of His mouth...

^{23 (con’t)} and you did not believe Him nor obey His voice.

The word translated as “obey” is shama. It means to hear and be attentive to. As this was not a command, it means, “you did not believe Him and hearken to His voice.” The typology, again, anticipates Christ. It is what Paul says concerning the gospel –

“But what does it say? ‘The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart’ (that is, the word of faith which we preach): ⁹ that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved.” Romans 10:8, 9

Israel failed to believe and hearken to the word of Christ. As far as the ongoing narrative from Moses, it is at this location that the spies – minus Joshua and Caleb – came back and gave a bad report. And it is here that the people then rebelled against the Lord.

Israel's history, up to the present time, is recorded here in these verses. They were called as a people, and until they were given the law, they failed to have faith in the Lord. They were given the law, and during their time of law, they failed to have faith in the Lord. Remember our text verse, Paul says that the time of the law is equated to the receiving of the law at Sinai.

And then, they were offered Christ, symbolized by bringing the people to the very doorstep of Canaan. And yet, they failed to have faith in the Lord. In that, they were turned back into the wilderness – a picture of their exile for the past two thousand years.

Their entire history, both in the biblical narrative being spoken forth by Moses, and in what that pictures – meaning their actual historical record – has been one of failing to have faith in the Lord. Of this list of stops, the scholar Keil incorrectly says –

“The list is not arranged chronologically, but advances gradually from the smaller to the more serious forms of guilt. For Moses was seeking to sharpen the consciences of the people, and to impress upon them the fact that they had been rebellious against the Lord (see at Deuteronomy 9:7) from the very beginning, ‘from the day that I knew you.’”
Keil

It is not from the “smaller to the more serious forms of guilt.” This is certain because those infractions before the giving of the law are to be considered less serious than those after the giving of the law, and – indeed – after having seen the continued glory of the Lord in the various ways He manifested Himself.

Rather, the list is not arranged solely chronologically in order to highlight the fact that the giving of the law changed nothing in the people in regard to their relationship with the Lord. This is precisely why the Lord promised the people a New Covenant.

Here, Moses (the law) is remembering the sins of the people. In the New Covenant, their sins will be remembered no more (see our closing verse). However, one cannot truly appreciate the grace of the New Covenant without understanding the magnitude of the burden of sin in man – both apart from the law, and even more especially because of the law. Without the Christ Covenant, only sin and rebellion are remembered...

²⁴ You have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.

The Hebrew says im, with. “Rebellious you have been with Yehovah.” It is a reflection of the name, Israel, or “He strives with God.” They can strive with God for God, or they can strive with God against God. In this case, it is “against.”

From their calling as a people out of the bondage of Egypt, they have remained rebellious against the Lord, and against the law that the Lord has given them. As Israel is simply a template for the individual person called by the Lord, it is prudent that we don’t point our fingers too accusingly at them.

Even on the best of days, when we direct our hearts to the Lord in the most heartfelt manner that we can, we still fall short of giving Him all of who we are. There is always a streak of rebellion in our hearts. With his short snapshot of their history stated, Moses now returns to the thought of verse 18...

*The Lord has covenanted with you and will never forget
Even when you stray away
He will fulfill every promise, you can bet
And will bring You to Himself some glorious day*

*And this, despite yourself; so, He has revealed
And He will continue to save, because He has spoken
When You believed by faith, the deal was sealed
He has given You His Spirit as a sure token*

*And so, let us live for the Lord, remembering Him always
And let us not forget the great things He has done
Let us live for the Lord, for all of our days
For God, in Christ, has given us His Son*

*Great is the Lord and worthy of all praise
Great is our God; let us honor Him for all of our days*

II. Your People and Your Inheritance (Verses 25-29)

²⁵ “Thus I prostrated myself before the LORD; forty days and forty nights I kept prostrating myself, because the LORD had said He would destroy you.

That this is a repetition of the thought of verse 18 is seen in the words he will say in the next verse. Moses was on the mountain with the Lord, receiving the tablets and the instructions for the tabernacle and priestly service. While there, the people made the golden calf and celebrated. It was at that time, while he was on the mountain, that we read –

“And the LORD said to Moses, ‘Go, get down! For your people whom you brought out of the land of Egypt have corrupted themselves.⁸ They have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them. They have made themselves a molded calf, and worshiped it and sacrificed to it, and said, “This is your god, O Israel, that brought you out of the land of Egypt!”⁹ And the LORD said to Moses, ‘I have seen this people, and indeed it is a stiff-necked people!¹⁰ Now therefore, let Me alone, that My wrath may burn hot against them and I may consume them. And I will make of you a great nation.’” Exodus 32:7-10

In response to the Lord’s words, Moses petitioned the Lord for the people. The Lord relented, as we saw earlier in this sermon, and Moses went down the mountain to see what the Lord had described concerning their behavior.

Once down, he cast the tablets out of his hands, destroyed the golden calf, had the Levites go through the camp to destroy those who participated, and so on.

Eventually, he went back up the mountain with two new tablets (Exodus 34:1/Deuteronomy 10:1) and fell before the Lord as he did before going down the mountain. This was, again, for forty days and forty nights (Exodus 34:28). With this timeline understood, Moses now substantially repeats what he had said before going down the mountain...

²⁶ Therefore I prayed to the LORD, and said:

As we just saw, Moses had petitioned the Lord before coming down, and the Lord relented concerning destroying the people (32:14). As this is so, why would Moses need to petition the Lord to not destroy the people? The answer is then found in Exodus 33 –

Then the LORD said to Moses, “Depart and go up from here, you and the people whom you have brought out of the land of Egypt, to the land of which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, saying, 'To your descendants I will give it.' ² And I will send My Angel before you, and I will drive out the Canaanite and the Amorite and the Hittite and the Perizzite and the Hivite and the Jebusite. ³ Go up to a land flowing with milk and honey; for I will not go up in your midst, lest I consume you on the way, for you are a stiff-necked people."

⁴ And when the people heard this bad news, they mourned, and no one put on his ornaments. ⁵ For the LORD had said to Moses, "Say to the children of Israel, 'You are a stiff-necked people. I could come up into your midst in one moment and consume you. Now therefore, take off your ornaments, that I may know what to do to you.'" ⁶ So the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments by Mount Horeb. Exodus 33:1-6

In other words, Moses had stayed the wrath of the Lord concerning the destruction of Israel for the sin of the golden calf. However, the Lord had not relented concerning the complete destruction of Israel for some other future offense.

It was Moses' petitioning of the Lord now, which forever secured them from total destruction. That is seen in the renewal of the covenant in the words of Exodus 34 during this forty-day period –

So Moses made haste and bowed his head toward the earth, and worshiped.

⁹ Then he said, "If now I have found grace in Your sight, O Lord, let my Lord, I pray, go among us, even though we are a stiff-necked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us as Your inheritance."

¹⁰ And He said: "Behold, I make a covenant. Before all your people I will do marvels such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation; and all the people among whom you are shall see the work of the LORD. For it is an awesome thing that I will do with you." Exodus 34:8-10

^{26 (con't)} 'O Lord God, do not destroy Your people and Your inheritance whom You have redeemed through Your greatness, whom You have brought out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

In verse 9:12, The Lord said to Moses, "Arise, go down quickly from here, for your people whom you brought out of Egypt have acted corruptly."

Moses' got it. He understood that even after receiving the Ten Commandments and beholding the splendor and terror of the Lord, it was not enough to keep Israel from disobeying Him. In that state, He could – at any time – disinherit them and stretch out His hand and destroy them.

And so, Moses says to Yehovah, “do not destroy Your people and Your inheritance whom You have redeemed through Your greatness, whom You have brought out of Egypt with a mighty hand.”

In this petition, he mirrors his words previously spoken while on the mountain, but this petition goes beyond anything stated before. This is because they have not yet done anything else wrong. The Lord had relented from destroying them because of the calf, but He had also threatened He might destroy them for a future infraction.

Knowing this, Moses is asking for the Lord to state, in advance and without any possibility of changing His mind, that He will never utterly destroy Israel. And Moses received that guarantee. The Lord will lead them into the promise, and He will be their people. In fact, He later codified it in the written law –

“Yet for all that, when they are in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, nor shall I abhor them, to utterly destroy them and break My covenant with them; for I am the LORD their God.

⁴⁵ But for their sake I will remember the covenant of their ancestors, whom I brought out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the nations, that I might be their God: I am the LORD.” Leviticus 26:44, 45

Moses appeals to the Lord in this verse for the people “whom You have brought out of Egypt.” The Lord repeats that when He speaks of Israel, “whom I brought out of the land of Egypt.” Israel would forever stand, even in their rejection of the Lord, because the Lord spoke that it would be so.

This is the glory of the grace of God in Jesus Christ. It is grace that extends even to the complete turning away from Him by His people. He has covenanted, and He will perform.

It has taken almost an entire sermon to get to this, but this is one of the major points of the entire passage. Israel is guaranteed to always remain a people before the Lord, even when they are not His people. This is so that He might be their God.

Yehovah has spoken; it is, and it shall be – despite the conduct of the people. And this came about not because of their righteousness, nor because of their goodness. This is because, as Moses acknowledges, that is totally lacking in them. Rather...

27 Remember Your servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; do not look on the stubbornness of this people, or on their wickedness or their sin,

In this verse is a noun found only here in the Bible, qeshi, or “stubbornness.” Moses’ appeal is, as has been seen again and again, based on the promise to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

The promise was made, and it could not be revoked. But the Lord promised to destroy the people and to accomplish it through Moses. Moses, instead, petitioned for all of the people – his own stubborn, wicked family.

But more, Moses petitions this because even if the Lord established the promise through him, the people of Egypt might misunderstand. Moses’ petition, then, is truly for his people, but it is more especially for the honor of the Lord. As he says...

28 lest the land from which You brought us should say,

Here, the land is referred to as the people of the land. It is a poetic way of conveying the thought where he uses the singular “land,” but the verb translated as “should say” is plural. And their words...

28 (con’t) “Because the LORD was not able to bring them to the land which He promised them, and because He hated them, He has brought them out to kill them in the wilderness.”

It is a double attack, first against the ability of the Lord, and secondly because of the relationship between the Lord and the people. Just as an inability to bring them into the good land He promised would mean He was not the true God, so hating His people would be contrary to His initial choice of redeeming them. In such fickleness, it would – again – mean that He was not the true God.

Moses’ words here are similar to what he will later refer to in the Song of Moses concerning the Lord’s annihilation of Israel –

“I would have said, ‘I will dash them in pieces,
I will make the memory of them to cease from among men,’ ²⁷ Had I not feared the wrath of the enemy,
Lest their adversaries should misunderstand,
Lest they should say, ‘Our hand is high;
And it is not the LORD who has done all this.’” Deuteronomy 32:26, 27

The honor of the Lord – even to this day in human history – is tied up in the preservation of Israel. How people in the church cannot see this is, literally, astonishing. It shows that they are untrained in the word, unschooled in proper theology, and they have no understanding of the nature of God, nor of His covenant promises.

It is exactly why people teach and believe that salvation can be lost. What a miserable state we are in when we cannot rightly discern these things from passages that are so clear and obvious. Yes, there is difficulty in the study, but proper theology is – after all – hard work. For now, Moses continues...

²⁹ Yet they are Your people and Your inheritance,

The words are precise, and they are specific. And further, they are often repeated in Scripture. Israel is the Lord’s inheritance. That did not change, nor has it gone from a literal body to a spiritual body. Rather, they remain so. Paul says as much in Ephesians –

“Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision by what is called the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands—¹² that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world.¹³ But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near by the blood of Christ.” Ephesians 2:11-13

Believing Gentiles are brought into the commonwealth of Israel. Even if Israel is temporarily excluded from those covenant promises, it is because of disobedience and punishment, not because of rejection. Understanding this, Moses says...

²⁹ (fin) whom You brought out by Your mighty power and by Your outstretched arm.’

The final words of Moses for the passage, as he lay there before the Lord and which he repeats now to the people before him, is that Israel had nothing to do with being brought out. They were weak; He was strong. They were hemmed in; He stretched out His arm.

They could not boast in their freeing themselves, and Moses' words of the entire passage show that they could not boast that the Lord did this because they were great, righteous, deserving, or better than any others.

All of those, and any other positives they could lie about to themselves – about themselves – are shown to be false. The honor of the events, the glory of what has transpired, and the majesty of the unfolding redemptive narrative belongs solely to the Lord.

With that understood, and again remembering that Israel is a template, or pattern, of the individual believer, we must remember (and never forget) that our salvation – how the events came about, the glory of what transpired, and the majesty of including us in the redemptive narrative – belongs solely to the Lord.

He did the work, and all Israel had to do was to follow. He did the work, and all we have to do is believe. No credit belongs to us for the things we have received. Rather, all of the credit, the praise, the marvel... all of it is to be directed to the One who sits on heaven's throne, and who was willing to come and redeem us from the land of bondage and toil.

Praise God for Jesus Christ who has set us free, and who will see us through to the end that He has promised when He covenanted with us. Praise God for Jesus Christ.

Closing Verse: “For if that first covenant had been faultless, then no place would have been sought for a second. ⁸ Because finding fault with them, He says: “Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah— ⁹ not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they did not continue in My covenant, and I disregarded them, says the LORD. ¹⁰ For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put My laws in their mind and write them on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people. ¹¹ None of them shall teach his neighbor, and none his brother, saying, ‘Know the LORD,’ for all shall know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them. ¹² For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their lawless deeds I will remember no more.” Hebrews 8:7-12

Next Week: Deuteronomy 10:1-11 Moses is in the sweet zone, the Lord's anger is reversed... (Two Tablets of Stone Like the First) (34th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Forty Days and Forty Nights Before the Lord

And I fell down before the LORD in an emotional outburst
Forty days and forty nights, as at the first

I neither ate bread nor drank water
Because of all your sin which you committed on that day
In doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD
To provoke Him to anger in that way

For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure
With which the LORD was angry with you, as you know
To destroy you, which He could do
But the LORD listened to me at that time also

And the LORD was very angry with Aaron
-----and would have destroyed him for his crime
So I prayed for Aaron also at the same time

Then I took your sin, the calf which you had made
And burned it with fire and crushed it and ground it very small
-----so that calf was ended
Until it was as fine as dust
And I threw its dust into the brook that
-----from the mountain descended

“Also at Taberah and Massah and Kibroth Hattaavah
You provoked the LORD to wrath, so you did do Likewise, when the LORD sent you from Kadesh Barnea, saying
'Go up and possess the land which I have given you

Then you rebelled against the commandment of the -----LORD your God; such was your choice
And you did not believe Him nor obey His voice

You have been rebellious against the LORD, it is true
From the day that I knew you

Thus I prostrated myself before the LORD
Forty days and forty nights I kept prostrating myself as if dead
Because the LORD had said He would destroy you
Therefore I prayed to the LORD, and said:

'O Lord GOD, do not destroy Your people
And Your inheritance whom You have redeemed, a deed so grand Through Your greatness
Whom You have brought out of Egypt with a mighty hand

Remember Your servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob
Do not look on the stubbornness of this people let it not -----be this way
Or on their wickedness or their sin
Lest the land from which You brought us should say...

"Because the LORD was not able to bring them to the land
Which He promised them (that would only cause a huge mess)
And because He hated them
He has brought them out to kill them in the wilderness

Yet they are Your people and Your inheritance
Whom You brought out, safe from Egypt's harm
By Your mighty power
And by Your outstretched arm

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone

We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 10:1-11 (Two Tablets of Stone Like the First)

My friend Will Groben got his Master's Degree at Dallas Theological Seminary in biblical Hebrew and Greek. I remember him emailing me once and saying how complicated the simple Greek word eis was to translate. In fact, in his email, he said that he felt like he had broken his brain, and I believe the word eis was a large part of that.

I felt bad for him. A broken brain is a difficult thing. Can't do much good until the brain gets fixed. I broke my brain over this passage we are looking at today. It happens from time to time. There are things that are so complicated, it is hard to think them through.

This is especially true with verses 6 and 7. They seem to have absolutely nothing to do with the surrounding text, and – on the surface – they seem completely contradictory to anyone who has read the parallel passages in Numbers. Indeed, that is what Albert Barnes said about them –

“After this we have now four verses, (Deuteronomy 10:6, Deuteronomy 10:7, Deuteronomy 10:8, and Deuteronomy 10:9), which not only have no kind of connection with the verses before and after them, but also, as they stand in the present Hebrew text, directly contradict that very text; and the two first of these verses have not, in our Hebrew text, the least connection with the two last of them.” Albert Barnes

Is this so?

Text Verse: Every word of God is pure;
He is a shield to those who put their trust in Him. Proverbs 30:5

If Albert Barnes is right, then what we have is not the word of God. He gives several corrective possibilities to restore your confidence in the word. However, I would suggest to you that he is just plain wrong. So would the late scholar Charles Ellicott.

I was grateful to read Ellicott's commentary, as it saved me oodles of time and an even greater broken brain. His insights were well received, even if I didn't go with his conclusions. While typing, I did say out loud to the Lord that I can't wait to thank Ellicott someday when I get the chance.

How can I do that if he is already dead? Because death is just an insignificant blip on the way to glory. For those who have come to Christ, they should be confident that this is true. And how does such a change come about? Well, a portion of it is found in our verses today.

There is a great and sure hope that we possess, and pictures of it are indeed found in these verses. They are a small, but tasty delight found in the greater tapestry that we call the Holy Bible. Great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Two Tablets (verses 1-5)

The coming verses are closely connected to what ended our verses in the previous passage. There, it said –

“Thus I prostrated myself before the LORD; forty days and forty nights I kept prostrating myself, because the LORD had said He would destroy you. ²⁶ Therefore I prayed to the LORD, and said: ‘O Lord GOD, do not destroy Your people and Your inheritance whom You have redeemed through Your greatness, whom You have brought out of Egypt with a mighty hand. ²⁷ Remember Your servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; do not look on the stubbornness of this people, or on their wickedness or their sin, ²⁸ lest the land from which You brought us should say, “Because the LORD was not able to bring them to the land which He promised them, and because He hated them, He has brought them out to kill them in the wilderness.” ²⁹ Yet they are Your people and Your inheritance, whom You brought out by Your mighty power and by Your outstretched arm.” Deuteronomy 9:25-29

In connection with that event, but just prior to it, came the words that open our passage today. In other words, verses 10:1-3 are logically followed by verses 9:25-29. Then verses 10:4, 5 follow that. Understanding the chronology, we begin now with...

¹“At that time

ba’eth hahiv – “in the time, the that.” These words set the tone for what follows. It is speaking of the time at Horeb, as was noted in verse 9:8 –

“Also in Horeb you provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry enough with you to have destroyed you.” Deuteronomy 9:8

What is presented here is not a chronological account, but one that is rhetorical. It takes what is more precisely recorded in Exodus and lays it out in a short synopsis of what took place without regard to the order in which the events occurred.

¹ (con't) the LORD said to me,

As just noted, this logically precedes what was said at the end of the previous chapter. Without getting bogged down in the chronology which has already been provided, the main focus is on these few lines of historical narrative. Now, the Lord says...

¹ (con't) 'Hew for yourself two tablets of stone like the first, and come up to Me on the mountain

The word "stone" is plural – "tablets of stones like the first." The words here follow after the narrative of Exodus 34. There it said –

"And the LORD said to Moses, 'Cut two tablets of stone like the first ones, and I will write on these tablets the words that were on the first tablets which you broke. ² So be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning to Mount Sinai, and present yourself to Me there on the top of the mountain. ³ And no man shall come up with you, and let no man be seen throughout all the mountain; let neither flocks nor herds feed before that mountain.'

⁴ So he cut two tablets of stone like the first ones. Then Moses rose early in the morning and went up Mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him; and he took in his hand the two tablets of stone." Exodus 34:1-4

There is a difference between the first set of stones and the second that cannot go unnoted. The first set of stones was made by God. As it says in Exodus 32 –

"Now the tablets were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God engraved on the tablets." Exodus 32:16

The first set of tablets were made by God, and the words on them were written out by God as well. However, for this second set of tablets, the Lord instructs Moses to hew them and bring them up to Him. As these will be "like the first," they bear the same appearance.

They will also be used for the same purpose as well. The fact that the Lord asks Moses to make the tablets, rather than being made by Him, shows that these are to be considered just as acceptable for the bearing of the law. Otherwise, He would have again made them Himself. Along with hewing the tablets, the Lord says...

¹ (con't) and make yourself an ark of wood.

Like the number of times Moses ascended the mountain, these words provide a second difficulty. Is this a temporary ark for keeping the tablets until the actual Ark of the Testimony is made, or is this simply a reminder that the tablets are to be set in the ark once it is completed?

What seems most probable is that only one ark was made. Verse 5 seems to indicate this. And so, what seems likely is that the tablets were made by Moses, he carried them up to the Lord. The Lord gave His instruction and wrote out the Ten Commandments on the tablets. Eventually, the Ark of the Covenant was made by the artificers, and at that time, the tablets were placed in the ark –

“And it came to pass in the first month of the second year, on the first day of the month, that the tabernacle was raised up. ¹⁸ So Moses raised up the tabernacle, fastened its sockets, set up its boards, put in its bars, and raised up its pillars. ¹⁹ And he spread out the tent over the tabernacle and put the covering of the tent on top of it, as the LORD had commanded Moses. ²⁰ He took the Testimony and put it into the ark, inserted the poles through the rings of the ark, and put the mercy seat on top of the ark. ²¹ And he brought the ark into the tabernacle, hung up the veil of the covering, and partitioned off the ark of the Testimony, as the LORD had commanded Moses.” Exodus 40:17-21

If there was only one ark made, then what Moses is presenting here is simply a snapshot of the events to remind the people of the things that occurred without regard to the lesser details, the specific time frames, or the actual chronology. This will become more evident when we come to the events of verses 6-9.

The intent, then, is to highlight Israel’s times of disobedience, the mercies they received, and the longsuffering of the Lord throughout their time in the wilderness.

For now, the narrative of the tablets hewn out by Moses continues, as he recounts the words of the Lord to him...

² And I will write on the tablets the words that were on the first tablets,

It would appear that these tablets were of lesser quality. If the Lord made the first two, there would have been the perfection of the Lord's handiwork on them – both in the tablets and in the writing. However, one would think the tablets made by the hands of man would bear the imperfections of man, and only the words would reflect the perfect character of the Lord.

But as noted, it is obvious the Lord feels both sets were suitable for the purpose of conveying His words, regardless as to how the tablets themselves came to be. It is the words, then, that are considered by the Lord to have the importance above all else.

And there is the truth that the stones, though shaped through man, still came from the Lord originally anyway. It is His creation, and so the stones are His, regardless as to how they came to reflect the words which bear His moral standards. Concerning the first set that bore that moral standard, He said to Moses...

² (con't) which you broke;

Moses, who stands as representative of the law, is said to be the one who broke the tablets. The Lord reminds him of this. The Lord has Moses make a new set of tablets that will replace the first...

² (con't) and you shall put them in the ark.'

Moses will receive back the tablets, and it is he who is to deposit them in the ark. In obedience to the words of the Lord, it says...

³ "So I made an ark of acacia wood,

Three possibilities can be supposed from these words. Either 1) a temporary ark was made to hold the tablets; 2) Moses had Bezalel make the wooden part of the ark, having it ready for his descent from the mountain; or 3) Moses is simply speaking out events in an order for the people to understand that what he was instructed was accomplished.

Based on Exodus 40:20 (cited earlier), the last option seems the most likely. Moses is simply relaying the events in accord with the word of the Lord without regard to set chronology. It is no different than when it later says that Solomon built the temple in Jerusalem. The meaning is that he is the one who instructed and oversaw the building of it, just as it is here with Moses and the ark.

What is of note is that because of how the events are relayed here, Mosaic authorship is absolutely certain. Anyone else would have entered the words as they had read them from Exodus, not wanting to confuse the narrative and diminish the reliability of their cause in the process of conveying it. Moses, however, would be unconcerned with such things. For now, he next notes...

3 (con't) hewed two tablets of stone like the first,

The ark is mentioned first, followed by the hewing of the stones. And then, thirdly, Moses says...

3 (con't) and went up the mountain, having the two tablets in my hand.

With the stones prepared, Moses (the law) ascended the mountain with the stones in his hand – meaning in His possession. Upon ascending the mountain, Moses next speaks of the work of the Lord...

4 And He wrote on the tablets according to the first writing,

As noted in verse 2, it is the Lord who wrote on the tablets, despite the fact that they were hewn out by Moses, or someone Moses appointed to do it. Everything that was written on the first set was again written by the Lord on the second set. It was...

4 (con't) the Ten Commandments, asheret ha'devarim – “the Ten Words,” meaning the commandments...

4 (con't) which the LORD had spoken to you in the mountain from the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly;

This was recorded in Exodus 20, and then it was repeated to Israel on the banks of the Jordan in Deuteronomy 5, reminding them of what occurred, even before the eyes of the people. Those same words were inscribed on the tablets...

4 (con't) and the LORD gave them to me.

Like before, the Lord gave the tablets to Moses (the law). The first time he received them, he came down the mountain and cast them out of his hands, breaking them. The second time, however...

⁵Then I turned and came down from the mountain, and put the tablets in the ark which I had made;

As the first time, Moses descended with the tablets, but this time, they were tablets he had made, and upon which the Lord had written. And this time, instead of casting them out of his hands, he secreted them away in the ark, as he then notes, “which I had made.”

An important point is that the timing of an event in the Hebrew is based on the context of what is occurring. Thus, the words “had made” depend on what Moses is referring to. As he is speaking almost forty years after the event, it is in relation to what he had once instructed those many years ago.

In other words, Moses instructed Bezalel to make the ark according to the word of the Lord. That was done, and so for Moses to say, “I put the tablets in the ark which I had made,” could have been some time after descending the mountain. Hence, as we saw earlier, it is probable that only one ark was made, and he is referring to that. With this in mind, he then says...

^{5 (con't)} and there they are, just as the LORD commanded me.”

The tablets were placed in the ark, and they remained in there, even until the day where Israel sat on the banks of the Jordan, receiving the words of Moses in preparation for their entry through the Jordan and into the land of promise.

Further, they are even recorded as having remained in the ark hundreds of years later, at the time when Solomon built the temple, as is seen in 1 Kings 8:9.

1a. Pictures of Christ

With varying detail, what Moses has said in these first five verses was also detailed in Exodus 34:1-4, which we cited earlier.

There are two sets of tablets that were made. The first were by the Lord and written on by the Lord. The second were hewn by Moses and the same words as at first were written on them by the Lord. Therefore, what is written on the tablets, meaning the basis for the law, is what calls for the main attention.

The law is on both, but one set is broken while the other is secreted away in an ark. In this, we have a picture of Adam and of Christ. This first set of tablets pictures Adam. The first tablets were made by God and engraved by God. As it said in Exodus 32 –

“Now the tablets were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God engraved on the tablets.” Exodus 32:16

Adam was created by the Lord God (Genesis 2:7) and he was given the law by Him (Genesis 2:16, 17). However, Adam broke that law (Genesis 3:6).

The second set pictures Christ. They were made by Moses (Deuteronomy 10:1), but the words were still engraved by the Lord (Deuteronomy 10:2). Jesus came through man – He was not directly created by God as Adam was. Rather, His body was prepared by God throughout the history of man under law. It is reflective of the words of Hebrews 10 –

“Therefore, when He came into the world, He said:

‘Sacrifice and offering You did not desire,
But a body You have prepared for Me.

⁶In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin
You had no pleasure.

⁷Then I said, ‘Behold, I have come—
In the volume of the book it is written of Me—
To do Your will, O God.’” Hebrews 10:5-7

Christ came to do the will of God. He was born under God’s law. Thus, the second tablets were also written by the Lord.

In contrast to Adam who broke God’s law (pictured by Moses destroying the first set of tablets), Jesus never broke it. Rather, to fit the pattern of Christ, Moses secreted them away in – as it says – the ark of acacia wood. Remembering the typology of that from Exodus shows us Christ’s humanity.

The acacia, or shittim wood, is the base material for the ark. Its heartwood is dark reddish-brown and is beautiful when sanded and polished.

That pictures Christ’s humanity. He, a Son of Adam from the Middle East, would bear the same general color as the wood. As shittim is an incorruptible wood, it pictures His incorruptible nature. Though a Man, He never sinned.

Further, shittim is a thorny tree, its name coming from a root, shotet, signifying scourging thorns. The very wood testifies to the trials Christ would endure in His passion for the reconciliation of man.

It is into this ark that the unbroken tablets were deposited, signifying Christ's perfect fulfillment and embodiment of the law. On the top was placed the mercy seat, and the picture of the work of Christ as our place of propitiation before God is then seen.

Considering what we have here, it is evident that God's law is permanent – the same law was inscribed on both sets of tablets. However, being permanent, they can still be broken.

In the first, God knew Moses would break them, picturing the breaking of the law by Adam (and all in Adam). However, the second set was unbroken. In this, it reveals Christ, and all who are in Christ. It shows us that sin comes through the law, but for those in Christ, they are no longer under law, but under grace. Sin is no longer imputed to those who have moved from Adam to Jesus.

*Tablets of stone which bring words of condemnation
Words which prick my very soul
How can I live up to such a standard? I see only damnation
How can my name ever be written on heaven's scroll?*

*The words stand against me and show me my sin
They were meant to bring life, but only death do they bring
The man who lives by them, who is he? We are all done in!
From where can life come? Show me such a spring*

*So, has ended the strife! I now fully see God Himself has condemned sin in the flesh, through Jesus Marvelous words of life! To God the glory be!
Such a marvelous thing He has done for us!*

II. Inheritances of Water (verses 6 & 7)

We now arrive at a couple verses that are probably the most difficult of all to be found in Deuteronomy. So much is this the case, that they are claimed to be incorrect, contradictory, later insertions, and so on. If they were later insertions, they would not be inserted in such a difficult manner. So that can be tossed out on its ear.

As being incorrect, the Samaritan Pentateuch claims to be the correct text, realigning things as they supposedly should be. But then why would someone intentionally twist up the Hebrew text? Rather, it appears the Samaritan purposefully changed the text to avoid the difficulties. Further, the Greek matches the Hebrew.

Assuming there are contradictions is as simple as assuming that one's opinion as to why these verses are written as they are is correct, and that there are – in fact – contradictions.

It could be as simple as that Moses is trying to make a spiritual point concerning a particular issue, and he is doing it by purposefully making the text overtly complicated in the process.

One fact to note is that the other historical writings in Deuteronomy are in the first person, "We did this, and we did that." However, here they are in the third person, "The children of Israel did this, and the children of Israel did that."

Moses is obviously tying in what occurred in the reception of the tablets with what he is speaking of now. This is especially so because he will return to the time at Horeb for verses 8-11.

The NKJV makes verses 6-9 parenthetical, but this is not correct. Only 6 and 7 are. From there, the narrative returns to the time at Horeb. Because these two verses are parenthetical, we have to try to determine why this diversion is being made. He begins it with...

⁶(Now the children of Israel journeyed from the wells of Bene Jaakan to Moserah, u-bene Yisrael naseu mi'beeroth bene yaaqan moserah – "and children Israel set out from wells Bene Yaaqan to Moserah." Numbers 33:31 seems to say exactly the opposite, and so it is immediately assumed the text is corrupt, contradictory, etc. –

"They departed from Moseroth and camped at Bene Jaakan."

Bene Yaaqan means "Sons of Twisting," meaning perverting. Moserah, here, is singular. In Numbers 33, it is plural. One must assume they are the same place. Moserah comes from a word meaning bond, but that comes from a word signifying chastisement.

It could be, like several of the other locations that they visited in their travels, they simply named a particularly unhappy spot Moserah, signifying the chastisement of the place. This is especially so because it does not say they encamped at these locations as it did in Numbers; only that they journeyed.

Or, if the same location, a change in the direction of travel is as simple as recognizing that in Numbers 20, the people had petitioned to enter Edom in order pass through, but Edom came out against them and they turned back. Thus, the reversal of the order can be explained by them backtracking from the land they had previously encamped at. In Numbers 21:4, it says –

“Then they journeyed from Mount Hor by the Way of the Red Sea, to go around the land of Edom; and the soul of the people became very discouraged on the way.” Numbers 21:4

As they had been turned back, and as these are not encampments, it would explain why they were so discouraged. They were travelling in a somewhat back track way, to places they had already been to.

Other than the direction, the main difference in the names is the note of traveling “from the wells” of Bene Jaakan, or “the Sons of Twisting.” According to the words, Moserah is...

⁶ (con’t) where Aaron died, and where he was buried;

Here, it says Aaron, or “Very High,” died and was buried in Moserah. This appears contradictory to Numbers 33 also –

“They moved from Kadesh and camped at Mount Hor, on the boundary of the land of Edom.

³⁸ Then Aaron the priest went up to Mount Hor at the command of the LORD, and died there in the fortieth year after the children of Israel had come out of the land of Egypt, on the first day of the fifth month. ³⁹ Aaron was one hundred and twenty-three years old when he died on Mount Hor.” Numbers 33:37-39

Again, understanding that this is probably not the same place as Moseroth, and that the name is given to the place based on the events the people faced, calling the place Moserah, or Chastisement, fits the narrative of Aaron’s death. Even if it is the same place, it could be that Mount Hor is located at Moserah.

⁶ (con't) and Eleazar his son ministered as priest in his stead.

Eleazar was installed as priest in place of Aaron. His name means “Whom God helps.”

⁷ From there they journeyed to Gudgodah,

Again, this is different than what happened in Numbers 33. There it says they went from Bene Jaakan and camped at Hor Hagidgad, or Cavern of the Gatherers. Here, Gudgodah in Hebrew is ha'gudgodah, or “The Gathered.” Again, it doesn't say they encamped as it did in Numbers.

It should be noted that the name ha'gidgad and ha'gudgodah, are the same spelling with the exception of an additional letter, the h, at the end of Gudgodah. The “h” can simply mean in the area of Gudgod or Gidgad. Next...

⁷ (con't) and from Gudgodah to Jotbathah,

In Numbers 33, it says, “They went from Hor Hagidgad and camped at Jotbathah.” Thus, it is apparent, based on the similar spelling that ha'gudgodah and chor ha'gidgad are the same area, or a similar area, with the name slightly varied. Jotbathah, or Yotbathah, means “Pleasantness.” It is described as...

⁷ (con't) a land of rivers of water.

eretz nakhale mayim – “land wadis of water.” The word translated as “rivers” here is nakhal. It signifies a wadi. It comes from the verb signifying “to inherit” or “take as a possession.” One could then translate this as, “land of inheritances of water.”

Ila. Pictures of Christ

What we have here is a continued picture of going from the law to grace in Christ. Bene Yaaqan means “Sons of Twisting.” It is reflective of life under the law. The law is given, and those under law – from Adam on – inevitably twist it.

Here, it says that the children of Israel journeyed from the wells of Bene Jaakan. A well is where one derives his source of water. It is a picture of those under the law drawing their spiritual water from the law, and thus are Sons of Twisting. From there, they moved to Moserah, meaning Bond, but in the sense of Chastisement.

When one is bound to the law, he is in bondage to it, and in not meeting it, chastisement comes. It is at this spot where Aaron is said to have died, and where he was buried. It then noted that Eleazar ministered in his stead.

This picture was previously partially explained when Aaron's death was recorded in Numbers. The transfer of the priesthood from Aaron, meaning Very High, and typical of Christ – but who is also the line of the high priest of the law, to the son Eleazar – or Whom God Helps, represents the change of the priesthood from that which pictures Christ in his work, “Very High,” to that whom pictures Christ in His person, “Whom God helps.”

Christ, in His work, died in Chastisement for the sins of those under the law. He did this by fulfilling the law and establishing the New Covenant, becoming God's true, and final, High Priest. Being fully God, it is He who helps those who come to Him in faith.

Aaron, representative of the Law of Moses, died outside of the Land of Promise, because it is not by works of the law that one can enter, but through faith in Christ. The typology is set because the typology points to Christ.

It then says that after Aaron died, the congregation moved to ha'gugodah, or “The Gugodah,” meaning, “The Gathered.” It signifies those who are brought into the assembly of Christ. From there, it says they journeyed to Yotbathah, or Pleasantness, a place described as a land of inheritances of water. In other words, it is the rivers of water Christ speaks of in John 7 –

“On the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried out, saying, ‘If anyone thirsts, let him come to Me and drink.’³⁸ He who believes in Me, as the Scripture has said, out of his heart will flow rivers of living water.’³⁹ But this He spoke concerning the Spirit, whom those believing in Him would receive; for the Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified.” John 7:37-39

This short parenthesis was given by inspiration through Moses to supplement the narrative of the two sets of tablets. There is the broken law in us, or the fulfilled law in Christ. There is living out the law, or there is being granted the righteousness of the fulfilled law.

There is drawing water from the wells of the Sons of Twisting, meaning those under law, or there is a land of inheritances of water from the Source of true life, meaning the grace of God in Christ. In the end, the Lord is giving us beautiful pictures of Christ through Moses' words. With this understood, the narrative now transfers back to Moses' words concerning the time at Horeb...

*A greater priesthood lies yet ahead
But it cannot come when the old remains alive
Not until the first one is finished and dead
Can the new come in and begin to thrive*

*But the first cannot end until all is complete
Only when that happens can the new one come in
When the law is fulfilled, and the devil suffers defeat
Then! Joyfully then, will the New Covenant begin*

*Let us put our trust in the One who has done it
Let us look to He who died on Calvary's tree
To Him alone shall we our souls commit
Because He alone has set us free!*

III. Arise, Begin Your Journey (verses 8-11)

Prior to the parenthetical verses, the last thing that was mentioned was that Moses placed the tablets into the ark. The narrative now continues exactly by going to those who would bear the ark, Levi.

⁸At that time

ba'eth hahiv – “in the time, the that.” It is the same words that opened the chapter today. They, like those words, set the tone for what is said. It is again speaking of the time at Horeb. And so, we see again that what is presented is not chronological but rhetorical.

It is while at Horeb, and during the time between the reception of the two separate sets of tablets that...

^{8 (con't)} the LORD separated the tribe of Levi to bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD,

The holy duties, including bearing the ark of the Lord, was granted solely to those of the tribe of Levi. The priests conducted certain duties that no other Levites could do, but the tribe of Levi – as a whole – was given the honors named now in this verse. This was based on what occurred after Moses came down the mountain with the original Ten Commandments. At that time, it said –

Now when Moses saw that the people were unrestrained (for Aaron had not restrained them, to their shame among their enemies), ²⁶ then Moses stood in the entrance of the camp, and said, “Whoever is on the LORD’s side—come to me!” And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together to him. ²⁷ And he said to them, “Thus says the LORD God of Israel: ‘Let every man put his sword on his side, and go in and out from entrance to entrance throughout the camp, and let every man kill his brother, every man his companion, and every man his neighbor.’” ²⁸ So the sons of Levi did according to the word of Moses. And about three thousand men of the people fell that day. ²⁹ Then Moses said, “Consecrate yourselves today to the LORD, that He may bestow on you a blessing this day, for every man has opposed his son and his brother.” Exodus 32:25-29

Because of their defense of the honor of the Lord, He separated Levi to bear the ark. The Levites were also...

^{8 (con’t)} to stand before the LORD to minister to Him and to bless in His name, to this day.

Levites are shown elsewhere – numerous times – to praise and sing before the Lord. There were certain priestly duties that were reserved for them alone, but the Levites had many duties serving and ministering to the Lord. This was their portion...

⁹ Therefore Levi has no portion nor inheritance with his brethren;

This means that those of the tribe of Levi would not be granted a parcel of land as the other tribes would. They would be granted cities within the lands of the other tribes, and they would live off of the tithes and offerings of the people of the land.

This will be expanded on later as Israel is given the particular instructions concerning their tithes. The Lord is their inheritance, and that means that what is offered from the people, to the Lord, would be distributed to them. As it says...

^{9 (con’t)} the LORD is his inheritance,

There is an emphasis in the Hebrew: Yehovah hu nakhalato – “Yehovah, He, his inheritance.” They will possess no tribal land, but rather, the portion of the tribal lands that are dedicated and offered to the Lord would be for those of the tribe of Levi.

⁹ (con't) just as the LORD your God promised him.)

This is exactly recorded in Numbers 18. The rights and benefits of their tribe are defined there, and they will be expanded upon again here in Deuteronomy. With those words conveyed, Moses now continues further in his thoughts to the second time atop the mountain...

¹⁰ “As at the first time, I stayed in the mountain forty days and forty nights; the LORD also heard me at that time, and the LORD chose not to destroy you.

This returns to the thought spoken out in verses 9:18 & 25. There the Lord spoke of the forty days and nights that he interceded for Israel. What is obvious, is that the connection to Levi here is a part of that.

Israel sinned, but Moses called for those who would defend the honor of the Lord to come forward and kill the offenders. Levi did. Moses was instructed to make another set of tablets, which he did. He was then instructed to place them in the ark, which he did.

However, during the time on the mountain, Moses also petitioned the Lord for Israel. The Lord accepted Moses' petition and He chose to not destroy Israel. In the process, he determined to reward the tribe who had stood up for His honor. That would have been a moot point if He had destroyed the people. But in His turning from His anger, He chose to reward Levi.

In other words, the point of what is said here is actually the continued scolding of Israel for their evil behavior, the mercy of the Lord, a demonstration of what pleases the Lord, and what brought the people to the structure in which they now existed.

The Lord was angry enough to destroy all of the people, but He graciously forgave them through the mediation of Moses. At the same time, He elevated the tribe of Levi because of their forsaking even their relations and putting the honor of the Lord first. In doing so, Levi was given a special honor that would continue throughout Israel's history.

It is with these points highlighted that Moses next says...

^{*11} (fin) Then the LORD said to me, ‘Arise, begin your journey before the people, that they may go in and possess the land which I swore to their fathers to give them.’

The word “Arise” surely has a double meaning here. First, it said in verse 9:25, “Thus I prostrated myself before the Lord; forty days and forty nights I kept prostrating myself, because the Lord had said He would destroy you.”

In telling Moses to arise, it signifies that His decision was made. And that decision was to “Arise, begin your journey.” The single word conveys both events – 1) Arise from before Me; I have forgiven, and 2) Arise from this place and make your journey.

In the chronology of events, it will still be an extended period of time before they actually depart from Horeb, but the assurance has been made. The Lord had said to Moses, “Let Me alone, that I may destroy them and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of you a nation mightier and greater than they” (9:14).

Instead, Moses would lead the people, Israel. And in his leading, they would go in and possess the land promised to their fathers. At this time, Moses had no idea that this would mean an extended period in the wilderness while an entire generation would perish, but the promise of the Lord would stand, as testified to by the fact that he is there with Israel on the east side of Jordan.

Though seemingly disjointed and obscure when we started, you can see now that the passage we have looked at is marvelously placed in the ongoing narrative. Each section is carefully building up the contents of the book so that nothing is left unattended to for future generations to read and understand all that has occurred in Israel’s history.

Further, what is presented shows us the very heart of God concerning countless points of His character, and of proper theology. He wants us to know that the law can’t save, but that He can. He wants us to understand our need, and His ability to fill that need.

He wants us to shun self and to, in turn, rely on Him. And He shows us the benefits of what doing so will be. And more, the Lord is showing us, through Moses, that true mediation can overcome even the greatest of evils and offenses against Him.

In this, we can then see the absolute surety we possess. Moses petitioned for Israel for forty days and forty nights. Christ Jesus never ceases to Mediate on our behalf. If the Lord forgave an entire nation of its offences because of Moses’ pleas, how much more can we be certain that we are forever safe in our salvation because of the Lord’s petitions for us.

Let us trust in this and let us be confident in it. To say otherwise to ourselves is to raise our own faults and failings above the cleansing and sanctifying power of Christ's work. Such can never be. Rest in Christ, trust in Christ, and be confident of the effectiveness of the ongoing ministry of Jesus Christ for you.

Closing Verse: "Therefore He is also able to save to the uttermost those who come to God through Him, since He always lives to make intercession for them." Hebrews 7:25

Next Week: Deuteronomy 10:12-22 This is why to Him our shouts we raise, and to Him we do applaud... (He Is Your Praise, and He Is Your God) (35th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Two Tablets of Stone Like the First

"At that time the LORD said to me
'Hew for yourself two tablets of stone like the first, so you shall do
And come up to Me on the mountain
And make yourself an ark of wood, too

And I will write on the tablets
The words that were on the first tablets again plainly
The tablets which you broke
And you shall put them in the ark, away from the eyes of Me

"So I made an ark of acacia wood
Hewed two tablets of stone like the first as planned
And went up the mountain
Having the two tablets in my hand

And He wrote on the tablets according to the first writing
The Ten Commandments, which the LORD had spoken to you
In the mountain from the midst of the fire
-----in the day of the assembly
And the LORD gave them to me before saying adieu

Then I turned and came down from the mountain
And put the tablets in the ark which I had made
And there they are
Just as the LORD commanded me; this is where they have stayed

(Now the children of Israel journeyed
From the wells of Bene Jaakan to Moserah, so they were led Where Aaron died, and where he was buried
And Eleazar his son ministered as priest in his stead

From there they journeyed to Gudgodah, as the Lord had planned
And from Gudgodah to Jotbathah, a rivers-of-water land

At that time the LORD separated the tribe of Levi
To bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD
To stand before the LORD to minister to Him
And to bless in His name, to this day, according to His word

Therefore Levi has no portion nor inheritance with his brethren
The LORD is his inheritance, as you now know quite well
Just as the LORD your God promised him
Just as the Lord your God did tell

As at the first time, I stayed in the mountain
Forty days and forty nights; that time did accrue
The LORD also heard me at that time
And the LORD chose not to destroy you

Then the LORD said to me
Arise, begin your journey before the people as you live
That they may go in and possess the land
Which I swore to their fathers to them give

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone

We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 10:12-22 (He Is Your Praise, and He Is Your God)

Quite often in Genesis through Numbers, pictures of Christ Jesus flew off the pages. There was the surface story, and then there were reasons why the surface stories were given. The Lord would take a simple story about normal human life, and He would turn it into a picture of what was coming in the greater story of redemption, especially concerning the Person of Jesus Christ.

There has been a little of that in Deuteronomy, but much less so far. But this does not mean that Jesus isn't in the details. Rather, we have seen many hints of Him, even through the speaking out of the law. In verses like today, there are implicit hints of Him and what He would be like as well.

In verse 17, it will say that the Lord is ha'el ha'gadol ha'gibor – the God, the great, the mighty. It is an expressive term that clues us into the nature of the coming Messiah. In Isaiah 9, using the same word, gibor, it says that His name will be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace.

The term “Mighty God” is el gibor. After writing that out, he must have looked at what he had written and said, “How can that be? Yehovah is the God, the Mighty!” And to further confound him, he wrote, using the exact same words (el gibor) in the next chapter of his book –

“And such as have escaped of the house of Jacob,
Will never again depend on him who defeated them,
But will depend on the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

²¹ The remnant will return, the remnant of Jacob,
To the Mighty God.” Isaiah 10:20, 21

If one takes the Bible as a whole meal, and not just in little bite-sized nuggets, the deity of Jesus Christ comes flying off of the pages. Such is the case with our text verse today...

Text Verse: “I urge you in the sight of God who gives life to all things, and before Christ Jesus who witnessed the good confession before Pontius Pilate, ¹⁴ that you keep this commandment without spot, blameless until our Lord Jesus Christ's appearing, ¹⁵ which He will manifest in His own time, He who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords, ¹⁶ who alone has immortality, dwelling in unapproachable light, whom no man has seen or can see, to whom be honor and everlasting power. Amen.” 1 Timothy 6:13-16

Our sermon text says that Yehovah is the God of gods and Lord of lords. The psalmist (136:3) will say that Yehovah is the Lord of lords. Paul says that these titles belong to Jesus, and that is followed twice by the words of John in Revelation.

It is true that such terms, at times, can speak in various ways, but when the context demands that they refer to the same thing – as in these cases – it can only mean one thing: Jesus Christ is the incarnate Yehovah.

And so, while we read and study the book of Deuteronomy, let us continue to search for hints of the nature of God in Christ, pictures of Christ in the word, and also apply the proper context to our theology in matters of law verses grace. The law was given by the Lord for various reasons, and grace comes through the Lord for a completely different relationship with Him.

Let us hold fast to the grace and let us be thankful for the lessons of the law. These are things we just should do – to the glory of God who gave them to us. Such wonderful truths as these are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. With All Your Heart, and with All Your Soul (verses 12-15)

The last verses we looked at in the previous sermon said –

“As at the first time, I stayed in the mountain forty days and forty nights; the LORD also heard me at that time, and the LORD chose not to destroy you. ¹¹ Then the LORD said to me, ‘Arise, begin your journey before the people, that they may go in and possess the land which I swore to their fathers to give them.’” Deuteronomy 10:10, 11

After the incident of the golden calf, the Lord was upset enough to destroy the people and to make a nation of Moses. But through Moses’ mediation, He relented and renewed the covenant and the promises. The journey to the land of promise would come to pass, and the people would enter and possess. It is with this thought in mind, that Moses now begins an appeal to the people, commencing with these eleven verses...

¹² “And now, Israel, what does the LORD your God require of you,

The words are rhetorical. Moses already knows that Israel has no idea what the Lord God expects of them. If they did, he would not have had to reexplain every detail of what got them to the place where they now are.

They were told what the Lord required of them at Sinai. The words went into their ears, and they went right back out. The pattern repeated itself again and again over the many years in the wilderness.

Moses’ recounting of all of this detail is to, hopefully, get them to pay attention this time. Although, later in Deuteronomy, he will clearly indicate that he knows his words now are wasted breath. But he must speak them anyway. In order to be held accountable for one’s actions, one must first be told what is expected of him.

The word translated as “require” means to inquire or ask for. It is true that this is what is required, but it is stated almost as a treasure hunt – “What does the Lord seek of you?” He is looking for a result, but He is doing it with free-will in mind. And so, Moses’ opens his mouth and speaks out four principles, or precepts...

¹² (con’t) but to fear the LORD your God,

Precept 1) The fear of the Lord isn’t merely being afraid of His ability to destroy them. It is understanding that because He could do so, and yet instead tends to them, they were to acknowledge His rightful place above them as such.

Children know that their father has complete power over them, but unless they do wrong, they don’t need to worry. If he is a good father, they will instead know that he has their best interest in mind. They don’t need to walk on eggshells, but rather in confidence – “My father is big and strong, but he loves me. And so, I will fear him in confidence, doing what is right in order to please him.” Paul says likewise to those of the church in 2 Corinthians 7:1–

“Therefore, having these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.”

This reverential fear is then expressed in the next precept...

¹² (con’t) to walk in all His ways

Precept 2) To walk signifies the conduct of a person's life. It is how he acts in relation to his surroundings, interacts with those he encounters, and expresses himself in relation to the expectations placed upon him.

The Lord is placing Israel in a land promised to their fathers. Their fathers were promised it based on faith, and thus the people were to be people who walked in faith.

The people of the land would be their own kin, and any strangers who were not of the inhabitants who were to be removed. Their walk and interactions were to be based upon their status as kinfolk, and as people who were once strangers in a foreign land (as will be explained again in the verses ahead).

And the people were given the law of the Lord. They were not to just be obedient to it, but they were to have their hearts directed toward it, as he will explain in verse 16. Thus, their walk was to be mindful of the Lord in the conduct of their obedience. Paul says as much to us today –

“For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that we should walk in them.” Ephesians 2:10

Obedience without a right heart attitude is as distasteful as willful disobedience. To have one's heart properly directed to the law of the Lord demonstrates the next expectation of the people...

12 (con't) and to love Him,

Precept 3) Moses refers to a volitional love, but it does not exclude an emotional love. Being obedient to the precepts of the Lord without a love of the Lord leads to rote obedience, and even a contempt, for what is required.

It can even draw one's attention away from the Lord: The Lord gives the Sabbath. The people don't love the Lord, but rather observe the Sabbath to themselves. Some don't observe it at all. In this, those who observe the Sabbath, even though they don't love the Lord, accuse and mock those who don't.

The attitude becomes one of self-righteousness and of comparing oneself against others. Only when one observes the Sabbath because he loves the Lord is the Sabbath, then, properly observed.

Paul expresses this thought to the church as well, saying, “Grace be with all those who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Amen” (Ephesians 6:24). Service without sincere love will create an atmosphere that is both unhealthy and arrogant. To avoid this, Moses next says...

¹² (con’t) to serve the LORD your God

Precept 4) The word translated as serve, abad, signifies to work or serve. It can include slavery and bondage, or it can mean to till or cultivate. It is a general word that requires context to understand. The context here is that of faithful service with a right heart and certainly to include fear and love of the Lord God. Such is what Paul instructs us concerning the Lord Jesus –

“Be kindly affectionate to one another with brotherly love, in honor giving preference to one another; ¹¹ not lagging in diligence, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.” Romans 12:10, 11

Moses next expresses this in two subpoints, beginning with...

¹² (con’t) with all your heart

Precept 4a) b’kal l’vavekha – “with all to your heart.” The heart is the seat of reason and understanding. Moses implores them to use all of their intellect, reasoning, and wisdom in the service of the Lord. They are to consider him in all they do, and He is to be fixed in the mind’s eye in their service. It is what New Testament believers are to do concerning Jesus –

“My friends, God has chosen you to be his holy people. So think about Jesus, the one we call our apostle and high priest!” Hebrews 3:1 (CEV)

“Let us fix our eyes on Jesus, the author and perfecter of our faith.” Hebrews 12:2 (BSB)

Understanding this, Moses continues with...

¹² (con’t) and with all your soul,

Precept 4b) The soul is what animates a person. It is the drive behind his actions and the strength he possesses. To serve the Lord with all of one's soul is to expend himself in the service of the Lord. It is a precept likewise taught to those in the church –

“Therefore let those who suffer according to the will of God commit their souls to Him in doing good, as to a faithful Creator.” 1 Peter 4:19

It is these things that Moses directs the people to be conscious of and to put forth in the conduct of their lives. Further...

¹³ and to keep the commandments of the LORD and His statutes which I command you today for your good?

The commandments of the Lord are those things spoken directly from the Lord, starting with the Ten Commandments, but also all of what the Lord directly spoke to and through Moses.

The statutes include the word of the Lord to Moses and that which is spoken through Moses. They are those things that are prescribed or set forth as an ordinance and the like.

Understanding these things, Moses continues with an obvious reason why Israel should pay heed and do these things. He does it by first explaining the position and power of Yehovah...

¹⁴ Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the LORD your God,

The words are spoken in the superlative: ha'shamayim u-sheme ha'shamayim – “the heavens and heavens the heavens.” It is a way of saying, “everything above and in all directions. No matter which way the earth turns, all of it belongs to the Lord.

But more, it certainly is intended to include the spiritual realm itself; the highest, or third, heavens of which man has no free access to, nor understanding of, what occurs there. And more...

¹⁴ (con't) also the earth with all that is in it.

From man's perspective, the earth is where it's at. Before the age of planes and rockets, this was our domain. And even now, it is the center of our universe because it is where we live and move about.

But on this earth, there are animals and sea creatures of great power, ability, and beauty. There are lands far off, there are lands high in the mountains, and there are lands filled with wonder and delight. And there are many nations and peoples and tribes and tongues to fill them. Despite these things...

15 The LORD delighted only in your fathers, to love them;

There is an emphasis in the Hebrew: raq ba'avotekha khashaq Yehovah – “Only in your fathers delighted Yehovah.” The word is raq, which is identical to the adjective signifying thin or lean. Thus, it figuratively speaks of limitation – for example, a teeny portion among a great amount.

Out of all of the heavens and the heavens of the heavens, and out of all of the earth, only in this one line was this attachment formed. The fathers of Israel were selected by the Lord, apart from their own merit. They were given sure and great promises, and they were made to none other...

15 (con't) and He chose their descendants after them,

In other words, at a specific time in their history, a selection was made. Several generations passed in Egypt, but at the time and generation determined by the Lord, the decision was rendered. This was without any input by those selected, and there was nothing in them that merited the call. And yet the call was made specifically for them...

15 (con't) you above all peoples, as it is this day.

bakem mikal ha'amim kayom ha'zeh – “In you (all) from all the people's as day the this.” From verses 12-15, Moses has been speaking in the singular to Israel (you). In this one word alone, he switches to the plural “in you (all).” He will then continue this plural until verse 20.

The Lord could have drawn Israel out of Egypt at any given time. But it was at this specific time, meaning that point at which this group of people was chosen. Thus, they cannot say they were better than their fathers who died in Egypt, nor than those who would come after them.

The selection of the people was at the sovereign will of the Lord alone. And it was this group out of all groups of peoples on the entire earth. One can see a tapestry being woven in these words. “I am doing a thing in the earth, and I am using you in the process.”

In this, if you think it through to its logical end, the coming incarnation (which we now look back on) is seen here. “I am doing this thing, I am making decisions which are for My own purposes, and those decisions are leading to a particular end and for a particular purpose.” It is what Paul refers to –

“But when the fullness of the time had come, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the law,⁵ to redeem those who were under the law, that we might receive the adoption as sons.” Galatians 4:4, 5

Israel thinks it is all about them. But the Lord is showing that the plan, which includes them, is formed for a purpose that they are only participants in. They are actually not the center of attention at all. He is. As this is so, they must pay heed...

*He is your praise, and He is your God
Great and glorious and mighty is He Perfect are His ways; of them we applaud
The One who was and who is and who yet shall be*

*We shall serve Him with all our heart and with all our soul
We shall serve Him for all eternity
Those whose names are written in His scroll
The One who was and who is and who yet shall be*

*To Him, we look with all delight and all hope
To the One who we shall forever see
In His hand is all of creation's scope
The One who was and who is and who yet shall be*

II. He Is Your Praise (verses 16-22)

¹⁶ Therefore circumcise the foreskin of your heart,

This is a new thought introduced into Scripture. Israel bore the sign of circumcision that was passed down from the time of Abraham. And yet, the generation sitting before Moses did not possess it. That is recorded in Joshua 5 –

“At that time the LORD said to Joshua, ‘Make flint knives for yourself, and circumcise the sons of Israel again the second time.’³ So Joshua made flint knives for himself, and circumcised the sons of Israel at the hill of the foreskins.⁴ And this is the reason why Joshua circumcised them: All the people who came out of Egypt who were males, all the men of war, had died in the wilderness on the way, after they had come out of Egypt.⁵ For all the people who came out had been circumcised, but all the people born in the wilderness, on the way as they came out of Egypt, had not been circumcised.” Joshua 5:2-5

Despite their state of uncircumcision, which was contrary to the law and an obvious sign of judgment upon the people, Moses turns not to the flesh, but to the heart. In other words, without the heart, the flesh doesn’t matter at all. This is a precept that will be seen again in Deuteronomy 30 and Jeremiah 4 –

“Circumcise yourselves to the LORD,
And take away the foreskins of your hearts,
You men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem,
Lest My fury come forth like fire,
And burn so that no one can quench it,
Because of the evil of your doings.” Jeremiah 4:4

It is used one final time in the New Testament, and it explains much to us concerning what Moses is saying right now –

“For circumcision is indeed profitable if you keep the law; but if you are a breaker of the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision.²⁶ Therefore, if an uncircumcised man keeps the righteous requirements of the law, will not his uncircumcision be counted as circumcision?²⁷ And will not the physically uncircumcised, if he fulfills the law, judge you who, even with your written code and circumcision, are a transgressor of the law?²⁸ For he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, nor is circumcision that which is outward in the flesh;²⁹ but he is a Jew who is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the Spirit, not in the letter; whose praise is not from men but from God.”

-Romans 2:25-29

Moses is telling this generation that they are not right with the Lord at all. They are sitting on the banks of the Jordan because the Lord placed them there despite themselves.

As this generation pictures the generation brought back from exile who are in the land of Israel today, it shows us that they are – even now – as unclean as if they were not circumcised. Their boasting in their heritage is entirely misplaced. For now, Moses speaks on...

16 (con't) and be stiff-necked no longer.

v'arepekhem lo taqshu od – “and your (plural) neck no stiffen longer.” There are lots of people, and they have one giant stiff neck. That must end. But how does that come about?

Of this verse, Charles Ellicott uniquely translates it as a cause and effect, “Circumcise the foreskin of your heart, and ye will harden your neck no more.” That would then be comparable to Galatians 5:16, “I say then: Walk in the Spirit, and you shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh.”

His translation actually seems justified and appropriate. The cause-and-effect nature is seen in both the Old and the New Testaments –

“Nevertheless they would not hear, but stiffened their necks, like the necks of their fathers, who did not believe in the LORD their God.” 2 Kings 17:14

“You stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears! You always resist the Holy Spirit; as your fathers did, so do you.” Acts 7:51

One must first circumcise his heart. In this, the stiffed neck will end. And the reason for that is clearly seen in the next verse...

17 For the LORD your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great God, mighty and awesome,

Most English versions completely miss the abundant emphasis and poignant nature of the Hebrew: ki Yehovah elohekhem, hu, elohe ha'elohim, va'adonei ha'adonim, ha'el, ha'gadol, ha'gibor, v'ha'nora – “For Yehovah your God, HE, God of the gods and Lord of the lords, the God, the great, the mighty, and the terrifying.” Of the term, God of the gods, the Pulpit Commentary notes –

“Not only supreme over all that are called god, but the complex and sum of all that is Divine; the Great Reality, of which the ‘gods many’ of the nations were at the best but the symbols of particular attributes or qualities.”

This is certainly so, but it also includes anything of which the term Elohim comprises – angels, the departed souls of man, human judges, and so on. He is the God above all lesser “gods,” be they actual or invented. Nothing compares to Him.

Being Lord of the lords, means that all powers, sovereigns, masters, owners, and other such designations are all below Him. He is THE GOD, meaning the only true God. To Him alone is the greatness, to Him alone is the power, and to Him alone is the fear. All others receive their station and capability from Him.

Because of this, because all things stem from Him and all things belong to Him, it is He alone...

¹⁷ (con’t) who shows no partiality nor takes a bribe.

Asher lo yisa panim v’lo yiqah shokhad – “That no lifts faces and no takes bribe.” To lift the face means to regard or show partiality. All flesh stands before God on the same level and all will receive exactly the same treatment based on their conduct, not on their strength, wealth, intelligence, or for any other reason.

And, because this is so, nothing can be offered to Him to change His mind, as if He could accept a bribe. As He is the Possessor of all things, including time itself, there is nothing that can be given Him that He does not own – from eternity past, right now, and to the ages of ages. But despite all of His power and possession, He is not uncaring of His creation or of His creatures...

¹⁸ He administers justice for the fatherless and the widow, and loves the stranger, giving him food and clothing.

The nature of the Lord is drawn out much more clearly here. The same Lord who has told Israel to go in and exterminate every person in the land of Canaan – regardless of age, sex, or any other category, is also the Lord who ensures that those who are not under the ban are cared for, regardless of their lowly station, and indeed especially because of their lowly station. What this means, however, is only next revealed...

¹⁹ Therefore love the stranger, for you were strangers in the land of Egypt.

Of the previous verse, John Gill (and others) says –

“...and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment; one that is in a foreign country, at a distance from his native land, and destitute of friends; such God in his providence takes care of, and expresses his love and kindness to, by giving them the necessaries of life, food, and raiment.”

This is incorrect. Although all things are provided by God to tend to humans, He does not actively give these things to such people, nor should it be expected to be so. It would defeat the entire purpose of this verse now.

Moses says that Lord administers justice for them. He then, using the last category – that of the stranger – explains what Israel is to do. They are to love such, meaning “care for them.” He then explains the reason, “for you were strangers in the land of Egypt.” As He tended to them in their time of loneliness, so they were to act towards the lonely.

What is implied, but unstated, is that as it was with the stranger, so it is to be with the fatherless and the widow. The word translated as “fatherless,” comes from a root signifying “to be lonely.” The word translated as “widow” is from a word signifying “forsaken.”

Israel was without the Lord until He came forth to Pharaoh and said, “Israel is my son, My firstborn” (Exodus 4:22). They were as a widow until He came and betrothed Himself to them. Thus, when the Lord says He administers justice for these people, it is that He places it in the conscience of man to naturally feel compassion. Thus, it is man’s job to care for his fellow man.

The man who hardens his heart to this state is the wrongdoer. In such a state, the Lord will then judge and punish him. For this reason, among others, Egypt was so judged. Canaan will be so judged. And when Israel fails, they too would be so judged. The Lord has stated His character, and Israel is expected to emulate it. Rather than hardening their hearts...

²⁰ You shall fear the LORD your God;

Here, and until the end of the chapter, the words go back to the singular. Israel the collective is being addressed. In this verse, the words are emphatic: eth Yehovah eloheka tira – “Yehovah your God you shall fear.”

It brings us right back to the thought of verse 12, Q: “What does the Lord your God require of you?” A: “To fear the Lord your God.” But this time, it is with the emphasis – “Yehovah your God you shall fear.”

With that understood, Moses again explains what that means with three principles, or precepts...

²⁰ (con’t) you shall serve Him,

Precept 1) As explained above, and as further defined by Moses – “with all your heart and with all your soul.” In this, the service will be acceptable. Further...

²⁰ (con’t) and to Him you shall hold fast,

Precept 2) The word is dabaq. It signifies “to cleave.” One can think of sticking like glue. When Naomi told Ruth to return to her people, it says that Ruth clung (dabaq) to her. She would not let go, and she promised to never let go, but to remain with her always. It is this closeness that is implied in the words now. Further...

²⁰ (con’t) and take oaths in His name.

Precept 3) It follows after Deuteronomy 6:13 –

“You shall fear the Lord your God and serve Him, and shall take oaths in His name.”

The order of these three precepts is logical. Service is the basis for the relationship. But that service is to lead to holding fast – continuance. Only after that is established in the soul of the person should he venture to take oaths in His name. Otherwise, the oath is bound to be violated and the name of the Lord will be profaned. But such should never be, because...

²¹ He is your praise,

The words are emphatic: hu tehilatekha – “HE your praise.” Moses reaches back for a word only seen so far in Exodus 15, just after the crossing of the Red Sea, tehillah, or “praise” –

“Who is like You, O LORD, among the gods?
Who is like You, glorious in holiness,
Fearful in praises, doing wonders? Exodus 15:11

It is a word found mostly in the Psalms, but also quite a bit in Isaiah. It is where the book of Psalms, or tehillim, finds its Hebrew name. In saying, He is your praise, the entire verse needs to be considered. He is both the object of their praise –

“Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised
In the city of our God,
In His holy mountain.” Psalm 48:1

But He is also the ground of their praise –

“‘For as the sash clings to the waist of a man, so I have caused the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah to cling to Me,’ says the Lord, ‘that they may become My people, for renown, for praise, and for glory; but they would not hear.’” Jeremiah 13:11

21 (con’t) and He is your God,

Again, it is emphatic: v’hu eloheka – “And HE your God.” It is not another, nor is there another. Though Israel had many gods, and though they still have many gods, it is only Yehovah who is their God. Any other is a lie, and to cling to any other is to profane His name. They are a people because of Him, they are a people named by Him, they are a people called out for Him. It is He alone...

21 (con’t) who has done for you these great and awesome things which your eyes have seen.

Again, Moses has returned in his mind to Exodus 15:11, using now the same word as then – “fearful in praises” is now “awesome things,” or maybe more poignantly, “fearful things.” The Exodus is not the only such thing. Indeed, there had been many – all seen by the eyes of the people.

The Lord is to be feared because it is He who does fearful things. If He can do such for Israel, He will do such against Israel. The choice is up to Israel.

²² Your fathers went down to Egypt with seventy persons,

The word order provides emphasis: b'shivim nephesh yaredu avoteka mitsraiymah – “in seventy souls went down your fathers to Egypt.” Moses provides a history lesson to close out our verses today. He notes the diminutive size of Israel speaking of them as in the collective “Your (singular) fathers,” highlighting their insignificant number.

But in this, he also tells them that what happened, and what has come about in Israel now sitting outside of Canaan, was prophesied in advance...

²² (fin) and now the LORD your God has made you as the stars of heaven in multitude.

The Lord had made a promise to Abraham. Along with that promise were certain statements of fact concerning the future. Moses tells Israel that the promise has been fulfilled, and that the factual statements came true. From Genesis 15 –

“And behold, the word of the LORD came to him, saying, ‘This one shall not be your heir, but one who will come from your own body shall be your heir.’ ⁵ Then He brought him outside and said, ‘Look now toward heaven, and count the stars if you are able to number them.’ And He said to him, ‘So shall your descendants be.’” Genesis 15:4, 5

And then just a few verses later –

“Then He said to Abram: ‘Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. ¹⁴ And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. ¹⁵ Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. ¹⁶ But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.’” Genesis 15:13-15

What the Lord had told to Abraham had come to pass. Thus, not only is He “the One who has done for you these great and awesome things which your eyes have seen,” but He is the One who orchestrated them in the first place.

The divine plan was mapped out, spoken of before it came to pass, and was fulfilled as it was spoken of. Therefore, there is the absolute assurance that what Moses spoke out concerning His nature, was certainly the case. What Moses conveyed concerning their relationship with Him was inviolable, and what he would speak out concerning their future would certainly occur.

However, and this is what Israel needed to understand, the Lord did not determine these things – as if Judah was going to be the largest tribe because the Lord caused more children to be born to that tribe. Rather, the Lord knew that it would occur.

Likewise, the Lord didn't force the brothers of Joseph to sell him off to Egypt, but the Lord used that for His greater purposes. In other words, Moses is not asking Israel to have a fatalistic view of the world, nor of the life they were to lead.

They were to understand that the Lord transcends the events of human history, and He uses them through His foreknowledge of them coming about to effect His purposes. If He intervenes in human history, as He did at the crossing of the Red Sea, He does so to continue that plan for His intended end.

But Israel was to know that they were accountable to the Lord for the choices they made, the allegiances they pursued, their treatment of His commands, and of others who were to be cared for according to His word.

Later in Deuteronomy, Moses will speak to Israel of their coming failures. Speaking of their future as if it is already past, he says –

“But Jeshurun grew fat and kicked;
You grew fat, you grew thick,
You are obese!
Then he forsook God who made him,
And scornfully esteemed the Rock of his salvation.
¹⁶ They provoked Him to jealousy with foreign gods;
With abominations they provoked Him to anger.
¹⁷ They sacrificed to demons, not to God,
To gods they did not know,
To new gods, new arrivals
That your fathers did not fear.
¹⁸ Of the Rock who begot you, you are unmindful,
And have forgotten the God who fathered you.” Deuteronomy 32:15-18

Knowing this in advance, Israel could not say, “The Lord knew it was coming and so it was predetermined and thus not our fault.” Rather, the Lord is letting them know that it is entirely their fault.

They were instructed, they were warned, and they did not heed. He just knew it would happen. His foreknowledge does not negate their free will. What is unfortunate, is that the same is true with the church today – both in doctrine (aka Calvinism) and in practice, such as in a fatalistic view concerning elections, saving for the future, or in a thousand other ways.

We – each and every person alive – are responsible for our actions, and we cannot blame God for those things that come about – even if He tells us in advance that they will happen. And so, let us take a right and reasonable approach to both our lives and our theology.

Let us live our lives before the Lord, honoring and serving Him as we are admonished to do, and let us look at the future with anticipation, not with a fatalistic view that the book is written, and we can’t change it anyway.

Our small part of the story is unknown to us from moment to moment, and our small effort may actually be the seed of something great and marvelous that happens along the pathway taking us to our final stop in the presence of the Lord.

Yes, the book is written, and yes, the end is already set. But we have a part to do until we get there. If giving flowers to someone will brighten their day, don’t withhold your hands from picking them. And if opening your mouth and speaking out the words of salvation will bring someone to the throne of grace, why would you refrain from speaking?

The only thing certain about our future is contained in a book containing 66 smaller books that total 1189 chapters. Outside of that, the possibilities for what lies ahead are absolutely unlimited. And each day that we live in the process is to be lived clinging to the One who gave us that broad and glorious outline of what lies ahead.

To be certain, if you want to share in the promises contained there, you will need to first be reconciled to the One who wrote out the lines of eternity. Make sure you are sure about that today.

Closing Verse: Now out of His mouth goes a sharp sword, that with it He should strike the nations. And He Himself will rule them with a rod of iron. He Himself treads the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. ¹⁶ And He has on His robe and on His thigh a name written:

KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS. -Revelation 19:15, 16

Next Week: Deuteronomy 11:1-12 You were led by the Lord; by His grace... (Until You Came to this Place) (36th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

He Is Your Praise, and He Is Your God

“And now, Israel, what does the LORD your God require of you
But to fear the LORD your God, not a bit but in whole
To walk in all His ways and to love Him
To serve the LORD your God with all your heart
-----and with all your soul

And to keep the commandments of the LORD, so it is understood
And His statutes which I command you today for your good?

Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong
-----to the LORD your God
Also the earth with all that is in it; everywhere you trod

The LORD delighted only in your fathers, to love them
And He chose their descendants after them, so He did say
You above all peoples
As it is this day

Therefore circumcise the foreskin of your heart
And be stiff-necked no longer; be sure to do your part

For the LORD your God is God of gods

And Lord of lords, these titles to Him we ascribe
The great God, mighty and awesome
Who shows no partiality nor takes a bribe

He administers justice for the fatherless and the widow also
And loves the stranger, giving him food and clothing
-----as you well know

Therefore love the stranger; his good from you shall not be skipped
For you were strangers in the land of Egypt

You shall fear the LORD your God
You shall serve Him, so I exclaim
And to Him you shall hold fast
And take oaths in His name

He is your praise
And He is your God, who has done for you
These great and awesome things
Which your eyes have seen; He is faithful and true

Your fathers went down to Egypt with seventy persons
A very small brood
And now the LORD your God has made you
As the stars of heaven in multitude

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 11:1-12 (Until You Came to this Place)

One of the things I try to do when teaching, especially during the weekly Bible studies, but also at times during the sermons, is to highlight the errors of various scholars. This is not simply nitpicking them, but it rather serves a purpose.

In knowing where the error is, one then might be able to deduce why the error was made. When Thomas Edison was confronted with all of his unsuccessful trials in making a lightbulb, his response was, “I didn’t fail. I just found two thousand ways to not make a lightbulb. I only needed to find one way to make it work.”

When a point of theology doesn’t work, we can then continue searching to find what does work – what does fit – to come to a proper conclusion. Some of these scholars I cite rank as the finest in all of church history, simply because they have several traits about them.

The first is that they hold to the word of God (at least in varying degrees) as inspired. They believe it truly is the word of God. To be a great Bible scholar, this first precept is absolutely necessary.

The next trait is that they take the word as a unified whole. Without doing this, one cannot see how all things weave together into one large picture of the redemptive narrative. At the same time, they do their best to take what is being presented at any given time in its proper context. Just because the Bible is a unified whole, individual passages have individual contexts. Whether people want to admit it or not, 2 Chronicles 7:14 has a specific context, as do all such memorable passages. In removing the context, a pretext is then formed.

Another trait of these great scholars is that they have a resource of previous scholars – good and bad alike – that they refer to and build upon. In this, they demonstrate wisdom in contemplating the efforts of those who came before them.

There are other things needed to make a great scholar, but these are a good starter. But, as I said, these men refer not only to good scholars that they always agree with, but also to those who may not be so good. Even bad scholars can have good insights.

As you probably know, I rank the Old Testament scholars at Cambridge at the bottom of the barrel of those I refer to each week. And yet, I refer to them each week. They do not hold to the word of God as inspired. They constantly claim, “This was inserted later,” “This is spurious,” “Moses didn’t write this,” and so on.

From this first error, all of the rest of their theology is tainted. And yet, in their time-consuming attempts to nitpick apart the word of God, they bring forth insights that nobody else would, simply because the other scholars wouldn’t think so perversely. In this, they then miss things that would naturally not seem odd.

The lesson that I give concerning such people is to not throw the baby out with the bathwater. Just because I disagree with John Calvin on major points of doctrine (because he is wrong), it doesn’t mean he doesn’t have great insights here or there.

Text Verse: “Be diligent to present yourself approved to God, a worker who does not need to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. ¹⁶ But shun profane and idle babblings, for they will increase to more ungodliness.” 2 Timothy 2:15, 16

A couple things about this text verse come to mind. First, I cringe when I see someone doing a Bible study, and these words of Paul are posted on the board behind the teacher. Anyone who is teaching the Bible would be stupid to not think they were rightly dividing the word. “Ok, we’re going to study the Bible completely out of context today, as we always do.”

So, there is no need to make the claim. Secondly, it makes the arrogant assumption that he is, in fact, rightly dividing the word. But if he isn’t, how would he know? However, in making the claim, even while he isn’t rightly dividing, he is then saying that someone who may be rightly dividing is actually wrong – when, in fact, he is actually right.

Another thing about Paul’s words is that we don’t want to use the commentaries of just anyone. When I refer to Cambridge, it is because they are actually trained in theology, and they are schooled in the Hebrew and Greek. And further, despite not accepting the Bible as fully inspired, they do hold to proper orthodoxy in their main theological presentations.

One should not follow the teachings or commentaries of those who fail to do this. As Paul says of them, such people only increase to more ungodliness. We need to first learn what is considered standard orthodoxy, and then go forward.

If someone doesn't teach the Trinity – for example, they teach Oneness Pentecostalism – there is no reason at all to read any of their other work. They have departed from an established norm, and all of their other theology will follow with this taint.

Be reasonable in your theology, be careful not to toss out what is good, just because of the source, keep things in context, and be sure – above all else – to accept the word of God as both fully inspired and as inerrant in all it teaches.

With this, you will be in the sweet spot. Such truths as these are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. His Signs and His Acts (verses 1-7)

The words in this passage, especially in verse 2, are extremely complicated. After spending about an hour on it in the morning, later in the day Sergio, Rhoda, and I spent more than an hour on that one verse, even going to the Dead Sea Scroll fragments to determine what is missing or wrong. In the end, the coming analysis includes our very best efforts.

Also, verses 1-8 form a chiasm that gives us insights into what is being conveyed. In going over it, it will – hopefully – help you to grasp what we will be going through in those verses. If nothing else, it reveals the rather poor nature of many translations of these verses. A very logical and orderly progression of thought is seen, but that is obscured, particularly by insertion of words into verse 2 by many translations – words which are incorrect.

Deuteronomy 11:1-8 (The Acts of the Lord)
From Egypt to the Bank of the Jordan (11/9/2020)

- a. “Therefore you shall love the LORD your God, and keep His charge, His statutes, His judgments, and His commandments always
- b. And you have known today ... His greatness and His mighty hand and His outstretched arm—His signs and His acts which He did
- c. in the midst of Egypt
- d. to Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to all his land; what He did to the army of Egypt, to their horses and their chariots: how He made the waters of the Red Sea overflow them as they pursued you, and how the LORD has destroyed them to this day (judgment on Egypt via the waters)

- x. what He did for you in the wilderness until you came to this place
- d. and what He did to Dathan and Abiram the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben: how the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up, their households, their tents, and all the substance that was in their possession (judgment on Israel via the earth)
- c. in the midst of all Israel
- b. but your eyes have seen every great act of the LORD which He did
- a. “Therefore you shall keep every commandment which I command you today

With this in mind, let us proceed into today’s passage by first going back. To end the previous chapter, Moses said, “You shall fear the LORD your God; you shall serve Him, and to Him you shall hold fast, and take oaths in His name. ²¹ He is your praise, and He is your God, who has done for you these great and awesome things which your eyes have seen. ²² Your fathers went down to Egypt with seventy persons, and now the LORD your God has made you as the stars of heaven in multitude” (Deuteronomy 10:20-22).

The Lord had shown Himself faithful to this small band of people who had grown into a great multitude. His plan was promised, it was set, and it was sure to come to pass. And indeed, it had come to pass. The promises to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were kept, Israel was at the border of their inheritance, and Moses was reminding them of this. It is with this context in mind that we come to the opening verse of Chapter 11 –

¹“Therefore you shall love the LORD your God,

As is normal, the word translated as “therefore,” is simply, “and.” It is a continuance of the previous thought –

“Your fathers went down to Egypt with seventy persons, and now the LORD your God has made you as the stars of heaven in multitude. And, you shall love the Lord your God.”

Further, the pronouns are singular. Because of what He has done for you (collective Israel), you shall love the Lord your God. It is to be a willful, volitional love based upon what the Lord has done. He has proven Himself trustworthy. Therefore, the nation is to respond in kind. In order to demonstrate this love, they are to act. Moses explains what that means, saying...

^{1 (con’t)} and keep His charge,

The word is mishmereth, and it refers to a watch or observance as would be kept by a sentry at his post. But it is not their post; it is His. This is the only time that this mishmereth, or charge, is spoken of in Deuteronomy. Only the horrible scholars at Cambridge even made a note of this. The other scholars wouldn't normally bother checking that out because it appears irrelevant to the narrative.

The reason Cambridge even included it was to supposedly demonstrate that the use of this word came from a priestly source and was inserted many years later. As stupid as that sounds, it is of note that they even mentioned it as only being cited here.

The reason isn't because it was inserted later, but because of what Moses just said at the end of the previous chapter. He surely uses this word now to connect it to the fact that the Lord kept His watch over the promise to the fathers, and to the people of Israel, for four hundred and thirty years. As this was so, they were to now keep His watch, guarding what was entrusted to them. This included...

1 (con't) His statutes, His judgments, and His commandments

The statutes are those things which are prescribed, as in ordinances. The judgments are those things which are judicially determined. In this case, as in divine law. And the commandments are those things that are spoken forth by the Lord directly, or through Moses. They are binding precepts. These are to be kept...

1 (con't) always.

kal ha'yamim – “all the days.” As this is His charge, the people are to act in accord with the nature of the Lord and never let slip what He would be attentive to. The substance of this thought is summed up in Psalm 121 –

“He will not allow your foot to be moved;
He who keeps you will not slumber.
⁴ Behold, He who keeps Israel
Shall neither slumber nor sleep.” Psalm 121:3, 4

It is the same thought conveyed by Jesus to His disciples in Matthew 28, where He uses the same term in Greek, pasas tas hēmeras, or “all the days” –

“All authority has been given to Me in heaven and on earth. ¹⁹ Go therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit,²⁰ teaching them to observe all things that I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the age.”

Matthew 28:18-20

The Lord never slumbers, and He is carefully watching over His people. In response, His people are to observe His watch and be obedient to all those things that have been directed by Him.

² Know today that I do not speak with your children, vidatem ha'yom ki lo eth benekem – “and you (all) know the day for no with your children.” The words now are in the plural, “you all,” and they will continue in the plural through verse 9. Moses addresses all of those who had seen the events he will now relay.

Also, the words of this clause lack any verb or predicate, and so a verbal thought either has to be supplied by the reader’s mind, or there is simply no thought that performs an action, even though an action is implied in the structure of the verse.

Various suggestions have been given, but the inserted words of the NKJV “I do not speak” do not convey the right sense. The word spoken forth is for all. To say he is not speaking to the children is to ignore them, something he will not do. Young’s gives the most literal translation, conveying the intent much more precisely –

“and ye have known to-day -- for it is not your sons who have not known, and who have not seen the chastisement of Jehovah your God.”

As you can see, an entire portion of verse 2 is then parenthetical. Offsetting the parenthetical words, it would read, “And you (all) know today (for it is not your sons, who have not known, and who have not seen the chastisement of Yehovah your God) His greatness and His mighty hand and His outstretched arm.”

Moses is not ignoring the children, but he is saying that the children were ignorant of the events because they were not alive at the time. Because of this, Moses will give the remedy for their state of ignorance when we get to verse 19, saying –

“You shall teach them to your children, speaking of them when you sit in your house, when you walk by the way, when you lie down, and when you rise up.”

It is the children who are ignorant of the ways of the Lord, and who will then need to be instructed in them. And this instruction goes both ways, positively and negatively.

² (con't) who have not known and who have not seen the chastening of the LORD your God,

Here, Moses uses a new word, musar. It is derived from the verb yasar which signifies chastisement, through blows or words, leading to instruction. Thus, this is the state of instruction that is so transmitted.

The Greek translation of the verse uses the word paideia, signifying the molding of a child into an ideal member of the society. To get the sense of the word, Solomon uses it twice in a row, changing its position in relation to the word “wisdom,” in order to define what is conveyed –

“The proverbs of Solomon the son of David, king of Israel:

² To know wisdom and instruction,

To perceive the words of understanding,

³ To receive the instruction of wisdom,

Justice, judgment, and equity.” Proverbs 1:2, 3

Moses is saying that the Lord has provided Israel with a type of moral education through His instruction, which involves both punishment and mercy, discipline and tender care, and chastisement and protection.

The younger children have not been so instructed. Therefore, it will be incumbent on the elders to ensure the children are properly educated in what they have learned by experience, which was of...

² (con't) His greatness and His mighty hand and His outstretched arm—

The Hebrew is more emphatic: yado ha'khazaqah u-zeroo ha'netuyah – “hand the mighty and arm the outstretched.”

The words here are similar to verse 7:19 where the “greatness” is explained. There it said, “the great trials which your eyes saw, the signs and the wonders, the mighty hand and the outstretched arm, by which the Lord your God brought you out.”

The greatness here can then be equated to the “signs and the wonders,” along with anything else that Moses will further explain as he continues...

³ His signs and His acts which He did in the midst of Egypt,

There is a play on the word asah, to do or make, here. Moses uses the word maasav, works, which is derived from asah, and he then follows it with that root, asah. It thus shows the superlative nature of what the Lord has accomplished: v’eth ototav v’eth maasav asher asah b’tok mitsrayim – “and His signs and His workings which He worked in midst Egypt.”

Not only did the Lord show forth signs, but He actively worked His workings to confirm those signs. This was before Israel to see, but they were put forth...

^{3 (con’t)} to Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to all his land;

Egypt was their captor, and Pharaoh ruled Egypt. And yet, Israel was released from his rule and from the bondage they were in. It was not by their rebellion and insurrection. Nor did an invading army come in and destroy Egypt. And yet, Israel was freed.

When they were powerless, and with none to plead their cause but the Lord, they were brought out. It was solely by His greatness and workings that this came about. Moses reminds them now of...

⁴ what He did to the army of Egypt, to their horses and their chariots:

Moses again uses the word asah (did), defining the Lord’s next great act. The first was in the midst of Egypt. Moses next turns to what happened outside of the land when Egypt pursued Israel in the wilderness, to the shore of the Red Sea.

He reminds them of the great force that came against them, saying: v’asher asah l’khel mitsrayim l’susav u-l’rikbo – “and which worked to army Egypt, to horses, and to chariots.” In other words, the defenseless escapees faced an entire army that was fitted out with strong animals and chariots.

An entire group of people, completely undefended, and with their backs to an impassable sea, faced this onslaught of power. They saw this with their own young and impressionable eyes, and Moses reminds them of...

⁴ (con't) how He made the waters of the Red Sea overflow them as they pursued you,

Without explaining the parting of the Red Sea, Moses simply treats it as a known quantity that it was parted, that they passed through it, and that Egypt followed them in.

And when they did, Israel, safely on the other side watched as hetsiph eth me yam suph al penehem b'radepham akharekem – “He made flow water Sea Ending upon their faces as they pursued after you.”

In this, Moses introduces a rare verb, tsuph. It will be seen only three times, and it signifies to flow or swim. He is graphically reminding Israel that the waters they had just gone through, and which stood solidly as a wall, reverted to flowing waters, covering the faces of the Egyptians, even as they pursued after Israel. When this occurred, it became a definitive, lasting act...

⁴ (con't) and how the LORD has destroyed them to this day;

During all of the time of their wilderness wanderings, right up until the time that they now stood there on the banks of the Jordan, ready to pass through, Egypt had never recovered enough to come against them again. As John Lange pithily states it, “Perfect redemption.” With this remembered, Moses continues on...

⁵ what He did for you in the wilderness until you came to this place;

Here, we come to the middle of the chiasm that is found in this passage. Again, Moses uses the word asah (did). He reminds them of how the Lord worked in the wilderness. It is the central thought of what Moses is saying, and it is to be taken in conjunction with what has been said about Egypt so far, and with what will be said in the next verses.

In Exodus 13:18, prior to crossing the Red Sea, it said –

“So God led the people around by way of the wilderness of the Red Sea. And the children of Israel went up in orderly ranks out of the land of Egypt.”

And in Exodus 15:22, after crossing it, it said –

“So Moses brought Israel from the Red Sea; then they went out into the Wilderness of Shur. And they went three days in the wilderness and found no water.” Exodus 15:22

As you can see, the wilderness here is being used as an all-encompassing term to describe what occurred both with Egypt, and of the events yet to be described. In other words, the Lord did great works in both contexts.

Further, He did countless things – both positive and negative –toward Israel. They were to remember them all. He gave them manna, quail, the Sabbath, water from the rock, and protection from Amalek. He gave them the law, making a covenant with them. He forgave their transgression in the making of the golden calf, and He renewed the covenant, promising them to never utterly reject them as a people.

He again gave them quail after departing Sinai, He burned among them when they rebelled. He brought them to the door of Canaan, and He offered them the land. He punished them for refusing to simply accept His offer by faith. He directed them back into the wilderness, sentencing them to death while preserving them as a people in accord with His word.

He sent vipers among them, and He gave them the grace of the bronze serpent on the pole. On and on and on, in numerous ways, He trained them – giving them instruction as a Father to His child. These were the workings of Yehovah toward Israel in the wilderness.

Now, in conjunction with that same thought, Moses next singles out one instance of divine judgment upon the people to remind them, and to instruct them...

⁶and what He did to Dathan and Abiram

And again, Moses uses the word asah (did) to reveal the workings of the Lord. The event here is described in great detail in Numbers 16. It is an account generally known as “Korah’s Rebellion,” because Korah is both the first named offender, and because he was of the tribe of Levi, attempting to erase the distinction between Levi in general and those of the Aaronic priesthood.

However, Moses doesn’t even mention him. Instead, he focuses on what Yehovah asah l’dathan v’la’aviram, or “did to Dathan and to Abiram.” The obvious question is, “Why would Moses completely skip over Korah and focus only on only these two miscreants?" The answer must be, at least partially, because of the next words...

6 (con't) the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben:

These two were not of Levi, but were of the tribe of the firstborn, Reuben. Levi was just mentioned in the previous chapter as a single unit, despite the priestly line of Aaron –

“At that time the LORD separated the tribe of Levi to bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, to stand before the LORD to minister to Him and to bless in His name, to this day. ⁹Therefore Levi has no portion nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD is his inheritance, just as the LORD your God promised him.)”

-Deuteronomy 10:8, 9

Korah, being a Levite, only attacked the arrangement of the order and structure found within the tribe of Levi. However, Dathan and Abiram had attempted to usurp the entire structure of the leadership of the people and the mediatorial role of Levi – between the people and the priests and the priests and the Lord. Because of this, Moses calls to memory how they were destroyed...

6 (con't) how the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up, their households, their tents,

The exciting details are found in Numbers 16, where they focus on Korah rather than these two –

“Now it came to pass, as he finished speaking all these words, that the ground split apart under them, ³² and the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up, with their households and all the men with Korah, with all their goods. ³³ So they and all those with them went down alive into the pit; the earth closed over them, and they perished from among the assembly. ³⁴ Then all Israel who were around them fled at their cry, for they said, ‘Lest the earth swallow us up also!’”

-Numbers 16:31-34

They went alive into sheol and were gone, with both their households and their tents...

6 (con't) and all the substance that was in their possession,

Here is an idiomatic expression: v'eth kal haiqum asher b'raglehem – “and all living thing which in their feet.” This is not referring to their stuff, but their people. All who followed after them and who were under their authority went down alive. The feet signify the sphere of authority. It is seen, for example, in Psalm 8 –

“You have made him to have dominion over the works of Your hands;
You have put all things under his feet.” Psalm 8:6

These two families were utterly consumed and disappeared from Israel. However, such is not the case with Korah. The sons of Korah are noted elsewhere, including as being the authors of eleven psalms. It provides a second reason why Moses refers only to these two and not to Korah.

Because the descendants were not utterly destroyed along with Korah, Moses skips over the name, revealing the mercy that was found in the midst of the Lord’s workings. Moses says that all of this was accomplished...

⁶ (con’t) in the midst of all Israel—

It speaks of the entire event, but it may also give a third indicator as to why Korah is overlooked. His action was in and against Levi, of whom he belonged. The actions of Dathan and Abiram were against Levi, to whom they did not belong.

Theirs was an attack against all of Israel as all of Israel was ministered to by Levi – both Levite and priest. Therefore, the term, “in the midst of all Israel,” is doubly pertinent to them. They offended against (in the midst of) all Israel, and the judgment was complete against them among (in the midst of) all Israel when they were entirely wiped out from the people.

⁷ but your eyes have seen every great act of the LORD which He did.

Here, we have the completion of the thought from verse 3. There it referred to “His signs and His workings which He worked,” using the plural of the word maaseh, and the word asah.

Here, using the same words, but with maaseh singular this time, it says: ki enekem ha’root eth kal maaseh Yehovah ha’gadol asher asah – “For your eyes the seers every working Yehovah, the great which He worked.”

Translating the word ki as “but” here makes all of these verses sound as if they are based on a contrast between them and what the children didn’t see. This is incorrect. Rather, it should be translated as “for.” In this, it complements and confirms that the people he has been speaking to are the ones who saw these things.

*What is it that will bring me life?
What thing must I do to be right with my God?
What will end this enmity and strife?
How shall I conduct my affairs on this path I trod?*

*Shall I stand before God and boast in what I have done?
Shall I rely on my deeds accomplished under the law?
Shall I reject the perfection of His Son?
Am I able to stand on my own, without spot or flaw?*

*Not on a bet would I so determine to do!
A single misdeed and I would be done in
I will trust in the work of the Lord, holy and true
Only through Him will I be freed from the penalty of sin*

*Thanks be to God for Christ Jesus my Lord
Only in Him will I to the judgment seat step forward*

II. A Land for Which the Lord Your God Cares (verses 8-12)

⁸“Therefore you shall keep every commandment which I command you today,

And now, these words take us back to verse 1 to complete the chiasm. There, he spoke in the plural – statutes, judgments, and commandments. Now he refers to them in the singular: kal ha’mitsvah, or “all the commandment.”

It is a single, unified commandment made up of all of the various parts. In both, the force of the words is the same – “Here is what you have been instructed, and these are (this is) what you are to do.” Let nothing of it fail.

Moses has given justification as to why they were to do as so instructed. Their own eyes were the seers, the witnesses, of all that had transpired. They could not deny that it was the Lord who had done these things, and they were therefore obligated to respond to

His kindnesses and judgments with respect, honor, and obedience. Further, in obedience to this word, there is to be a positive outcome...

8 (con't) that you may be strong, l'maan tekhezqu – “to end purpose, that you may be strong.” Here, the idea is that in obedience to what is prescribed, they will be encouraged or fortified in their conduct and abilities. The obvious implication is that in failing to obey, they will not be.

He has just shown an example of the Lord’s power to destroy an enemy nation for their sakes. He has also shown an example of the Lord’s power to remove enemies within the nation when they are disobedient. The sword cuts in two directions and the reason for its use for or against comes down to one thought – obedience. Moses next says...

8 (con't) and go in and possess the land which you cross over to possess,

The Lord destroyed Egypt, and He can destroy the nations of Canaan as well. They failed to believe this in Numbers 14, and it cost an entire generation their lives. Instead of entering in and possessing, they were exiled into the wilderness.

Moses tells them that the Lord will cause the opposite to occur if they simply accept the words and act accordingly. They will go in, and they will possess, but it is conditional based on their relationship with the Lord.

And, once they are in the land, their remaining there is also a guarantee to continue, or a guarantee to end, based solely on how they perform in that relationship...

9 and that you may prolong your days u-l'maan taariku yamim – “to end purpose you may prolong days.” In obedience, the days will be prolonged. In disobedience, the opposite will be true. And this prolonging of days is...

9 (con't) in the land

It does not say, “in the land.” Rather, it says: al ha'adamah – “upon the ground.” This is an important distinction. Moses isn’t just referring to exile from the land of Canaan, but of living upon the ground in Canaan. In disobedience, some will not even get the opportunity to be exiled, but they will simply die where they are.

This could be from famine, pestilence, inner tribal conflict, or being slain by enemy nations. In disobedience, their days will be cut short. It is this ground, comprising the land of Canaan...

^{9 (con't)} which the LORD swore to give your fathers, to them and their descendants,

Again, Moses brings in the fathers as he so regularly does. It is to remind Israel of the Lord's covenant faithfulness. And that covenant faithfulness then extends to their descendants. The land is Israel's inheritance. It is given to them, but the possession of it is conditional – both for individuals, and for the nation.

The promise stands, but it is based upon performance. Israel must accept this. But as an enticement, Moses then again says...

^{9 (con't)} 'a land flowing with milk and honey.'

It is the second of six times they will be reminded of the quality of the land. The blessings are there, and they await Israel, if only Israel will heed. Here, the word for "land" is eretz. In this context, it speaks of the land as a whole. With that in mind, Moses continues with the marvelous description of what Canaan is like...

¹⁰ For the land which you go to possess is not like the land of Egypt

The words now go to the singular. Moses is speaking to the nation. The land which you, Israel, go to possess is not like the land of Egypt. Your (singular) land is so much better than that land...

^{10 (con't)} from which you have come,

Only in this clause of this verse does it go again to the plural: asher yesatem misham – "which you (all) have come (out) from." Moses is being precise, probably waving his hand across the multitudes and acknowledging the great number of Israel who were there before him. He then returns to the singular, saying...

^{10 (con't)} where you sowed your seed and watered it by foot, as a vegetable garden;

In this, Moses reminds the people what it was like in Egypt. There was little rain, and so the water source was predominantly the Nile and any canals that flowed from it. From there, water had to be carried in buckets by foot, or smaller channels could be dug out with spades with the foot pressing them into the earth.

Some believe this could also be referring to pumping wheels that were powered by foot in order to bring up water. No matter what, it was a laborious task to have water brought into one's property in order to water the vegetable garden. This is a new word, yaraq, coming from yereq, meaning green. Thus, it speaks of the vegetable, herb, and so on.

Instead of the laborious labors of Egypt, Moses says...

¹¹ but the land which you cross over to possess is a land of hills and valleys,

Again, Moses returns to the plural – “which you (all) cross over to possess.” He is playing on what he just said. “You all have come out from Egypt, and now you all are going to cross over to possess.” There is no error in the text; it is alive and vivid.

“This land isn't at all like Egypt. There are hills and valleys. And it is this land through the constant watchfulness and caring providence of the Lord...”

^{11 (con't)} which drinks water from the rain of heaven,

It is, at the same time, a note of joy and of warning. Little effort will be needed to raise an abundance of crops. Trees will grow without care; abundance will flow down from the hills and into the valleys. There will be joy and delight because the Lord sends the rains.

And yet... it is the Lord who sends the rains. Without His open hand of grace, there would be no water at all, not even by foot. The land itself is brought alive or brought to its end through the Lord's care of it via the rains.

And that care was based upon Israel's obedience to His word. The notable effects of this condition are to be seen in our closing verse today. For now, Moses continues with his words. It is...

¹² a land for which the LORD your God cares;

It reverts to the singular, your (singular) God. He is Israel's God, and Moses says He doresh, or seeks after the land. His eyes search it out, He observes it, and He cares for it.

As Canaan is typical of entrance into Christ, and thus the heavenly promise, the words of Jesus are clearly seen in this –

“I go to prepare a place for you. ³ And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to Myself; that where I am, there you may be also. ⁴ And where I go you know, and the way you know.” John 14:1, 2

The Lord cared for Canaan for the sake of Israel. He, likewise, has a place prepared for His people which He has tended to. Both require crossing over the Jordan, meaning demonstrating faith in the Lord. In this, the land is received. As for the earthly Canaan, Moses says...

12 (fin) the eyes of the LORD your God are always on it, from the beginning of the year to the very end of the year.

Both clauses are idiomatic. The meaning of the first is that the Lord is attentive to it as if He was sitting there and watching it, never taking His eyes off of it. The meaning of the second clause is that this wasn't just continuous, but it is unceasing. The beginning of the year comes at the ending of the previous year. And so, there is never a time that the Lord isn't searching out the land.

But this is, like the other words, a double-edged sword. There is no place and no time that His eyes are not on the land. As this is so, then they are also on the people of the land. Their actions are what will drive the Lord's response to how He treats the land.

This is seen time and time again throughout the rest of the Old Testament as the rains came or were withheld. And, at times, the coming of rain was a judgment as well, such as in 1 Samuel 12:19 when rains came during the harvest because the people had rejected the Lord. In this, the people's response to Samuel was –

“Pray for your servants to the LORD your God, that we may not die; for we have added to all our sins the evil of asking a king for ourselves.”

This is the lesson of Israel, and because it is, it is the lesson of the law. When one is under law, he must be obedient to that law. In failure to heed, sin is the result. And with the coming of sin comes the sad expectation of judgment.

Israel's history is mapped out for us so that we can see this. But this lesson of Israel is one that takes us back even further. The first law given to man was broken, and man has suffered the effects of that ever since. Israel, and the law given to her, has been a lesson for all people to see the gravity of what occurred with Adam.

It wasn't just a sin that led to His punishment and death, but one which then spread to all men, because all men are in Adam. Israel is being used as a typological representation of this. The Person of Jesus is then provided to show us the contrast of that.

Adam failed, Israel is given to reveal the magnitude of that, and Christ, the second Man and the greater Israel, came to show us how to be released from this huge yoke we carry. Unlike Adam, He never sinned. Unlike Israel, He fulfilled the law. And because of this, the beauty of God working in Christ Jesus is then made available to us.

He is the release from the condemnation we all bear. He is the Lifter of the yoke and the Grantor of new life – eternal life. He is the embodiment of the law, and so all who are in Him are freed from the constraint of law. In Him, God is no longer counting men's sins against them.

The land of Canaan is outshined, infinitely and eternally, in the glory that God now provides in Christ. Let us not fail to heed the call, demonstrate faith in His provision, and be saved unto the glory of everlasting life in the presence of God. May it be so for you, and may it be today. Amen.

Closing Verse: *“Also I gave you cleanness of teeth in all your cities,
And lack of bread in all your places;
Yet you have not returned to Me,
Says the LORD.”*

*⁷ “I also withheld rain from you,
When there were still three months to the harvest.
I made it rain on one city,
I withheld rain from another city.
One part was rained upon,
And where it did not rain the part withered.*

*⁸ So two or three cities wandered to another city to drink water,
But they were not satisfied;
Yet you have not returned to Me,
Says the LORD.” Amos 4:6-8*

Next Week: Deuteronomy 11:13-21 So vast is the breadth and the girth... (Like the Days of the Heavens Above the Earth) (37th Deuteronomy sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Until You Came to this Place

“Therefore you shall love the LORD your God
And keep His charge; that always pays
His statutes, His judgments
And His commandments always

Know today that I do not speak with your children
Who have not known and who have not seen nor stood in alarm
The chastening of the LORD your God
His greatness and His mighty hand and His outstretched arm—

His signs and His acts which He did
In the midst of Egypt, which He had planned
To Pharaoh king of Egypt
And to all his land

What He did to the army of Egypt
To their horses and their chariots as they tried to race away
How He made the waters of the Red Sea
Overflow them as they pursued you, and how the LORD
-----has destroyed them to this day

What He did for you in the wilderness
Until you came to this place, back then
And what He did to Dathan and Abiram
The sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben

How the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up
Their households, their tents, and all the substance
-----that was in their possession, He of them got rid
In the midst of all Israel—

But your eyes have seen every great act of the LORD
----- which He did

“Therefore you shall keep every commandment
Which I command you today; so, to you I address
That you may be strong
And go in and possess the land which you cross over to possess

And that you may prolong your days
In the land which the LORD swore to give your fathers
-----without cost or money
To them and their descendants
A land flowing with milk and honey

For the land which you go to possess
Is not like the land of Egypt from which you have come
Where you sowed your seed and watered it by foot
As a vegetable garden; if you had a green thumb

But the land which you cross over to possess
Is a land of hills and valleys, caressed by heaven’s dew
Which drinks water from the rain of heaven
Such is the land I am giving to you

A land for which the LORD your God cares
The eyes of the LORD your God are always on it
From the beginning of the year
To the very end of the year, this land to watch He does commit

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 11:13-21 (Like the Days of the Heavens Above the Earth)

In the Bible, being faithful to the Lord is equated with a spouse being faithful to her husband. In this marriage-type relationship, the Lord is willing to put up with a great deal and yet not put away Israel. Under the law, if a man were to divorce his wife and she were to remarry and then get divorced again, the first husband could not later take her back. That is a point of law found later –

“When a man takes a wife and marries her, and it happens that she finds no favor in his eyes because he has found some uncleanness in her, and he writes her a certificate of divorce, puts it in her hand, and sends her out of his house, ² when she has departed from his house, and goes and becomes another man’s wife, ³ if the latter husband detests her and writes her a certificate of divorce, puts it in her hand, and sends her out of his house, or if the latter husband dies who took her as his wife, ⁴ then her former husband who divorced her must not take her back to be his wife after she has been defiled; for that is an abomination before the LORD, and you shall not bring sin on the land which the LORD your God is giving you as an inheritance.” Deuteronomy 24:1-4

The defiling of a woman by another man excluded the man from taking her back again as his wife. The contract was violated, and the law had spoken. And yet, in Jeremiah, we read this concerning the Lord’s love towards His people –

Text Verse: *“They say, ‘If a man divorces his wife,
And she goes from him
And becomes another man’s,
May he return to her again?’
Would not that land be greatly polluted?
But you have played the harlot with many lovers;
Yet return to Me,” says the LORD. Jeremiah 3:1*

This precept came to mind because I use an example of an unfaithful spouse in the sermon today. Despite Israel’s almost complete unfaithfulness to the Lord during their entire history, He has faithfully preserved them, calling them back to Himself – “Return to Me.”

He continues to do so today, and He will continue to do so until the day they are – once and forever – reconciled to Him through Jesus Christ. This is the amazing and glorious Creator we serve. He remains faithful even through the unfaithfulness of His people.

It is a foundational truth that is found in the Word of God, His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today, and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Take Heed to Yourselves (verses 13-17)

In the previous passage, in verse 11:1, Moses began with, “Therefore you shall love the Lord your God, and keep His charge, His statutes, His judgments, and His commandments always.” After this, Moses explained the great acts of judgment that came upon both Egypt and Israel, showing that the Lord is fully capable of such things.

He then repeated the thought of commandment-keeping in verse 11:8, saying, “Therefore you shall keep every commandment which I command you today.” Moses then gave the reason for that, finishing up the passage with –

“...that you may be strong, and go in and possess the land which you cross over to possess, ⁹ and that you may prolong your days in the land which the LORD swore to give your fathers, to them and their descendants, ‘a land flowing with milk and honey.’ ¹⁰ For the land which you go to possess is not like the land of Egypt from which you have come, where you sowed your seed and watered it by foot, as a vegetable garden; ¹¹ but the land which you cross over to possess is a land of hills and valleys, which drinks water from the rain of heaven, ¹² a land for which the LORD your God cares; the eyes of the LORD your God are always on it, from the beginning of the year to the very end of the year.” Deuteronomy 11:8-12

The keeping of the commandments is paramount to Moses in order for them to possess this good land that he has described to them. Now Moses will, again, bring in the thought of commandment-keeping. This time, however, it isn’t simply for the sake of possessing the land, but of having abundance within the land.

His words are methodical and direct – “Here is how things work, and the outcome is conditioned upon how you respond to the commands you are given.” With that thought in mind, the passage today begins with...

¹³ ‘And it shall be that if you earnestly obey My commandments v'hayah im shamo'a tishmeu el mitsvotai – “And it will be if hearing you shall hear unto My commandments.” An important change has taken place in these words. It says mitsvotai, or “My commandments.” It is the Lord who is speaking through Moses.

One could argue that it is simply Moses speaking about his words to the people as commandments. And, indeed, that is how some translations state it – “my (lowercase m) commandments.” The NKJV, however, rightly says (with a capital M) “My commandments.”

What has happened, is that Moses’ words of the previous verses have now passed into the words of the Lord here. This will become perfectly evident in the next verse. The change is so marked and abrupt that Cambridge says, “It is evidently inserted by an editor.”

How stupid. A later editor would do exactly the opposite and conform the words to the surrounding text, not alter them to make the passage more confusing and/or seemingly more corrupt. But Moses has already done this before. The change is not without precedent, as was seen in verse 7:4.

For now, as is understood from previous sermons, the word “hear” means more than to simply hear, but to hear and then to act upon what is heard. Thus, “earnestly obey” is a good paraphrase.

In the last verse, the pronouns were in the singular. In this verse, they are in the plural – “And it will be if hearing, you (all) hear.” This address to the many will continue throughout the verse.

¹³ (con’t) which I command you today,

Each and every person (you all) is being told that obedience is required across the board. Saying, “which I command you today,” indicates that what the Lord, through Moses, speaks out, during the entire time of the giving of this book, is included in “today.”

He isn’t speaking out individual sections that are separate from one another. Rather, his words continue on in a single body of law that comprises each and every section into one unit. Every time that it says, “which I command you today,” a single law is being added to. This will continue until the book of Deuteronomy is finished.

At times, even quite often, the words are repeated from what has been said elsewhere. Such an instance is found in the next words...

13 (con't) to love the LORD your God and serve Him with all your heart and with all your soul,

This is similar to what he just said in the previous chapter –

“And now, Israel, what does the LORD your God require of you, but to fear the LORD your God, to walk in all His ways and to love Him, to serve the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul.” Deuteronomy 10:12

However, though similar, it is also significantly different. There, Moses spoke to Israel collectively. Here, the Lord speaks to all the people individually–

10:12 – to serve the LORD your (singular) God with all your (singular) heart and with all your (singular) soul.

11:13 – to love the LORD your (plural) God and serve Him with all your (plural) heart and with all your (plural) soul.

Why is it being done this way? It is because, as Jeremiah says –

“The heart is deceitful above all things,
And desperately wicked;
Who can know it?” Jeremiah 17:9

Think of the commands. “You (Israel) are to do my commands.” Someone could say, “I don’t need to. The nation does.” But that thought is now excluded by changing it and saying, “You (all) are to do My commands.” “Dangit. I have to do all this stuff too!”

Moses is writing under inspiration. The Lord, understanding the nature of man, is being specific to exclude the wickedness of the human heart – both of Israel’s collectively and of each person’s individually. “You, Israel as a nation, are to love the Lord your God and serve Him with all your heart and with all your soul. And each of you within Israel, My people, are to do likewise.”

To avoid unnecessary repetition, but to understand the fuller meaning of the words of this verse, you can go back to the comments on verse 10:12 and read them. There, the thought of loving the Lord God, and of serving Him with all of one's heart and all of one's soul is analyzed in detail.

For now, the word tells the people what good result will come from their obedient love and their service of the Lord God, saying...

¹⁴ then I will give you the rain for your land in its season, v'natati metar artsekem b'ito – “And I will give rain in its season.” How do we know Moses wasn't the one to say, “My commandments” in the previous verse? It is because it says, “And I will give rain” in this verse. Moses can't give rain. Only the Lord can.

The NASB, however, incorrectly translates these words as, “that He will give the rain.” What is normally a careful and precise translation either deferred to a text other than the Hebrew, or they simply made an error in their translation.

It is to be noted that what He promises here in Deuteronomy for obedience, is likewise discussed with the people in their disobedience. In Amos 4, it says –

“I also withheld rain from you,
When there were still three months to the harvest.
I made it rain on one city,
I withheld rain from another city.
One part was rained upon,
And where it did not rain the part withered.
⁸So two or three cities wandered to another city to drink water,
But they were not satisfied;
Yet you have not returned to Me,
Says the LORD.” Amos 4:7, 8

There, like in this verse in Deuteronomy, the pronoun is plural – “your (plural) land” (Deuteronomy) and “you (plural) have not returned to me (Amos). The Lord was teaching them a lesson with the rains, and Israel was failing to heed the lesson He provided.

As you can see, though the words are transmitted through Moses, it is the Lord who is speaking them out. In obedience to the doing, the Lord promises He will do likewise, giving the people of Israel rain for your (plural) land. With that understood, He says...

14 (con't) the early rain and the latter rain,

There are no articles before the nouns. It says: yoreh u-malqosh – “sprinkling and gathering,” but signifying the early and latter rains. They are also known as the autumn and spring rains, or other such variations. Both words are introduced into Scripture at this time.

The first, yoreh, or “early rain,” comes from yarah – to throw or shoot, as in an arrow. Yoreh is an active participle, and thus it gives the idea of lots of arrows, and hence “sprinkling.” The second is malqosh. It comes from leqesh which is the after-crop, meaning latter growth. That is from the verb laqash, signifying “to gather.” Thus, it is “gathering.” Of these rains, Adam Clarke states –

“By the first or former rain we are to understand that which fell in Judea about November, when they sowed their seed, and this served to moisten and prepare the ground for the vegetation of the seed. The latter rain fell about April, when the corn was well grown up, and served to fill the ears, and render them plump and perfect. Rain rarely fell in Judea at any other seasons than these. If the former rain were withheld, or not sent in due season, there could be no vegetation: if the latter rain were withheld, or not sent in its due season, there could be no full corn in the ear, and consequently no harvest. Of what consequence then was it that they should have their rain in due season! God, by promising this provided they were obedient, and threatening to withhold it should they be disobedient, shows that it is not a general providence that directs these things, but that the very rain of heaven falls by particular direction, and the showers are often regulated by an especial providence.” Adam Clarke

The point of these words now is that it takes us back to verse 10 where Israel is contrasted to Egypt. There are no such rains in Egypt. However, in Canaan, and through the obedience of the people, there would be both the early and the latter rains. These were to be provided so...

14 (con't) that you may gather in your grain, your new wine, and your oil.

And wahlah, in the middle of the verse, the words suddenly change back to the second person singular: v'asaphta deganekha v'tiroshkha v'yitsharekha – “and you may gather in your grain, and your new wine, and your oil. All four pronouns are in the singular. He is speaking to Israel collectively.

The nation's prosperity is dependent on the land of all of the people. The produce that comes from the ground is a national asset and treasure that is dependent upon both national and individual observance of the commands. The words are marvelously structured to teach Israel the important lesson of who they are as people, and of who they are as a people. With that understood...

¹⁵ And I will send grass in your fields for your livestock, that you may eat and be filled.'

So much for vegetarians. The Lord promises grass in the fields for the livestock – a result of the rains. In turn, the people will have livestock to eat. The words speak of abundance and delight.

Also, the singular continues in this verse. In national and individual obedience, the Lord will graciously provide for Israel. One must remember that if individuals in the nation are disobedient, it is the nation's responsibility to weed them out.

The nation cannot say, "We have been obedient, and yet you have not sent us rains," when they allow disobedience within the nation. This is clearly and explicitly seen in Amos 4, which was cited a moment ago when speaking of the people in the plural.

Likewise, the opposite of the promised blessing in this verse in Deuteronomy is seen in Amos 4:6, where it is again in the plural –

“Also I gave you cleanness of teeth in all your cities,
And lack of bread in all your places;
Yet you have not returned to Me,
Says the LORD.” Amos 4:6

For obedience, the Lord promises that they may eat and be filled, implying dirty teeth. However, for disobedience, the Lord provided cleanness of teeth, meaning hunger. In Amos 4, the Lord speaks to the people in the plural, again and again, but then in verse 12, He says to them in the second person singular –

“Therefore thus will I do to you, O Israel;
Because I will do this to you,
Prepare to meet your God, O Israel!” Amos 4:12

This caution in Amos was not without advanced warning. Both from the prophets and through Moses. As it next says...

16 Take heed to yourselves,

The words now return to Moses as the speaker. He implores the people individually as well, returning back to the second person plural. The changes are intricate, purposeful, and marvelously woven together for the reader to consider. These changes call for us to slowly and methodically ponder each verse, and – indeed – each clause. Here, the warning is given: hishameru lakem – “You (all) take heed to yourselves.” And this is to avoid a snare...

16 (con’t) lest your heart be deceived, pen yiphteh l’vavekem – “Lest is opened your (plural) heart.” The word is pathah. It was seen in Genesis and Exodus, and it will only be used here in Deuteronomy. It means to be spacious, wide, or open. In other words, if you foolishly open your heart, you will be seduced by it. Job uses the word when speaking of someone simple in his head –

“For wrath kills a foolish man,
And envy slays a simple one.” Job 5:2

One can think of a married woman slowly getting close to another man. The heart opens and trouble follows closely behind. It is allured away, enticed, and the moral grounding is lost. Verse 13 said they were to love the Lord God with all of the heart. However, the heart has been seduced to open to another. The natural reaction that will inevitably follow is...

16 (con’t) and you turn aside and serve other gods

Again, it is plural – “and you (all) turn aside, and you (all) serve them, and you (all) worship them.” In failing to love the Lord God with all of the heart, the heart has space for another. The heart is opened, and the soul turns aside. In this, the enticement has led to serving other gods.

But verse 13 also said to not only love, but to serve the Lord God with all the heart and soul. Thus, the entire connection to God – heart and soul in both love and service – is corrupted. If room is allowed for another, another will fill the room, resulting in...

16 (con’t) and worship them,

The word is shakhah. It means to bow down. It was used in the giving of the Ten Commandments – “you shall not bow down to them nor serve them.”

Again, one can follow the progression of this by looking to the woman who opened her heart to another man. She first failed to take heed. She then opened her heart. She then turned aside from her husband and to another. She then served him with gifts and presents. She then did obeisance to him by divorcing her husband and marrying him.

The Lord made a contract with Israel, and they are being told of the consequences of allowing in another – thus violating that contract. In doing so, Moses warns...

¹⁷ lest the LORD’s anger be aroused against you, v’kharah aph Yehovah bakem – “And burns nose Yehovah in you.” It is the usual graphic way of describing anger. It is as if fire shoots from the Lord’s nostrils as He fumes at the adulterous actions of the people. From here, until verse 21, the words form a chiasm –

Deuteronomy 11:17-21 (Instruction of the Word)

Truth or Consequences (11/16/2020)

- a. and He shut up the heavens so that there be no rain
 - b. and the land (ha’adamah) yield no produce, and you perish quickly from the good land which the LORD is giving you
 - c. “Therefore you shall lay up these words of mine in your heart and in your soul, and bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes.
 - x. You shall teach them to your children, speaking of them when you sit in your house, when you walk by the way, when you lie down, and when you rise up
 - c. And you shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates,
 - b. that your days and the days of your children may be multiplied in the land (ha’adamah) of which the LORD swore to your fathers to give them
- a. like the days of the heavens above the earth

With this now seen, we can go on to review what the result of His anger will be...

¹⁷ (con’t) and He shut up the heavens so that there be no rain,

Here, the word atsar, meaning to shut up, or close, is used. It is used of a woman when she is barren. Hence, her womb is closed. Some then equate the heavens to a womb, but this is not a great analogy. It is more rightly equated to either a woman's breast or even a bottle. The rains are restrained from pouring out...

17 (con't) and the land yield no produce, v'ha'adamah lo titen eth yebulah – “and the ground no gives her increase.” Saying “land” is incorrect. In the next clause, a completely different word is used to describe the land. Here, it should read “ground,” or “earth.”

Without rain, the soil dries up, the seed will not germinate, and even if it does, it will quickly die without more moisture. Following that, it notes...

17 (con't) and you perish quickly from the good land which the LORD is giving you.

Moses returns to the thought of verses 11 and 12 –

“...but the land which you cross over to possess is a land of hills and valleys, which drinks water from the rain of heaven, ¹² a land for which the LORD your God cares; the eyes of the LORD your God are always on it, from the beginning of the year to the very end of the year.” Deuteronomy 11:11, 12

The land is a good land, but the land is one that Yehovah keeps His eyes on. And more, it is the land that He has given to Israel. What the Lord gives by covenant, the Lord can and will control because of that same covenant. In opening up their hearts to other gods, the natural consequence of their actions is His withholding the rains, leading to famine, and resulting in perishing.

Both the blessing of rain, and the withholding of it are at the direction of the Lord. Though it is stated here, Amos (and elsewhere) shows that it is so.

*Blessing upon blessing I shall pour upon you
If you will love Me and serve Me with all of your heart
And with all of your soul; this too
In this, our relationship can start*

*And if you continue to love and serve Me
I will prosper you for all of your days
You will live in a land that produces abundantly
You shall reap and your animals shall graze*

*This for all the days of the heavens will be true
I will prosper you and bless you day unto day
Eternal blessings will come upon you
If you will love Me and serve Me in that way*

II. A Multiplication of Days (verses 18-21)

The coming words are quite similar to those of Deuteronomy 6. Putting them side by side, however, there are some differences –

“And these words which I command you today shall be in your heart. ⁷ You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, when you walk by the way, when you lie down, and when you rise up. ⁸ You shall bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes. ⁹ You shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates.” Deuteronomy 6:6-9

“Therefore you shall lay up these words of mine in your heart and in your soul, and bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes. ¹⁹ You shall teach them to your children, speaking of them when you sit in your house, when you walk by the way, when you lie down, and when you rise up. ²⁰ And you shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates.” Deuteronomy 11:18-20

One of the main differences is the order in which the things are given. Also, instead of speaking in the second person singular as in Chapter 6, it is now mostly in the second person plural. If someone were simply inserting words into the book, there would be several things that would have been done differently.

First, they wouldn't have bothered, because the substance of what is said is already there. Secondly, if they were to bother, they would have kept the order the same. And thirdly, if they were to bother, they would have kept the person singular as in Deuteronomy 6.

In other words, what we have here is original, it is from Moses, and he is conveying these words now to ensure that both the collective group, and each individual person, knows that these things apply equally to them.

¹⁸ “Therefore you shall lay up these words of mine in your heart and in your soul,

All of verse 18 is in the second person plural – you all. Also, the word is al, upon – “Each and every one of you are instructed to do these things, beginning with storing up his words upon your heart and upon your soul.”

If the heart has words of law laid upon it, the people will not have room to allow in other influences. If the words are laid upon the soul, there will be no time for actions that direct the body in the wrong direction. The whole person will be directed to what is right and proper in the conduct of their lives. It is what Paul refers to in 2 Corinthians 10:5, when he says to believers, “bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ.”

One’s mind and actions will be focused on that which he allows in. If one is thinking about Christ, he will shut out that which is not Christian. But it is an active and ongoing process. The words of Ruth 2:4 give a wonderful example of this –

“Now behold, Boaz came from Bethlehem, and said to the reapers, ‘The LORD be with you!’

And they answered him, ‘The LORD bless you!’” Ruth 2:4

Including the Lord in each action, interaction, conversation, mental thought, and so on... This is what laying up the words upon one’s heart and upon the soul includes. This is what loving the Lord with all of one’s heart and soul involves. And as reminders for when the mind is overloaded, and the soul is afflicted or oppressed...

18 (con’t) and bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes.

The words here are similar to verse 6:8 –

“You shall bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes.” Deuteronomy 6:8

The main difference is that it was in the second person singular there, but here it is in the second person plural. The meaning, however, is the same.

First, it says, u-qeshartem otam l’oth al yedkhem – “And you (all) shall bind them to sign on your hand.” As a review, an oth, or sign, is something that represents something else. The hand is what accomplishes tasks.

Therefore, the people are to remember the words Moses is speaking out in everything they accomplish – be it cleaning a bathroom, washing the dishes, or buying a house. It is to be done with the Lord in mind.

It next says, v'hayu l'totaphoth ben enekhem – “and they shall be to frontlets between your eyes.” This is the last of three times that the “frontlets,” or totaphoth, are used in the Bible. It is derived from an unused root signifying to go around or bind.

The words here are not to be taken literally, but as a metaphor. The place between the eyes is the forehead, the place of conscience and identification. Therefore, this symbolizes that a person is to set his mind on the law of the Lord. In the New Testament, it is reflective of what Paul says to the Colossians –

“If then you were raised with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ is, sitting at the right hand of God. ²Set your mind on things above, not on things on the earth.” Colossians 3:1, 2

Moses' words now indicate the state of each person before the Lord. They are to accomplish every task with the Lord in mind and consider Him in all that is done. And they are to mentally acknowledge the Lord by thinking on His law and of His handiwork in everything they do.

In saying this to the people, Moses admonishes them to think on the Lord, live for the Lord, and conduct their affairs to the Lord at all times. Further...

¹⁹ You shall teach them to your children,

The words of this verse form the center of the chiasm that we looked at earlier. Here, Moses begins the verse in the second person plural – “You (all) shall teach them to your children.” This then substantiates what I mentioned in the very complicated verse, 11:2, last week. Most translations there say something like, “Know today that I do not speak with your children.” That is shown to be incorrect. Moses is speaking to the children through the parents. His instruction does not ignore them at all. As he says...

¹⁹ (con't) speaking of them

l'dabber bam – “to speak them.” The words bring to mind the words of Paul where he implores fathers to bring up their children in the training and admonition of the Lord.”

One cannot train what is not laid down. But once it is laid down, then it can be conveyed. And this is to be...

19 (con't) when you sit in your house, when you walk by the way, when you lie down, and when you rise up.

Two important points come forth concerning these words. First, instead of “when,” the Hebrew repeatedly reads, “in” –

“in thy sitting in thy house, and in thy going in the way, and in thy lying down, and in thy rising up.” YLT

Secondly, if you know your thee’s, thy’s, and thou’s, you noticed that Moses has – in the middle of this verse – returned to the second person singular throughout this entire clause.

However, this wouldn’t be him speaking to Israel collectively as he usually does, but rather, he is surely speaking to each individual personally – You (all) shall teach your children, and you (personally) are to do it at these times.

Also, the words of this section are identical, letter for letter, to Deuteronomy 6:8. It is as if it was a phrase Moses had memorized and probably repeated many times before stating it here. When someone came forward and said, “Moses, my kid is being difficult. What can I do?” His answer would be, “Tell him of the Lord in your sitting in your tent, and in your going in the way, and in your lying down, and in your rising up. This is what you are to do.”

The only difference now is that the words are amended for their time in Canaan. That includes...

20 And you shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates,

With the exception of a single letter added into the word “doorposts” in this verse, the words are identical to the words of Deuteronomy 6:9. The letter doesn’t change the pronunciation at all, but it is simply a variant way of spelling the word mezuzoth, or “doorposts.”

It is another clue to the authenticity of Mosaic authorship. Anyone else would have copied it verbatim. But just as, at times, I will spell the word worshipped with two letters, and at times I will do so with one, so Moses added in a second vav to the word.

As I noted in Chapter 6, the idea here is to be taken metaphorically, even if it was literally accomplished by whoever decided to do so.

The two words of focus are mezuzah and shaar – doorpost and gate. The word mezuzah, or doorpost, comes from the same source as the word ziz, or “moving things.” That word is used to describe beasts moving in the field, or the bosom of a woman. And so, it means that which is conspicuous.

Hence, the mezuzah, is that which is conspicuous and prominent in the life of a person. The shaar, or gate, comes from shaar meaning to calculate or reckon. As we saw in Chapter 6, that is used only once, in Proverbs 23:7 –

“For as he thinks in his heart, so is he.
‘Eat and drink!’ he says to you,
But his heart is not with you.” Proverbs 23:7

The gate is for protection of those within. A gatekeeper is one who actively decides who to let in and who to keep out. He makes a reckoning and acts upon that. Understanding these roots, the symbolism of the two words is then made obvious.

The law of the Lord is to be so ingrained in a person that it is in the prominent place of a person’s life. Every major decision is to be made based on an understanding of the law of the Lord. Further, it is to be so inscribed in a person that it is what is then the basis for making life’s decisions. In this, it will be a guard for the wellbeing of the individual.

One is to evaluate the circumstances set before him, consider what is to be done in relation to the law of the Lord which he is intimately familiar with, and then act upon those things accordingly.

As you can see, Deuteronomy is considered a repetition of the law, a second reading. But even within Deuteronomy, there are repetitions. This is as much of a learning tool as anything else. In repeating an idea, people tend to remember what they have heard. In repeating an idea, people tend to remember what they have heard. Hence, Moses repeating these key thoughts is a tool for Israel to learn and remember by. This is so...

²¹ that your days and the days of your children may be multiplied in the land

To close out the verses today, Moses returns to the second person plural. He is speaking to each person and to every person. In faithfully being obedient to the law, there is the promise of the multiplication of the days of Israel upon ha'adamah, or “the ground.”

This then is set in contrast to verse 17, where it said that in the Lord's anger there would be no rain upon ha'adamah, or the ground, in order to bring forth produce. In that, they would perish from ha'eret ha'tovah, or the land the good, that Yehovah was giving them.

It is this ground Moses reminds them...

²¹ (con't) of which the LORD swore to your fathers to give them,

In verse 17, it said, “the good land which the LORD is giving you.” Here, Moses says it is the land the Lord swore to give to the fathers (them). It is an interesting statement that brings into mind the thought of genealogical inheritance, and what that exactly means.

It is a precept found in Hebrews 7. There, and speaking of Abraham who gave tithes to Melchizedek, the author shows that Levi, who was not yet born, technically pays tithes through his great grandfather, Abraham –

“Here mortal men receive tithes, but there he receives them, of whom it is witnessed that he lives. ⁹ Even Levi, who receives tithes, paid tithes through Abraham, so to speak, ¹⁰ for he was still in the loins of his father when Melchizedek met him.” Hebrews 7:8-10

Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, though dead, received the land inheritance through their offspring. At the same time, the offspring receive the land inheritance through their fathers. Stepping back and looking at it in relation to Christ, we see that the same truth applies.

Abraham receives the promise by faith in the coming Messiah, his Offspring, and – at the same time – the Offspring (Christ Jesus) is the One who receives the Promise having come through the fathers (being their Seed). As it says in Galatians 3:19, “What purpose then does the law serve? It was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made.”

This is the beauty of chiasms. When they are properly lined up, we can see what is going on in a much more logical and orderly way. For now, the days of multiplication for Israel are – at least potentially – possible to be...

21 (fin) like the days of the heavens above the earth.

The meaning is “forever.” As long as the heavens are above the earth, so will Israel dwell in the land, if – only if – they are obedient to the Lord God. The conditional words spoken earlier are the caveat that Israel must deal with.

Hence, Moses is giving them all of this detailed instruction and exhortation. If Israel fails to observe what is said, they will – as noted earlier – quickly perish from the land. The words “quickly perish” and “like the days of the heavens above the earth,” are set in complete opposition to one another. The choice is Israel’s.

However, we have already seen that Israel’s unfaithfulness to the covenant does not affect the Lord’s faithfulness at all. He has kept, is keeping, and will keep His promises to this covenant until it is fulfilled for Israel in Christ – meaning when they receive Him.

Israel stands because the Lord has said that they will stand. The evidence of it is seen even two millennia after they turned their back on Him. Understanding that His faithfulness to the covenant is that enduring, and understanding that Christ has offered a New Covenant in His blood, we can be even more sure of the enduring nature of His promises to those who come to Him by faith.

He has promised, with a guarantee, that those who come to Him will never be rejected – never. Though spit upon by the very people He has saved, the doctrine of eternal salvation remains. How unfortunate it is that people fail to simply take the word at face value and then accept what it clearly teaches. We are saved, despite ourselves, when we come to Christ.

Please trust in that, rest in that, and be assured of it. Jesus Christ’s blood is effectual to cover every sin that we have ever committed. And He will carry us through to a place of goodness and eternal blessing if we have called on Him. If you haven’t, it’s time for you to do it. Come to the cross and be reconciled to God through our Lord Jesus Christ. May it be so, and may it be today. Amen.

Closing Verse: *“His seed shall endure forever,
And his throne as the sun before Me;*

³⁷ *It shall be established forever like the moon,
Even like the faithful witness in the sky." Selah" Psalm 89:36, 37*

Next Week: Deuteronomy 11:22-32 It's a tough quiz, but guess which is worse... (The Blessing and the Curse) (38th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Like the Days of the Heavens Above the Earth

And it shall be that if you earnestly obey
My commandments which I command you today
To love the LORD your God and serve Him
With all your heart and with all your soul, so to you I say...

Then I will give you the rain for your land in its season
The early rain and the latter rain, so good for your topsoil
That you may gather in your grain
Your new wine, and your oil

And I will send grass for your livestock in your fields
That you may eat and be filled; abundance shall be your yields

Take heed to yourselves, lest your heart be deceived
And you turn aside and serve other gods and worship them
-----doing something in this vein
Lest the LORD's anger be aroused against you
And He shut up the heavens so that there be no rain

And the land yield no produce, as it certainly will do
And you perish quickly from the good land
-----which the LORD is giving you

"Therefore you shall lay up these words of mine
In your heart and in your soul; thus, being wise
And bind them as a sign on your hand

And they shall be as frontlets between your eyes

You shall teach them to your children
Speaking of them when you sit in your house over a coffee cup
When you walk by the way
When you lie down, and when you rise up

And you shall write them on the doorposts of your house
And on your gates, please understand
That your days and the days of your children
May be multiplied in the land

Of which the LORD swore to your fathers to give them
-----long before your birth
Like the days of the heavens above the earth

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 11:22-32 (The Blessing and the Curse)

The idea of a curse is that of vilification. There are lots of words translated as “curse” in the Old Testament and together they come up to over 150 uses. All in all, the idea of the curse permeates the Old Testament writings.

Curses are mentioned in the New Testament as well, in various ways and with various Greek words. The story of the Bible is one of man falling under a curse, and how God is working to end that state.

It all started in Genesis 3 when the man disobeyed the Lord by following the lies of the serpent instead of obeying the command of God. But it was the command of God that made that possible. There is nothing wrong with God giving the command, and He had every right to do so. But without a law, no law could be broken.

As for the serpent, for what he did, he received the first curse of the Bible, and the ground that man would till would likewise be cursed, the second noted curse.

Working all the way through Scripture, these various words translated as “curse” are seen. But the most incredible one of all is the one Paul speaks of in Galatians 3:13. That will be cited during our sermon today.

It is an amazing thing that God has done in order to remove the idea of any remaining curse. We got ourselves into the mess we are in, and the Lord got us out of it. We know this is true because the book is written, and on the last page of it, we are told the words of our text verse for today...

Text Verse: “And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding from the throne of God and of the Lamb. ² In the middle of its street, and on either side of the river, was the tree of life, which bore twelve fruits, each tree yielding its fruit every month. The leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. ³ And there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and His servants shall serve Him. ⁴ They shall see His face, and His name shall be on their foreheads. ⁵ There shall be no night there: They need no lamp nor light of the sun, for the Lord God gives them light. And they shall reign forever and ever.” Revelation 22:1-5

As we progress through our verses today, we will get to a point where Moses speaks of the blessing and the curse. It is only an introductory thought that will be greatly expanded on later. But the idea of these words is given in relation to the law.

As I said, without a law, there can be no infraction. It is by law that sin comes about, and with the coming of sin we see the coming of the curses. We just saw that the Bible ends with the thought of no more curse. But how does the Old Testament end? It ends with the words of Malachi –

“And he will turn
The hearts of the fathers to the children,
And the hearts of the children to their fathers,
Lest I come and strike the earth with a curse.” Malachi 4:6

Malachi was a prophet under the Law of Moses. He was there to call the people to a right standing before the Lord. If that didn't happen, then the earth would be struck with a curse. If the law brings about a curse, and a curse was promised at the end of the Old Testament, and yet there is no more curse at the end of the New Testament, then what does that tell us?

It tells us that what we need is grace, not the law. This is the continued lesson of the law. The curses that Moses will refer to today, and in the chapters to come, mean that grace is not at the forefront of the time of the law. In fact, the law and grace are mutually exclusive.

Let us remember this. It is a most important lesson that is to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Just as He Has Said to You (verses 22-25)

²² “For if you carefully keep all these commandments

It is singular, not plural: ki im shamor tishmerun et kal ha'mitsvah – “For if keeping you (certainly) keep all the commandment.” The word here, shamar, meaning to keep, is repeated for emphasis. Further, it is accentuated with a paragogic nun – an additional letter at the end of the word to provide further stress.

Moses is being particularly emphatic that Israel must be extremely attentive and diligent to heed and to act. Further, being in the singular, he is speaking about a codified body that is a unified law. How this is done will be explained in the final clause of the verse.

For now, it is understood that the command is to be carefully shamor, or kept. It is a common word already seen many times. It signifies to watch over, take heed to, and so on. Moses is telling them that as a guard watches over a jail, or a gardener watches over a garden, so the people (it is plural – you all) are to watch over the observance of the commandment...

22 which I command you to do—

It is still plural – “you all.” “Each of you is to carefully watch over the words that I am now commanding you. The words I speak are given as authority to you, and they are binding upon you. And the substance of what I say to you is...”

22 (con’t) to love the LORD your God,

The words complement what has been said several times concerning loving the Lord, in Deuteronomy 6, 7, 10, and now for the third of three times in Chapter 11. He has said it in both the singular (you Israel), and in the plural (you all). Here, it is in the plural. He then says...

22 (con’t) to walk in all His ways,

These words complement what has been said in Deuteronomy 8 and 10. In those two references, Moses was speaking to Israel in the singular, but here he is speaking to them in the plural. In Chapter 8, he said, “in His ways.” In Chapter 10, he said, “in all His ways.”

The reason for these changes is certainly to avoid any hint of manipulation concerning the precept on the part of the people. By speaking to them in the singular and the plural, nobody can say, “As long as the nation is obedient, my faults are excused.” And, no one can say, “As long as I am obedient, I won’t see any trouble in my life.”

Further, nobody can say, “Moses said to walk in His ways, but not necessarily in ‘all’ of His ways.” The wickedness of the human heart is what is being dealt with here. This is obvious from the manifold ways of saying basically the same thing by Moses.

It is, essentially, the lesson that Jesus spoke to the leaders of Israel concerning their attitude towards matters of the law –

“Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law: justice and mercy and faith. These you ought to have done, without leaving the others undone. ²⁴ Blind guides, who strain out a gnat and swallow a camel!”

-Matthew 23:23, 24

The weightiest matter of the law is first and foremost loving the Lord, followed by loving one’s neighbor. The Pharisees failed, legalists in the church fail, and those who think they can manipulate the relationship between themselves and the Lord by simply straining out gnats prove their attitude is inexcusable. Understanding this, Moses proceeds....

²² (con’t) and to hold fast to Him—

The word is dabaq, to cleave or hold fast to. One should get the sense of not just grabbing and holding on but doing so with the impossibility of letting go. It is used in this way concerning the relationship of Israel to the Lord four times in Deuteronomy.

The use of the word in those four times speaks to both Israel the nation, and to the individual Israelite. The nation cannot blame the individuals, and the individuals cannot blame the nation if the consequences of failure come upon them. But in obedience to the precept...

²³ then the LORD will drive out all these nations from before you,

The clause is still in the plural – you all. But the same thing has been said in the singular to the nation elsewhere – you, Israel. Again, it is important to see what Moses is doing by stating it in both ways.

Because it speaks of the people in the plural, it would be preferable to translate this as “peoples” instead of “nations.” The people of Israel will drive out the peoples of the land.

And more, as elsewhere, the word yarash is used, and it is used in both clauses of this verse. It signifies possession or inheritance. One might say, “And the Lord will disinherit all these peoples from before your faces.”

What they have owned as a possession will be removed from them by the Lord. But, in an act of synergy (two working as one), Moses then also acknowledges it is Israel who will do the task...

23 (con't) and you will dispossess greater and mightier nations than yourselves.

v'rishtem goyim gedolim va'tsumim mikem – “And you (all) will disinherit peoples greats and mighties from you.” Moses just said the Lord will disinherit the peoples. Now he says that Israel will do so. In this, some translations will say “drive out and dispossess,” “dispossess and possess,” and so on. But the thought is the same.

The idea is that the Lord is the force behind what is accomplished, and Israel does the accomplishing. If the Lord decides to not work with Israel, the objective will not be met – even if Israel strives to accomplish the task.

In other words, the action is synergistic and Israel's completion of it is wholly dependent on the Lord's will. As long as Israel works in accord with the will of the Lord, in the service of the Lord, then...

24 Every place on which the sole of your foot treads shall be yours:

kal ha'maqom asher tidrok kaph raglekem bow lakem – “All the place which treads sole your (plural) foot therein yours.” Jewish writers of the past arrogantly said that this is an unconditional statement meaning that anywhere in the world that they walk becomes their possession. The notion is faulty on two levels.

First, it is not unconditional. The entire context of the passage clearly shows that the people must be obedient to the precepts laid before them. Secondly, the area is clearly defined in the following words, limiting them to a specific parcel of land, and no other.

If they fail to be obedient, whatever they possess will not be theirs. In other words, even if Jews live in another area of the world and own the land on which they live, it is still not the land belonging to them, meaning an Israelite land. It is the land of the nations that they simply dwell in.

The land they are given as a people is clearly defined as...

24 (con't) from the wilderness and Lebanon, min ha'midbar v'ha'levanon – “From the wilderness, and to the Lebanon.” It is the southern and northern borders. The wilderness refers to the wilderness of Zin, as was defined in Numbers 34:2. That extended to the west along the wadi of Egypt which drains into the Mediterranean Sea. The northern border is the border of Lebanon. And further...

^{24 (con't)} from the river, the River Euphrates, even to the Western Sea, shall be your territory.

To the east, the land is promised to extend all the way to the Euphrates. To the west, it extends to the Mediterranean Sea, here called ha'yam ha'akharon, or “the sea, the hindermost.” The meaning is that it is behind one who is looking to the east.

The land, as defined in Numbers 34, was only inclusive of Canaan and also the land settled by Reuben, Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh east of the Jordan. However, that could – and should – be extended even to the Euphrates as was promised to Abraham in Genesis 15 –

“To your descendants I have given this land, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the River Euphrates—” Genesis 15:19

It would not be until the time of Solomon that this would be realized, and not long after Solomon's death, the land would begin to diminish due to disobedience. That is recorded in 1 Kings 4 –

“Judah and Israel were as numerous as the sand by the sea in multitude, eating and drinking and rejoicing. ²¹ So Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the River to the land of the Philistines, as far as the border of Egypt. They brought tribute and served Solomon all the days of his life.” 1 Kings 4:20, 21

Only during the reign of Solomon is this recorded. What we have in this verse is poignantly and remarkably restated to Joshua –

“Every place that the sole of your foot will tread upon I have given you, as I said to Moses. ⁴ From the wilderness and this Lebanon as far as the great river, the River Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and to the Great Sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your territory.” Joshua 1:3, 4

There, in Joshua, the Lord says, “as I said to Moses.” And yet, that is not recorded anywhere but here where Moses has been speaking in the first person, or referring to the Lord in the third person. One can clearly see the doctrine of divine inspiration in these words.

²⁵ No man shall be able to stand against you;

The Hebrew is more expressive: lo yityatsev ish biphnekem – “no shall stand man in your face” (meaning, “in your presence”). The pronoun remains second person plural, and so it is saying that each person will be victorious over the foe he faces, or if the leader of another group comes against Israel, as the representative of his people, he would not be able to stand against them. The people of Israel would defeat the enemies they faced because...

²⁵ (con’t) the LORD your God will put the dread of you and the fear of you

Moses uses two words, both nouns, to describe how the Lord will affect the people. One is pakhad, signifying a state of alarm. It is something felt, and thus “dread.” The second is almost a synonym of the first, mora. It is a terror or a fear. And this will be...

²⁵ (con’t) upon all the land where you tread,

Again, the Hebrew is more expressive: al pene kal ha’arets asher tidreku bah – “upon face all the land which you tread in.” Moses then says...

²⁵ (con’t) just as He has said to you.

These words were first prophesied in Exodus 15:16, using one of the same words as here. That was in anticipation of Israel’s arrival. It was then explicitly stated in Deuteronomy 2 –

“This day I will begin to put the dread and fear of you upon the nations under the whole heaven, who shall hear the report of you, and shall tremble and be in anguish because of you.” Deuteronomy 2:25

There, instead of mora, the word yirah was seen, another synonymous word. As has been seen before, the changing of words in this manner gives a clear evidence of Mosaic authorship. Anyone else would have carefully copied the first two words if they were claiming that the Lord had said them. Moses, however, felt free to speak in synonyms to convey his intent.

*Great things I have promised to you
If you will be faithful to My word
The promises shall stand; what I say is true
If you will faithfully attend to what you have heard*

*I shall bless you with a blessing in this land
And you shall prosper in accord with My word
None who come against you shall be able to stand
If you will faithfully attend to what you have heard*

*I shall be with you always and never forsake you
This is My promise, My spoken word
And it shall stand, because what I say is true
If you will faithfully attend to what you have heard*

II. Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal (verses 26-32)

²⁶ “Behold, I set before you today a blessing and a curse:

Moses now sums up his words, calling the people to careful attention with the words raeh anoki noten liphnekem ha’yom berakah u-qelalah – “Look! I set to your faces this day blessing and cursing.” The words shout out for attention and careful heeding of what is said.

With this openly stated and carefully worded, Moses now continues on with the Bible’s clear revelation of the doctrine known as free will. It takes us back to the very first recorded words from the Lord to man –

“Of every tree of the garden you may freely eat; ¹⁷ but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.” Genesis 2:16, 17

In the statement set before Adam were words of blessing or cursing – blessing if he obeyed, cursing if he disobeyed. The choice was his, and the consequences were thus his. If this were not so, sin could not have been imputed. But it was. The same is true with Israel now. The law is given, and the choice of outcome is clearly set before the faces of the people...

27 the blessing, if you obey the commandments

The translation is lacking. It says, asher tishmeru el mitzvoth – “when you (all) hearken unto the commandments.” Using the word “if” makes the entire thought sound conditional in the doing. Rather it is in the receiving after the doing. The Lord will, in fact, give the blessing when the command is hearkened unto (meaning heard and applied).

27 (con’t) of the LORD your God which I command you today;

Again, the synergistic (working together) nature of divine inspiration is seen here. These are the commands of Yehovah Elohim, and yet, it is Moses who is speaking them out as commands to Israel. It is what Peter clearly states to us –

“knowing this first, that no prophecy of Scripture is of any private interpretation, ²¹ for prophecy never came by the will of man, but holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit.” 1 Peter 1:20, 21

28 and the curse, if you do not obey the commandments of the LORD your God,

Here, “if” is correct: im lo tishmeru – “if no you (all) do hearken.” They will receive the blessing when they hearken unto the commandments. And they will receive the cursing if they do not hearken unto them. In other words, the expectation is obedience, even if both the Lord and Moses know that it will not be coming...

28 (con’t) but turn aside from the way which I command you today,

The words, “if you do not hearken,” are now supplemented: “if you do not hearken...but turn aside from the way.” It is this which brings the cursing. There is the way which is right, and there is taking another path which must be punished. That is specifically a violation of the first commandment – “You shall have no other gods before Me.” As Moses says...

28 (con’t) to go after other gods which you have not known.

Of this, Matthew Poole says, “Which you have no acquaintance with, nor experience of their power or wisdom or goodness, as you have had of mine.” That is then supplemented with the words of Cambridge, saying they are gods, “in contradistinction to Jehovah, the revealed God, made known to them by word and deed.”

Israel may have, in fact, known other gods. But it was only as a head knowledge, not something experiential. Yehovah had revealed Himself through His deeds, and He had revealed Himself through His law. Both thoughts were expressed by Moses in Chapter 4—

“For what great nation is there that has God so near to it, as the LORD our God is to us, for whatever reason we may call upon Him? ⁸ And what great nation is there that has such statutes and righteous judgments as are in all this law which I set before you this day?” Deuteronomy 4:7, 8

Yehovah was near to Israel in action, and He was near to Israel in law. To follow another path would be to reject the fountain of both of these marvelous flows of protection and life. To permanently set this in their minds, Moses next commands...

²⁹ Now it shall be, when the LORD your God has brought you into the land which you go to possess,

The words of this verse move to the singular (you Israel). It is a marvelous transition, and an assurance that the nation as a whole will be brought into Canaan and the nation shall possess it.

But more, not all of the people who go into Canaan will participate in what will be directed. And some, who are not yet of Israel, will participate in it.

For example, the noted troublemaker of Israel in Joshua 7 will be dead by the time the events to be relayed by Moses will come about. And Rahab the harlot will be brought into Israel, specifically the tribe of Judah, by then. Thus, the transition of this verse to the singular speaks not of all before Moses now, but of the nation, Israel, before him now.

What is said here is a precursor to what Moses will more fully explain in Deuteronomy 27. They are also shown to be fulfilled, exactly, in Joshua 8. The instruction to Israel is...

²⁹ (con't) that you shall put the blessing on Mount Gerizim and the curse on Mount Ebal.

The Hebrew reads “give,” not “put.” As will be seen in Chapter 27, the blessings and the curses were written on the altar on Mt. Ebal. However, they were called out (given) by the people of selected tribes from both mountains.

The name Gerizim comes from the word garaz – to cut, cut up, or cut off. Being a plural word, the meaning is something like, “The Cutters Down.” It may refer to those who harvest, due to the fertility of the mountain.

The name Ebal comes from an unused root meaning to be bald. Probably signifying the bald appearance of the mountain. Thus, it means something like Bare or Heap of Barrenness.

Of these two facing mountains, Gerizim is to the south and Ebal is to the north. Or, in reference to the layout of directions in the Bible, Gerizim is to the right, and Ebal is to the left. Thus, it matches the scriptural pattern of the right hand of blessing and the left hand of cursing. For example –

“When the Son of Man comes in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then He will sit on the throne of His glory. ³² All the nations will be gathered before Him, and He will separate them one from another, as a shepherd divides his sheep from the goats. ³³ And He will set the sheep on His right hand, but the goats on the left.” Matthew 25:31-33

In the state of the two mountains, one can see a contrast. The mount of blessing is the fertile mountain. The mountain of curse is the bald mountain. Thus, there is metaphor being conveyed. Obedience to the Lord will bring blessing to the land while disobedience will bring a curse.

It is further interesting that the altar where the law was to be inscribed on whitewashed stones, and as is stated in Deuteronomy 27:4-8, it was to be on Mt. Ebal, the mountain to the left. In other words, it anticipates Paul’s words of Galatians 3 –

“For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, ‘Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.’ ¹¹ But that no one is justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for ‘the just shall live by faith.’ ¹² Yet the law is not of faith, but “the man who does them shall live by them.”

¹³ Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us (for it is written, 'Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree'), ¹⁴ that the blessing of Abraham might come upon the Gentiles in Christ Jesus, that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." Galatians 3:10-14

The very words that will be spoken out by the people in Deuteronomy 27:26 are the same words Paul cites in Galatians 3. The law cannot justify, and only a curse results from the giving of the law.

As far as the location of Gerizim, the more favored mountain, that of blessing, it is not mentioned by name in the New Testament, but it is seen there nonetheless when it is referred to in John 4 –

The woman said to Him, "Sir, I perceive that You are a prophet. ²⁰ Our fathers worshiped on this mountain, and you Jews say that in Jerusalem is the place where one ought to worship."

²¹ Jesus said to her, "Woman, believe Me, the hour is coming when you will neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, worship the Father. ²² You worship what you do not know; we know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews. ²³ But the hour is coming, and now is, when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth; for the Father is seeking such to worship Him. ²⁴ God is Spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth."

-John 4:19-24

Mount Gerizim is the mountain she is referring to. For the Samaritans, this was their place of worship. For the Jews, Jerusalem was their place of worship. But the Lord corrected her, and any Jews who would pay heed.

Salvation is of the Jews because of the coming of Messiah, but Jerusalem was only a place that anticipated Him. What was there, and what occurred there only pictured His fulfillment of those things. It is in Him, and in any location that those who are in Him may be, that true worship of God – through Him – may be found.

Of these dueling mountains, Moses next says...

³⁰ Are they not on the other side of the Jordan,

The Hebrew doesn't say "the other side." It states "in side the Jordan." It can refer to either side, but it is then explained by the next words...

30 (con't) toward the setting sun, akhare derek mebo ha'shemesh – “after way going down the sun.” What this might be saying is that one of the main roads going north and south through Canaan was known as the Way of the West, similar to another such road that would have run in the same manner on the east side.

The mountains were to the west of that way and so it means westward, toward the setting sun. This is a new noun in Scripture, mabo, or an entrance. In this case, it is an entrance in the sense that it is going down, as is stated in Malachi 1:11 where the last use of the word is seen –

“For from the rising of the sun, even to its going down,
My name shall be great among the Gentiles;
In every place incense shall be offered to My name,
And a pure offering;
For My name shall be great among the nations,”
Says the LORD of hosts.” Malachi 1:11

It may be, and this is a note of speculation, that this phrase could be figuratively showing that the law is merely a transitional part of the redemptive plan. The sun rises in the east, and it sets in the west with the greatness of the name of the Lord being proclaimed by the Gentiles throughout the entire extent of that happening.

This appears to be so based on the last use of shemesh, or “sun,” in the Old Testament, which is referring metaphorically to Christ the Lord –

“But to you who fear My name
The Sun of Righteousness shall arise.” Malachi 4:2

As the sun actually never sets, but simply disappears from view, this verse may be an allusion to the fact that Christ is the embodiment of this law that holds both the blessing and the cursing for Israel. The name of the Lord, Jesus, is great among the nations from the rising of the sun to its going down.

30 (con't) in the land of the Canaanites who dwell in the plain opposite Gilgal, beside the terebinth trees of Moreh?

Here, it says, ha'gilgal, or “the Gilgal,” meaning, “the Wheel.” Thus, it is a known circle of stones that is referred to here. The importance of these words takes us back to Genesis 12. There, the Lord vowed to bless Abraham, and directed him to go to Canaan. After that it said –

“Then Abram took Sarai his wife and Lot his brother’s son, and all their possessions that they had gathered, and the people whom they had acquired in Haran, and they departed to go to the land of Canaan. So they came to the land of Canaan. ⁶ Abram passed through the land to the place of Shechem, as far as the terebinth tree of Moreh. And the Canaanites were then in the land.

⁷ Then the LORD appeared to Abram and said, ‘To your descendants I will give this land.’” And there he built an altar to the LORD, who had appeared to him.”

-Genesis 12:5-7

The Lord, through Moses, is calling to remembrance the promise made to Abraham. Despite the Canaanites dwelling there, He had promised it to Abraham. That promise was soon to be fulfilled through his descendants now being instructed by Moses.

As the Lord is faithful to remember His promise of the land, so He will then be faithful to remember His other dealings with Abraham, including – righteousness through faith, and not deeds of the law.

Thus, the law that is now being set forth, and which will be recorded on Mt. Ebal, cannot be the realization of the promise, except as it is found being fulfilled in Christ.

³¹ For you will cross over the Jordan

In verse 29, the pronouns were in the singular – for just that one verse. In verse 30, there were no pronouns referring to Israel. Now, through the end of the chapter, the pronouns return to the second person plural, you all.

Here it says: ki atem overim eth ha'yarden – “For you (all) are the crossers over the Jordan.” As has been seen elsewhere, a pun is probably being made. The word overim, or “crossers over,” is identical in spelling to the word ivrim, or “Hebrews.” Moses is telling them that they, the Hebrews, are the crossers over the Jordan.

As the Jordan is a picture and type of Christ, it is those who cross through Him that are the true Hebrews, or “crossers over.” It is they of whom Moses says will cross over...

^{31 (con't)} and go in to possess the land which the LORD your God is giving you, and you will possess it and dwell in it.

Abraham was noted as the first Hebrew. He was promised the land, as were his descendants after him. But that is only a part of the promise. In Genesis 22, after not withholding his son Isaac, the Lord said to him –

“By Myself I have sworn, says the LORD, because you have done this thing, and have not withheld your son, your only son— ¹⁷ blessing I will bless you, and multiplying I will multiply your descendants as the stars of the heaven and as the sand which is on the seashore; and your descendants shall possess the gate of their enemies. ¹⁸ In your seed all the nations of the earth shall be blessed, because you have obeyed My voice.” Genesis 22:16-18

Paul then says in Galatian 3 –

Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, “And to seeds,” as of many, but as of one, “And to your Seed,” who is Christ. ¹⁷ And this I say, that the law, which was four hundred and thirty years later, cannot annul the covenant that was confirmed before by God in Christ, that it should make the promise of no effect. ¹⁸ For if the inheritance is of the law, it is no longer of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise.” Galatians 3:16-18

Israel, a people under the law, are being told they will enter the land promised to their fathers. It is a land where the Lord will dwell among them.

Further, they are told that living in the land is conditional based on obedience to the law. But the promise of blessing cannot be because of the law if Abraham was given the promise long before the time of the law.

Therefore, the promise is not the land of Canaan, but only what the land of Canaan anticipates, a place where man will dwell with the Lord forever. That means that our final words of the passage today are to be instructive...

^{*32 (fin)} And you shall be careful to observe all the statutes and judgments which I set before you today.

The verses today close out a section of Deuteronomy that deals with the relation of the people who were brought out of Egypt towards Yehovah their God. The next section, that goes from 12:1 to 16:17, will deal with the land as the seat of worship of the Lord.

For now, these words tie right back to verse 26. There Moses spoke of obeying the commandments. Now He explains that, saying, “the statutes and the judgments.” If they are to obey the statutes and judgments in order to remain in the land, then the land cannot be the sum of the promise.

As Paul noted, the law cannot annul the covenant made by God in Christ to Abraham, thus making the promise of no effect. But if disobeying the law can mean there will be punishment and exile from the land, then the promise cannot merely be the land.

The land is a promise, and it is based on conditions. But it is not the ultimate Promise which comes without conditions. The promise is Christ, and He is promised before and apart from the law. This is what Israel must come to understand. Until they do, they will continue to flounder in a world without any true hope.

Only in coming to Christ can the fulfillment of all of God’s promises be fully realized. The law was given to show them this. And as the law was only given to Israel, it is meant as an instructive tool for them, and for everyone else.

The world doesn’t need more laws. One was enough to condemn all of humanity. What the world needs is the grace of God in Christ Jesus. He is the One who is sufficient to save all of humanity, if they are but willing to come to Him. The adding of the Law of Moses was to teach us this in a poignant way.

Those of Israel who were considered right before the Lord were those who loved the Lord beyond the precepts of the law, not because of the precepts of the law. The law, as noble as it is, is only a reflection of the Lord. But to seek the Lord goes beyond rote observance to the very heart of man desiring intimacy with his Creator – something man can employ toward the Lord apart from the law.

However, that can only come about when the sin of man is dealt with. There may be people who seek after God, but they do so apart from the mediation of Christ. God cannot accept this. Only in the covering of man with the righteousness of Christ can God then accept him. The problem is sin, sin comes by law, and therefore man must be given grace – the grace of God which is found in the giving of Christ for the sin debt.

This is the continued lesson of the law. May we be wise and pay heed. It is through Christ and Christ alone that we stand justified before the Holy God. May today be the day you realize this and call out to Him for cleansing.

Closing Verse: “But when the fullness of the time had come, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the law,⁵ to redeem those who were under the law, that we might receive the adoption as sons.” Galatians 4:4, 5

Next Week: Deuteronomy 12:1-7 It’s not intended for the one who refuses, meaning any-one... (The Place Where the Lord Your God Chooses, Part I) (39th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Blessing and the Curse

“For if you carefully keep all these commandments
Which I command you to do
To love the LORD your God, to walk in all His ways
And to hold fast to Him; pay heed my word is true

Then the LORD will drive out
All these nations from before you; like cleaning pantry shelves
And you will dispossess nations
Greater and mightier nations than yourselves

Every place on which the sole of your foot treads shall be yours:
From the wilderness and Lebanon in its glory
From the river, the River Euphrates
Even to the Western Sea, shall be your territory

No man shall be able to stand against you
The LORD your God will put the dread of you
And the fear of you upon all the land where you tread
Just as He has said to you, so He shall do

“Behold, I set before you today a blessing and a curse:

The blessing, if you obey
The commandments of the LORD your God
Which I command you today

And the curse, if you do not obey the commandments
Of the LORD your God, but turn aside from the way
Which I command you today
To go after other gods which you have not known
-----if you so go astray

Now it shall be, when the LORD your God
Has brought you into the land which you go to possess
That you shall put the blessing on Mount Gerizim
And the curse on Mount Ebal, so to you I address

Are they not on the other side of the Jordan
Toward the setting sun just as I say
In the land of the Canaanites who dwell in the plain Opposite Gilgal, beside the terebinth trees of Moreh?

For you will cross over the Jordan and go in to possess the land
Which the LORD your God is giving you
And you will possess it and dwell in it
So you shall do

And you shall be careful to observe, just as I say
All the statutes and judgments which I set before you today

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 12:1-7 (The Place Where the Lord Your God Chooses, Part I)

Paul says that the law was given as a tutor to lead people to Christ. Thus, in giving the law to Israel, they were being educated on what is right and what is wrong, but in a way that will eventually lead them to a fuller understanding of what God is like, and of what He expects from His people.

This is done in such a way that we are to find Christ Jesus in the giving of this law, and to then respond by coming to Him. We can discover not only what God is like (because He is the embodiment of the unseen God), but how to properly worship Him.

As this is so, then the form of worship given in the Old Testament, via the Old Covenant, cannot be the full expression of how to worship God. In fact, in coming to Christ, we can find out what was actually lacking in the mode and means of service to the Lord in the law.

This doesn't mean the law is imperfect, but it is – in fact – incomplete. Because of this, it is not considered “faultless” by the author of Hebrews. This is not because what is given in the law is faulty, but because we are. The incomplete nature of the service of the Lord under the law highlighted this.

Thus, this service of the Lord is only an anticipatory step towards a full, perfect, and final form of worship that will be sufficient to please God for all eternity. Jesus tells us of this in John 4 –

Text Verse: “The woman said to Him, ‘Sir, I perceive that You are a prophet. ²⁰ Our fathers worshiped on this mountain, and you Jews say that in Jerusalem is the place where one ought to worship.’

²¹ Jesus said to her, ‘Woman, believe Me, the hour is coming when you will neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, worship the Father. ²² You worship what you do not know; we know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews. ²³ But the hour is coming, and now is, when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth; for the Father is seeking such to worship Him. ²⁴ God is Spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth.’” John 4:19-24

The implements of worship under the Old Covenant are explicitly said by Paul, and by the author of Hebrews, to be mere shadows of heavenly things. Those heavenly things are found in Christ alone. Therefore, in coming to Christ we then have everything necessary to be pleasing to God in our mode and means of worship.

This is the beauty and the marvel of Jesus Christ. All of the sufficiency for us to be pleasing to God, and to continue to be pleasing to God – for all eternity – is found in Him. Let us remember this as we continue on through the magnificent body of literature, wisdom, and wonder that we call “The Law of Moses.”

As breathtaking and beautiful as it is, it is only a steppingstone to that which is more marvelous and fully complete, because it is Jesus Christ alone who can perfect us and bring us to completion in Him. This is a wonderful truth that is to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Mode and the Means (verses 1-4)

¹“These are the statutes and judgments

elleh ha'khukim v'ha'mishpatim – “These the statutes and the judgments.” Concerning where we are now in Deuteronomy, Albert Barnes correctly notes the following –

“Moses now passes on to apply Deuteronomy 12-26 the leading principles of the Decalogue to the ecclesiastical, civil, and social life of the people. Particulars will be noticed which are unique to the Law as given in Deuteronomy; and even in laws repeated from the earlier books various new circumstances and details are introduced. This is only natural. The Sinaitic legislation was nearly 40 years old and had been given under conditions of time, place, and circumstance different and distant from those now present. Yet the Sinaitic system, far from being set aside or in any way abrogated, is on the contrary throughout presupposed and assumed. Its existence and authority are taken as the starting-point for what is here prescribed, and an accurate acquaintance with it on the part of the people is taken for granted.”

In other words, what was given at Sinai is being supplemented now by Moses' words in Deuteronomy, but it complements that law. It in no way contradicts it or sets it aside. Further, it is taken as an axiom that what was given at Sinai is perfectly understood by those now receiving Deuteronomy. Therefore, both the Law received from Sinai, and that which is now being added to it for Israel's instruction is that...

^{1 (con't)} which you shall be careful to observe asher tishmerun laasot – “which you (all) shall be (certainly) careful to observe. This is the fourth and last time in Deuteronomy that this word, shamar, meaning to keep, is accentuated with a paragogic nun – a letter at the end of it to provide further stress.

It may seem nitpicky to talk about things like this, but considering the outcome of not heeding it reveals it is not. This accentuation on the word shamar is found these four times in Deuteronomy, and then only one more time in all of the Old Testament. In 2 Kings 17, the words we are now evaluating are cast back in the face of disobedient Israel, at a time just after the northern tribes were exiled to Assyria. Despite their punishments, those in the land continued to fail to heed Moses –

“To this day they continue practicing the former rituals; they do not fear the LORD, nor do they follow their statutes or their ordinances, or the law and commandment which the LORD had commanded the children of Jacob, whom He named Israel, ³⁵ with whom the LORD had made a covenant and charged them, saying: ‘You shall not fear other gods, nor bow down to them nor serve them nor sacrifice to them; ³⁶ but the LORD, who brought you up from the land of Egypt with great power and an outstretched arm, Him you shall fear, Him you shall worship, and to Him you shall offer sacrifice. ³⁷ And the statutes, the ordinances, the law, and the commandment which He wrote for you, you shall be careful to observe forever; you shall not fear other gods. ³⁸ And the covenant that I have made with you, you shall not forget, nor shall you fear other gods. ³⁹ But the LORD your God you shall fear; and He will deliver you from the hand of all your enemies.’ ⁴⁰ However they did not obey, but they followed their former rituals. ⁴¹ So these nations feared the LORD, yet served their carved images; also their children and their children’s children have continued doing as their fathers did, even to this day.” 2 Kings 17:34-41

Israel was not careful to observe, and the woes that came upon them as a people were a self-inflicted wound. One letter of accentuation, tucked onto the end of this word, reveals much more than one might normally think is of any instructive value at all.

^{1 (con’t)} in the land which the LORD God of your fathers is giving you to possess,

Moses goes from the plural to the singular in this clause. He is speaking to the nation as a whole: ba’arets asher natan Yehovah elohe abotekha lekha l’rishta – “in the land which giving Yehovah, God your (singular) fathers to you (singular) to possess.

Using the word ha'arets, or “the land,” Moses reminds Israel that Yehovah isn't just a new god that they have recently conjured up out of their own heads, but that He is the same God that appeared to their fathers, made sure promises to them, and has kept those promises by now bringing Israel into Canaan. It is a land they are given to possess...

^{1 (con't)} all the days that you live on the earth.

Now, he is speaking to the people of the nation: kal ha'yamim asher atem khayim al ha'adamah – all the days which you (all) live upon the earth.” The change in the pronoun back to the plural should alert the people that individual obedience is expected and needed for national Israel to succeed.

Here, Moses uses the word ha'adamah, or “the earth.” The Lord God of the fathers is giving Israel the land. Thus, the people of Israel are to observe the words of the Lord as long as they live on the earth. One can see that the land is given to the nation, but possession of the land is conditional. The changes in the pronouns, and in the description of the object, are subtle but important.

Moses will now continue with specific statutes and judgments, explaining just what is necessary for obedience...

² You shall utterly destroy

The words are highly emphatic, both repeating the word abad, or destroy, and again adding another accentuated letter to the end of the word: abed teabedun – “Destroying, you shall (utterly) destroy.”

It is as if Moses is saying, “Take these things, smash them, grind them to powder, and then burn them. Let nothing of them remain.” And the objects of the destruction are...

^{2 (con't)} all the places where the nations which you shall dispossess served their gods,

Wherever the people served their gods, there was to be a complete destruction of both the mode and the means of worship. Moses will detail those things as he continues. As he is speaking to the people in the plural (you all), I would personally translate this as “peoples” instead of “nations.”

Moses is comparing the people of Israel to the peoples who inhabit the land. “They do these things; you all are to do this thing.” The modes of worship include...

² (con’t) on the high mountains and on the hills

These are singled out because they are the obvious places to get nearer to God who is “up there.” It is understood from Scripture that God is in heaven. It is also understood, using the same word, that the heavens are “above.” The obvious thought then is, “If we go up higher, we can be closer to God.”

This was seen in the building of the Tower of Babel. It is seen throughout the Old Testament where the peoples of Canaan and the people of Israel all went to “the high places” to make sacrifices and offerings. As this is where people went to worship their false gods, those places were to be destroyed.

Jesus later came and gave instruction concerning such places as we saw in our text verse from John 4. Serving God on a mountain, even that mountain on which the temple once stood – and on which a temple will stand again someday – is lacking in comparison to worshipping Him in spirit and in truth.

² (con’t) and under every green tree.

v’takhat ka ets raanan – “And under all tree green.” Here is a new word, raanan. It comes from an unused root meaning to be green, and so it is by analogy “new,” or figuratively, “prosperous.” In regard to the symbolism, John Lange may be right when he says –

“It is not truly the vivid fulness of color, but the mysterious rustling of the foliage which comes into view here, as in the high places it is the all-overpowering elements of air and light.” John Lange

One can think of witches casting spells under the heavy oaks, or of the hippies hanging out and burning incense under them. Even Buddha supposedly found his illumination under the Bodhi tree. In such places, people naturally tend to feel closer to the gods or spirits that the mind conjures up. From the modes of worship, Moses next turns to the means...

³ And you shall destroy their altars, break their sacred pillars, and burn their wooden images with fire; you shall cut down the carved images of their gods

These are the ways in which the people served their false gods, building them altars, erecting pillars to them, and carving images of them. Any of these can be seen, even today, as one travels through Asia. There is no sense in the mind, but simply an effort to connect with the divine through the things the hands can fashion.

The words translated as “burn” and “cut down” both contain the same accentuation as in the previous verses. Last week, in verse 11:28, we reviewed a departure from the precept of the 1st Commandment. Now, of these words so far, can see the formal point of the law, the 2nd Commandment, being fleshed out in what we are looking at –

“You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; ⁵you shall not bow down to them nor serve them. For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, ⁶but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.”

-Exodus 20:4-6

There is a right way to worship and serve the Lord, and there are all other ways – each being wrong. The right way is defined in the word. The wrong ways are presented as well. Israel was given the word, they were given the admonitions and warnings in the word, and they were to pay heed to those things.

Moses is adamant concerning the necessary actions to be taken by the people. This was to ensure Moses’ next words...

^{3 (con’t)} and destroy their names from that place.

Here, we see an immediate transition from the 2nd Commandment to the 3rd –

“You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain, for the LORD will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.” Exodus 20:7

In retaining and following after the names of the false gods, the name of Yehovah will – by default – be taken in vain. The word translated as “destroy,” signifies “to perish.” Thus, this can be taken in various ways. It can mean to change in order to eliminate. For example, one can change the name of a person or a place (etc.) from the name of a pagan god to something else.

Gideon is known in the book of Judges as Jerubbaal because of his actions against Baal. Later in 2 Samuel 11:21, Joab calls him Jerubbesheth. In this, it is a literal fulfillment of this precept now being given. This is seen elsewhere as well.

It can also mean to literally destroy the thing that bears the name of something, such as a false god. The names of the gods will remain as long as the images remain. The minds of the people would be polluted with these things, and temptations would set in.

When things didn't go well for someone, the natural inclination would be to try another god and see if it could help. The Old Testament is filled with examples of this, as is our own society. There are palm readers in most towns, there are readers of Tarot cards, and there are spiritualists from every odd religion one can think of at every turn down a new road.

One must consider that if the law was able to make a person holy, there would be no need to remove all these false gods. In being holy, there would be no need to worry about seeking that which is false. But the very fact that Israel is asked to remove these things demonstrates that the inclination of the heart is, and remains, flawed under the law.

⁴You shall not worship the LORD your God with such things.

lo taasun ken Yehovah elohekem – “No you shall (certainly) do so Yehovah your God.” Again, Moses provides an accentuation in the word translated as “you shall do.” One can see the firm sternness in his words as he speaks out the command of the Lord.

By including the accentuation in the written commands, it is a call to strict attention and obedience. To fail in regard to this can only mean disaster for the people. And they cannot say that they were unaware of either the precept or the stress provided in the giving of it. This is because the law was meticulously kept and maintained.

Further, this law was to be read to all of the assembled people once every seven years –

“So Moses wrote this law and delivered it to the priests, the sons of Levi, who bore the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and to all the elders of Israel. ¹⁰And Moses commanded them, saying: “At the end of every seven years, at the appointed time in the year of release, at the Feast of Tabernacles, ¹¹when all Israel comes to appear before the LORD your God in the place which He chooses, you shall read this law before all Israel in their hearing. ¹²Gather the people together, men and women and little ones, and the stranger who is within your gates, that they may hear and that they may learn to fear the LORD your God and carefully observe all the words of this law, ¹³ and that their children, who have not known it, may hear and learn to fear the LORD your God as long as you live in the land which you cross the Jordan to possess.” Deuteronomy 31:9-13

As the law was being read to the people, even as infrequently as every seven years, they would hear these emphases and accentuations provided by Moses, and they would each understand the weight of them. And more, not only were the people to be made aware of them, but the ruler of the land was to be intimately familiar with them as well. He was accountable according to law –

“Also it shall be, when he sits on the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write for himself a copy of this law in a book, from the one before the priests, the Levites. ¹⁹ And it shall be with him, and he shall read it all the days of his life, that he may learn to fear the LORD his God and be careful to observe all the words of this law and these statutes, ²⁰ that his heart may not be lifted above his brethren, that he may not turn aside from the commandment to the right hand or to the left, and that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he and his children in the midst of Israel.” Deuteronomy 17:18-20

Safeguards for both common people and the leaders were set in place. But following the commands implied that those responsible for ensuring they were known in the first place were actually transmitting that knowledge to those who needed to know them.

In other words, if Bibles were in short supply, as was the case for most of church history, and as is the case in many parts of the world today, the weight of conveying what is expected of the church is placed upon the few who have a copy of it.

Such a person may fail to convey the word at all. Or he may be either incompetent in the word or purposefully manipulative of the word. If so, the people – although still accountable for their actions – will never know what is correct.

The ideas still apply today, even though there are Bibles in pretty much every house that wants one. This is for a few reasons. One is that people have lives to live and taking time to learn sound theology is a long, difficult, and mentally laborious task. It is one that few people are actually geared for – even of those who are in the ministry of the word.

Secondly, there is a lack of caring by those who do have time to – at least minimally – train themselves in the word. In other words, the electrician or stockbroker actually does have a life beyond his job and other responsibilities. He may not have time to get a degree from a sound seminary, but he does have time to at least read his Bible.

How do we know this? It is because he has time to watch TV every day of his life. He has time to go to the movies – well, before COVID-19 closed all the movie theaters. He has time to play on the internet, watch sports, read a book, go fishing, lay on the beach and get a suntan, or whatever other thing will fill his free time.

These things are certain. If he has time to do any or all of these things throughout the week, he has time to read the Bible. And even if he doesn't really like to read, he can listen to an audio Bible. These things cannot be denied.

And so, even if not a trained minister of the word, he can at least be learned enough in it to know when something doesn't sound right, or something smells fishy in the theology that is presented.

The precept of the words of Moses now, "You shall not worship the LORD your God with such things," actually extends into our modern life. We cannot worship the Lord properly unless we know how to properly worship the Lord. And that cannot occur unless we are made aware of that through the knowledge of His precious and sacred word.

Is worshiping the Lord through the infinite number of images of Roman Catholicism acceptable? Is worshiping Him through modern "prophets" and "seers" acceptable? Is it acceptable for a congregation to sit under the authority of Joyce Myers or Beth Moore? How can we know? To where do we go to find out?

For Israel, under the law, it was first to Moses, and then to those sanctioned by the Lord to continue carrying forward the word to the people. The Lord even gave safeguards concerning those later speakers and writers to determine if they conveyed the truth or not.

We'll come to some of those safeguards in the next chapter of Deuteronomy. Until then, the word continues through Moses' instruction and exhortation towards the people...

Are you schooled in the word of God?

*If “Yes,” to what extent is it so?
Do you meditate on the word in this world that you trod?
Or, without considering it, is it “Off to the beach” you go?*

*What do you do when someone says to you...?
“Send in your tithes and you will be blessed!”
Do you send him your cash? Is this what you do?
Sending it to that guy who is lavishly dressed*

*Is that what God wants for you in your walk with Him?
Paying off someone else so that you too will get rich
If that’s what you think, your theology is dark and grim
You have been duped by the deceiver’s pitch*

*And it’s all because you neglected the word
Instead, you trusted in that nutty thing you heard*

II. And You Shall Rejoice (verses 5-7)

⁵“But you shall seek the place ki im el ha’maqom – “For if unto the place.” It is a literal way of saying what we would translate with a word such as but, rather, or instead. “You are not to do this. On the other hand, this is what you are to do. You are to go...”

^{5 (con’t)} where the LORD your God chooses, asher yivkhar Yehovah elohekem – “which chooses Yehovah your (plural) God.” In other words, this is being set in contrast to verse 2. The peoples in Canaan made up false gods in their minds.

They did this either by seeing nature (say, a high place or under a tree) and then worshiping what their minds decided upon in that location. Or they made up a god for a need, such as a fertility idol, and then they went to the place that fit that need where they could worship their god.

Either way, the people of Israel were forbidden from doing this. They could not go up on a mountain and say, “I am going to worship Yehovah here because I am closer to Him.”

Nor could they make an idol, call it Yehovah, and place it in a spot they thought reflected Him and say, “This is how I will worship Yehovah.”

They could not draw closer to Him anywhere they went, because He is Spirit, and thus He is everywhere at all times. And they could not rightly worship Him by making something they thought reflected Him, because He transcends His creation. Nothing can compare to Him.

Therefore, they could only approach Him in the manner He determined and in the place that He chose for them to do so. And, that choice was not to be in all of their tribes, but from...

^{5 (con't)} out of all your tribes, mikal shivtekem – “from all of your tribes.” The word “from” here signifies “out of.” And the word shevet, or tribe, signifies more of a political than a genealogical arrangement. The Lord would choose a single spot that stemmed from one tribe of the political arrangement of Israel...

^{5 (con't)} to put His name for His dwelling place;

la'sum eth shemo sham l'shikno – “to set His name there to His residence.” Here is a word found only this once in Scripture, the noun sheken. It signifies a residence, coming from the common verb shakan, meaning to settle down, dwell, or abide. It thus speaks of the place of the tabernacle. Of these words, Charles Ellicott rightly states –

“The very form of the order proves its antiquity. No one who was acquainted with the removal of that “place” from Shiloh to Nob, from Nob to Gibeon, from Gibeon to Jerusalem, could have written with such utter unconsciousness of later history as these words imply.” Charles Ellicott

The obvious question is, “If the Lord is Spirit and thus everywhere, then why can't the people worship the Lord anywhere. And, if the tabernacle is a part of creation, and nothing in creation can fully express the Lord, then how can the words here help the situation?”

The questions are valid, and the answer is multilayered. First, the Lord is everywhere, and yet He has presented Himself in many locations, as revealed in Scripture, and as testified to by Stephen in Acts 7.

Secondly, the Lord was worshipped in those places – both with and without the tabernacle – and thus He can be worshipped anywhere, except during the dispensation of the Law, and/or as explicitly commanded or authorized by the Lord.

Thirdly, in regard to the tabernacle/temple, although those are fabricated things, they reveal – minutely and exactly – spiritual truths that point to the nature of God in Christ. That was revealed in the Exodus sermons that dealt with the construction of the tabernacle, and then in the other sermons from Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers that dealt with the appointed feasts and etc.

This was alluded to earlier when I brought up Paul and the author of Hebrews. Citing them now will help –

“For if He were on earth, He would not be a priest, since there are priests who offer the gifts according to the law; ⁵ who serve the copy and shadow of the heavenly things, as Moses was divinely instructed when he was about to make the tabernacle. For He said, ‘See that you make all things according to the pattern shown you on the mountain.’” Hebrews 8:4, 5

“So let no one judge you in food or in drink, or regarding a festival or a new moon or sabbaths, ¹⁷ which are a shadow of things to come, but the substance is of Christ.” Colossians 2:16, 17

“For the law, having a shadow of the good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with these same sacrifices, which they offer continually year by year, make those who approach perfect.” Hebrews 10:1

Something had to be given for the service and worship of God in Christ during the time of tutoring so that when He came, these things could be understood. This is the mode and the means by which it was to be conducted.

This is certain because of many Old Testament verses. For example, the Lord allowed an offering to be made for him by the parents of Samson, even though it was not at the tabernacle –

“So Manoah took the young goat with the grain offering, and offered it upon the rock to the LORD. And He did a wondrous thing while Manoah and his wife looked on— ²⁰ it happened as the flame went up toward heaven from the altar—the Angel of the LORD ascended in the flame of the altar! When Manoah and his wife saw this, they fell on their faces to the ground.” Judges 13:19, 20

The Lord was present to accept what the shadow only anticipated. And more, we see a marvelous example of this truth when Solomon went to petition the Lord –

“And Solomon spoke to all Israel, to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, to the judges, and to every leader in all Israel, the heads of the fathers’ houses. ³ Then Solomon, and all the assembly with him, went to the high place that was at Gibeon; for the tabernacle of meeting with God was there, which Moses the servant of the LORD had made in the wilderness. ⁴ But David had brought up the ark of God from Kirjath Jearim to the place David had prepared for it, for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem. ⁵ Now the bronze altar that Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, he put before the tabernacle of the LORD; Solomon and the assembly sought Him there. ⁶ And Solomon went up there to the bronze altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of meeting, and offered a thousand burnt offerings on it.” 2 Chronicles 1:2-6

Though the ark was at Jerusalem, the tabernacle was still in Gibeon. This included the altar of burnt offering that was still there. The implication is that a sacrifice was necessary to come before God. And so even though the ark was in Jerusalem, in order to come before the Lord, they had to go Gibeon.

The order of service and worship had to be followed because the typology of those things anticipated Christ. But Yehovah (God incarnate - meaning Christ) stood there before the parents of Samson. Thus, their offering was accepted.

What this is teaching us (remember that the law is our tutor), and indeed for the whole world to read and understand, is that no man may come before God without a sacrifice, and that sacrifice must be Christ the Lord. And when Christ the Lord is there before us, our sacrifices are acceptable to God.

He IS the Place where the Lord your God has chosen to place His name. Until He came, He was to be sought by Israel at the earthly shadow of Him, meaning the tabernacle. As Moses says...

^{5 (con't)} and there you shall go.

u-bata shama – “And you (singular) shall go there.” The pronoun in this one clause suddenly goes from the plural to the singular which hasn’t been seen since the middle clause of verse 1.

In this, it says, “you (Israel) shall seek, and you shall go.” The question then is, “Is Moses speaking to Israel as a nation, or is he going from ‘you all’ in general to ‘you’ the individual.

He could be looking at the whole, and with waving hands say, “All of you shall seek, and you – Israel – shall go.” Or, he could be waving his arm across the masses and saying, “You all shall seek,” and then, pointing at person after person, he then says, “and you shall go.”

Either way, the change is so sudden and so abrupt that no one would miss the importance of it. Probably what is true is that it signifies both. There is the national salvation of Israel that awaits them coming to Christ as a unified people, but there is also individual salvation of Israel where each must come to Christ apart from any other. Both are true for this uniquely called people.

⁶There you shall take your burnt offerings,

The olah, or burnt offering, was minutely detailed in the book of Leviticus, every detail of which pointed to Christ the Lord. These were shadows of truths that only anticipated Him.

^{6 (con’t)} your sacrifices,

The zebakh, or sacrifice, was also carefully laid out, mostly in Leviticus. Again, every detail of which pointed to Christ the Lord. They were, likewise, shadows anticipating the Substance.

^{6 (con’t)} your tithes,

The maser, or tithes, for Israel were introduced in Leviticus. They were further defined in Numbers, and they will be lastly and more fully explained only in Deuteronomy 14.

Unless you are well-schooled in the Bible, have had a really thorough instructor in the past, or you have attended the Superior Word for some time, the tithes probably do not mean what you think they mean. Stayed tuned. Coming to a Deuteronomy 14 sermon near you.

The number ten in Scripture signifies the perfection of Divine order. The tenth, or tithe represents the whole of what is due from man to God, it is a mark of His claim on the whole. Thus, the tithes anticipate the Messiah who would mark His claim on the whole of His redeemed.

^{6 (con't)} the heave offerings of your hand,

The terumah, or heave offering, was evaluated in detail in Leviticus. It anticipates the coming of Messiah and all such offerings are fulfilled in Him.

^{6 (con't)} your vowed offerings, v'nidrekem – “and your vows.” There are vows, and there are offerings that accompany vows. All such things rightfully belonged before the Lord, at the location where He chose to place His name. They all anticipate Christ, and He is the fulfillment of the reception of all such things as recorded elsewhere.

^{6 (con't)} your freewill offerings,

The nede vah, or freewill offering, was discussed in detail in Leviticus. Every point and part of that detail anticipated the coming of Christ. The shadows point to the Substance found in Him.

^{6 (con't)} and the firstborn of your herds and flocks.

The presentation of these firstborn is discussed in Exodus, Leviticus, and in Numbers. Each presentation made in this practice was a shadowy type of the coming of Christ. Of these offerings, Moses next – maybe surprisingly if you are unaware of it – says...

⁷ And there you shall eat before the LORD your God,

As this was the final verse of sermon typing day, and as it made me hungry, I went and got a plate full of cheese and crackers to finish things up. I won't eat during sermon typing, but I made an exception because it was, in fact, the last verse. I found myself surrounded by little dogs as I sat down to type.

The force of these words is that they are referring to the contents of the previous verse. In other words, those things – all of them – that are presented to the Lord, at least in part – and unless forbidden due to the nature of the sacrifice – are eaten by the offeror. Keep that in mind as we continue through the next few chapters. In the eating, there was to be an accompanied state of life, attitude, and mind...

^{7 (con't)} and you shall rejoice in all to which you have put your hand, you and your households,

The verb samakh, or “rejoice,” has only been seen once so far – in Leviticus 23 – when referring to the Feast of Tabernacles. Being the book of Deuteronomy, one wouldn’t normally expect to find the state of rejoicing being brought up. And yet, this word will be found nine times before the book closes out.

Another new and somewhat rare word comes in the verse as well, mishloakh. It signifies “outstretching.” In other words, what the hand has reached out and grabbed. Thus, here in this verse, it is an undertaking.

With such a Christological passage as we have seen today, and in conjunction with so many offerings that clearly point to Christ Jesus, it is not at all surprising that the word “rejoice” would be planted right here for the first time in the book.

There was the putting forth of one’s hand. That resulted in taking an offering of some type, implying that the offering was available, and also that it served a purpose for the good of the one offering it.

The people went to the place where the Lord had chosen, and there they were to be thankful for what the sacrifice or offering implied. As these things anticipated the coming of Messiah, and as we have the fulness of those types and shadows in Him, then indeed! How much more should we rejoice in an even greater way than Israel did. We have the spiritual fulness of what these earthly things only looked forward to. Those are the things...

^{*7 (fin)} in which the LORD your God has blessed you.

Once again, and to close us out, Moses goes from the plural back to the singular. He has been speaking to the people, “you all,” but now he speaks to the nation – “which has blessed you (singular, Israel) Yehovah your (singular) God.” It is a national blessing of the people whose God is the Lord.

The rejoicing was to occur because of the blessing. The blessing came because of God's favor in Christ. For Israel, it was in anticipation of Him. For us, it is looking back on Him and what He has done.

If one can shake his head and marvel at how Israel failed in these things, then how much more should we shake our heads at our own failures in them. The words, "you shall rejoice," are to be taken as a positive command.

The people were not to be grumpy over what they did not have. They were not to be covetous of those who had something more, better, or different. Instead, they were to be grateful, and they were – actively – to rejoice in that.

As we have the spiritual fulness of what these things anticipated, then how can we be miserable about the countless things that we allow to get us down? There isn't a thing on this planet that we will take with us to our heavenly dwelling.

There isn't a single earthly thing that we possess that cannot be taken from us. But we possess what is worth more than the value of the entire world, and it can never be taken from us. In understanding that, how can we allow ourselves to be shaken, anxious, depressed, miserable, or woeful?

Yes, it does happen. But why? It is because we take our eyes off the prize. We lose sight of the heavenly calling, and in our pity party we forget that the Lord of creation stepped out of His glory and humbled Himself among us in order to bring us back to Himself.

Let us do our utmost to fix our eyes on Him – our Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Place where the Lord our God has chosen to put His name for a Dwelling. So, He has done. And for this, let us praise Him. To the glory of God, the Father.

With every sunset
You give me rest.
With every sunrise
You bring new hope.
With every rain
You quench my thirst.
With every rainbow
You paint your love.
With every breath
I know, I live,

by loving wonders of your grace.
I ask what else, Lord,
do I need,
when I see scars
upon your hands?
Izabela Bednara

Closing Verse: “Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus, ⁶ who, being in the form of God, did not consider it robbery to be equal with God, ⁷ but made Himself of no reputation, taking the form of a bondservant, and coming in the likeness of men. ⁸ And being found in appearance as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient to the point of death, even the death of the cross. ⁹ Therefore God also has highly exalted Him and given Him the name which is above every name, ¹⁰ that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of those in heaven, and of those on earth, and of those under the earth, ¹¹ and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.” Philippians 2:5-11

Next Week: Deuteronomy 12:8-19 We don't want to hear no dismissals or refuses. Instead, you shall go where he tells to you... (The Place Where the Lord Your God Chooses, Part II) (40th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Place Where the Lord Your God Chooses

“These are the statutes and judgments
Which you shall be careful to observe, as if the highest worth
In the land which the LORD God of your fathers
Is giving you to possess, all the days that you live on the earth

You shall utterly destroy all the places
Where the nations which you shall dispossess served their gods
On the high mountains and on the hills
And under every green tree; if not, you and the Lord
-----shall be at odds

And you shall destroy their altars, break their sacred pillars
And burn their wooden images with fire; they are a disgrace
You shall cut down the carved images of their gods
And destroy their names from that place

You shall not worship the LORD your God with such things
“But you shall seek the place where the LORD your God chooses
-----it shall be so
Out of all your tribes, to put His name
For His dwelling place, and there you shall go

There you shall take your burnt offerings
Your sacrifices, your tithes, the heave offerings of your hand
Your vowed offerings, your freewill offerings
And the firstborn of your herds and flocks, there in the land

And there you shall eat before the LORD your God
And you shall rejoice in all to which you have put your hand
-----so, you shall do
You and your households
In which the LORD your God has blessed you

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 12:8-19 (The Place Where the Lord Your God Chooses, Part II)

One of the things that tends to annoy me, and there are a few such things in life, is when someone says they are a part of a church that is going back to the way they did it at the beginning – the way churches were supposed to be set up.

Why is this annoying? It is because the Bible never (no really, go check) prescribes any such thing. Outside of the qualifications for elders and deacons, and a few important observances – meaning baptism and the Lord’s supper. There is nothing about the structure of the church that is ever noted as being “correct.”

And even how the Lord’s Supper and baptism are conducted is not defined other than a few warnings from Paul concerning conduct during the Lord’s Supper. We just know we are to do these things. We are given absolute freedom to set things up as we wish – elder-led, congregational, episcopal, presbyterian, and so on, are all types of churches. And yet, none of them are said to be either acceptable or unacceptable in Scripture.

There is no time of day that is prescribed for people to meet. There is no day of the week that is prescribed for people to meet. There is no order of events that must take place. There is no size or location of a church defined. And so on.

Yes, there are prohibitions on things, but that doesn’t mean all things must be done. For example, there is nothing to say that people must speak in various languages (tongues), but there are prohibitions on speaking in other languages – how many can, there must be a translator, and so on.

The same is true with giving. Israel was compelled to give certain things at certain times and for certain reasons. In the church, outside of a couple of basic principles on that subject from Paul, which we are to take as prescriptions, nothing specific is defined.

Unlike Israel, we have complete freedom to conduct our affairs in whatever way we wish. And there is a reason for this.

Text Verse: *“Did you offer Me sacrifices and offerings
In the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?
²⁶ You also carried Sikkuth your king
And Chiun, your idols,
The star of your gods,*

Which you made for yourselves.

²⁷ Therefore I will send you into captivity beyond Damascus,' Says the LORD, whose name is the God of hosts." Amos 5:25-27

In today's passage, Moses will start out by saying that the people had done whatever each thought was right in his own eyes while they were in the wilderness. Though they had the tabernacle which was surely maintained by the priests from day to day in an orderly fashion, the people did not have the ability to do what the law prescribed for them to do.

Therefore, they conducted their lives according to the way that they thought was best. However, what Moses tells them is that the time was coming when they would need to have a unity of worship in order to live properly within the land. They needed to not do what they thought was right, but what the Lord, through the law, had prescribed as acceptable or not acceptable.

The reason for this will be explained, but it begs the question, "If this is so, then why don't we have to do such things in an orderly and prescribed manner as well?" The reason for that follows logically after the reason for the Lord prescribing these things for Israel in the first place. To help us understand some of this, we can first evaluate a chiasm I pulled out of the passage while doing this sermon.

Deuteronomy 12:12-18 (Rejoicing Before the Lord)
Allowances and Prohibitions (12/7/2020)

- a. And you shall rejoice before the LORD your God.
- b. You and your sons and your daughters, your male and female servants, and the Levite who is within your gates.
- c. In the place which the LORD chooses, in one of your tribes, there you shall offer your burnt offerings.
- d. And there you shall do all that I command you.
 - e. "However, you may slaughter and eat meat within all your gates, whatever your heart desires.
 - x. The unclean and the clean may eat of it.
 - e. Of the gazelle and the deer alike. Only you shall not eat the blood; you shall pour it on the earth like water.
- d. (Commands) You may not eat within your gates the tithe of your grain or your new wine or your oil, of the firstborn of your herd or your flock, of any of your offerings which you vow, of your freewill offerings, or of the heave offering of your hand.
- c. But you must eat them before the LORD your God in the place which the LORD your God chooses.
- b. You and your son and your daughter, your male servant and your female servant, and the Levite who is within your gates.
- a. And you shall rejoice before the LORD your God.

Great things, such as freedom in Christ and chiasms, which help us understand passages better, are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Unity of Worship (verses 8-14)

So far, in this Chapter, Moses has been speaking of how to properly worship the Lord once they are in Canaan. He spoke of destroying the places where the inhabitants worshipped their gods (vss. 2-4). He also spoke of having a place specifically set aside for worshipping the Lord (vs. 5).

After that, he then noted that it was to this place alone that they were to bring their burnt offerings, sacrifices, tithes, heave offerings, and so on. There, in the presence of the Lord, they were to rejoice in Him (vss. 6 & 7). Those things now form the basis of what he will next say...

⁸“You shall not at all do as we are doing here today—

lo taasun kekol asher anakhnu osim poh ha’yom – “No shall you (certainly) do at all which we are doing here today.” It is an interesting phrase for several reasons. First, the word translated as “shall you do” bears an emphatic mark in order to stress what is said – “You shall certainly not do.”

But what bears note is that Moses uses the word anakhnu, or “we.” The word is used only five times in Deuteronomy, but three of the uses are him simply quoting the people, not inclusive of him. Only in verse 5:3 does he elsewhere include himself in the narrative –

“The LORD did not make this covenant with our fathers, but with us, those who are here today, all of us who are alive.” Deuteronomy 5:3

Now, for the only other time in the book does he include himself directly in the statement – “as we are doing here today.” Moses is contrasting what is the expected behavior of the people upon entrance, and what is happening at the present.

By saying, “You shall not do as we are doing,” it is a sad note of the surety that he will not pass over into the land. Outside of the land, the people could not – by default – do the things of the law. They could not bring offerings they did not possess, such as the tithes of grain. They could not travel on a pilgrim feast to the place where the Lord had chosen to place His name. And so on.

Instead, there were limitations placed upon them because they were in their time of exile for having not trusted the Lord, and having not entered the inheritance after leaving Sinai. It is what the Lord spoke of through Amos in our text verse –

“Did you offer Me sacrifices and offerings
In the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?” Amos 5:25

The obvious answer is, “No, they did not.” Certainly, the daily offerings of the priests were made, but the people (the house of Israel) could not do what was required of them by law. Now, Moses is stressing that those things would be required.

The sad part of this, however, is that many of the things of the law were never obeyed or observed, even after entering and having received rest. A perfect example of this is found after the first exile of Judah in Nehemiah 8 –

“So the whole assembly of those who had returned from the captivity made booths and sat under the booths; for since the days of Joshua the son of Nun until that day the children of Israel had not done so. And there was very great gladness.” Nehemiah 8:17

Something similar is said about observance of the Passover in 2 Kings 23. Even after possession of the land, nothing changed. But Moses had instructed them differently. They were to observe the law of the Lord instead of...

^{8 (con't)} every man doing whatever is right in his own eyes—

In the wilderness, people may have brought offerings to the Lord. If so, it was not in accord with the law of the tithe, which obviously could not be met. Or, they may have brought nothing. Some may have observed certain things of the law, or they may not have. Nobody would have been held accountable if they didn't.

For example, the law of circumcision mandated that every male child was to be circumcised on the eighth day or they were to be cut off from their people (Genesis 17:4), and yet, none of those born in the wilderness had been circumcised (Joshua 5:2-5).

People did what they did without regard to the duly established laws of the Lord. Moses includes himself in this. Understanding the typology – those in exile for the disobedience of having rejected Christ– one can see this applies to Israel now.

The people of Israel, even today, have the law. And yet, outside of the culturally expected customs, they don't observe the law at all. Every man does what is right in his own eyes. One can see the obvious parallel here –

* Israel of Moses' time is going to enter Canaan even though they have not been observing the law. Thus, it cannot be by observance of the law that they are entering the land of inheritance.

* Israel as a nation is going to enter the kingdom age even though they will not be observing the law before that occurs (Daniel 9:27). Therefore, it cannot be by observing the law that they will enter the inheritance.

The truth of this is seen in the next words...

⁹ for as yet you have not come to the rest and the inheritance which the LORD your God is giving you.

Here, like in verses 1, 5, and 7 from last week, the words go from the plural to the singular – “you all (plural) have not come to the rest and the inheritance which Yehovah your (singular) God is giving you (singular).” Moses goes from speaking to the people individually to referring to them as a nation. The obvious reason is because not all of the people will obtain the inheritance, but the nation assuredly will.

In this, he uses the word menukhah, meaning either “rest” or a place of rest. Moses is saying that they have not yet obtained such a place, or state, of rest. The main point of Moses' dialogue is that the people have the law, but they have not been observing the law, and yet, they have been brought to the inheritance promised by the Lord. As this is so, it cannot be by the law that they will obtain it.

However, observance of the law is the anticipation once in the inheritance. And yet, they failed to observe the law in the land. And not only did they fail to observe, they were actively disobedient to it. In this, they were exiled.

They were returned apart from observance of the law, and yet they were exiled again. They are (today) in the land and yet they are not observing the law, nor will they – even after the next temple is built. And yet, they will be (as a nation) entering the kingdom age. But it is not by the law that this will occur.

The law is the expectation, and yet it is not the means of obtaining the promise. Therefore, it is the fulfillment of the law, and the imputation of that act through the New Covenant, that provides what is needed to complete the process began so long ago.

It is so clear and obvious, and yet it escapes Israel to this day, and – unfortunately – it escapes countless people who were never given this law in the first place as they bring themselves under this impossible yoke of bondage.

¹⁰ But when you cross over the Jordan and dwell in the land which the LORD your God is giving you to inherit,

The words go back to the plural here as Moses speaks to all of the people individually (you all). Moses again takes it as an axiom that the people there before him would cross the Jordan into Canaan, but that he would not do so. Because of this, he is providing instruction for them to not only possess the land, but to be able to continue possessing it. When they cross over...

^{10 (con't)} and He gives you rest from all your enemies round about, so that you dwell in safety,

Here, the idea of rest is tied in with the elimination of the enemy, and thus dwelling in safety. The idea of having obtained it is found in Joshua 23:1 –

“Now it came to pass, a long time after the LORD had given rest to Israel from all their enemies round about, that Joshua was old, advanced in age.”

It is again seen concerning David and his kingdom in 2 Samuel 7 –

“Now it came to pass when the king was dwelling in his house, and the LORD had given him rest from all his enemies all around, ² that the king said to Nathan the prophet, ‘See now, I dwell in a house of cedar, but the ark of God dwells inside tent curtains.’” 2 Samuel 7:1, 2

Because of David’s efforts in defeating the enemies, it is used again by Solomon in 1 Kings 5 as the reason to build the house of the Lord, and Solomon then acknowledges that the promised rest was obtained as he prayed the invocation prayer after the temple was complete –

“Blessed be the LORD, who has given rest to His people Israel, according to all that He promised. There has not failed one word of all His good promise, which He promised through His servant Moses.” 1 Kings 8:56

And yet, David, despite having subdued the enemies and provided this rest, clearly indicates that the rest that both Joshua, and he, had obtained was not the promised rest Moses speaks of now. He does this by using the word “Today” in the 95th Psalm –

“Today, if you will hear His voice:
⁸ “Do not harden your hearts, as in the rebellion,
As in the day of trial in the wilderness,
⁹ When your fathers tested Me;
They tried Me, though they saw My work.
¹⁰ For forty years I was grieved with that generation,
And said, ‘It is a people who go astray in their hearts,
And they do not know My ways.’
¹¹ So I swore in My wrath,
‘They shall not enter My rest.’” Psalm 95:7-11

The author of Hebrews then unmistakably shows that obtaining the inheritance is not of the law. He does it first by citing the 95th Psalm, and then by next saying this from Hebrews 3:16-19 –

¹⁶ “For who, having heard, rebelled? Indeed, was it not all who came out of Egypt, led by Moses? ¹⁷ Now with whom was He angry forty years? Was it not with those who sinned, whose corpses fell in the wilderness? ¹⁸ And to whom did He swear that they would not enter His rest, but to those who did not obey? ¹⁹ So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.”

With that understood, he then notes that because David said Today hundreds of years after Joshua had received his rest, it means that the rest spoken of is not merely referring to rest from the physical enemies of Israel. As he says in Hebrews 4:8, “For if Joshua had given them rest, then He [the Spirit through David] would not afterward have spoken of another day.” He then says –

“For he who has entered His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His.” Hebrews 4:10

What this is clearly telling us is that the true, final, and anticipated rest comes only when the law is fulfilled, because the law is of works. If one ceases from his works in order to enter God’s rest, it means that he is no longer under law. As the author of Hebrews says, “For we who have believed do enter that rest” (Hebrews 4:3).

Moses is speaking of earthly things, but the Spirit of inspiration working through him is pointing to spiritual things. That continues with the next words...

¹¹ then there will be the place where the LORD your God chooses to make His name abide.

The word ha’maqom, or “the place,” is obviously speaking of whatever place where the tabernacle would rest. However, more especially, the words point prophetically to Jerusalem, where the temple would be built. At the location where the name of the Lord would abide...

¹¹ (con’t) There you shall bring all that I command you:

Moses now says that in the place where the Lord’s name will abide, the people shall bring “all that I command you.” The logical question is, “Does this imply works?” The answer is, “Yes.” The command is of the law. It mandates something to be done.

But the author of Hebrews says that when a person enters God’s rest, He has ceased from all his works, and that the way one enters into the rest is through belief, meaning faith in Christ.

Thus, the rest which is being referred to now by Moses, and the commands which Moses is giving to the people, are only symbolic representations of the true rest that only comes by faith in the One these things anticipate and point to, some of which are...

¹¹ (con’t) your burnt offerings, your sacrifices, your tithes, the heave offerings of your hand, and all your choice offerings which you vow to the LORD.

This verse is very similar to verse 6 that we looked at last week. The only substantial difference is in the final clause – *and the firstborn of your herds and flocks. 12:6

*and all your choice offerings which you vow to the Lord. 12:11

In verse 6, the offerings are mandatory. In verse 11, they are voluntary until the vow is made. Once the vow is made, the offering became obligatory.

In verse 6, it was seen how these things only pointed to the coming Christ. In Him is the fulfillment of them. What the people brought forward in Israel only anticipated a spiritual fulfillment.

Despite being mandatory offerings, other than in certain exceptions, only a portion of any of them was actually given away. The rest was consumed by the offeror. Hence, the next words...

¹² And you shall rejoice before the LORD your God,

This phrase was first seen in Leviticus 23:40 where it was applied to the Feast of Tabernacles. In Deuteronomy, this is the second of several times it is noted. The first being last week in verse 7. The idea here is that the offeror would often share in the offering, and thus they would feast and rejoice in the presence of the Lord for whatever the sacrifice or offering signified.

Even if they did not share in the sacrifice, such as in a whole burnt offering or a sin offering, they would still rejoice for what it signified – be it gratitude to God for His blessings, fellowship with Him, cleansing from sin, or so on. This rejoicing was to include...

^{12 (con't)} you and your sons and your daughters, your male and female servants, and the Levite who is within your gates, since he has no portion nor inheritance with you.

Unlike what most scholars state, and what most teachers pass on, this is a command of Moses, not a suggestion. For example, Jamieson-Fausset-Brown incorrectly states –

“...it appears that, although males only were commanded to appear before God at the annual solemn feasts (Ex 23:17), the women were allowed to accompany them (1Sa 1:3-23).”

Rather, Moses is instructing the households to attend as well. But there is no contradiction in this and what is said about the three pilgrim feasts elsewhere, such as –

“Three times a year all your males shall appear before the LORD your God in the place which He chooses: at the Feast of Unleavened Bread, at the Feast of Weeks, and at the Feast of Tabernacles; and they shall not appear before the LORD empty-handed.” Deuteronomy 16:16

In this passage here in Deuteronomy 12, in the surrounding passage of Deuteronomy 16, and elsewhere, it clearly instructs all of the people to come to the pilgrim feasts.

The households were not to be excluded. And, indeed, they could not be excluded – for example – from the Feast of Unleavened Bread, because the Passover (that everyone was to observe) was affixed to that Feast.

The fact that all the males had to appear before the Lord in those three pilgrim feasts is given under the assumption that their households would be there as well. The command for the males, as representative of the household was all-inclusive. The command to attend was to then be considered by those males as not to exclude the household as is evidenced in this verse.

The center of this service and worship of the Lord was to be at the spot where the Lord placed His name. It is a note of unification of the worship of the people – all of them – in a single place. Hence...

¹³ Take heed to yourself that you do not offer your burnt offerings in every place that you see;

Here, the burnt offering is spoken of as the entirety of the offerings of the previous verse. Also, the words now return to the singular – you, Israel, are to take heed concerning your burnt offerings. It may also be that Moses is speaking to each person individually – “You, and you, and you: do not do this thing.” The singular will continue, with one exception, through the rest of the verses today.

The command here was to ensure unity of worship at the sanctuary. However, it is evident from the time of the judges and later that Israel failed in this, as is evidenced from Ezekiel 20 –

“When I brought them into the land concerning which I had raised My hand in an oath to give them, and they saw all the high hills and all the thick trees, there they offered their sacrifices and provoked Me with their offerings. There they also sent up their sweet aroma and poured out their drink offerings.” Ezekiel 20:28

The people did exactly what they were instructed to not do. Instead of seeking the Lord in the place where He dwelt, they searched out any place that suited their fancy and they offered to the Lord, or to other gods, according to what was right in their own eyes.

It cannot be that this is only speaking of a time after the temple was built. That would not occur for more than 400 years. It certainly was intended to mean at the place of the tabernacle, or whatever other place the Lord so chose, until a temple was erected. That is clearly evidenced in what is next said...

¹⁴ but in the place which the LORD chooses, in one of your tribes, there you shall offer your burnt offerings, and there you shall do all that I command you.

He again speaks of the place which the Lord chooses. It could be argued that this only speaks of burnt offerings, but that is proven false by the words v'sham taaseh kol asher anoki metsaveka – “and there you shall do all that I command you.” In other words, the “burnt offering” stands as representative of everything else. This was perfectly understood from later passages, such as –

“Then they said, ‘In fact, there is a yearly feast of the LORD in Shiloh, which is north of Bethel, on the east side of the highway that goes up from Bethel to Shechem, and south of Lebonah.’” Joshua 21:19

The yearly feast, one of the Leviticus 23 Feasts of the Lord, was observed at Shiloh, where the tabernacle was. That feast is a part of what Moses is speaking of right now when he says, “and all that I command you.”

Sanctuary worship did occur, but there was not a unity of it among the people of Israel – in direct violation of the words of Moses now. However, it is seen elsewhere that not having a permanent temple was used as a pretext to do whatever anyone wanted. In 1 Kings 3:2-4, it says –

“Meanwhile the people sacrificed at the high places, because there was no house built for the name of the LORD until those days. ³ And Solomon loved the LORD, walking in the statutes of his father David, except that he sacrificed and burned incense at the high places.

⁴ Now the king went to Gibeon to sacrifice there, for that was the great high place: Solomon offered a thousand burnt offerings on that altar.”

Gibeon was where the tabernacle was then located (see 2 Chronicles 1:3), along with the altar of burnt offering, even though the ark was in Jerusalem.

And even after the building of the temple, the record of the kings contains constant failures of the people by not worshipping only before the Lord in Jerusalem. Something more, something much greater, was needed to unite the people in worship – something internal, not external. The reason for this is rightly explained by Adam Clarke –

“To prevent idolatry and bring about a perfect uniformity in the Divine worship, which at that time was essentially necessary; because every rite and ceremony had a determinate meaning, and pointed out the good things which were to come, therefore one place must be established where those rites and ceremonies should be carefully and punctually observed. Had it not been so, every man would have formed his worship according to his own mind, and the whole beauty and importance of the grand representative system would have been destroyed, and the Messiah and the glories of his kingdom could not have been seen through the medium of the Jewish ritual. For uniformity in every part of the Divine worship the same necessity does not now exist; because that which was typified is come, and the shadows have all fled away. Yet, when it can be obtained, how desirable is it that all sincere Christians should with one mouth, as well as with one heart, glorify their common Lord and Savior!” Adam Clarke

Stated a little less wordily – everything points to Jesus. The unity of worship was necessary to reveal Him. Anything else would destroy that typology. And now that He has come and fulfilled it, these shadows that only anticipated Him are no longer needed. Having said that, those things that were not relevant to that typology had no such restrictions bound to them...

*You shall do these things as I instruct you
Or not do what has been forbidden, as well
All is laid out, so you know what to do
Just be obedient to what the word does tell*

*Doing these things has a reason
And so, you are to do them as I instruct you
This will continue on for a season
But someday, the doing of them will be through*

*They only anticipate Me and those things I will do
And in My doing, those things will be done*

*Someday I will be the focus and hope of each one of you
That is, when the course of this law has been run*

II. Maintaining the Typology (verses 15-19)

¹⁵ “However, you may slaughter and eat meat within all your gates, whatever your heart desires, according to the blessing of the LORD your God which He has given you;

Slaughtering of animals for consumption was not considered a sacrifice or offering as long as it was not presented as such. Hence, there was no typology of Christ to mar in the act. Therefore, this was considered perfectly acceptable.

In fact, having, capturing, or buying meat here is considered a blessing of the Lord, not something offensive or wrong. Thus, it was to be accepted as such. However, in Leviticus 17, it said –

“Speak to Aaron, to his sons, and to all the children of Israel, and say to them, ‘This is the thing which the LORD has commanded, saying: ³ ‘Whatever man of the house of Israel who kills an ox or lamb or goat in the camp, or who kills it outside the camp, ⁴ and does not bring it to the door of the tabernacle of meeting to offer an offering to the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD, the guilt of bloodshed shall be imputed to that man. He has shed blood; and that man shall be cut off from among his people, ⁵ to the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices which they offer in the open field, that they may bring them to the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of meeting, to the priest, and offer them as peace offerings to the LORD.’” Leviticus 17:2-5

That was a law for the time in the wilderness. Once the people were in the land of Canaan, it would no longer apply. They would be spread out through the land and were allowed to freely do as they wished in this regard. This included...

¹⁵ (con’t) the unclean and the clean may eat of it,

This is the middle of the chiasm found in the passage. Whoever wanted could eat of such meat. This means that even those excluded from the society, such as lepers who were unclean, could be brought it to eat.

This is unlike the laws of certain animals offered to the Lord that were forbidden to be eaten by the unclean. If they did so, the law says that such were to be cut off from their people. They had violated the typology of Christ. However, no typology of Christ was violated in this. Therefore, it was considered perfectly acceptable and good. This included...

15 (con't) of the gazelle and the deer alike.

ka-tseviy v'ka-ayyal – “as of the gazelle and as of the deer.” Here, the tseviy or gazelle is introduced. It is a gazelle or a roebuck, but it also means “beauty,” even when referring to the beautiful Branch of the Lord in Isaiah 4:2, or the beautiful land of Israel in Ezekiel 20:6. Also, the ayyal, or deer is introduced. It is the intensive form of the word ayil, or ram. It thus signifies a stag, or a male deer.

The reason for including these is certainly to show that they were considered acceptable as food, but they bore no specific typology of Christ that must otherwise be considered.

In other words, these are not animals of the herd or flock that required the dedication of the firstborn to the Lord. Nor were they acceptable as sacrificial animals. But they were clean according to the law, they were considered clean animals and they could be hunted and eaten at will. However, the time-old prohibition, that even predates the Law of Moses, still stands...

16 Only you shall not eat the blood;

Suddenly, and only for this clause, the pronoun returns to the plural, “Only you (all) shall not eat the blood.” It was not that Israel was forbidden to eat the blood, but exceptions would be made. Rather, no exception was to be made for any person.

After the flood, animals that were previously forbidden to be eaten were granted to man as food. However, even then the Lord stated a prohibition that was expected to be adhered to in Genesis 9:2-4 –

“And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be on every beast of the earth, on every bird of the air, on all that move on the earth, and on all the fish of the sea. They are given into your hand. ³ Every moving thing that lives shall be food for you. I have given you all things, even as the green herbs. ⁴ But you shall not eat flesh with its life, that is, its blood.”

The Lord specifically identifies the blood as the life. Thus...

16 (con') you shall pour it on the earth like water.

The pronouns return to the singular here. You, Israel, or you (each of you). This law was previously established in Leviticus 17 –

“Whatever man of the children of Israel, or of the strangers who dwell among you, who hunts and catches any animal or bird that may be eaten, he shall pour out its blood and cover it with dust; ¹⁴ for it is the life of all flesh. Its blood sustains its life. Therefore I said to the children of Israel, ‘You shall not eat the blood of any flesh, for the life of all flesh is its blood. Whoever eats it shall be cut off.’”

-Leviticus 17:13, 14

The reason for this is complicated and should be supplemented by reviewing the sermon from Leviticus 17. In short, the prohibition of eating blood was given because it is the vehicle of life. For this reason, the Lord reserved all blood to Himself.

To eat the blood was to assimilate into oneself something that belonged to Him alone. It was therefore idolatrous to use it in any other way than designated by Him. If it was not used in the rites of the tabernacle, it was to be poured out and covered with earth.

In pouring out the blood like water, and then covering it with the dust, the typology points directly to Christ. From the dust, man was made. But he wasn't yet alive. Only in the breathing of the Lord into the nostrils of man did he become a nephesh khayah, or “soul living.” In man or animal, when the life is poured out, the dust reclaims ownership over what is left.

This is true with but one exception. It is Jesus, the Lord God who breathed life into man. And yet, He then descended from the man He breathed life into. In the shedding of His blood upon the ground from which His earthly body came, He gave up His soul, and yet the ground found no victory over Him.

The life returned, the soul reanimated, and by the power of the Lord God, He walked out of that tomb. Atonement for us was made with the pouring out of His soul. And yet, He lives. Only in Him is true and eternal life. The typology must be maintained, even when not a part of the sacrificial rites at the altar. Understanding this, Moses continues with more typological hints of Christ...

17 You may not eat within your gates the tithe of your grain or your new wine or your oil, of the firstborn of your herd or your flock, of any of your offerings which you vow, of your freewill offerings, or of the heave offering of your hand.

The verse begins with lo tukal l'ekol – “no eating to eat.” In other words, you are not able to eat. This is because this stands as a legal prohibition against it. From there, Moses defines what that means with the rest of the verse.

The comparable verses in this chapter (6 & 11), with the noted exceptions, were all in the plural. This verse, however, is all in the singular. Again, as has been seen at other times, it is certainly put forth this way to avoid anyone making exceptions. There was to be no equivocating on the laws laid down here, and so Moses speaks them to all individually, and also to Israel as a whole collectively.

As has been seen in one sermon or another, each of these things anticipates Christ – the tithe, the firstborn, and the offerings. Therefore, for the sake of unity of worship, the people were told that they could not eat these things in just any place.

To do so would mar the typology. There was to be a unity of worship because all people come to Christ in the same manner. There is not one way for this person or group and another for that person or group. Thus, the corporate nature of what was to be done by Israel negates any individualized attempts at coming to Christ.

The idea here is expressed in Galatians 1:6-8 where Paul clearly says that there is one gospel, and any other is not only not a gospel, but it is – in fact – anathema. What typologically anticipates Him was to be experienced through the unity of worship at the place that bore the name of the Lord God. In order to maintain this unity, Moses next says...

18 But you must eat them before the LORD your God in the place which the LORD your God chooses,

Everything that has just been described is to be eaten by the people at the spot where the Lord chooses to place His name. To prepare you for the Deuteronomy 14 sermon, we will evaluate what this means in regard to the tithes – which are eaten by the people.

Most scholars, probably because they were also preachers wanting to not lose out on their profits, say that this refers to a “second tithe,” not the mandated tithe of Israel. That is utter rubbish. The word never speaks of a second tithe.

The source of this supposed “second tithe” comes from rabbinical writings and an apocryphal book Tobit. What is recorded there doesn’t match – even closely – with what is stated here in the Law of Moses –

6

But I alone used to go often to Jerusalem for the festivals, as was prescribed for all Israel by longstanding decree.* Bringing with me the first fruits of crops, the firstlings of the flock, the tithes of livestock, and the first shearings of sheep, I used to hasten to Jerusalem and present them to the priests, Aaron’s sons, at the altar. To the Levites ministering in Jerusalem I used to give the tithe of grain, wine, olive oil, pomegranates, figs, and other fruits. Six years in a row, I used to give a second tithe in money, which each year I would go to pay in Jerusalem.

7

8

The third-year tithe I gave to orphans, widows, and converts who had joined the Israelites. Every third year I would bring them this offering, and we ate it in keeping with the decree laid down in the Mosaic law concerning it, and according to the commands of Deborah, the mother of my father Tobiel; for my father had died and left me an orphan. (Tobit 1:6-8)

Of this precept in Deuteronomy, the scholar Keil says –

“In the laws contained in the earlier books, nothing is said about the appropriation of any portion of the tithes to sacrificial meals. Yet in Deuteronomy this is simply assumed as a customary thing, and not introduced as a new commandment, when the law is laid down.” Keil

Like other scholars, Keil then went on to speak of the passage in Tobit, to justify his stand on a “second tithe.” But the very fact that this practice was “assumed as a customary thing,” demonstrates that what Moses says here is referring not to a “second tithe.” Rather it speaks of the one and only tithe levied upon Israel. That “customary thing” will be revealed in the coming Deuteronomy 14 sermon.

This is what is known as “progressive revelation.” A precept is introduced, and then it is later explained and expanded upon. Moses now explains that expansion in Deuteronomy. If he had meant this was to be a second tithe, he would have said so, and any scholar with a modicum of sense would affirm it as such.

This is especially so when Israel had not even started tithing as described by Moses because they had never been in the land in order to begin to do so. Unfortunately, what is stated later in Deuteronomy 14 is so offensive to scholars, pastors, and preachers of the Bible, that they must insert something clearly indefensible into their theological bag of tricks to keep the money coming in.

18 (con’t) you and your son and your daughter, your male servant and your female servant, and the Levite who is within your gates;

These words correspond to verse 12. There the pronouns were in the plural, as were the nouns (sons, daughters, male servants, and female servants). Here both the pronouns and the nouns are in the singular.

Again, this is a precept that is to be obeyed. It is incorrect to say that only the men were required to go on the pilgrim feasts. These verses clearly show that the men were to go, but they were to be accompanied by any household that dwelt with them. The use of both the plural and the singular is given to absolutely solidify this fact. And there is a reason for it...

18 (con’t) and you shall rejoice before the LORD your God in all to which you put your hands.

Continuing in the singular, the reason is the same as before, but with a different focus on the audience. Before, it was “you all – each of you.” Now, it is “you collectively.” Each person was to rejoice before the Lord, and Israel – the united people – were to rejoice before the Lord.

They were to acknowledge that the produce of the labor of their hands was ultimately derived from His open hand of grace. But they were also to remember another precept of law...

19 (fin) Take heed to yourself that you do not forsake the Levite as long as you live in your land.

Here, it should be more precisely translated and say, “on the earth,” rather than “in your land.” Despite that, this verse takes us back to verse 12. There, Moses spoke to the people in the plural (you all are to do this). However, here, it continues in the singular (you, Israel, are to do this). The people, individually and collectively, bore the responsibility of tending to the Levites.

As they were taken in place of the firstborn, they fit their own picture of Christ. In this, the Levites were to be tended to by the people for their ministry to the people. They had no inheritance of land like the other tribes, and they were dependent upon the people for the meeting of their needs.

Therefore, when the people ate their own tithes, as prescribed by Moses, they were to also remember the Levites and minister to them in an appropriate manner. The precept is not unlike Paul’s words to the Galatians –

“Let him who is taught the word share in all good things with him who teaches.”
-Galatians 6:16

With that, the passage is complete for the week. The main two thoughts that we can take away with us from it are that 1) there was to be a unity of worship by the people toward the Lord God because that worship anticipated the Person and work of Jesus Christ, and 2) in Christ’s fulfillment of these things, we now have the fulness of them in Him.

We no longer need to observe these – or any other – aspects of the law of Moses. We are to worship in Spirit and in truth because this is what Christ Jesus has ordained for His people.

In Him, we have the substance and not the shadow. In Him, we have the Antitype and not the type. In Him, we have unfettered access to God instead of a restrictive mode of worship that was ministered to by fallible people in an earthly location that has been swept clean several times in redemptive history.

Where Zion was plowed like a field, the Rock who is Christ has continued on without change. Let us remember this as we conduct our lives in His presence. Let us hold fast and not be swept back into legalism and bondage. This is the lesson of the law. Let us learn it and apply it to our walk with our Lord. May it be so.

Closing Verse: “If then you were raised with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ is, sitting at the right hand of God. ² Set your mind on things above, not on things on the earth. ³ For you died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God. ⁴ When Christ who is our life appears, then you also will appear with Him in glory.”
-Colossians 3:1-4

Next Week: Deuteronomy 12:20-32 It would be a problem, I must admit; and so to this precept you must commit... (You Shall Not Add to It nor Take Away from It) (41st Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

In the Place Which the Lord Your God Chooses

“You shall not at all do as we are doing here today—
Every man doing whatever is right in his own eyes—
For as yet you have not come to the rest and the inheritance
Which the LORD your God is giving you, that marvelous surprise

But when you cross over the Jordan and dwell in the land
Which the LORD your God is giving you to inherit
And He gives you rest from all your enemies round about
So that you dwell in safety – a gift to you, and not by merit

Then there will be the place where the LORD your God
Chooses to make His name abide; in that land that you trod

There you shall bring all that I command you:
Your burnt offerings, your sacrifices, your tithes, the whole hoard
The heave offerings of your hand
And all your choice offerings which you vow to the LORD

And you shall rejoice before the LORD your God
You and your sons and your daughters too
Your male and female servants, and the Levite
-----who is within your gates

Since he has no portion nor inheritance with you

Take heed to yourself that you do not offer
Your burnt offerings in every place that you see
-----this you shall not do

But in the place which the LORD chooses, in one of your tribes
There you shall offer your burnt offerings, and there
-----you shall do all that I command you

“However, you may slaughter and eat meat within all your gates Whatever your heart desires, according to -----the Lord your God’s blessing
Which He has given you; the unclean and the clean may eat of it
Of the gazelle and the deer alike. And, have some salad
-----with dressing

Only you shall not eat the blood; this you shall not do
You shall pour it on the earth like water, as the Lord
-----has instructed you

You may not eat within your gates the tithe of your grain
Or your new wine or your oil, of the firstborn of your herd
-----so please understand
Or your flock, of any of your offerings which you vow
Of your freewill offerings, or of the heave offering of your hand

But you must eat them before the LORD your God
In the place which the LORD your God chooses
-----please be observant
You and your son and your daughter
Your male servant and your female servant

And the Levite who is within your gates
And you shall rejoice, as everyone understands
Before the LORD your God
In all to which you put your hands

Take heed to yourself that you do not forsake
-----but for him have an open hand

The Levite as long as you live in your land

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 12:20-32 (You Shall Not Add to It nor Take Away from It)

The passage today can – if we will allow it – provide us with some hints into a particular theology that was introduced right in the first pages of the Bible, and that will continue to be built upon throughout much of the rest of the Bible.

This is concerning the nature of the soul of man and how it comes into being. We'll see that as we go through the verses today. You might not think the verses we just read would even hint at that, but they do. And they also give us insights into a ritual we perform each week before leaving the church, that of the Lord's Supper.

To understand the importance of Jesus' words there, we need to understand the importance of His words in John 6. And to understand the reason for why He says what He says there, we need to understand precepts from all the way back here in the Law of Moses.

And so, when you think, "My mind is numbed over by all of this Old Testament stuff," you need to remember that without it, we wouldn't have an appreciation for, or a right understanding of, all of the stuff in the New Testament. It really is that simple.

Text Verse: "And He took bread, gave thanks and broke it, and gave it to them, saying, 'This is My body which is given for you; do this in remembrance of Me.'

²⁰ Likewise He also took the cup after supper, saying, 'This cup is the new covenant in My blood, which is shed for you.'" Luke 22:19, 20

Moses spoke about the importance of not eating blood in last week's passage. He is going to speak about the importance of not eating blood again today, in even more detail. The precept predates the Law of Moses, and it is dealt with intimately in the law, not just here in Deuteronomy 12.

He is clear – no blood. And yet, in this passage from Luke, Jesus says that the cup we take is that of the New Covenant in His blood. Maybe He was just making an analogy to the cup itself. No, Matthew is more specific when he quotes the Lord, saying, "For this is My blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matthew 26:28).

Matthew is speaking of the contents of the cup. We can ask ourselves if the contents are really His blood or not. The words He uses concerning the bread and the wine answer the question. He also held up the bread and said, “This is My body.

It is as plain as the nose on one’s face that He was holding bread and calling it His body. Thus, He is saying it is a metaphor for His body. Likewise, He was holding a cup of wine, demonstrating that it was a metaphor for His blood. The Roman Catholic doctrine of transubstantiation fails, because it fails to take the word of the Lord as intended, thus twisting the meaning and purpose of the Lord’s Supper.

But why did Jesus bring this up at all? What is it about the blood that is so important for us to know? We saw some of that in Leviticus 17. We saw some of it last week, and we will see a bit more of it in the passage today. God is revealing truths to us in such things.

And so, don’t be overwhelmed with all of the laws, as if that is all the Lord is trying to convey. He is teaching us, through the law, of how we can more fully appreciate Jesus. In His coming, the law has met its purpose and it is fulfilled. In its fulfillment, it has met its end. This is the great part of being on this side of the cross. We can see what God was doing and why. And it is all about Jesus.

Such great truths as these are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. That It May Go Well with You (verses 20-27)

Moses is now going to repeat and expand upon what he said in the previous passage, especially what was said in verses 15-18. And there is good reason for this. Those verses said –

“However, you may slaughter and eat meat within all your gates, whatever your heart desires, according to the blessing of the LORD your God which He has given you; the unclean and the clean may eat of it, of the gazelle and the deer alike. ¹⁶ Only you shall not eat the blood; you shall pour it on the earth like water. ¹⁷ You may not eat within your gates the tithe of your grain or your new wine or your oil, of the firstborn of your herd or your flock, of any of your offerings which you vow, of your freewill offerings, or of the heave offering of your hand. ¹⁸ But you must eat them before the LORD your God in the place which the LORD your God chooses, you and your son and your daughter, your male servant and your female servant, and the Levite who is within your gates; and you shall rejoice before the LORD your God in all to which you put your hands.”

Deuteronomy 12:15-19

²⁰ “When the LORD your God enlarges your border

ki yakhriv Yehovah elohekha eth gebulekha – “When enlarges Yehovah your God your border.” It is in the second person singular, and this will continue until verse 32. Either Israel the nation, as a collective whole, is being addressed, or Moses is speaking to each person individually as if each person is an example of the whole.

The idea of extending the borders is probably twofold. First, it speaks of the initial conquest of Canaan, the people would move in and eventually spread out as the inhabitants were exterminated. But it also certainly speaks of even extending beyond the borders of Canaan proper.

The note of extending the borders of Canaan was first found in Exodus 34 when referring to the three annual pilgrim feasts. At that time, the Lord assured Israel that when they went to Jerusalem during those feasts, their homes and land would be secure.

It was a note requiring faith by the people. Obviously, if all of the people went to the place selected by the Lord to observe a weeklong feast, it would seem to be the most propitious time for their enemies to come in and plunder the land.

But the Lord’s words to the people ensured them that it would not be so. They simply had to be obedient to the charge, and respond in faith by coming as instructed –

“Three times in the year all your men shall appear before the Lord, the LORD God of Israel. ²⁴ For I will cast out the nations before you and enlarge your borders; neither will any man covet your land when you go up to appear before the LORD your God three times in the year. Exodus 34:23, 24

The wording even indicates that the expansion of the borders would act as its own buffer for Israel, allowing them to attend these feasts without fear. With that understood, Moses says...

²⁰ (con’t) as He has promised you,

Rather, it says, kaasher dibber lakh – “as has spoken to you.” This could be translated as “promised,” but it is to be considered a conditional promise if so. In Deuteronomy 11, it said –

“For if you carefully keep all these commandments which I command you to do—to love the LORD your God, to walk in all His ways, and to hold fast to Him—²³ then the LORD will drive out all these nations from before you, and you will dispossess greater and mightier nations than yourselves.²⁴ Every place on which the sole of your foot treads shall be yours: from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the River Euphrates, even to the Western Sea, shall be your territory.

-Deuteronomy 11:22-24

The people are told that keeping the commandments would lead to driving out the nations and eventual expansion of the borders. Regardless of this, though, the point of what is being conveyed here concerns the people’s conduct while in the land, specifically in regard to the slaughter of animals for food. This is next seen...

²⁰ (con’t) and you say, ‘Let me eat meat,’ because you long to eat meat,

The Hebrew is more personal: v’amarta okelah basar ki taaveh naphshekha l’ekol basar – “and you say, ‘Let me eat meat,’ because desires your soul to eat meat.” There is the understanding that meat is something highly desired, even yearned after.

But there is also the understanding that animals were generally considered first and foremost for sacrificial use. The common word for altar (such as in verse 12:3) is mizbeakh, and it even conveys this thought. It signifies a slaughter place, coming from zabakh meaning to kill, offer, sacrifice, slay and so on. That then is derived from a primitive root signifying to slaughter an animal.

The very act of slaughtering an animal carried in the mind of the people the sense of a sacrifice. A sacrifice was something made on an altar, and the Lord wanted a single altar for the sacrifices and offerings presented to Him. This then made the situation untenable – especially if the borders have been expanded.

It would be unreasonable to make a journey of several days to simply have a meal consisting of meat. But it is understood that the soul of man craves after meat. As was seen in the previous sermon, while the people were camped around the tabernacle, they were required to bring any animal to be slaughtered before the Lord –

“Whatever man of the house of Israel who kills an ox or lamb or goat in the camp, or who kills it outside the camp, ⁴ and does not bring it to the door of the tabernacle of meeting to offer an offering to the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD, the guilt of bloodshed shall be imputed to that man. He has shed blood; and that man shall be cut off from among his people, ⁵ to the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices which they offer in the open field, that they may bring them to the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of meeting, to the priest, and offer them as peace offerings to the LORD.” Leviticus 17:3-5

However, once in the land, and especially when the tribes had taken over their inheritances that were long distances from the tabernacle, there needed to be provisions that allowed them to deviate from this previous requirement, thus allowing them to eat meat unhindered by an impossible mandate.

Without Moses’ words of this chapter, there would be confusion concerning what to do, especially when some of the animals they were allowed to eat, being considered clean according to the law, were also not animals acceptable for offering to the Lord. As we noted last week, only those animals that typologically looked forward to Christ could be offered on the altar to the Lord.

So, what are the people to do in order to not sin against the Lord based on what the law already says, and based on what is already allowed to be eaten according to the Leviticus 11 dietary laws? The answer was partially stated in the previous verses, but it will be provided here with further detail. That begins with...

²⁰ (con’t) you may eat as much meat as your heart desires.

Moses tells the people that when they want meat, they can eat meat. The previous law was solely for the time in the wilderness. With the people dwelling in the land of Canaan, it would no longer apply. They would be spread out through the land and were allowed to freely do as they wished in this regard. As long as it conformed to the laws now to be set forth by Moses...

²¹ If the place where the LORD your God chooses to put His name is too far from you,

What is too far? It doesn’t say, and thus it is a free allowance to do according to what is reasonable. When we read the Bible, we may think of Israel as a small piece of land where the people could easily go to whatever spot the Lord determined to place His name.

However, there were no cars. Everything had to go on foot. Today, to travel to the next town, even 30 or 40 miles away, it would certainly seem unreasonable to start walking with your evening meal in order to first slaughter it there.

It would even be true with a ten-mile walk. By the time you walked an animal ten miles, offered it up, and then carried its meat back home, you would have to spend at least five or six hours, maybe more. In other words, what is being conveyed here is basically an allowance for any and all to conduct their affairs according to the permissible rules as they are set down.

This is the standard, and only the exceptions – which are actually the main commandments – are to be exactly carried out in accord with the law of the altar. This releases all of the people from the burdens that would otherwise be necessarily imposed on them for any and all consumption of animals.

21 (con't) then you may slaughter from your herd and from your flock

Here, it uses the root of the word for “altar,” zabakh, that was noted while looking at the last verse. It generally means “to slaughter for sacrifice.” However, here it speaks of simply slaughtering for food.

The accommodation and allowance are granted according to the word, and it applies to both animals of the herd and of the flock. These are animals generally associated with those acceptable for sacrifice upon the altar of the Lord.

And yet, they are authorized for general slaughter without any religious connotation assigned to them. If someone wanted T-bone steak for the evening, that is now made available to him.

21 (con't) which the LORD has given you, asher natan Yehovah lekha – “which has given Yehovah you.” This is the same basic thought from verse 12:15 that said, “according to the blessing of the Lord your God which He has given you.”

Moses is careful to acknowledge the Lord’s hand as being the source of the possessions of the people. It is thus to be to them a reminder that not only is this allowance now being spoken of as a grant to the people, but the very animal itself is a blessing from the Lord. Therefore, they are to treat the command with respect...

21 (con't) just as I have commanded you,

This refers to the words of the previous clause, “then you may slaughter from your herd and from your flock ... just as I have commanded you.” The allowance is granted by the Lord through Moses, and it thus removes any difficulty from the otherwise undiscernible notion of what to do.

If this provision were not made, it could be argued by the priests that every single such animal had to be brought to the tabernacle, regardless of the distance, and it would have had to be slaughtered according to the temple rights.

In this, there would have been obvious other difficulties, because the command from Leviticus 17 said that such animals were to be offered as peace offerings to the Lord. The laws of the peace offerings included the procedures for the sacrifice, removal of certain portions of the animal to be burnt on the altar, and so on.

However, Leviticus 7 (the peace offering of thanksgiving) included offering cakes mixed with oil, unleavened wafers anointed with oil, or cakes of blended flour mixed with oil, and leavened bread as well. Some of that was to be given to the priest.

And, along with that, the meat of the offering had to be eaten either on the same day it was offered (thanksgiving offering) or by the second day (voluntary offering).

And then, there is the command that the breast and the right thigh of the offering were to belong to the priests who offered them. Because of all of this, the priest’s job would never end.

And yet, if Moses didn’t include this provision, this is what would be expected. But once in the land, the previous command was set aside allowing for freedom concerning the matter. The animal could be slaughtered in whatever location the people lived...

21 (con't) and you may eat within your gates as much as your heart desires.

The Hebrew reads: b'kol avvat naphshekha – “in all desire your soul.” There is no limit placed upon the people, and there is no burden concerning the matter any longer.

It is a marvelous provision that, if overlooked, would have led to enormous confusion in the land. The animals of the flock and of the herd, with certain restrictions, were to be handled solely at the discretion of those who owned them. They were to be eaten...

²² Just as the gazelle and the deer are eaten, so you may eat them; the unclean and the clean alike may eat them.

The words here follow on after verse 12:15, which said, “the unclean and the clean may eat of it, of the gazelle and the deer alike.” As you can see, verse 12:15 is in the opposite order of verse 22. A more literal comparison of the two would be –

Indeed, just as are eaten the gazelle and the deer, so you may eat them; the unclean and the clean together [meaning in the same manner] may eat them. (22)

The unclean and the clean may it of it; as the gazelle and as the deer. (15)

Through the repetition, and through rearranging the wording, Moses is methodically eliminating any question of his intent. Nobody will be able to later question the law through some sort of manipulation of what he is saying.

There is complete freedom in this regard concerning these animals, but with certain exceptions. Some were noted in the previous passage last week. They are now reexplained again here. The first of those exceptions is next stated...

²³ Only be sure that you do not eat the blood, raq khazeq l'bilti akol ha'dam – “Only! Be firm to not eat the blood.” This follows on after verse 16, expanding what was said there. However, there is a difference that conveys the meaning in a very strong manner –

Only the blood not you (all, plural) shall eat. (16)

Only be sure to not eat the blood. (23)

In verse 16 everything was in the singular except that one clause. There, it changed to the plural to highlight the importance of this. Moses highlights the matter again by skipping any pronoun. Thus, it is an all-encompassing prohibition. Further, he adamantly stresses the precept through the use of the words he has chosen. The reason for this is next explained...

²³ (con't) for the blood is the life;

ki ha'dam hu ha'nepesh – “For the blood, it, the soul.” This is what was briefly explained in the previous chapter, and it is what needs to be highlighted again. The blood is the vehicle of life, here called the nephesh, or the soul. For this reason, the Lord reserved all blood to Himself.

To eat the blood was to assimilate into oneself something which belonged to Him alone. It was therefore idolatrous to use it in any other way than designated by Him. Under certain circumstances, it could be used in the rites of the tabernacle as typologically anticipating Christ. Otherwise, it was to be poured out and covered with earth.

As the Bible says here that the blood is the soul, it gives us an insight into one of the doctrines of theology taught by Scripture – What is the soul, and where does it come from? There are several views on this, and this is the perfect time to learn them. Three basic views are:

The Preexistence View. Of this, there are two separate divisions. The first is the Platonic view which says the soul was never created. The second is the Christian, (created) view. This says the soul was created from eternity. Without going over all the details of it or reasons why, it is a heretical view.

The next is the Creation View. This assumes God directly creates a new individual soul for everyone born into this world. The body is generated through the parents, but the soul is created by God. It says that the soul is created at the moment of conception.

One reason for holding to this view is that all genetic information is present at conception. One reason why this view is wrong is that God completed His work of creation on Day 6. Another, obvious reason from this verse is that the blood, which carries all the genetic information, is called the soul right in this verse.

And then there is the Traducian View. This comes from the Latin word tradux, the branch of a vine. This says that each human being is a branch of the parents. Both soul and body are naturally generated by father and mother.

There is abundant biblical evidence for this third view. Eve was made from Adam, not separately. There is the fact noted by Paul that both males and females come from a union of males and females. Eve is called the mother of all the living. The Bible says that Adam had children in his image, thus natural generation is implied.

The Greek word for flesh, sarx, can mean both a physical body and a whole person with a body. Acts 17 says that all humans are derived from one man (“one blood”). Hebrews says that Levi was in Abraham's loins, implying a physical transmission. In the Bible, the body in a womb is considered a person.

Paul says that all men sinned through one man, demonstrating that sin is transmitted by natural process – something that would not occur with a created soul. David even says that man is conceived in sin. And Jesus is said to come from the loins (or body) of David, demonstrating a genetic connection. And Paul shows that humans are a soul body unity. The soul is “naked” without the body.

All of these, and many other reasons from Scripture and from simply thinking the matter through, clearly demonstrate the importance of the precept once again being conveyed by Moses. As the blood is the soul, Moses, therefore, says...

²³ (con't) you may not eat the life with the meat.

As mentioned last week in some detail, to really understand this more fully, the sermon on Leviticus 17 should be referred to. Blood is given for atonement, it is the soul of the being, and so on. The prohibition here looks to the work of Christ, and the precept was never to be violated. Because of this, Moses again repeats words from verse 16, saying...

²⁴ You shall not eat it;

Again, Moses repeats the prohibition, and it is said in another way for the third time –

Only the blood not you (all, plural) shall eat. (16)

Only be sure to not eat the blood. (23)

No you (singular) shall eat it. (24)

There are no loopholes, there are no caveats, and the prohibition applies to each, to any, and to all. The blood is not to be eaten. The typology of Christ must never be marred. This is why, when He came, He was able to say the following –

“Then Jesus said to them, ‘Most assuredly, I say to you, unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood, you have no life in you. ⁵⁴ Whoever eats My flesh and drinks My blood has eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day. ⁵⁵ For My flesh is food indeed, and My blood is drink indeed. ⁵⁶ He who eats My flesh and drinks My blood abides in Me, and I in him.’” John 6:53-56

The life is in the blood. To attempt to gain life through any blood, except the blood of Christ, is to mar the significance of what Christ Jesus did. In participating in the Lord's supper – an obvious reference to His words in John 6 – we partake of the symbolism He speaks of. For any other blood...

²⁴ (con't) you shall pour it on the earth like water.

It is word for word and letter for letter identical to the corresponding clause in verse 12:16. If you missed the sermon, you'll have to go back and watch that. I was feeling really crummy on the day I typed this sermon, and I was in no mood to help you out of that responsibility. Your job this afternoon is to go back and get the details there. For now, Moses again says...

²⁵ You shall not eat it,

It is the exact same words that he just said to begin the previous verse.

²⁵ (con't) that it may go well with you and your children after you,

As with elsewhere when Moses uses this expression, its meaning is, "to the end purpose that it may go well with you." In other words, "There is the goal of things going well with you, and your children after you. The way to achieve that goal is to do those things that you are being instructed to do."

The implication is that in not doing what is instructed, things will not go well. What is anticipated will be withheld from the one who does such things. Charles Ellicott says, "Very possibly, the physical as well as the moral effect of the rule is contemplated here." I would disagree with that. The precept is moral in nature.

People all over the world drink blood and they live long lives. Those who get sick from it, do so just like with any other tainted food. The precept here, and the stress upon it, is not for physical health, but for upholding the sacred, moral, nature of the typology that anticipates the coming of Jesus Christ.

This is the importance of the precept, and this is the reason for the admonition concerning the good end purpose that comes...

²⁵ (con't) when you do what is right in the sight of the LORD.

ki taaseh ha'yashar b'ene Yehovah – “when you do the right in eyes Yehovah.” The Lord is watching, and His eyes are on the precepts He sets forth. Due to this precept having been repeatedly stated, it is an admonition that in not following through with it, the Lord will be greatly displeased. Therefore, to simply do what is instructed is worthy and commendable.

Despite the precept being thoroughly ingrained into the national psyche, Ezekiel 33:25 shows that the people willingly violated it. In this, things did not go well with them because they had done what was detestable for them to do.

For now, Moses returns to the general theme of the thought at hand, that of what to do with the animals owned by the people. He has given them allowances concerning slaughtering them within their own gates, and not at the tabernacle. However, after citing the first exception, that of eating the blood, he now mentions the second exception...

²⁶ Only the holy things which you have,

The word is qodesh, signifying apartness or sacredness. Thus, they are holy things. These include sacrifices and offerings such as are noted in Leviticus 18 –

“And the LORD spoke to Aaron: ‘Here, I Myself have also given you charge of My heave offerings, all the holy gifts of the children of Israel; I have given them as a portion to you and your sons, as an ordinance forever. ⁹ This shall be yours of the most holy things reserved from the fire: every offering of theirs, every grain offering and every sin offering and every trespass offering which they render to Me, shall be most holy for you and your sons. ⁰ In a most holy place you shall eat it; every male shall eat it. It shall be holy to you.

¹¹ “This also is yours: the heave offering of their gift, with all the wave offerings of the children of Israel; I have given them to you, and your sons and daughters with you, as an ordinance forever. Everyone who is clean in your house may eat it.”

-Leviticus 18:8-11

In other words, those animals prescribed by law to be brought before the Lord. Among other things, these consisted of sacrifices, offerings, the firstborn and the tithes of animals. These were to be presented before the Lord and handled according to the law. They were not to be slaughtered within the gates of the people. Further...

²⁶ (con't) and your vowed offerings,

The neder is a promise or a thing promised. When an animal was vowed as an offering, it could not be slaughtered within the gates of the people. Like the holy things, they had to be presented to the Lord. As Moses next says...

²⁶ (con't) you shall take and go to the place which the LORD chooses.

This means to where the tabernacle, and later the temple, were located. The idea, as noted last week, was to ensure oneness of the people in their religious life. In fact, between verse 5 and this verse, this phrase has been stated in one way or another six times.

In bringing all of these there, it was to keep the people from sacrificing inappropriately in any way. The responsibility for these things belonged solely with the priests and solely at the place the Lord chose.

²⁷ And you shall offer your burnt offerings, the meat and the blood, on the altar of the LORD your God;

This is referring to the burnt offerings of Leviticus 1 –

“He shall kill the bull before the LORD; and the priests, Aaron’s sons, shall bring the blood and sprinkle the blood all around on the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of meeting. ⁶ And he shall skin the burnt offering and cut it into its pieces. ⁷ The sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire on the altar, and lay the wood in order on the fire. ⁸ Then the priests, Aaron’s sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat in order on the wood that is on the fire upon the altar; ⁹ but he shall wash its entrails and its legs with water. And the priest shall burn all on the altar as a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, a sweet aroma to the LORD.”

-Leviticus 1:5-9

²⁷ (con't) and the blood of your sacrifices shall be poured out on the altar of the LORD your God, and you shall eat the meat.

This is referring to the sacrifices that were to be eaten by the people after being presented to the priests for their handling of the animal, and of the priests’ reception of the holy parts dedicated to the Lord.

For example, the tithed animals and the firstborn animals were sacrificed, but other than every third year, they were eaten by the people. In the third year, they were given away in their entirety. Such things were considered as law.

*The soul of the flesh is in the blood
And it is this then that makes atonement for you
Only through the precious, crimson flood
Can you be cleansed, spotless, and new*

*There at the Altar, the blood is cast
And it is this Sacrifice which will open the Door
Through it is new life; gone is the past
Through that death, comes life evermore*

*Be sure and know that there is but this One way
No other avenue can reconcile you to Me
But in coming through My Son, you start a new day
One which will continue unabated for all eternity*

II. Take Heed to Yourself (verses 28-32)

²⁸ Observe and obey all these words which I command you,

These words now take the reader back to verse 1 –

“These are the statutes and judgments which you shall be careful to observe in the land which the LORD God of your fathers is giving you to possess, all the days that you live on the earth.”

The command is to observe and to hear (meaning hearken to) everything contained in the chapter. It includes destroying the places where the inhabitants served their gods, destroying their altars, and so on. It also includes serving the Lord at the one place He would choose for His name, and everything that has been associated with that.

The entire chapter is given to ensure unity of worship by the people of Israel. In doing these things Moses notes...

²⁸ (con't) that it may go well with you and your children after you forever, when you do what is good and right in the sight of the LORD your God.

He again uses the same words as before, indicating that there is an end purpose that will be met in observing and hearkening to what they are told. Things will go well with them as long as they do, emphasized by the words ad olam, or “as far as the vanishing point.” Olam signifies out of time or mind, and thus it is a point that vanishes into the past or future.

As long as Israel did what was expected in the eyes of the Lord, things would continue to go well. Obviously, knowing the history of Israel, this does not mean forever. They failed to do what was right. In turn, things didn’t go well for them. Something more than the law is needed for them to come to such a state before the Lord.

For now, Moses returns to the general thought found in verses 2-4, that of the conduct of the nations they were to dispossess. There he told them to destroy the means and modes of worship they employed, and to not serve the Lord in those ways. Now, he says...

²⁹ “When the LORD your God cuts off from before you the nations which you go to dispossess, and you displace them and dwell in their land,

Here, the synergistic (working together) relationship of the conquest is seen again. Moses says the Lord will cut off the nations, and yet he says, “which you go to dispossess, and you displace them.” The two are working as one, but Israel cannot work alone.

The idea is that Israel will dispossess them, but only because the Lord is there to cut them off from before Israel. But, because it is said that the Lord will cut them off, it means that He is the Source of their power, and their Source of power is greater than the nations they will face and the gods those nations worshipped. Therefore...

³⁰ take heed to yourself that you are not ensnared to follow them,

Moses brings a new word into Scripture, naqash. It is a verb meaning to entrap with a noose, or to catch by a snare. He is warning the people that, like an animal getting ensnared, so they will get ensnared if they are not diligent to pay heed. With this said, Moses goes on with the thought...

³⁰ (con’t) after they are destroyed from before you, and that you do not inquire after their gods, saying,

Moses is relaying to them the stupidity of such a thing, and thus the just nature of any punishment meted out on them for such a thing. The Lord cut the people off, Israel went in to dispossess them and, in fact, displaced them, and yet the perverse question they may then ask concerning their gods is...

³⁰ (con't) 'How did these nations serve their gods?'

This is speaking of finding out the manner in which their worship was conducted. Verse 31 will show this is not speaking of serving other gods, but serving the Lord in the manner in which the other gods were served. In other words, it would be comparable to what Aaron did with the golden calf. He set up an idol and called it the Lord. Thus, he claimed to be worshipping the Lord in an unauthorized manner. Something similar is seen in 2 Kings 17 –

And it was so, at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they did not fear the LORD; therefore the LORD sent lions among them, which killed some of them. ²⁶ So they spoke to the king of Assyria, saying, "The nations whom you have removed and placed in the cities of Samaria do not know the rituals of the God of the land; therefore He has sent lions among them, and indeed, they are killing them because they do not know the rituals of the God of the land." ²⁷ Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, "Send there one of the priests whom you brought from there; let him go and dwell there, and let him teach them the rituals of the God of the land." 2 Kings 17:25-27

Moses is telling Israel that this is not to be considered, and it is a trap that will bring harm, not the other way around. Because of this, they were not to say...

³⁰ (con't) 'I also will do likewise.'

The means and mode of worship for the Lord have been established through the law. To serve Him as the nations served their gods would be an abomination to the Lord, and they were never to follow such practices. They were to stick to the rites and rituals set forth before them in the law itself.

To ensure this would be so, Moses warns them now, in advance, that no other path was to be considered...

³¹ You shall not worship the LORD your God in that way; for every abomination to the LORD which He hates they have done to their gods;

This tells us that Moses was not speaking of worshipping the other gods, but of worshipping the Lord as the previous peoples worshipped their gods.

It is the same idea as was seen at the beginning of the chapter. Moses instructed them to destroy all such items of worship. In conclusion, he said, “You shall not worship the Lord your God with such things.” The call here is for unity of worship towards the Lord.

And the reason for this is – as always – typology. The people were given unity of worship because it is unity of worship given by the Lord in anticipation of the coming of Christ. The details anticipate Him and His ministry. Only in Christ is God pleased with man’s worship, and so Israel was to reflect that – not in the law itself, but in the typology it displayed.

And so, until His coming, Israel was to worship in anticipation of His coming. Anything else is an abomination, because it is a false manner of worship invented to serve a false god, such as...

³¹ (con’t) for they burn even their sons and daughters in the fire to their gods.

This is how the nations served their gods at times, whether to Molech or other supposed gods. It eventually did become a practice of Israel. So vile is the practice that the Lord says that such a thing had never entered into His mind –

“And they have turned to Me the back, and not the face; though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not listened to receive instruction. ³⁴ But they set their abominations in the house which is called by My name, to defile it. ³⁵ And they built the high places of Baal which are in the Valley of the Son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire to Molech, which I did not command them, nor did it come into My mind that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.” Jeremiah 32:33-35

For such sins, and because of the attitude of the people, there was eventually no remedy left. The Lord destroyed them, and they were exiled to Babylon. They failed to heed, but Moses ends the chapter as it began on a note that Israel must be careful to observe the statutes and judgments set before them...

³² “Whatever I command you, be careful to observe it;

In this clause alone in today's passage the words switch to the second person plural – “Whatever I command you (all), you (all) are to be careful to observe it.” This makes it absolutely certain that Moses penned this.

Anyone else would have carefully followed in the singular, but Moses has revealed the word of the Lord, and it is conveyed to all of the people. They were to hear the word and then they were to hearken unto it. Moses felt at liberty to speak to the individual, to speak to the nation, and to speak to all of the people at any given time in order for them to hopefully pay heed. And to finish off the verse and the chapter, he says...

32 (fin) you shall not add to it nor take away from it.

This was conveyed to the people in verse 4:2. There, he added in the reason for it, saying, “that you may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you.” In that verse, it was in the second person plural. Here it is in the second person singular.

Moses has conveyed the thought to all of the people, and he has conveyed it to each of them. There is to be no tolerance in violating the precept at any time, and by anyone. This is because it is impossible to keep the law when the law has been altered. To add to it will violate it, and to take from it will violate it.

With that understood, we can stand back before closing and know the same is true concerning the word of God as a whole. To add to it is to add in what man has decided is right. To take away from it is to determine that what God has decided is wrong.

This cannot be tolerated. The word is a unified whole. Everything recorded in it is recorded for the people of God to know and understand the mind of God and His intentions for His people, even if all of it does not apply to whatever people at a particular time.

In other words, the Law of Moses is written for us in the church – to understand what God has done in redemptive history. Without it, there would be a void in our understanding of His workings. And yet, the Law of Moses does not apply to us today – in any way, shape, or form. It is annulled through the work of Christ.

In this, we have entered a new dispensation, that of grace. We are to live according to the word of the Lord that applies to us at this time. To further understand this, the synoptic gospels were written to record Christ's life under the law, and of His fulfillment of that law. In those books, He speaks to Israel under the law, and – at times – in anticipation of the kingdom age promised to them.

He is not speaking to the church in the synoptic gospels. And yet, the information in the synoptic gospels is necessary for us to understand what He did, how it leads us into the current dispensation, and what will happen to Israel in the future.

As long as we keep our categorical boxes straight, our doctrine will be sound, and we will not make the major errors that so many make in their theology when they mix the boxes. We are to not add to the word, nor are we to take from it. But we are also to take it in its proper context at all times – not coopting what belongs to others at other times in redemptive history.

Today’s passage is for our instruction in theology, but it is not intended for application in our lives. And yet, it is intended for us to continually find hints of Jesus as we search it out. As long as we are doing that, we are in the sweet spot – because He is the sweetest spot of all. He is our hope and our anticipation. He is the fulfillment of everything Moses spoke of. He is the release for Israel from their bondage. And He is the Savior of both Jew and Gentile because of what He did under this impossible body of law. He is Jesus.

Closing Verse: “All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, ¹⁷ that the man of God may be complete, thoroughly equipped for every good work.” 1 Timothy 3:16, 17

Next Week: Deuteronomy 13.1-5 This is how you are to tread – if you are a faithful son... (You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part I) (42nd Deuteronomy sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

You Shall Not Add to It nor Take Away from It

“When the LORD your God enlarges your border
As He has promised you, and you say, ‘Let me eat meat’
Because you long to eat meat
You may eat as much meat as your heart desires, so tasty and sweet

If the place where the LORD your God chooses
To put His name is too far from you
Then you may slaughter from your herd
And from your flock which the LORD has given you
-----so, you may do

Just as I have commanded you, as I did impart
And you may eat within your gates as much as desires your heart

Just as the gazelle and the deer are eaten, so you may eat them
The unclean and the clean alike may eat them
----- without any haw or hem

Only be sure that you do not eat the blood
For the blood is the life
You may not eat the life with the meat
Or between us there shall be strife

You shall not eat it; you shall pour it on the earth like water
You shall not eat it, that it may go well with you
And your children after you
When you what is right in the sight of the LORD do

Only the holy things which you have, and your vowed offerings
You shall take and go to the place which the LORD chooses
-----to where He gives His approval nod
And you shall offer your burnt offerings
The meat and the blood, on the altar of the LORD your God

And the blood of your sacrifices
Shall be poured out on the altar of the LORD your God
And you shall eat the meat
And enjoy life upon the land that you trod

Observe and obey all these words which I command you
That it may go well with you and your children after you forever
When you do what is good and right in the sight
Of the LORD your God, failing His precepts never

“When the LORD your God cuts off from before you
The nations which you go to dispossess, bringing on them mayhem
And you displace them and dwell in their land
Take heed to yourself that you are not ensnared to follow them

After they are destroyed from before you
And that you do not inquire after their gods, saying “How did these nations serve their gods?
I also will do likewise. It shall not be so, as I am conveying

You shall not worship the LORD your God in that way
For every abomination to the LORD which He hates
-----raising His ire
They have done to their gods
For they burn even their sons and daughters to their gods in the fire

“Whatever I command you, be careful to observe it
-----to this you shall commit
You shall not add to it nor take away from it

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 13:1-5 (You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part I)

How is it that people get so easily swayed from what is right and proper? And how can people be kept from being cunningly deceived by others? The answer is to know what is going on in the world around you in relation to whatever subject is being presented.

If a person doesn't want to be deceived concerning financial matters, he will make himself aware of whatever financial issue is being presented to him. It could be buying real estate in an area he had never visited. If such is the case, he would be wise to make a visit there before buying in order to make himself aware of what he was getting into. The smooth talker is there to cheat otherwise.

Such is true with ten thousand other things you may be presented with during your life. If you are unaware of the events surrounding you concerning a matter, you are bound to be duped.

In 1504, Christopher Columbus was able to use an eclipse to convince the natives of Jamaica that his God was angry with them because they had stopped giving him and his men help and supplies. In this, they were in real trouble and desperate need.

In order to make the natives more compliant in this regard, he consulted his astronomical tables and found that there would be a total eclipse of the moon on February 29th of the year. This was based on the time in Nuremberg, Germany, but Columbus was aware of things concerning the subject at hand, and he was able to calculate when it would occur over them.

In knowing this, he then threatened the locals by saying his God would take away the moon as a sign of His anger at their lack of help, setting the time it would occur. It did. The moon disappeared from the sky. During that time, Columbus said he would go into his cabin to pray that God would return the moon to them.

What he actually did was to watch the hourglass until the forty-eight minutes of eclipse were up. Just as the moon was supposed to emerge, he came back out and told them that he had effectively convinced God that He should forgive the locals. His ploy worked, and from that point on, they received all the supplies they needed. Eventually, they were picked up and taken back to Spain.

Text Verse: “But there were also false prophets among the people, even as there will be false teachers among you, who will secretly bring in destructive heresies, even denying the Lord who bought them, and bring on themselves swift destruction. ² And many will follow their destructive ways, because of whom the way of truth will be blasphemed. ³ By covetousness they will exploit you with deceptive words; for a long time their judgment has not been idle, and their destruction does not slumber.” 2 Peter 2:1-3

Based on how you take what he did, Columbus’ actions could be considered the work of a false prophet. Probably not, but it was cunningly deceptive. However you look at it, it was the effort of a man who was aware of how things worked in the natural world. False prophets also know how things work, and they exploit those things in order to deceive others in various ways.

A true false prophet (which sounds odd, doesn’t it) is a person who speaks in the name of the true God but who twists, misuses, and misrepresents what the true God has revealed. This may be (and usually is) for his own personal gain or exaltation. It may be that he is a perverse person that just wants to see others harmed.

False prophets also speak in the name of false gods to turn people away from the true God. In the end, the Bible speaks of such things, and of such people. They are out there, they have their own agenda, and they use the lack of understanding of God’s people concerning what is going on in the world around them in relation to what He has presented – meaning what is stated in His word – against them.

When one is uninformed, unschooled, or misdirected concerning the word of God, that person is open to whatever false teaching comes his way. This is a certain truth that is to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Lord Your God is Testing You (verses 1-3)

In our passage today is a short chiasm that will help us better understand the expectations of the Lord –

Deuteronomy 13:2-5 – You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God
Contrasts and Confirmations (12/21/2020)

- a. he spoke to you, saying, 'Let us walk after other gods'
- b. which you have not known (unknown)
- c. you shall not listen to the words of that prophet or that dreamer of dreams
- d. for the LORD your God is testing you to know whether you love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul
- x. You shall walk after the LORD your God
- d. fear Him, and keep His commandments and obey His voice; you shall serve Him and hold fast to Him
- c. But that prophet or that dreamer of dreams shall be put to death
- b. the LORD your God (known)
- a. to entice you from the way in which the LORD your God commanded you to walk

The very last words of Chapter 12 said, "Whatever I command you, be careful to observe it; you shall not add to it nor take away from it." That serves as an introduction and a warning to what is now stated. It is the false prophets and false teachers who are very likely to add to, or to take from, this word as given by God. And so, they are now addressed.

The chapter before us logically divides itself into three separate sections. Each (verses 1, 6, and 12) begins with the word ki, translated by the NKJV as "if," in each instance. Such an event would then be possible, but not certain. In other words, "Suppose this was to happen," or "Should this come about."

Young's translation takes it as a certainty. He translates each instance as "when." In other words, "When this comes about." Looking back from our time, and knowing the history of Israel, using the word "when" certainly fits well.

But, the words now are based on what was stated in the previous verse. Moses has been admonishing the people to observe what he says, holding fast to the unity of worship towards the Lord within the entire community by avoiding idolatry, pagan rituals, and the customs of those they will dispossess. Therefore, one would think Moses' intent is, "Should this happen, you are to do this."

And yet, reading Moses' words in the Song of Moses of Chapter 32, he already knows the people's proclivity towards going astray, and so translating it as "when" very well may be what is on his mind even as he is speaking to the people. "When this happens, you are to do this."

If I were to choose a word that would convey both intents of what is presented, it would be the word “though.” Thus, it is a challenge to right conduct and a rather certain fact that such conduct will be needed – “Though this happens, you are to do this.”

This may seem like over-analyzing a single word, but it is important to the overall scope of what is being conveyed. The people are shown challenges that must be faced by any or by all, and they are being warned in advance of how to face them. With this understood, we enter into the content of Chapter 13...

¹“If there arises among you a prophet ki yaqum b’qirbekha navi – “Though arises in your (singular) midst a prophet.” As the pronoun is singular, Moses may be speaking to Israel collectively, or to each person individually. In the end, the outcome will be the same. However, the words “in your midst” favor the thought of him speaking to the nation collectively.

The navi, or prophet, is a word coming from the verb nava, meaning to prophesy. Moses is not saying this is something either unusual now, or that will be unusual in the future. Rather, being the Lord’s people, it is an expected thing. However, care must be taken in accepting the prophet’s words. This will be noted.

The navi has already been seen, and the position will be common in Israel. Abraham was noted as a prophet in Genesis 20. Aaron was designated as Moses’ prophet in Exodus 7. And the Lord openly said that prophets would be among Israel in Numbers 12 –

“Hear now My words:

If there is a prophet among you,

I, the LORD, make Myself known to him in a vision;

I speak to him in a dream.

⁷ Not so with My servant Moses;

He is faithful in all My house.

⁸ I speak with him face to face,

Even plainly, and not in dark sayings;

And he sees the form of the LORD.

Why then were you not afraid

To speak against My servant Moses?” Numbers 12:6-8

One of the things about the prophets was that just because they uttered a word of prophecy, it did not mean that he understood all of what he was prophesying. This is seen in the words of Peter –

“Of this salvation the prophets have inquired and searched carefully, who prophesied of the grace that would come to you, ¹¹ searching what, or what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ who was in them was indicating when He testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glories that would follow. ¹² To them it was revealed that, not to themselves, but to us they were ministering the things which now have been reported to you through those who have preached the gospel to you by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven—things which angels desire to look into.” 1 Peter 1:10-12

In Scripture, prophets are seen to receive their prophecies in various ways, one of which was just seen from Numbers 12. That is again revealed by Moses with the words...

¹ (con't) or a dreamer of dreams,

o kholem khalom – “Or dreamer of dreams.” The verb is khalam and it has two separate meanings. One is to be healthy or strong. The other is to dream. Probably the verse that ties the two thoughts together the best is that of Psalm 126:1. There the psalm says –

“When the LORD brought back the captivity of Zion,
We were like those who dream.

² Then our mouth was filled with laughter,
And our tongue with singing.

Then they said among the nations,
“The LORD has done great things for them.”

³ The LORD has done great things for us,
And we are glad.” Psalm 126:1-3

If one were to substitute the word “dream” with “healthy” the two thoughts merge – “We were like those who were made healthy.” It is as if life were a dream state when they were brought back to their precious homeland. This state of receiving a prophecy is referred to by Elihu, a man living outside of the covenant people –

“For God may speak in one way, or in another,
Yet man does not perceive it.

¹⁵ In a dream, in a vision of the night,

When deep sleep falls upon men,
While slumbering on their beds,
¹⁶ Then He opens the ears of men,
And seals their instruction.
¹⁷ In order to turn man from his deed,
And conceal pride from man,
¹⁸ He keeps back his soul from the Pit,
And his life from perishing by the sword.” Job 33:14-18

This, however, does not make such a person a prophet, nor should it be considered as such among those in the church. The prophetic word of God is written, it is complete, and it is sealed. There is no need for more prophecies or prophets. This is explicitly stated by the author of Hebrews –

“God, who at various times and in various ways spoke in time past to the fathers by the prophets, ² has in these last days spoken to us by His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things.” Hebrews 1:1, 2

The implication of the writer’s words is that God no longer speaks in those various ways. He has spoken, the word has been given, and we should expect no further word.

This does not stop a countless stream of people from making their false prophecies on a daily basis. Nor does it stop people who are unschooled in the word, or unwilling to accept the word as God’s full and final revelation of Himself, from listening to such people.

I would hope for better for those who hear what the word says, and who accept that what it says is sufficient for their life, doctrine, and conduct. And if you feel differently about this, you’re entitled to be wrong. Nobody is stopping you, and it is your walk with the Lord that will be harmed.

The transmission of false prophecies, that Moses will now warn against, is something found in abundance in the Old Testament, but most especially in Jeremiah. In Jeremiah, he combines the two thoughts, prophecy and dreams, into one warning, such as –

“The prophet who has a dream, let him tell a dream;
And he who has My word, let him speak My word faithfully.
What is the chaff to the wheat?” says the LORD.
²⁹ “Is not My word like a fire?” says the LORD,

“And like a hammer that breaks the rock in pieces?

³⁰ “Therefore behold, I am against the prophets,” says the LORD, “who steal My words every one from his neighbor. ³¹ Behold, I am against the prophets,” says the LORD, “who use their tongues and say, ‘He says.’ ³² Behold, I am against those who prophesy false dreams,” says the LORD, “and tell them, and cause My people to err by their lies and by their recklessness. Yet I did not send them or command them; therefore they shall not profit this people at all,” says the LORD.

-Jeremiah 23:28-32

To analyze all that encompasses prophets, prophecies, dreams, and visions would take an analysis of the entire Bible, because the entire Bible is a book of revealing the mind of God as conveyed in the prophetic utterances of God through His people. And along with that, there are other ways God reveals Himself to them. That is found in the next words...

¹ (con’t) and he gives you a sign or a wonder,

Here, Moses refers to things already seen – the oth, or sign, and the mopheth, or wonder. The oth is probably derived from uth, which is a verb indicating consent or agreement. The oth is not something in and of itself. Rather, it is something that stands representative of something else. For example, the first time the word is used is in Genesis 1 –

“Then God said, ‘Let there be lights in the firmament of the heavens to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs and seasons, and for days and years; ¹⁵ and let them be for lights in the firmament of the heavens to give light on the earth’; and it was so.” Genesis 1:14, 15

In saying this, the Lord was indicating that stars had varied purposes. The “seasons,” “days,” and “years,” is understandable. They mark out the times of life, and we can use them to determine things – like when to plant, when it will get cold, and so on.

However, they also are given by God to point to something else. That is seen in Scripture in the Star of Bethlehem. It was something given to reveal that Messiah had been born. Circumcision is also an oth, or sign. It stands representative of something else – meaning the cutting of the sin nature in man. It is thus a picture of the hope of Messiah.

The mopheth, or wonder, comes from yaphah, or beautiful. Thus, it is something that is conspicuous, like a miracle. It is an open demonstration of something that captures the attention. Unlike the sign that points to something else, it is the thing itself. Should someone give a sign or produce a wonder...

² and the sign or the wonder comes to pass, u-ba ha'oth v'ha'mopheth – “and comes the sign and the wonder.” The words here mean that the prophet or dreamer of dreams gives a sign that then is fulfilled, or he actually produces a wonder. There is no doubt of it. What does that mean? Well, it depends on the next words of that person...

² (con't) of which he spoke to you,

The idea here is that a person could make a claim such as “This is a sign to you that you will win the lottery tomorrow,” and it comes to pass. Or the person might do something like a magic trick that seems impossible to have been anything but of divine origin. In such an instance, one might be persuaded that this guy really has a connection with the divine. Such is seen in Acts 8:9-11 –

“But there was a certain man called Simon, who previously practiced sorcery in the city and astonished the people of Samaria, claiming that he was someone great, ¹⁰ to whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, “This man is the great power of God.” ¹¹ And they heeded him because he had astonished them with his sorceries for a long time.”

There is a difference between how people approach such things, and the distinction should be made. Some perform what we call today “magic.” They make no claims that they are in connection with the divine. Instead, they devise skilled forms of misdirection and challenge you to figure out how they did what they did.

And then, there are those who claim – like Simon – that they have a great power or divine ability to do the things they do. In this, they elevate what they are doing above the natural world to the supernatural. It is such as this that will be the ones...

² (con't) saying, ‘Let us go after other gods’—

lemor nelekah akhare Elohim akherim – “saying, let us walk after gods other.” It is an important contrast to what will be said in verse 4 – “You shall walk after the Lord your God.”

In such a case, when the thing happens that he said would happen, he then says, “This power came from this god or that god. He is the one we should be following.” Such a person may even claim he is divine, having the ability to tap into the universal conscience, the universe’s power, or even a power that is separate and above the created order itself.

In Daniel 2 (and elsewhere) the king had a dream. He wanted to know the interpretation of the dream and so he called an entire group of people like this, defined as “the magicians, the astrologers, the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans.”

They claimed to have the ability to perform supernatural deeds, or that they had the ability to tap into the supernatural or even the divine. The king obviously questioned this, and so instead of just asking for the meaning of his dream that he described to them, he asked them to first tell him what dream he had, and then to explain its meaning to him. In a comedy of back and forth waffling on their part, the king saw through their supposed claims –

“I know for certain that you would gain time, because you see that my decision is firm: ⁹if you do not make known the dream to me, there is only one decree for you! For you have agreed to speak lying and corrupt words before me till the time has changed. Therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that you can give me its interpretation.”

¹⁰ The Chaldeans answered the king, and said, “There is not a man on earth who can tell the king’s matter; therefore no king, lord, or ruler has ever asked such things of any magician, astrologer, or Chaldean. ¹¹ It is a difficult thing that the king requests, and there is no other who can tell it to the king except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.” Daniel 2:8-11

As stupid as falling for this in the first-place sounds, how guilty are we (meaning society in general or any one of us) of being tempted in this way – tarot cards, hearing someone say that “Allah accomplished the victory,” or simply believing a prosperity preacher (who is – by default – preaching a false gospel).

Daniel and his three friends with him could have joined ranks with these people, and they would have been found as false as the others were. Instead, they trusted in the Lord to provide an answer to the king’s demand.

They petitioned the Lord, and the Lord provided what they needed, telling what dream the king had, and then properly explaining it to him. In this, Daniel took no credit for what he had received, he rightly pointed out that the others were unable to receive what he had received, and that it was God who provided the answer, implying that those charlatans had no connection with God –

“The secret which the king has demanded, the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, and the soothsayers cannot declare to the king. ²⁸ But there is a God in heaven who reveals secrets, and He has made known to King Nebuchadnezzar what will be in the latter days.” Daniel 2:27, 28

In this, Daniel did what was right and proper. He exalted the God of Israel, whom he knew. Of this precept for Israel, Albert Barnes rightly states –

“The Lord had said, ‘Thou shalt have none other gods but Me.’ A prophet is here supposed who invites the people ‘to go after other gods.’ To such a one no credit is under any circumstances to be given, even should he show signs and wonders to authenticate his doctrine. The standing rule of faith and practice had been laid down once for all - that the people were to hold fast. The prophet who propounded another rule could only be an impostor.”

Moses now warns against those who would do otherwise and follow after false gods...

^{2 (con't)} which you have not known—‘and let us serve them,’

Such things as this, or a million other possibilities, happen on any given day. They happen to believers and unbelievers alike. We see the incredible, and we respond to it based on our faith in the Lord, in our trust in who He is, or on how well versed we are in His word and in how willing we are to hold solely to that same word.

For many, the connection with the true God does not exist. For others, their grounding in the faith, or their knowledge of the word, is so minimal that they are swayed from what is right. In this, they follow what that false prophet recommends, going after his false gods to serve them. But the word is spoken...

³ you shall not listen to the words of that prophet or that dreamer of dreams,

The Hebrews is emphatic: “that prophet or that dreamer of dreams.” It is intended to set such a person off from one who is a true prophet or who receives a true dream. A true prophet is to be listened to, but the false prophet is to be ignored.

There is a term commonly used among Christian apologists known as syncretism. In short, it refers to the amalgamation of different religions, cultures, and schools of thought into one religious expression. A simple example of it is the mixing of Roman Catholicism with Santería. Santería is defined by Wikipedia –

“Santería, also known as Regla de Ocha, Regla Lucumí, or Lucumí, is an African diasporic religion that developed in Cuba between the 16th and 19th centuries. It arose through a process of syncretism between the traditional Yoruba religion of West Africa and the Roman Catholic form of Christianity.”

This isn't unique within the Roman Catholic Church. Rather, their adherents are found around the world to merge with cults of all types. And even what is considered mainstream Roman Catholicism is so tainted with heresies that it is – for the most part – actually Christian in name only.

The doctrines of Christ are taught to varying degrees, but they are so completely intermingled with the unholy and profane that very few adherents truly follow Jesus Christ alone. There are some, but they are a small minority.

Whether the RCC throws in Mary, the saints, and even the pope as intermediate access points to God, or whether the charismatic movement mingles the supposed divine utterances of prophecies and angelic tongues – making those who claim such things intermediaries to the divine – or even to the evangelical movement when it claims a special access to riches for its adherents through the prosperity gospel – all such claims are false, they are damaging, and they pervert what is pure and good that stems from the Lord alone.

Though what Moses is referring to here is a precept of the Old Covenant, the truth it conveys is something that is rightly to be applied to our own walk at all times. We are not to listen to such a prophet or dreamer of dreams, and we are to hold fast to the Lord and His word alone. We are not to accept that which is false, even if it is mixed with some truth.

But one might ask, “If this person was aware of, or actually made to happen, the sign or wonder which came to pass, then how do we know it wasn't that “other god” that did it?” Moses tells them that such is not the case. Rather...

^{3 (con't)} for the LORD your God is testing you

Here, the words go to the second person plural “for Yehovah your (all) God is testing you (all).” This will continue until the middle of verse 5. It is not that the entire congregation will be swayed, but that the people within the congregation will be. God is testing them in order...

³ (con’t) to know whether you love the LORD your God

The verb is a participle and gives the sense of that which is enduring and ongoing: ladaat hayishkem ohavim eth Yehovah elohekem – “to the end purpose of knowing you are loving Yehovah your God.”

This is important because it says in 1 Kings 3:3 that Solomon loved the Lord and walked in the statutes of his father David. However, in 1 Kings 11, it then says –

“But King Solomon loved many foreign women, as well as the daughter of Pharaoh: women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Sidonians, and Hittites— ²from the nations of whom the LORD had said to the children of Israel, “You shall not intermarry with them, nor they with you. Surely they will turn away your hearts after their gods.” Solomon clung to these in love. ³And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines; and his wives turned away his heart. ⁴For it was so, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned his heart after other gods; and his heart was not loyal to the LORD his God, as was the heart of his father David.” 1 Kings 11:1-3

Solomon loved the Lord, but it didn’t continue. He wasn’t “loving the Lord.” This type of attitude is what the test of the Lord concerning such false prophets is intended to reveal.

It is the Lord who called Israel. It is the Lord who established Israel. It is the Lord who led Israel. It is the Lord who has done all things for Israel, and it is Israel who have been called as His people. As this is so, their allegiance is to be to Him alone. The test for all is whether they were loving towards Him...

³ (con’t) with all your heart and with all your soul.

One can love in varying degrees. What the Lord calls for is to love Him entirely, both with the intellect and reason, and also with that which animates the person in his walk before the Lord.

To love the Lord with one's intellect (the heart), but without the soul is a person who is fickle – expressing love in mental assent, but whose actions fail to work in accord with that love. It would be the husband who loves his wife, but still chases other women.

To love the Lord with one's soul (that which animates the person in deed and action) but not with the intellect, is a person who is prideful, trusting that his actions are more important than truly seeking the essence of the Lord as its own prize.

A person who loves with the heart and the soul is a person who is both in love with the Lord, and who remains in love with the Lord – in mind, in action, and in continued pursuit. Even unto death, he is – and he will remain – faithful to Him.

The way to obtain this precious state before the Lord is next stated by Moses...

*Is this a word from the Lord? How can I know?
What if this preacher is just snuffing me?
Is his word true, or is it untoward? Even so...
To this puzzle, what is the key?*

*How can I know if the words are false or if they are true?
Please, what is the answer, where is the key?
From where comes the answer? What shall I do?
What is the resolution that is escaping me?*

*Wait! Are you telling me that really is the key?
Just read the word for myself? Is that what I am to do?
Yes! Why didn't that already dawn on me?
Take it off the shelf and read it through and through!*

*Yes, I shall take it off the shelf, reading it through and through
If that is what it takes, that is what I shall do!*

II. From the House of Bondage (verses 4 & 5)

⁴You shall walk after the LORD your God

This is set in contrast to verse 2 where the false prophet said, "Let us walk after other gods." Here Moses says that they are to rather "walk after the Lord your God." As always, in the Bible, to "walk" signifies the conduct of one's life and actions.

The path the Lord leads on, they are to follow. The precepts that He gives, they are to apply to their lives. And so on. Also...

⁴ (con't) and fear Him, and keep His commandments and obey His voice; you shall serve Him and hold fast to Him.

The Hebrew is more personal and emphatic, and the last verb bears a strong emphasis – “and Him you all fear, and His commandments you all keep, and His voice you all obey; and Him you all shall serve, and to Him you all (shall surely) hold fast.”

The same word used here, translated as “hold fast,” dabaq, is used of Solomon when he “clung” to his foreign wives in love. In this, he was seduced away from the Lord to their false gods in the same manner that a false prophet will seduce away a person to following his false gods.

The admonition is to devote everything that comprises the person into a heartfelt, intellectual, and physical pursuit of the Lord, clinging to Him with every fiber of one’s being. A review of the New Testament epistles reveals that the exact same expectations are given to us toward the Lord Jesus as are laid down by Moses now.

We are to walk in Christ (Colossian 2:6), we are to fear God (Colossians 3:22), we are to keep His commandments (1 Corinthians 7:19), we are to obey His gospel (2 Thessalonians 1:8), we are to serve Him (1 Corinthians 7:35), and we are to hold fast to Him (Hebrews 10:23).

It is through these things that we will be kept from being turned aside from Him by false prophets, or from any other distractions that will lead us down the wrong path.

Unlike the false prophets of today, however, Israel had another obligation levied upon them that was intended to keep such people from constantly arising and leading the people astray...

⁵ But that prophet or that dreamer of dreams shall be put to death,

Like verse 3, there is an emphasis in these words, “But that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams.” The true prophet is contrasted to the false. The true prophet was to live while the false was to be put to death. The contrast was important for Jeremiah –

“So the princes and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, ‘This man does not deserve to die. For he has spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.’

“Then certain of the elders of the land rose up and spoke to all the assembly of the people, saying: ¹⁸ ‘Micah of Moresheth prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spoke to all the people of Judah, saying, “Thus says the LORD of hosts:

‘Zion shall be plowed like a field,
Jerusalem shall become heaps of ruins,
And the mountain of the temple
Like the bare hills of the forest.’

¹⁹ Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah ever put him to death? Did he not fear the LORD and seek the LORD’s favor? And the LORD relented concerning the doom which He had pronounced against them. But we are doing great evil against ourselves.”” Jeremiah 26:17-19

On the other hand, Elijah did according to the word of the Lord after he had proven the prophets of Baal false –

“And Elijah said to them, ‘Seize the prophets of Baal! Do not let one of them escape!’ So they seized them; and Elijah brought them down to the Brook Kishon and executed them there.” 1 Kings 18:40

Score a big one for the winners! Such a false prophet was to be put to death...

^{5 (con’t)} because he has spoken in order to turn you away from the LORD your God,

Here is a new word in Scripture, sarah. It means turning aside, rebellion, defection, apostasy and so on. It comes from the verb sur, meaning to turn aside.

For Israel, in turning to a false god, the people had – by default – apostatized from following the true God. In this, any such attempt to do so was to be deemed a capital offense.

^{5 (con’t)} who brought you out of the land of Egypt and redeemed you from the house of bondage,

As with every passage relevant to the relationship of the people to the Lord, Moses reminds them of why they were so obligated to Him, stating that it is He who brought them out of Egypt, redeeming them from the house of bondage.

With this in mind, it cannot go unstated that this is an exact parallel to what Christ spiritually did for us. Egypt pictures bondage to sin. Christ Jesus brought us out from that, having redeemed us from that house of bondage.

Because of this, we have our own obligation to respond in the same manner to Him as Israel did to Yehovah. He is the same God in both instances, and whether physical or spiritual bondage, we have been brought out.

The major difference is that the Lord will judge the false prophets. Individually, we need to worry about our own relationship and let Him deal with the others. As a church, we are to weed out the false teachers and expel them from our gatherings.

Either way, Israel or the church, the false prophets have a set goal which is...

^{5 (con't)} to entice you from the way in which the LORD your God commanded you to walk.

With the words of this clause, it returns to the second person singular. The intent of the false prophet is to turn Israel, the people, away from the Lord.

What is said here reflects the same sentiment that Paul expressed towards the Galatians. False teachers had come into the church and were attempting to get them to go back under the law of Moses, thus rejecting the finished work of Christ. In this, Paul said, "They zealously court you, but for no good; yes, they want to exclude you, that you may be zealous for them" (Galatians 4:17).

The goal of the false prophet, false apostle, or false teacher is l'hadikhakha min ha'derek – "to entice you from the way." It is always to a perverse path, and it always leads to a new form of bondage. The people can walk in the freedom of the Lord, or they can walk in the bondage offered by the false prophet.

Nothing has changed from the time of the law until now in this regard. The false teachers of the church want control over the flock. It is a control of power, of money, of sex, or of the very souls of the people they mislead, but it is not the freedom offered by the Lord.

If the teachers of the church want the best for the church, they will properly teach the core doctrines of the faith – freedom from the law, salvation by grace through faith with nothing else added, liberty in personal conduct and yet living in a proper and circumspect manner, eternal salvation, and so on.

Anything else is a false teaching intended to bind the saints once again into a life that lacks the true joy and eternal hope found in Jesus Christ. For those who teach otherwise, Moses says (and certainly what applies to the true church today as well)...

5 (fin) So you shall put away the evil from your midst.

For Israel, it was a large pile of stones to be hurled at the offender until he was dead. For the church, it is to reject false ideology, expel false teachers, and to have nothing to do with the darkness they teach. We must hold fast to our values in Christ, and we are to pursue Him and His word with all of our hearts and souls. To the glory of God.

Of this passage today, Adam Clarke says the following which must be corrected –

“God permits such impostors to arise to try the faith of his followers, and to put their religious experience to the test; for he who experimentally knows God cannot be drawn away after idols. He who has no experimental knowledge of God, may believe any thing. Experience of the truths contained in the word of God can alone preserve any man from Deism, or a false religion. They who have not this are a prey to the pretended prophet, and to the dreamer of dreams.” Adam Clarke

Clarke says, “he who experimentally knows God cannot be drawn away after idols.” I disagree. Solomon experimentally knew God. That is evident from his meeting with the Lord in 1 Kings 3 and again in 1 Kings 6. It is again evident from another meeting with Him in 1 Kings 9. Despite these occurrences, Solomon fell away to the point where this is recorded –

“For Solomon went after Ashtoreth the goddess of the Sidonians, and after Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites. ⁶ Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and did not fully follow the LORD, as did his father David. ⁷ Then Solomon built a high place for Chemosh the abomination of Moab, on the hill that is east of Jerusalem, and for Molech the abomination of the people of Ammon. ⁸ And he did likewise for all his foreign wives, who burned incense and sacrificed to their gods.” 1 Kings 11:5-8

Clarke says that “Experience of the truths contained in the word of God can alone preserve any man from” such things. This is true, but only to a point. What is correct is that complete, continued, and constant experience of the truths of God will do so. And even that must be mingled with a purposeful pursuit of the Lord as revealed there, in a wholehearted devotion to that word.

Without these things being applied to our walk, it is not a maybe, but a certainty, that we too will fall away from what is expected of us as we live out our lives in His presence.

When I say a complete experience of the truths contained in the word, I mean reading it – from cover to cover. I mean knowing it in all it says. I mean keeping it in the context of what is being said. Without this foundation, any person can say anything and claim it is the word of God, and you have absolutely no reason to not believe him.

Unless you are versed in the word, you are at the whims and leadings of any false teacher that comes along. If you learn nothing else from the teachings of this church, I would hope you would learn that. You must pursue this wonderful treasure, God’s Superior Word, with all of your heart and all of your soul.

The Lord would ask you, and in fact, He would plead with you, to do nothing less. And, in fact, He has done just that through the words of Moses, and Jeremiah, and Paul, and through the words of all of the other authors of Scripture – “Listen to Me. Pay heed to My word. Be built up in My word so that you are not torn apart by savage wolves!”

This is the lesson of the false prophet. A word of the Lord is only the Lord’s word if it comes from His word. And so, know His word well. It is your safeguard until the day He comes for His people.

Closing Verse: “Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. ¹⁷ And whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through Him.” Colossians 3:16, 17

Next Week: Deuteronomy 13:6-18 This is how you are to trod – yes, it is what you are to do... (You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part II) (43rd Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part I

“If there arises among you a prophet or a dreamer of dreams
And he to you a sign or a wonder is conveying
And the sign or the wonder comes to pass
Of which he spoke to you, saying

‘Let us go after other gods’—which you have not known—
‘And let us serve them.’ Yes, serve them and not the Lord alone

You shall not listen to the words of that prophet
-----or that dreamer of dreams
For the LORD your God is testing you to know Whether you love the LORD your God
With all your heart and with all your soul; thus, it is so

You shall walk after the LORD your God
And fear Him, and keep His commandments too
And obey His voice
You shall serve Him and hold fast to Him; so you shall do

But that prophet or that dreamer of dreams shall be put to death
Because he has spoken in order to from the LORD your God
-----turn you away
Who brought you out of the land of Egypt and redeemed you
From the house of bondage, to entice you from the way

In which the LORD your God commanded you to walk
So you shall put away the evil from your midst and
-----you shall end that false prophet’s talk

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 13:6-18 (You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part II)

At Christmastime this past year, my friend Tina asked me to do a sermon on the question, “Why it takes so long to understand grace.” She even repeated the question, amending it as she wrote – “Why is it so hard to understand grace?” In asking twice, she was letting me know it was truly important to her.

I’m not sure an entire sermon is needed to answer that. And yet, at the same time, I’m not sure that a thousand sermons could answer it as well. The reason why is because every person ever born is an individual, and so every person is going to come to a different level of understanding concerning things like it. And, we cannot go further than what our limited, finite comprehension then allows.

The simple definition of grace is “Getting what you do not deserve.” The very fact that it is undeserved makes it beyond our ability to fully grasp. We may generally understand it, but we cannot fully apprehend the impetus behind the act.

The first question is, “Why does it take so long to understand grace?” Surely, she is referring to the grace of God. As this is so, it is because the grace of God is infinite. How can we ever explore an infinite? As long as the ages have been, and as long as they will continue to be, we cannot – nor will we ever be able to – fully peer into what is infinite. We can only see it from what we know, which is finite and limited.

The second question, though seemingly easier to answer, is actually more difficult, “Why is it so hard to understand grace.” Again, she is certainly referring to the grace of God. The answer to the first question is simply a punt. God is infinite, we are not, and so we cannot attain to what God has done.

But from our perspective, it seems the second question doesn’t bear that limitation. We are finite and grace has been bestowed upon us. The Source of that may be infinite, but the results of it aren’t. The act has happened and yet we find ourselves not understanding how it can be.

Text Verse: “You ran well. Who hindered you from obeying the truth? ⁸ This persuasion does not come from Him who calls you. ⁹ A little leaven leavens the whole lump. ¹⁰ I have confidence in you, in the Lord, that you will have no other mind; but he who troubles you shall bear his judgment, whoever he is.” Galatians 5:7-10

The contents of the sermon today are more directed to mercy than to grace. In the context of the passage, God has already redeemed Israel. He has already given them the inheritance. It is the people who are faced with disobeying the word of the Lord who are addressed.

What they need is obedience to the word, and the Lord will have compassion on them for acting rightly. But this is the same as those who Paul is addressing in Galatians. They had received the grace of God. They had been saved and sealed. There is no question about that. And yet, they had trampled on that grace, returning to the law that Christ had already fulfilled for them.

In other words, they had failed to understand grace. Why? The answer is different for those in Rome, for those in Corinth, for those in Galatia, and so on. The Corinthians were given grace, and they had immediately turned it into an idol fest of division. They also had some who turned it into an excuse for license.

The Galatians had turned away from it and to an idol fest of “self.” Why can’t we understand grace? It is because it is opposed to our very nature. We know how to be gracious, but it always stems back to something we can receive from it – even if it is to simply obtain a state of personal satisfaction. “That made me feel good.”

We turn from grace because we find it hard to accept that there are no strings attached, or that God has somehow failed to benefit from His bestowal of grace. That is completely contrary to why we are gracious.

And so, we think, if God isn’t benefitting from this, then it can’t be real. If it isn’t real, then I need to do something to merit His favor. As a result of this thinking, what do we do? We go back to personal merit before the Lord, forgetting that personal merit is actually opposed to grace – which we suppose can’t be grace because there was no benefit from the Giver of the grace.

Not understanding grace is a condition of placing our own finite, failing, and fallible limitations on God who is none of those things. That means that we need to have the mind of God. Not in the sense that we are God and have infinite knowledge, but that we accept that what God says is exactly what God means.

And the way that we do that is to read and accept His word, in context, and at face value. How can we understand grace? I would say that to do so, we must completely ignore our own self and what it means to be the person each of us is – one hundred percent. If we allow ourselves to be the judge of what God's grace means, we will never – never ever – understand what it means.

In setting aside the notions of self, we can then accept the gift of God. "He has done this, I accept it, and I will not attempt to think any further in relation to my own self in order to understand it."

If we can do that, then we will have all of eternity to no longer claim we understand God's grace, but to simply accept it and then go on in learning what it means, as He reveals it to us.

Tina, that's the best I can do. It is an answer that demands that we accept God's word, wholly and completely, as it is given to us. And I am certain that this is true because God's eternal, unchanging, and ageless word ends on exactly that note – "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen" Revelation 22:21.

If God wanted us to understand it from our limited perspective, He would not have ended His word with that. And if He expected us to understand it, He would not have promised us eternity to find out – in its fullness – what that ending sentence meant.

Grace is given, mercy is received, and the fulfillment of the law through Christ our Lord is how those things come to be. This is a truth that is to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Lord Above All Others (verses 6-11)

In the previous passage, Moses spoke of the prophet or dreamer of dreams leading the people away from the way in which the Lord God commanded. In such an instance, he said "that dreamer of dreams shall be put to death." In doing this, he said they would "put away the evil from your midst."

This is correct, but it is not the end of such an example, even by a longshot. That is a specific example of anyone in general. The world is full of heretics, and such heretics are to be eliminated. However, Moses now goes from the general to the personal...

⁶ "If your brother,

The conjunction is a common one, ki. It is what opened the chapter in verse 1, and it will be used again to begin the next thought in verse 12. It is widely used and translated, but the word “if” – though not being incorrect – may not be the best way of stating the force of the intent.

One might say, “Though your brother.” In other words, it seems Moses is assuming the thing has occurred. In this, he will state the law for such an occurrence. He begins with the personal affiliation that is considered one of the closest in Scripture, that of the brother. To further define the closeness, he then adds in...

^{6 (con't)} the son of your mother,

In the Bible, like in our own general speaking, the word “brother” can extend to someone who is actually not related at all. There is a closeness that we feel towards others that brings our affections and allegiances to that of a brother in almost all ways.

However, we also use the term “blood is thicker than water” to demonstrate that there are times when we will tolerate or forgive something from a blood brother that we would not accept in a friend, usually no matter how close of a friend he is. Hence, Moses further defines the relationship for this reason. From there...

^{6 (con't)} your son or your daughter,

The NKJV leaves off a preposition. It says: o binkha o bitekha – “or your son or your daughter.” It is two different classes as Moses elevates the importance of the command. One might reject even his own brother, but would he reject his son? It must be so.

And, even more, his daughter is the weaker sex. The inclination would be to have mercy on her, or to say, “I am the parent, and I am the stronger. I can impose my will on this person to effect a proper change in her.” But Moses will show that such a thought is to be excluded. And from there, he elevates the matter higher...

^{6 (con't)} the wife of your bosom,

o eshet kheqekha – “or wife of your bosom.” Moses could have just said, “or your wife.” If so, she may have been at the beginning of the list, not towards the end, because not all men love their wives. But in adding the word kheq, or “bosom,” he is defining a relationship that is so intimate and loving that it is as if the wife is enclosed in the man.

The implication of unfailing love is communicated with this thought. But even that is again elevated...

⁶ (con't) or your friend who is as your own soul,

The word “friend” is rea. It signifies “another.” It can be a brother, a friend, a companion, a lover, and so on. Such a person is defined by Moses as asher kenaphshekha – “which as your own soul.” This is the one referred to in the proverbs –

“A man who has friends must himself be friendly,
But there is a friend who sticks closer than a brother.” Proverbs 18:24

It is the truly undying love for another without regard to physical intimacy or gender. Such a relationship as this transcends such things and is revealed in the strongest bond of all. It is how the relationship between David and Jonathan is described –

“Then Jonathan and David made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul.” 1 Samuel 18:3

So great was David’s love, that when he was killed David said –

“I am distressed for you, my brother Jonathan;
You have been very pleasant to me;
Your love to me was wonderful,
Surpassing the love of women.” 2 Samuel 1:26

Moses, having brought in the closest of all human relationships, now says that even under such a relationship as that, if that person...

⁶ (con't) secretly entices you, ba'sether – “in the secret.” It is a new word in Scripture, sether. It is a noun signifying a cover, literal or figurative. And it can be in a positive or negative sense. It comes from the verb sathar (to hide or conceal). In this act, any such person, no matter how close comes forward...

⁶ (con't) saying, ‘Let us go and serve other gods,’ lemor nelekha w'naabdah Elohim akherim – “saying ‘Let us walk and serve gods other.’” In other words, any god, or any gods – other than Yehovah – that are brought forward for the purpose of worship. The words here follow in accord with the words of verse 2, “Let us go after other gods...and serve them.” Such gods are...

^{6 (con't)} which you have not known, neither you nor your fathers,

Again, the words are in accord with verse 2, “which you have not known.” The people are sitting before Moses, the representative of the law of the Lord. They have personally experienced the Lord, and they are being instructed in the law of the Lord.

Thus, the reference is from this point in their history, and it extends out from there for all time. Only Yehovah is known to them, and only Yehovah is to be known to them. Such a prohibition is to extend in all directions as well. As Moses says...

⁷ of the gods of the people which are all around you, near to you or far off from you,

Here, the words go from the singular to the plural for just one word, and then back to the singular – “from gods of the people which around you (all) near to you (singular) or the farthest from you (singular). Moses is ensuring that both the individuals and the collective nation pay heed to what is said.

Despite the plural being confirmed by the Greek translation of this passage, and in a marvelously stupid comment, Cambridge says that the words “ought to be deleted.” In this, they have elevated themselves to being the arbiters of God’s word, claiming that what is presented is subject to their own whims of grammar and of what is to be considered useful or unhelpful concerning instruction. They will be punished.

^{7 (con't)} from one end of the earth to the other end of the earth, miqtseh ha'arets v'ad qetseh ha'arets – “from end the earth and unto end the earth.” The meaning is obvious, and it is to be understood from both a geographical and a chronological sense. In no place, and at no time, shall this be tolerated. Rather...

⁸ you shall not consent to him or listen to him, nor shall your eye pity him, nor shall you spare him or conceal him;

It is an emphatic and pregnant verse made up of five different clauses. And more, Moses uses several words that are rather rare. Hence, what he says is grave and striking – “No you shall consent to him; and no you shall listen to him; and no shall pity your eye him; and no you shall spare; and no you shall cover him over.”

And more, the first two clauses deal with the individual’s response to the offender – “You shall not consent, and you shall not listen to.” However, the final three clauses deal with the individual’s responsibility toward the offender – “Your eye shall not pity, nor shall you spare, and you shall not conceal.”

The offender is not to be heeded, and the offender is to be dealt with even as an enemy. As Moses next says...

⁹ but you shall surely kill him;

Moses places a stress upon the requirement: ki harog tahargenu – “For killing you shall kill him.” It is to be considered a judicial act because the offender has committed a capital offense.

But more, the person who was enticed is – by his actions – placing his allegiance to the Lord above his own human instincts, which would otherwise be to defend someone he loved so much. But Moses brings in an implied protection for such an action, saying...

^{9 (con’t)} your hand shall be first against him to put him to death, and afterward the hand of all the people.

If a person were to be enticed by another person, and he was to kill him right then and there, it could be argued that he had committed murder and that he had only claimed that he was so enticed in order to kill another person. This is why the law says –

“Whoever is deserving of death shall be put to death on the testimony of two or three witnesses; he shall not be put to death on the testimony of one witness. ⁷ The hands of the witnesses shall be the first against him to put him to death, and afterward the hands of all the people. So you shall put away the evil from among you.” Deuteronomy 17:6, 7

In such a law, there is protection for the offender, and there is also protection for the one who took the Lord’s side in the matter. Otherwise, anyone could claim anything and get away with murder. Or the truly righteous man who took action into his own hands could be accused of murder.

This is substantiated by the fact that it notes that not only would the one who heard be required to kill the person, but then it says that “all the people” were to follow suit. The implication is that the matter was brought before the congregation.

However, once the matter was settled, the one who made the initial accusation would be required to back up his words with action. Thus, the punishment would be both a grave responsibility and an implied honor. Of this law, Charles Ellicott rightly states –

“The law may seem harsh, but its principle is reproduced in the Gospel: ... ‘If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple’ (Luke 14:26). It is impossible to deny or escape the identity of the Lord Jesus with the Jehovah of the Old Testament. He does not always put the execution of His judgments into human hands, but He is the same for ever.” Charles Ellicott

¹⁰ And you shall stone him with stones until he dies,

Verse 5 said the prophet or dreamer of dreams who committed such an action was to be put to death. This verse now explains the means of execution: u-seqalto ba’abanim va’met – “And you shall stone him in the stones and he dies.”

This is the first of several explicit references to stoning a person in Deuteronomy, but it was already implied in verse 5. The land of Israel is the rockiest place one can imagine. There is hardly a spot that isn’t fit to accomplish this, and it is a means of execution that everyone at hand could – and indeed was expected to – participate in. In this case, the stoning was mandated...

^{10 (con’t)} because he sought to entice you away from the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.

Though they vary in several ways in both order and words used, what is said here bears great similarity to verse 5. The focus is on one’s allegiance to Yehovah, and the explanation for that is – again – that it is He who brought Israel out of Egypt.

Again, and again, Moses returns to this same theme. As such, we need to remember the parallel. This is what Christ spiritually did for us. As always, Egypt pictures bondage to sin. Christ Jesus brought us out from that, having redeemed us from that house of bondage.

Despite the bloody history of the Roman Catholic Church, the church of the saints of Christ has no authority to execute the false prophets or those around us who attempt to draw us away from faith in Christ, but we have the same personal responsibility to love the Lord more than any other person.

He alone is to be our greatest desire of the heart and soul. That loving allegiance to Him is to be what will hopefully draw others into the same relationship. For Israel, however, execution of offenders was to be its own warning...

¹¹ So all Israel shall hear and fear,

The spelling of the word “fear” bears a strong emphasis: v’kal Yisrael yishmeru v’yiratun – “And all Israel shall hear, and shall (certainly) fear.” In other words, just as any society hears of executions and realizes how serious certain matters are taken, so Israel would take it to heart and be absolutely certain to not do as that offender had done.

Such a punishment has a double impact. It removes the wicked from the land, and it causes the people to walk circumspectly. But even that leads to a third benefit. In walking properly, people will revere the Lord who set the standard in the first place. The problem for Israel is never with the law itself, but with the people’s inability to uphold it. As long as the law is upheld others will see...

¹¹ (con’t) and not again do such wickedness as this among you.

v’lo yosiphu laasot kadavar ha’ra hazeh b’kirbekha – “and no shall add to do according to the thing the evil the this in your midst.” In other words, in executing the offender, it will end any other such attempts by those who are so easily led astray.

The precept is no different than countries that execute homosexuals. When that is the case, those who may think in that manner would never openly acknowledge it. The standard is set, the law is given, and those who fear the law will exercise restraint. And so, it is with any other activity – adultery, drugs, and so on. In executing offenders, the masses will cease the offenses.

*Blessed is the one who walks after the Lord his God
And happy is the man who shall see His face
It is on the straight path that he does trod
And it is he who finds the Lord’s mercy and His grace*

*So is it for that man who walks after the Lord his God
And it shall be so, even when life appears dark and grim
His feet are faithful and with righteousness he is shod
He will see good days. Joy and blessing lie ahead for him*

*Do what is right and pleasing before the Lord
And He will honor you with life and length of days
Be carefully attentive to His sacred word
And live out your life to His honor and His praise*

*This is the path to follow for the discerning and the wise
He who understands is ever pleasing in the Lord's attentive eyes*

II. What is Right in the Eyes of the Lord (verses 12-18)

In verses 1-5 Moses dealt with apostacy in a general matter. In verses 6-11, he dealt with it in a personal matter. Now, in verses 12-18, he will refer to apostacy in an organized matter, saying...

¹² "If you hear someone in one of your cities,

Again, as in verse 1 and verse 6, the translation is probably more rightly, "Though you hear..." It is more assuredly assuming that the thing has occurred, and so action must be taken. In this case, it is an offense that has happened in a city.

Further, the word "someone" doesn't belong here. It reads: ki tishma b'akhat arekha – "Though you hear in one of your cities." The words are referring to Israel (the whole) hearing about something that has occurred in one of the cities. And to be more specific, Moses says...

^{12 (con't)} which the LORD your God gives you to dwell in, saying,

This is the same idea as saying, "the Lord who brought you out of Egypt." In other words, the offense is aggravated by the notion that the city was provided by the Lord. He brought them in. He subdued the nations. He gave them cities. And yet, in one of those cities...

¹³ 'Corrupt men have gone out from among you

The Hebrew is more expressive: yaseu anashim bene beliyaal miqirbekha – “Have gone out men, sons of worthlessness, from your midst.” The word beliyaal is introduced here. It comes from beli (failure) and yaal (profit). Thus, “no profit” or “worthless.”

Many scholars and translators render this as a proper name, Belial. And, indeed, that is how Paul renders it in 2 Corinthians when dealing with a similar matter –

‘Do not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. For what fellowship has righteousness with lawlessness? And what communion has light with darkness? ¹⁵ And what accord has Christ with Belial? Or what part has a believer with an unbeliever? ¹⁶ And what agreement has the temple of God with idols? For you are the temple of the living God. As God has said:
‘I will dwell in them
And walk among them.
I will be their God,
And they shall be My people.’” 2 Corinthians 6:14-16

And yet, throughout the Bible, people describe an object by its predominant characteristic as a “son” of that quality. For example, the term “son of death” is used in this way at times, such as when David said in 2 Samuel 12:5, “As the Lord lives, surely the man who has done this is a son of death.”

The meaning is that the person deserved to die. Unfortunately for David, he didn’t realize that the person he was referring to was himself. For now, whether as a noun or a pronoun, the intent is ultimately the same.

In this verse in Deuteronomy, the worthless people are said by Moses to have gone out “from among you.” This doesn’t mean within the city, but from among Israel. In other words, the entire city is being contrasted to all the rest of Israel. This is evident from the next words...

¹³ (con’t) and enticed the inhabitants of their city, va’yadikhu eth yosheve iram – “and impelled inhabitants their city.” This word, nadakh, or “impel,” has been used in all three instances of this chapter – the prophet of verses 1-5, the personal close one of verses 5-12, and now the worthless men of this section. One might think of beguiling or seducing, even through intimidation. And their words are...

¹³ (con’t) saying, “Let us go and serve other gods”

The words follow closely after both verse 2 and verse 6 – “Let us walk after and serve gods other which not you have known.” The offenders are worthless, and they are luring the people away to that which is worthless. This is because they are gods...

13 (con’t) —which you have not known—

It is the same expression said twice in this chapter already. There is the Lord, the God of Israel, and then, there are those gods which the people, or the person, have not known. The temptation is especially strong for those who may be going through a bad spell, who are struggling with the realities of life, and so on.

The thought may be, “The Lord is our God, and He isn’t taking proper care of us. But these guys are promising great things, contentment, abundance, wealth, and so on if we follow their gods. This is exactly what churches do all the time.

And so, we can see the progression of thought. The first is the false prophet or dreamer of dreams. Whether in Israel, or the guy on the street, he has something to offer other than the truth of God in Christ. And then there is the close relative or friend. They see your faith in Christ, and they – for whatever reason – want to misdirect you from it.

And then there is the city now being addressed. It would equate to an entire church that offers something tantalizing – be it wealth, prosperity, or contentment. Moses is warning the people in basic categories, and we need to be attentive in basically the same categories – from the general, to the personal, to the organized.

Israel knew the Lord, and yet they are being beguiled to walk after another they did not know. We know the Lord, and yet no sooner do we know Him, than we are tempted to walk after the Lord in a way we did not know, nor in a way that He has presented Himself.

For now, and concerning the city which has done what Moses warns against...

14 then you shall inquire, search out, and ask diligently.

Again, the Hebrew is very specific: v’darashta v’khaqarta v’shaalta hetev – “and you shall seek, and you shall search out, and you shall ask diligently. In this, a new word is introduced, khaqar. It signifies to penetrate, and thus to examine intimately.

The onus is on Israel to do their due diligence and to determine the truth of the matter. Nothing less would be acceptable...

14 (con't) And if it is indeed true and certain that such an abomination was committed among you,

And again, the English fails to convey the force of Moses' words. It more rightly reads, "And behold! Truth! The thing is established! This abomination was committed in your midst!" His words are so poignant that what follows must absolutely come to pass...

15 you shall surely strike the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword,

The Hebrew reads forcefully – "striking, you shall strike the inhabitants of that city with the mouth of the sword." Here, as elsewhere, the sword is spoken of as a devouring instrument. The souls of the people are eaten away as the sword is wielded. The fate of the people who have acted in this way is death. But more...

15 (con't) utterly destroying it, hakharem otah – "devoting it." In other words, the city is to be placed under the ban. It is to be completely destroyed as an act of devotion to the Lord. Nothing living in it was to be taken out...

15 (con't) all that is in it and its livestock—with the edge of the sword.

Every living thing – man, woman, child, and livestock. Of this, Matthew Poole says –

"...to wit, all that are guilty, not the innocent part, such as disowned this apostacy, who doubtless by choice and interest, at least upon warning, would come out of so wicked and cursed a place." Matthew Poole

This is incorrect. All were held guilty regardless of their innocence. Once the matter was discovered, it was all to be utterly destroyed with the mouth of the sword. The place was accursed, and so all that lived within it was under the ban. Further...

16 And you shall gather all its plunder into the middle of the street, and completely burn with fire the city and all its plunder, for the LORD your God.

The act of devotion to the Lord is to extend to everything within the city. It was to be taken to the rekhov, or broad open place such as a plaza. It was to then be piled up, and the entire city was to be burned. The word “completely” is kalil. It signifies “all” as in a holocaust, or whole burnt offering. Thus, the act of devotion to the Lord would be complete in its scope. But it was also to be forever in its duration...

¹⁶ (con't) It shall be a heap forever; it shall not be built again.

Here, the word tel, or mound is introduced. It is a contraction of the word talal that is found in Ezekiel 17:22 where it speaks of a prominent mountain. Thus, this is a mound or heap. Today, many cities or sites are known by the word, such as Tel Aviv. It is a place where a mound exists upon which more has been built over the years.

In the case of such a city, however, it was not to be built upon. The mound itself was to be a testament to the apostasy of the city, and of the devotion of that city to the Lord by the people. The mound was to serve as its own witness for all time. And there is an important reason for this mandate, as Moses next relays...

¹⁷ So none of the accursed things shall remain in your hand,

The word translated here as “remain,” signifies to cling to. The idea is that if any accursed thing were kept, it wouldn't just be in the person's hand, but it would cling to it. The stain of it could no more be taken away than could the shame of an adulterous woman. The Lord would see the thing and it would then withhold any favor from Him.

This will be seen in Joshua when Achan will take an accursed thing during the battle of Ai. It clung to him, it found him out, and he and all he possessed – in turn – became subject to the ban. Thus, the people were to completely rid themselves of the banned city. This was so...

¹⁷ (con't) that the LORD may turn from the fierceness of His anger

I'maan yashuv Yehovah mekharon apo – “To end purpose, will turn Yehovah from burning His nose.” The Lord is truly angry at the actions of such people. It is as if fire shoots from His nostrils as He fumes over their actions. And this isn't a state that may arise. It is the state that exists over their sins.

In destroying the city, devoting it to complete destruction, His anger over the infraction ends, symbolized by the thought of turning. Where there was confrontation and enmity, there is again peace and solicitude. This verse is exactly what we see in the account of Achan in Joshua –

“Then they raised over him a great heap of stones, still there to this day. So the LORD turned from the fierceness of His anger.” Joshua 7:26

Achan’s grave of stones became its own tel. And in destroying him as was just and proper, the Lord turned from the fierceness of His anger, exactly as this verse in Deuteronomy proclaims. Though the cause of the anger was different, the expected punishment – that of devotion to the Lord – was the same. When the devotion is made the enmity ceases. In this restored state the Lord will turn...

17 (con’t) and show you mercy, v’nathan lekha rakhamim – “and give you mercies.” The plural, mercies, is intended to show that upon those who are abundantly faithful, there will be a return of a multitude of mercies. The unceasing stream of the favor of the Lord is opened when faithfulness to Him is demonstrated. In this, He will...

17 (con’t) have compassion on you and multiply you, just as He swore to your fathers,

The idea is that in the destruction of an entire city, a number that could go into the high thousands, there will be a diminishing of the tribe and of the nation. And yet, because of the faithfulness of the people to the Lord, He will turn and bless them through multiplication so that there will be no gap in the tribe or the nation.

And the reason for this is because of the oath to the fathers. The Lord spoke, and He would carefully remember His promise when the people lived in obedience to His word. He would multiply their seed as a sign of His divine favor. Of this act of kharem, or devotion being restored to the people, John Lange states –

“Holiness, as it makes its demand through righteousness, must receive satisfaction, and therewith mercy can follow. The enlargement should counterbalance the loss occasioned by the punishment.”

With this happier tone restored to the nation through their faithful obedience, Moses affirms why restoration could be expected...

18 (fin) because you have listened to the voice of the LORD your God, to keep all His commandments which I command you today, to do what is right in the eyes of the LORD your God.

Again, as has been seen throughout Deuteronomy, Moses states that what he commands equates to listening to the voice of the Lord. In other words, he is claiming, and the Bible is affirming, the doctrine of divine inspiration.

In obeying Moses, the people are listening to – meaning hearkening to – the voice of the Lord. What Moses says is right in His eyes. What this means is that everything he says is right. Obedience to the law is not deserving of a pat on the back for Israel over some issues, but then not something to worry about for others. It is a unified whole and it must be taken as such.

Apart from the matter of Achan in the book of Joshua, the closest Israel ever came to the matter described here is at the end of the book of Judges where a city of the tribe of Benjamin was found to be filled with sons of Belial, or sons of worthlessness.

In order to purge the evil from Israel, the entire nation came against them, but the tribe of Benjamin sided with their own people. Thus, the tribe of Benjamin was reduced to only six hundred men. However, they eventually regained their numbers, and noted biblical figures came from them including Saul, Israel's first king, and the apostle Paul.

Throughout the Bible, there is seen grace and mercy mingled with judgment and punishment. But every infraction of the law demanded punishment before the mercy could be bestowed. This truth extends to all people. Judgment for sin against the holy God cannot be overlooked, but it can be meted out in a substitute.

Israel as a whole deserved judgment for the apostacy of one city, but the destruction of the city could appease the Lord. The sins of the people required judgment, but the penalty could be taken out on an innocent substitute – such as in the temple sacrifices, especially on the Day of Atonement.

And those things only look forward to the greater work of Christ, who is the fulfillment of those mere types and pictures. Each of us has a choice, and each of us must decide how we will come before this holy God. Will we attempt to stand before Him on our own merits? The thought is impossible to even consider.

Let us act in prudence and let us choose the wise option. Let us come to God through Jesus. It is He who has already paid the penalty for the sins of the world. The full cup of God's wrath was brought to bear upon Him on the tree of Calvary. And, indeed, He bore it all. In this, God's wrath was satisfied. The payment was made, and peace is now offered through His deed.

Let us remember what Christ has done, let us receive it as our own, and let us stand before God forgiven and free of the sins we have committed in His presence. And let us thank God for Jesus Christ – now and forever. Let us hail our Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

Closing Verse: "Blessed is every one who fears the Lord, Who walks in His ways."
-Psalm 128:1

Next Week: Deuteronomy 14:1, 2 How do we become a part of this squad?... (Sons of the Lord God) (44th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

You Shall Walk After the Lord Your God, Part II

"If your brother, the son of your mother, your son or your daughter
The wife of your bosom, or your friend who is as your own soul
Secretly entices you, saying, 'Let us go and serve other gods' Which you have not known, neither you nor your fathers
-----such a person is out of control

Of the gods of the people which are all around you
Near to you or far off from you
From one end of the earth to the other end of the earth
You shall not consent to him or listen to him; such you shall not do

Nor shall your eye pity him, nor shall you spare him
-----or conceal him
But you shall surely kill him for trying to mislead the sheeple
Your hand shall be first against him to put him to death

And afterward the hand of all the people

And you shall stone him with stones until he dies
Because he sought to entice you away from the LORD your God
Who brought you out of the land of Egypt
From the house of bondage where once you trod

So all Israel shall hear and fear, so they shall do
And not again do such wickedness as this among you

“If you hear someone in one of your cities
Which the LORD your God gives you to dwell in, saying ‘Corrupt men have gone out from among you
And enticed the inhabitants of their city, thus relaying...

“Let us go and serve other gods”
Which you have not known
Then you shall inquire, search out, and ask diligently
On such a deed light must be shone

And if it is indeed true and certain
That such an abomination was committed among you
You shall surely strike the inhabitants of that city
-----with the edge of the sword
Utterly destroying it, all that is in it and its livestock—
-----with the edge of the sword; so you shall do

And you shall gather all its plunder into the middle of the street
And completely burn with fire the city and all its plunder
-----for the LORD your God
It shall be a heap forever
It shall not be built again, but it shall lay beneath the sod

So none of the accursed things shall remain in your hand
That the LORD may turn from the fierceness of His anger
And show you mercy, have compassion on you and multiply you
Just as He swore to your fathers, as a deep sweet clangor

Because you have listened to the voice of the LORD your God
To keep all His commandments which I command you today
To do what is right in the eyes of the LORD your God
To do according to all the words I say

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 14:1, 2 (Sons of the Lord God)

Chapter 14 of Deuteronomy is divided into three separate sections, improper mourning, proper adherence to dietary laws, and what to do with – meaning how to properly handle – the blessings bestowed upon the people.

However, each of these three main points is based upon the first words of the passage – “You are the children of the Lord your God.” Everything else stems from that first clause, and it is then further defined in verse 2.

What does it mean when the Bible speaks of the sons of God? The first instance of the term is found in Genesis 6:2. There, it is a highly contested phrase among scholars, as if the countless other uses of the term in Scripture have nothing to do with the phrase as it is used there.

This is so much the case that the most fanciful interpretations have arisen to explain it. And, fanciful is both exciting and profitable. So, most people normally hold fast to the most fanciful interpretation, and those who can profit off of them present that most fanciful interpretation, renewing it from time to time, in order to make a bit more off a new book or a new video.

This is not responsible theology, and it edifies no one. The real key to understanding the phrase there in Genesis 6 is actually found in Job 1 & 2. Almost everyone agrees on that, but not everyone has a correct understanding of those verses in Job. I admit, I didn't.

There was a disconnect between my understanding of the term there and my understanding of the term elsewhere in Scripture that was, thankfully, resolved when some marvelous people – Benzer and Sandra – traveled to the US from the UK in order to visit the church, which – ironically – happened exactly one year ago this week.

The first time we were together at the house, Benzer brought up the Nephilim in Genesis 6 and I immediately thought, “Here we go. Another loose cannon.” That lasted about two seconds until he explained why my thought on Job 1 & 2 was incorrect.

The light came on, and I said, “It sounds correct, but there is a lot of work to do before I agree to this.” And so, instead of doing whatever thing we had planned to do, we sat down at the computer and went through every single instance of the phrase ha'elohim, or “the God,” found in Scripture. We don’t form sound doctrine and proper theology any other way.

Text Verse: “Therefore submit to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you.”

-James 4:7

Being a son of God is, first and foremost, a mark of humanity. This will be explained as we continue on today. There is, within the Godhead, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, but the Son in that capacity is a term used to indicate a position within the Godhead – God the Father; God the Son; God the Holy Spirit.

When the term “Son of God” is used in the gospels, it is referring to the human Jesus who is God’s Son. He is the Son of God who is a Man. Curiously, the term Son of Man that is used so often concerning Jesus is more closely associated in thought with His deity, not His humanity. He is a Man, but He is a Man who is God.

If you doubt this, go read every instance of Son of God and Son of Man in the gospels and see if it is so or not. It is. As this is so, the term “son of God” is one that refers to humanity. How does one become a son of God?

James 4:7, our text verse, gave us an insight into it. In submitting to God and resisting the devil, the devil will flee from us. The implication is that the devil is the problem.

John makes it explicit in 1 John 3:8, where he says, “He who sins is of the devil, for the devil has sinned from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil.”

Where does sin come from? It comes from a violation of law. Where does the law come from? It comes from God. In violating God’s law, sin enters the picture. With sin comes death and separation from God. How is that restored? Not through law! The devil uses law to separate us from God. What is the answer?

It is available, and it is to be found in God’s superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Translation Matters; Context Matters (½ Verse 1)

The contents of the previous passage were almost entirely in the singular with just one exception. Moses was speaking to Israel as a collective whole. Now, to open chapter 14, he immediately switches to the plural to address them...

¹ “You are the children of the LORD your God;

banim atem Yehovah elohekem – “Sons you (all) are of Yehovah your (all) God.” Of these words, Charles Ellicott rightly and poignantly states –

“This fact is made the foundation of all the laws of ceremonial and moral holiness in the Pentateuch, more especially in the Book of Leviticus, where these laws are chiefly to be found.” Charles Ellicott

When he says, “the Pentateuch,” it means the five books of Moses. Although Israel was only introduced later in Genesis, and then the nation of Israel only truly received its calling in Exodus, the entirety of these five books must be considered in this truth.

And from that foundation, all of the rest of the Old Testament finds its basis – both among the people of Israel, but also among the sons of God who are not of Israel, such as Job.

And then from there, the work of the Redeemer is introduced, fulfilling what is stated in this law – and which concerns these “sons of Yehovah” – and how they are brought fully to a right state of sonship to the Lord God.

One cannot look at these words of Moses to Israel now without understanding what it means to be a son of Yehovah, meaning a Son of God, without taking a much more intimate look at the concept – even from the earliest time of man on earth. The idea first goes back to the opening words of Genesis 6 –

“Now it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born to them, ² that the sons of God saw the daughters of men, that they were beautiful; and they took wives for themselves of all whom they chose.” Genesis 6:1, 2

There it used the term bene ha’elohim, or “sons of the God.” The definite article was, and continues to be, expressive. It is used when referring to the one true God in relation to man. But more especially, it is in relation to those who are in a right relationship with Him, or it is used to contrast those who are not in a right relationship with Him.

In the Bible, the term “son(s) of God,” more expressly focuses on one’s humanity. When Jesus is called the Son of God, it is true that He is the divine Son of God, but the term more appropriately is referring to His humanity. He is the true Son of God – the perfect ideal of Man in relation to God.

This idea extends to all people who stand in a proper relationship to God. The “sons of the God” of Genesis 6:1 refers to this relationship between men and the God.

Before that term was introduced, a set division of humanity was carefully laid out so that when the term was given, there should not be a mistake as to what it was conveying. But mistakes do come.

Genesis 4 immediately introduced Cain and Abel. Abel was shown to be right with God through his actions of faith. Cain was not. Cain killed Abel – demonstrating the enmity between the two thoughts.

From there, Chapter 4 carefully details Cain and his line, a line separate from – and at enmity with – God. At the end of the chapter, however, another line was introduced with the words –

“And Adam knew his wife again, and she bore a son and named him Seth, “For God has appointed another seed for me instead of Abel, whom Cain killed.” ²⁶ And as for Seth, to him also a son was born; and he named him Enosh. Then men began to call on the name of the LORD.” Genesis 4:25, 26

Chapter 5 then lists this second line, a line that is right with God. It is the line of sonship, meaning a line of faith in the promises of God. This is why these two divergent lines are highlighted immediately after the fall.

The word of God introduces a subject, it gives details based on that subject, and then the word goes back and fills in more details to more fully flesh out what is being conveyed. The simple example of giving the book of Judges and only later giving the book of Ruth, a book that rightly belongs in the chronology of the book of Judges, shows how this occurs.

This happens time and again in Scripture. The account of Joseph being sold into a life of servitude in Egypt is introduced. Immediately after that, the story of the line of Judah through his relationship with his own daughter-in-law is then given, and only then does the narrative return to Joseph in Egypt.

And so, to understand this idea of being sons of Yehovah – and thus sons of the God – from its proper context, the first two uses of the term, ha'elohim, or “the God,” were provided in Genesis 5 when speaking of Enoch –

“After he begot Methuselah, Enoch walked with [the] God three hundred years, and had sons and daughters. ²³ So all the days of Enoch were three hundred and sixty-five years. ²⁴ And Enoch walked with [the] God; and he was not, for God took him.” Genesis 5:22-24

Enoch was a man who was clearly in a right relationship with “the God,” and the article was given to solidify that fact. The next use of the article was twice in Genesis 6 when referring to this line of people who stood in this proper relationship with God. They are bene ha'elohim, or “sons of the God.”

That this is the correct interpretation of this is first seen when the next use of the article before “God” was found in Genesis 6:9 when speaking of Noah who was in a right relationship with Him –

“But Noah found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

⁹ This is the genealogy of Noah. Noah was a just man, perfect in his generations. Noah walked with [the] God.” Genesis 6:8, 9

Using the same words spoken of concerning Enoch, but in an emphatic form, Noah is likewise said to be of this godly line: eth ha'elohim hithalek Noakh – “with the God walked Noah.” In other words, Enoch was a son of the God, being in a right standing with Him. Noah was likewise.

However, immediately after that, the article is again used to define the state of Nephilim, or “fallen ones,” already referred to in the chapter. The word Nephilim is not referring to a hybrid product of humans sleeping with angels – something the Bible never refers to nor hints at. Rather, it is speaking of those who are not in a right standing with “the God.” Rather, they are fallen –

“The earth also was corrupt before [the] God, and the earth was filled with violence. ¹² So God looked upon the earth, and indeed it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted their way on the earth.” Genesis 6:11, 12

In other words, the use of the article is expressing the contrast between the two lines that exist in the presence of the God. Noah is of one line; the others are not. This is why the definite article is so meticulously and precisely used in these accounts. In following this term, we follow the thought of Scripture as it presents to us man's status before God.

The next time the article is used is not until Genesis 17. It is at a time when it is necessary to define those who are, or who are not, in this right "son" relationship –

"Then Abraham fell on his face and laughed, and said in his heart, 'Shall a child be born to a man who is one hundred years old? And shall Sarah, who is ninety years old, bear a child?' ¹⁸ And Abraham said to [the] God, 'Oh, that Ishmael might live before You!'" Genesis 17:17, 18

The implication is that Abraham was petitioning for Ishmael to define the line of right standing with God. But that was rejected. Another son would come who would be in that position.

When a possible interruption of that promise came about in Genesis 20, the article is used twice to confirm the right standing of Abraham before God to Abimelech who had Abraham's wife, Sarah.

Following that, in Genesis 22, in the great test of faith of this man of faith, the definite article is used three times, confirming Abraham's right standing before "the God."

Carefully following the use of the article before elohim, or "God," in the Bible consistently reveals the relationship between man and the true God. This means either a right relationship or the lack of it. This is true in the more than 370 uses of the article.

When it is necessary to define the true God, the article is used. An example of this, and which defines this relationship, is found in 2 Chronicles 35. In that chapter, the word elohim, or "god," is found five times. The first use in verse 3 defines God as the true God by identifying Him as "Yehovah," saying to the people of Israel, "Now serve the Lord [Yehovah] your God."

The second use, in verse 8, refers to beth ha'elohim, or "house of the God." Thus, it clearly defines the house – meaning the temple – as that pertaining to the true God. However, the final three uses of elohim in the chapter are when Pharaoh Neco is referred to –

“But he sent messengers to him, saying, ‘What have I to do with you, king of Judah? I have not come against you this day, but against the house with which I have war; for God commanded me to make haste. Refrain from meddling with God, who is with me, lest He destroy you.’”²² Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, but disguised himself so that he might fight with him, and did not heed the words of Necho from the mouth of God. So he came to fight in the Valley of Megiddo.” 2 Chronicles 35:21, 22

In all three instances there, the article is lacking, thus signifying that it is not the true God that Pharaoh communicated with, but rather his own false god or gods.

One must carefully evaluate each instance of the use of the article, and also maintain the proper context of the passage, or errors in theology, such as the misrepresentation of who the Nephilim of Genesis 6 are, will inevitably result.

This is especially true when considering the only other uses of the full term, bene ha’elohim, or “sons of the God,” found in Scripture. The uses are in Job 1 and Job 2 –

“Now there was a day when the sons of [the] God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan also came among them. ⁷ And the LORD said to Satan, ‘From where do you come?’

So Satan answered the LORD and said, ‘From going to and fro on the earth, and from walking back and forth on it.’” Job 1:6, 7

“Again there was a day when the sons of [the] God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the LORD. ² And the LORD said to Satan, ‘From where do you come?’

Satan answered the LORD and said, ‘From going to and fro on the earth, and from walking back and forth on it.’” Job 2:1, 2

The error of analysis made in these verses by many is that the “sons of the God” are angels, and that they are presenting themselves before the Lord. This is incorrect.

This is not speaking of angels but of men presenting themselves before the true God, just as Enoch did, just as Abraham did, and just as all other uses of the article demonstrate – a right relationship of man before the true God or the lack thereof.

This becomes perfectly evident from the reference made in Job 38:7 which all scholars who incorrectly identify the Nephilim as angels use to justify their position on this matter –

“Where were you when I laid the foundations of the earth?

Tell Me, if you have understanding.

⁵Who determined its measurements?

Surely you know!

Or who stretched the line upon it?

⁶To what were its foundations fastened?

Or who laid its cornerstone,

⁷When the morning stars sang together,

And all the sons of God shouted for joy?” Job 38:4-7

In this passage, the term used is bene elohim, “sons of God,” not bene ha’elohim, or “sons of the God.” The article is left off because it is not speaking of men in relation to the true God. If this is even speaking of angels, which is probably not the case, there is no need to include the article because both angels and demons know who the true God is.

However, these words in Job 38 are probably not speaking of angels. Instead, it is more probably referring to the early formation of stars as detailed in the Genesis account harmonically resonating as the word of God was spoken forth in the act of creation.

In other words, the Lord is speaking in parallelism in Job 38. Parallelism is a literary device where something is stated, and then it is repeated in another way to make the point more poignant –

Job 38:4-7 in parallelism

Where were you (JOB) when I laid the foundations of the earth?

Tell Me, if you (JOB) have understanding.

Who determined its measurements? – The size of the earth

Or who stretched the line upon it? – The size of the earth

To what were its foundations fastened? – the underpinnings

Or who laid its cornerstone – the underpinnings

When the morning stars sang together, – the early star formation
And all the sons of God shouted for joy? – the early star formation

The questions of the Lord continue in parallelism throughout the passage, and so there is no reason to assume that the morning stars are being poetically equated to angels, but rather to actual stars. The lack of the article in this verse demonstrates this because the article is specifically used to express the nature of the true God in relation to man.

Man was not yet created in that section of Job, and so the article is left off. However, the article is used in Job 1 and 2 to expressly set those verses apart from the notion that God is speaking of angelic beings.

This, then, obviously invites the question, “Then what is Satan doing there, walking among the sons of the God?” The answer is clearly expressed elsewhere in Scripture. Satan is explicitly said to be the accuser of the brethren in Revelation 12 –

“Then I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, ‘Now salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of His Christ have come, for the accuser of our brethren, who accused them before our God day and night, has been cast down.’” Revelation 12:10

In both Job 1 and 2, it is not referring to angels at all. Rather, it is referring to humans who anticipate the coming Messiah – thus they are sons of the God – who have presented themselves before the Lord. Satan, then, has come among them in an attempt to sift them, exactly as he sifted Christ’s followers as is recorded in Luke 22 –

“And the Lord said, ‘Simon, Simon! Indeed, Satan has asked for you, that he may sift you as wheat. ³² But I have prayed for you, that your faith should not fail; and when you have returned to Me, strengthen your brethren.’” Luke 22:31, 32

Peter later says exactly this concerning believers in 1 Peter 5 –

“Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil walks about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. ⁹ Resist him, steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same sufferings are experienced by your brotherhood in the world. ¹⁰ But may the God of all grace, who called us to His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after you have suffered a while, perfect, establish, strengthen, and settle you. ¹¹ To Him be the glory and the dominion forever and ever. Amen.” 1 Peter 5:8-11

The idea presented in Job 1 and 2 is not that Satan has come before the Lord with other angels. Rather, it is that the sons of the God, meaning those – like Job – who are those who “fear God and shun evil,” have come before the true God (see Job 1:1, 1:8, etc.).

Though not being in the line of Messiah, they are faithful believers in the promise of the coming Messiah. They have presented themselves before the God, and Satan has come among them to sift them. This is exactly the premise of Satan’s testing of Job with the approval of the Lord that is conveyed in the surrounding passage.

To further confirm this, the word used in Job that says they came to “present” themselves before “the God” is yatsav. It is used in exactly the same way concerning men presenting themselves before the Lord in Numbers 11 –

“So the LORD said to Moses: ‘Gather to Me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom you know to be the elders of the people and officers over them; bring them to the tabernacle of meeting, that they may stand there with you.’”

-Numbers 11:16

But, more importantly, this is seen again in Joshua 24:1 –

“Then Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel to Shechem and called for the elders of Israel, for their heads, for their judges, and for their officers; and they presented themselves before God.” Joshua 24:1

There, it says they presented themselves liphne ha’elohim, “before the God,” just as those in Job do. Such instances clearly define what is later referred to in Job. The same word, yatsav, translated as “present” is again used in this same context in 1 Samuel 10 –

“Then Samuel called the people together to the LORD at Mizpah, ¹⁸ and said to the children of Israel, ‘Thus says the LORD God of Israel: “I brought up Israel out of Egypt, and delivered you from the hand of the Egyptians and from the hand of all kingdoms and from those who oppressed you.” ¹⁹ But you have today rejected your God, who Himself saved you from all your adversities and your tribulations; and you have said to Him, ‘No, set a king over us!’ Now therefore, present yourselves before the LORD [Yehovah] by your tribes and by your clans.”

-1 Samuel 10:17-19

In this passage, the article before “God” is unnecessary because He is defined by the name of the true God, Yehovah.

To fully appreciate this connection of the use of the article before elohim, or “God,” to the relationship of human beings toward the true God, one must go through all 370+ instances of the term ha’elohim expressed in Scripture.

Only in doing this will one see that every use follows the same contextual pattern. In this, one can then appreciate the error in thinking that has resulted from accepting the view that angelic beings are sleeping with humans and producing aberrant hybrids of mutants.

Such fanciful analyses are dramatic, sensational, and they sell well, but they improperly analyze Scripture, they introduce contradictions into Scripture, they fail to consider the use of the definite article preceding elohim as it is intended, they neglect the context of the surrounding passages, and they fail to take into account the whole body of Scripture that is necessary to properly and rightly divide the word concerning what is being said.

Satan did not sleep with Eve in order to cause man to fall. Rather, he deceived the woman through a manipulation of Scripture and Adam accepted his presentation over the word of the Lord. This is how he attempted to lead Christ astray as well.

The devil misuses the word of God, meaning law, in order to introduce sin. Through the introduction of sin, the devil gains his foothold over man. It is through deceit, temptation, affliction, opposition, and accusation that he works out his plans.

This is how he operates, not by having his fallen angels, which are spirit beings, sleep with human beings – something not possible for spirits, by the way.

To understand more on the misanalyses of who the Nephilim are in Genesis 6, you can go back and watch that sermon. The Bible is written for man about man’s right or wrong relationship with God. That is clearly expressed in Scripture. When one is in a right standing with Him, he is termed a son of God through faith.

This is the case in both testaments, and it is the case with the first clause of this first, most important, verse in Deuteronomy 14 – banim atem Yehovah elohkem, “Sons you are of Yehovah your God.”

Sons of God through faith in His promise

This is how the deal is sealed

One cannot be a doubting Thomas

And expected the title “Son of God” to him be dealed

*But if we just trust in what God has done
If we hold fast to the promise
Believing in the word concerning God's Son
And not continuing as a doubting Thomas*

*Then all good things will come to us
God will be pleased with the faith we possess
Yes, if we place our trust in the Lord Jesus
And Him as Lord we do confess*

*This is what God would ask of you
This is what God expects you to do*

II. A Holy People; a Special Treasure (verses 1 con't & 2)

The sons of God are those who live life in relation to Messiah. In the Old Testament, it is those who anticipated the coming of Messiah. Enoch did, Noah did, and Abraham did – among others in that select line. But Job also did, and he lived his life according to that promise.

How do we know this? It is because the hope of Messiah is the hope of restoration and life. Job's words clearly indicate that he possessed this hope –

*“For I know that my Redeemer lives,
And He shall stand at last on the earth;
²⁶ And after my skin is destroyed, this I know,
That in my flesh I shall see God,
²⁷ Whom I shall see for myself,
And my eyes shall behold, and not another.
How my heart yearns within me!” Job 19:25-27*

It is this that made him a son of the God – faith. For Israel, that term, son of the God, is more fully defined using the divine name, Yehovah. This more precise relationship was established in Exodus 6 –

*“And God spoke to Moses and said to him: ‘I am the LORD. ³ I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, as God Almighty, but by My name LORD I was not known to them.’” Exodus 6:2, 3*

The name translated both there in Exodus and here in Deuteronomy as “Lord” is Yehovah. The people of Israel are called sons of Yehovah because this is how God had revealed Himself to them. With this in mind, Cambridge notes –

“But when all the O.T. references to God as the Father whether of Israel or Israelites and to them as His children have been reckoned up, how few are they in comparison to the number of times that sons, and children, of God occur in the N.T. God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into our hearts crying Abba Father (Galatians 4:6); joint heirs with Christ (Romans 8:17).”

Their somewhat dismissive note doesn’t change the fact that Moses now calls them the sons of Yehovah. It is a truth and a calling that is set forth by him, and thus it is to be accepted as such.

It is for this reason that they were to apply the moral and holy laws of the Lord carefully to their walk before Him. Understanding this, Moses continues addressing the people in the plural with...

^{1 (con’t)} you shall not cut yourselves lo titgogedu – “no shall you (all) gash yourselves.” It is a new word in Scripture, gadad signifying to penetrate or cut. It comes from gud, meaning to invade or attack. Thus, it signifies to crowd, or to gash. The idea is that of pressing into oneself like a crowd presses in to form a break in a line.

The words here are similar to that stated in Leviticus 19 –

“You shall not make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor tattoo any marks on you: I am the Lord.” Leviticus 19:28

Gashing oneself had varying purposes. One of them was to petition one’s god in an almost mournful way. Such is found of the worshippers of Baal in 1 Kings 18 –

“And so it was, at noon, that Elijah mocked them and said, “Cry aloud, for he is a god; either he is meditating, or he is busy, or he is on a journey, or perhaps he is sleeping and must be awakened.” ²⁸ So they cried aloud, and cut themselves, as was their custom, with knives and lances, until the blood gushed out on them. ²⁹ And when midday was past, they prophesied until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice. But there was no voice; no one answered, no one paid attention.” 1 Kings 18:27-29

The worshippers of Baal were in great distress because there had been no answer to their petition and Elijah was have fun poking at them over that fact. Likewise, the implication here in Deuteronomy is that this is intended as a sign of mourning as is further seen in the next words...

^{1 (con't)} nor shave the front of your head for the dead.

v'lo tasimu qarekhah ben enekem lamet – “and no shall you (all) place baldness between your eyes to the dead.” In other words, they were not to shave the forehead. Our friend Rhoda noted that this may be a pun based on the previous verse.

In verse 13:18 it said the people were to do what is right in the eyes of the Lord. Now, it says not to place baldness between their eyes, implying it is an act that is not right in the eyes of the Lord. Both acts were a defilement of the body as a sign of mourning.

These were pagan practices that defiled the body created in the image of God. They were for superstitious reasons in relation to the gods of the people, and as a sign of exceptional mourning that the person was forever lost due to the end of his life.

To gash oneself would release blood. But the Lord has said that the life is in the blood. To shed one's own blood would be a way of demonstrating, through mourning for the dead, that the life was lost and there was no hope.

To shave one's forehead was equally objectionable because the forehead is the place of conscience and identification. To shave the hair from the forehead was an acknowledgement that the conscience and identification of the dead was forever lost.

These were forbidden firstly because there is one God, and it is not the false god of one of these nations. The second reason was for exactly the reason that was talked about earlier – the hope of Messiah. Israel was not to mourn in such ways because they were the people of God through whom this hope was promised.

It would be inconsistent to grieve in such a manner, as if all hope was lost, when considering that Yehovah had called them as a people for exactly the opposite reason. They were the people of God, and it is through them that Messiah would come. Because of this, the hope was assured. This is the reason why this thought now is expressly tied to the first thought, meaning that they were the sons of Yehovah.

Through Him is the promise of life, meaning Messiah, and there was to therefore be no such mourning as if all hope had perished. This is exactly what was so beautifully expressed by Martha at the grave of Lazarus –

“Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met Him, but Mary was sitting in the house. ²¹ Now Martha said to Jesus, ‘Lord, if You had been here, my brother would not have died. ²² But even now I know that whatever You ask of God, God will give You.’

²³ Jesus said to her, ‘Your brother will rise again.’

²⁴ Martha said to Him, ‘I know that he will rise again in the resurrection at the last day.’” John 11:20-24

Martha mourned for her brother, but it was a mourning of separation, not hopeless loss. Jesus commended her for her faith and then received acknowledgment from her of how great that faith actually was –

“Jesus said to her, ‘I am the resurrection and the life. He who believes in Me, though he may die, he shall live. ²⁶ And whoever lives and believes in Me shall never die. Do you believe this?’

²⁷ She said to Him, ‘Yes, Lord, I believe that You are the Christ, the Son of God, who is to come into the world.’” John 11:25-27

We read such verses as this one in Deuteronomy in the Old Testament, and we think they are completely disconnected from faith in Christ. In fact, exactly the opposite is true. They are intimately tied into the idea of Messiah. Martha’s words clearly demonstrate this. “No hope? On the contrary! Great is my confidence in the promises of the Lord!” This is in accord with Paul’s words which say –

“But I do not want you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning those who have fallen asleep, lest you sorrow as others who have no hope. ¹⁴ For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so God will bring with Him those who sleep in Jesus.”

-1 Thessalonians 4:13, 14

With this understanding, Moses continues...

² For you are a holy people to the LORD your God,

The words of this clause are identical, word for word and letter for letter, to Deuteronomy 7:6. They are similar to the words of a portion of Exodus 19:6, but the meaning between them is vastly different. To grasp that difference and how important it is, one should go back and review the comments of that Deuteronomy 7 sermon.

If Israel was to demonstrate whether they were truly sons of the Lord or not, they were to conduct themselves as a people holy to the Lord. Thus, the statement that opened the passage must be taken as a conditional one.

It is certain that the Pharisees of Jesus' time minutely abided by the tenets of this chapter. And yet, Jesus – when speaking to them – said that they were of their father the devil. Therefore, there is for Israel a positional sonship that all of the people enjoyed, and an actual sonship that only those of faith participated in.

Again, we will not dwell on the meaning of this clause because it was minutely analyzed in Chapter 7.

2^(fin) and the LORD has chosen you to be a people for Himself, a special treasure above all the peoples who are on the face of the earth.

Note: the Hebrew says, mikol, “out of (or from) all,” not “above all.” Here the words are very similar to the final two clauses of Deuteronomy 7:6. Taken side by side, this can be seen – and the LORD has chosen you to be a people for Himself, a special treasure above all the peoples who are on the face of the earth.

the LORD your God has chosen you to be a people for Himself, a special treasure above all the peoples on the face of the earth.

Despite some translational differences that don't exist in the Hebrew, the only substantial differences between the two are that this verse includes the word “and,” and it leaves off the word “your God.” Other than that, they are almost identical.

For this reason, I am not going to reevaluate the words for you today. Rather, when you go home, please be sure to re-watch or reread what is outlined there. The main point is that Israel is set apart as holy, even if they do not act as such. In other words, they are holy to the Lord as a people, even if the people are unholy before the Lord.

In this state, they are a special treasure to the Lord who are “out of all,” not “above all,” the peoples on the face of the earth. This is an important distinction in translation that must be made. Israel is not “above all” the nations but has been taken “out of” all the nations.

This was for the Lord’s own purposes and it sets them apart as distinct, but it also bears a very heavy burden. It is a burden that they have failed to bear up under, and it has – because of their own lack of faith – brought them much grief and sorrow.

For now, we will close with the thought that it is through Jesus that one becomes a true and forever son of God. And that only comes about by faith. It cannot come apart from it. The law has been given to show us this, and Israel has been the means by which that demonstration has been made.

This is true both in the lives of the individual people who come from that body, and it is true in God’s giving of us His Son, the promised Messiah, through them. Where they failed, He prevailed. Where they sinned, He remained sinless.

Even if some were people of faith, like David or Martha, the people of Israel were expected to live out their lives under law. The sad fact of the matter, however, is that not one of them was able to do this perfectly. The testimony to this is that all of them (minus Elijah who was taken alive to heaven) are dead.

This does not mean that they are forever lost. If they were people of faith in the promise of Messiah, they shall rise again – just as Job knew that he too would rise, and just as Martha knew that Lazarus would rise. However, they – meaning the people of Israel – were given as examples to us that the law could never save anyone. Every one of them is just as dead as Job is.

They did not prevail over the law that was given to them... well, not until God did the miraculous and accomplished all things Himself through the giving of Christ Jesus. It is through faith in Him – whether looking forward to Him or looking back on Him – by which the people of faith have that promise realized.

The righteous requirements of the law are now fulfilled in us through Jesus Christ, if we will simply accept that it is so. In this, God reckons us as justified. Paul says that Abraham stood justified before God, but Abraham came before the law. He also says that by deeds of the law no flesh will be justified in God’s sight, but rather that a man is justified apart from the deeds of the law. If that is so, then it is solely by faith.

God in His bountiful grace gave us the Gift of life when He gave us the Gift of His Son. And it is through faith in that, and faith in that alone, that we become full and complete sons of God. Enoch walked with the God, Noah walked with the God, and you too can have a close and personal walk with the God when you walk in faith with Jesus Christ. And so today I would ask you to do so.

Reach out to Him, believe that He died for your sins, have faith that He was buried, but that He rose again according to Scripture to bring you back to full and complete restoration with God.

Closing Verse: “We know that we are of God, and the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one.

²⁰ And we know that the Son of God has come and has given us an understanding, that we may know Him who is true; and we are in Him who is true, in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God and eternal life.” 1 John 5:19, 20

Next Week: Deuteronomy 14:3-21 It is a responsibility not to be ignored... (A Holy People to the Lord) (45th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Sons of the Lord God

“You are the children of the LORD your God
Just as the Lord to you has said
You shall not cut yourselves
Nor shave the front of your head for the dead

For you are a holy people to the LORD your God
And the LORD has chosen you to be a people for Himself
-----such is your positional worth
A special treasure above all the peoples
Who are on the face of the earth

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You

May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 14:3-21 (A Holy People to the Lord)

How often do we hear that there are contradictions in the word of God? It is true that many things are difficult, and some things are exceptionally hard to pin down as to why they seem to, in fact, contradict.

However, the more we study the word, the more we learn the context of what is being said, and the more we evaluate these supposed contradictions in that context, we find that they do not only not contradict, instead, they make complete sense.

Many people within the faith dismiss the idea of dispensations, but it is the dispensational model that eliminates many of these supposed contradictions. In Genesis 9, it says –

“And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be on every beast of the earth, on every bird of the air, on all that move on the earth, and on all the fish of the sea. They are given into your hand. ³ Every moving thing that lives shall be food for you. I have given you all things, even as the green herbs.” Genesis 9:2, 3

The implication is that until that point in human history, man didn’t eat animals. So, something different was happening that did not happen before that time.

Next, in our verses from Deuteronomy today, it says that the people cannot eat a perfectly porky pig. This stands completely at odds with what was said to Noah, unless there is a reason for it.

Further, the implication at this time, as will even be seen in our verses today, is that these things did not apply to non-Israelites. What was said to Noah still applied to all but Israel. And then in the New Testament, Paul says the following...

Text Verse: “I know and am convinced by the Lord Jesus that there is nothing unclean of itself; but to him who considers anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean.”

-Romans 14:14

But wait. Paul was an Israelite. His people had been told that there are things that are unclean for them. Here we are piling up contradictions... unless. Unless God is working out the redemptive narrative in --- anyone? Yes, in dispensations.

He is doing different things at different times, and for different reasons. And yet, none of these things contradict in any way, shape, or form. Rather, they complement the narrative – if one understands the narrative.

One could say that each of those eras was initiated with a covenant, and thus covenantalism is what is being described here. But if that is so, then how can it be that the dispensation of grace that Paul speaks of in Ephesians 3, which applies to both Gentiles and Jews (remember, Paul is a Jew and the Ephesians were Gentiles), doesn't apply to all Jews?

And, further, it is obvious that the Mosaic Covenant still surely applies to Israel today, and yet it doesn't apply to all Jews today. How is that possible if the Covenantal model of theology is the complete and final answer to the question. Indeed, it is not.

There are clearly covenants in Scripture, but there are also set dispensations plainly presented in Scripture as well. Understanding this is one avenue to eliminating supposed contradictions in the word. Without properly applying set dispensations you will – not maybe, but will – have contradictions in your theology.

Keep the boxes straight, don't mix dispensations, and spend as much time in the word as you can. The more you are in it, the more it will make sense to you. This is actually a precept typologically implied in our verses today. Yes, it's all to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Clean and Unclean Quadrupeds (verses 3-8)

³“You shall not eat any detestable thing.

lo tokal kal toevah – “No you shall eat all abomination.” The word is toevah, an abomination. It is derived from ta'av, a verb signifying “to abhor.” The precepts in these verses follow largely from Leviticus 11 where the word sheqets or, detestable thing, was predominantly used.

That chapter contains eight of its eleven uses, but all eleven refer to detestable animals. Rather than that word, Moses uses a more common word, one which was heavily stressed in Leviticus 18, a chapter dealing predominately with sexual immorality.

In this, one can see that for Israel the animal was to be considered as a detestable thing because it is considered an abomination. However, the reason for it being an abomination must be drawn out from the purpose of the law. These cannot be abominable in and of themselves. This is seen first from Genesis 9 –

“Every moving thing that lives shall be food for you. I have given you all things, even as the green herbs. ⁴ But you shall not eat flesh with its life, that is, its blood.” Genesis 9:3, 4

God gave all living creatures into man’s hand for food. This would have been the case with Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all other people within this line until the giving of the law. Job, and those outside of this line who are considered upright before God, were also free from these precepts. Further, Jesus says in Mark 7 –

“Are you thus without understanding also? Do you not perceive that whatever enters a man from outside cannot defile him, ¹⁹ because it does not enter his heart but his stomach, and is eliminated, thus purifying all foods?” ²⁰ And He said, “What comes out of a man, that defiles a man. ²¹ For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, ²² thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lewdness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness. ²³ All these evil things come from within and defile a man.” Mark 7:18-23

Paul further, and very clearly, reveals that all foods are acceptable to eat. He does this several times and, in several ways, plainly presenting this as axiom. Therefore, it is the law itself that makes these things both detestable and an abomination. It is not that they are so in and of themselves.

As this is absolutely established, and as the law is only given to Israel – and no other person or group of people in all of redemptive history – then the reason for the precepts in Leviticus, which are substantially repeated here, is found in the purpose of the law. That purpose is to then be drawn out with such a consideration in mind. With that understood, Moses defines what is acceptable for Israel to eat first...

⁴ These are the animals which you may eat:

Moses states it in the singular to define each type: zot ha’behemah asher tokelu – “This the animal which you may eat.” In Leviticus 11, the clean animals were not defined, only what defined them as clean. On the other hand, the unclean animals were defined, giving some (but not all) examples of what was forbidden.

Moses takes a different approach here, showing examples of what can be eaten, and only later of what cannot. Many of these animals are implicitly (or explicitly) noted as clean elsewhere, but Moses is being precise in first telling which are clean, without yet explaining the reason for it being so.

⁴ (con') the ox, the sheep, the goat,

Moses continues the precise wording, leaving off any articles: shor, seh kesavim, w'seh izzim – “ox, lamb (of) sheep, and kid (of) goats.” In this, he first names the animals acceptable for sacrifice and then he mentions all others. Here, he starts with the shor, or ox. That comes from a root signifying “to wander about.” It is a traveling animal.

The seh, or “lamb,” probably comes from a root, sha'ah, signifying to crash, or make a din. Thus, it would be an animal that pushes out to graze. That is then defined by the word kesavim, identifying it as a flocking animal.

Moses then says v'seh izzim – “and kid (of) goats.” It is the same word, seh, that was just used for “lamb,” but it is then identified with the word izzim, or goats. It is the plural of ez, or goat which comes from a word signifying “to be strong.”

Being sacrificial animals, it has already been explained in Leviticus how they point to Christ and His work. To understand that, check out those earlier sermons. These are all animals of the flock and herd. Next, Moses says...

⁵ the deer, the gazelle, the roe deer, the wild goat, the mountain goat, the antelope, and the mountain sheep.

Moses continues by stating the wild, non-sacrificial animals. He does so without using any articles, simply stating each animal in the singular – ayal, u-tsviy, v'yakhmur, v'aqgo, v'dishon, u-teo, va'zamer – “deer, and gazelle, and roe deer, and wild goat, and mountain goat, and antelope, and mountain sheep.”

It should be noted that due to the rarity of the names, the identification of some of these is highly debated. The first two are rather common in Scripture. The ayal, or deer, comes from ayil, or ram, which then comes from ul, signifying mighty, or strength.

This anticipates believers in Christ where Paul says, “be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might.” (Ephesians 6:10).

Next is the tsviy, or gazelle, which signifies beauty or honor. The word is used when speaking of the coming Messiah in Isaiah 4:2. It comes from tsavah, to swell up. Thus, the description of the animal is that of prominence or splendor.

This speaks of believers in Christ who are each to “be a vessel for honor, sanctified and useful for the Master, prepared for every good work” (2 Timothy 2:21).

The third, the yakhmur, or roe deer, is found here and in 1 Kings 4:23. That comes from khamar, meaning to ferment or boil up. Its color is what then defines it, appearing as if its coat is vivid and alive.

This animal anticipates the position of believers who are to be “not lagging in diligence, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord” (Romans 12:11).

The fourth, aqqa, the ibex or wild goat, is found only here. It is derived from anaq, to cry or groan, and so it is a slender animal. This anticipates all believers. Of us, Paul says in Romans 8:23 that “we ourselves groan within ourselves, eagerly waiting for the adoption, the redemption of our body” (Romans 8:23).

The fifth, dishon, or mountain goat, is found only here. It is from dush, meaning to tread or thresh. It is the leaper. If you’ve ever seen one, you would understand the description. This looks to Paul’s words of 1 Corinthians 9:10, where he says, “that he who plows should plow in hope, and he who threshes in hope should be partaker of his hope.”

The next, teo, or antelope, is found only here and in Isaiah 51:20. It comes from taah, to draw out or mark a line. Thus, it is named probably for its white strip, or maybe for its long horns that form a line. This anticipates believers who are to “walk circumspectly, not as fools but as wise” (Ephesians 5:15).

Lastly, the zemer, or mountain sheep, is found only here. That probably comes from zamar, to make music in praise of God. Just as a person playing an instrument will lightly touch the string or windpipe, so this animal would lightly touch the ground.

This anticipates the state of those in Christ who are to be “speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord” (Ephesians 5:19).

As noted, these were not specified in Leviticus 11. But Moses specifically names these to the people here and only next explains why they may be eaten...

⁶ And you may eat every animal with cloven hooves, having the hoof split into two parts,

As a point of correct translation, the word hoof is singular here and in verse 7. Moses repeats the substance of Leviticus 11:3, stating the requirements in reverse order –

“Among the animals, whatever divides the hoof, having cloven hooves...”

The words to focus on are maphreset paresah, or “cloven hooves,” and the fact that they are v’shosaat shesa shete pherasoth, or, “and having split the hoof into two parts.” Every word here gives the sense of division, or of dividing completely.

The repetition of the words is purposeful. It isn’t enough to simply say, “splits the hooves,” because some animals do this, but they don’t have fully split hooves. They are to split the hooves so that the hooves are completely split.

⁶ (con’t) and that chews the cud, among the animals.

maalat gerah babehemah otah tokelu – “ascends cud in the beasts you may eat.” The word gerah, or cud, comes from garar, “to drag away.” Thus, this speaks of the cud, as in scraping the throat. To make it ascend, then, means to bring the food back up.

In animals, it is the process of up-chucking food from the first of several stomachs where it is chewed a second time before passing into the second stomach. The idea behind this is that the maximum amount of nutrition is obtained from the food. It is also necessary because the foods these animals eat are difficult to digest, and so the extra process makes it much easier for them.

The requirements given in Leviticus and here do not assign reasons as to why such animals are acceptable for food. They are merely distinguishing marks of what is considered acceptable. And so, this verse gives the specifics of what is authorized.

It is claimed that the meat of these animals is better for people for a variety of reasons, but that is untrue. It also doesn't explain why God specifies this now. One can say, "Oh, of course, it is because the Lord wants His people to be healthy, and this is how it will come about." But that is an insufficient explanation.

In fact, it would simply muddy the theological waters. If that were true, then it would imply that He didn't really care about this in anyone from the time after the flood until the giving of the law. It would also then imply that He doesn't care as much about us now. We have no such dietary restrictions.

It is unreasonable to claim that the Lord didn't care about the health of those both before, outside, and after the time of the law. And so there must be another reason for specifying this. And there is. It anticipates what believers are to do now.

The purpose of both of these is that they anticipate the believer's responsibility concerning God's word. First, it concerns the proper handling of the word as outlined by Paul in 2 Timothy where he speaks of "rightly dividing the word of truth." Both commands – concerning the division of the hooves, and to rightly divide the word – are positive in nature.

The fully divided hooves give us this picture. Likewise, the chewing of the cud gives us another picture. We are not to simply eat, swallow, and forget. The word, like the food for these animals, is difficult to digest. It must be contemplated and meditated upon.

Like the animal that chews the cud, we are to call the word back to mind and chew on it, contemplate it, and get every ounce of nourishment that we can out of it. It must be chewed and re-chewed. This is why Paul said to the Philippians and then again to Timothy to "meditate on these things" (Philippians 4:8).

A cow spends about eight hours of every day chewing the cud. This, plus their normal chewing of food totals approximately 40,000 jaw movements a day. If God's people would carefully and rightly divide the word, and then spend such a great amount of time contemplating it and then applying it to their lives, nothing could hinder them in their daily walk.

With this understanding, Moses next refers to what is forbidden...

⁷ Nevertheless, of those that chew the cud or have cloven hooves, you shall not eat, such as these: the camel, the hare, and the rock hyrax; for they chew the cud but do not have cloven hooves; they are unclean for you.

In Leviticus 11:4-6, the Lord named these animals and gave similar explanations as to why it was to be –

‘Nevertheless these you shall not eat among those that chew the cud or those that have cloven hooves: the camel, because it chews the cud but does not have cloven hooves, is unclean to you; ⁵ the rock hyrax, because it chews the cud but does not have cloven hooves, is unclean to you; ⁶ the hare, because it chews the cud but does not have cloven hooves, is unclean to you.’”

To understand why each of these specific animals was singled out, and how they then are typological of New Testament truths, please be sure to rush home and watch the Leviticus 11 sermon...

⁸ Also the swine is unclean for you, because it has cloven hooves, yet does not chew the cud;

This delightful and delicious animal that has more flavor and variety of taste running through it than a candy factory is noted in Leviticus 11:7. To understand why it is mentioned here, and what type of a person it is referring to, please be sure to watch that sermon. Of all of these animals, Moses tells Israel...

^{8 (con't)} you shall not eat their flesh or touch their dead carcasses.

The utterly ridiculous nature of reinserting these precepts from the law into New Testament theology is revealed in these words. Those who are overly pious and yet underly educated in theology make a show of how they are so much better than others because of their rejecting the eating of such meat.

But this list is not all-inclusive. Any animal that does not meet the requirements laid out by Moses is included in this list, such as the cat and the dog (and etc).

However, Jews around the world, and these uniformed, or willfully ignorant supposed followers of Christ, will openly mourn over their dead Fifi or Fido, pick him up, and carry him to his little grave – thus violating the second and equally important precept given here. To further understand this precept, it is more fully explained in the Leviticus 11 sermons.

*What's for dinner ma? I'm hungry and my tummy is achin'
What's for dinner ma? I can't wait till we eat
Will we have some burgers topped with cheese and bacon?
I can't wait to taste the nummy-delicious treat*

*No sonny boy, you can't have that as you know
I don't care if that is for what your tummy is achin'
We're legalists in this house. It is true and that is so
Here we don't eat anything topped with bacon*

*We are working our way to heaven despite the work of Jesus
We're on our way; this is the path we've taken
I'm sure God will look with super favor on us
When we eat our burgers without any bacon...*

II. Clean and Unclean Water Life (verses 9 & 10)

⁹“These you may eat of all that are in the waters: you may eat all that have fins and scales.

This is more fully explained in Leviticus 11:9 –

“These you may eat of all that are in the water: whatever in the water has fins and scales, whether in the seas or in the rivers—that you may eat.” Leviticus 11:9

The senappir and qasqeseth, or fins and scales are rare words. The fins are only found in the Torah, and only in regard to fish. The word scale is found elsewhere when speaking of scale-armor, as was worn by Goliath.

As a reminder of the symbolism, fins are used to keep a fish swimming properly in moving forward, turning, staying upright, and stopping. They guide the fish smoothly and efficiently through the water. Scales are predominantly used for protection, among other things.

The symbolism is perfectly obvious. Like fins, the word of God is intended to keep us moving properly and in an upright manner – ever towards Christ, not racing ahead of ourselves and not going beyond what is written. It is to be the rule and guide of our walk. And like scales, it is intended to protect us from harm.

As there are many scales, and as they vary in size, they are indicative of satisfactory good works which the Bible exhorts us to apply to our lives in order to be well-rounded and fully protected from that which would otherwise bring us harm. For this reason...

¹⁰ And whatever does not have fins and scales you shall not eat;

This is more fully defined in Leviticus 11:10 –

“But all in the seas or in the rivers that do not have fins and scales, all that move in the water or any living thing which is in the water.”

To eat something without these attributes typologically anticipates believers who run ahead without them, heading into their own self-made disaster. Hence, for Israel...

^{10 (con't)} it is unclean for you.

Leviticus 11:10 says, “they are an abomination to you.” The reason for including these words (“for you” or “to you”) is to show that they are not unclean in and of themselves, but only to Israel under the law. When the law was annulled in Christ, the wall of partition was taken away. These dietary restrictions went away with the law. The purpose they were given was to lead us to understanding what these things only typified for the believer.

*Honey, I went down to the beach and caught us some fish
And while I was down there, I got some lobster too
There's plenty here, more than I could wish
Where should I put them, and what else can I do?*

*Ack! Lobster! What are you nuts my dear?
That isn't clean according to the Law of Moses
We're working our way to heaven, but we won't make it I fear
If you bring home stuff like lobster. We'll get an F minus*

*If we go eating the wrong stuff, things just won't go well
It would be no different than if we were a couple of mobsters*

*The last thing we need is to be cast into hell
Because we sat down to a nummy meal of buttered-up lobsters*

III. Clean and Unclean Flying Things (verses 11-20)

¹¹ “All clean birds you may eat.

kal tsippor tehorah tokelu – “All bird clean you may eat.” This is not stated in Leviticus 11. Rather, the Lord begins with, “And these you shall regard as an abomination among the birds.” It is then anticipated that anything not forbidden in the word is, by default, clean.

As there are countless birds in the world not mentioned here as unclean, but which would fall into the unclean category, it is obvious that typology is the main consideration here. It would be naïve to think otherwise.

And to say, “All clean birds,” without further defining what that means, only solidifies this notion. There are a couple changes between the list here and of that in Leviticus. These changes will be noted, and the typology will be explained for them.

For all the others, you will just have to continue watching the Leviticus 11 sermons as there is no need to reexplain all of those details...

¹² But these you shall not eat: the eagle, the vulture, the buzzard,

These are recorded in Leviticus 11:12 and are explained there.

¹³ the red kite, the falcon, and the kite after their kinds;

Of this verse, it should be noted that the words are so similar to Leviticus 11:14 that someone might mistake them as the same names, but there are differences. The similarity between them is noticeable and confusing if not carefully analyzed.

The raah (called the “red kite” here) is not mentioned in Leviticus 11, but the daah is. It is possible that both are the same bird. The D and the R in Hebrew are almost identical. Thus, it may be that the Hebrew contains a scribal error as the NAS concordance states.

If not a scribal error, then the raah comes from a word signifying to see, or to look. Thus, it is a bird of exceptionally keen sight, as birds of prey are known to be.

Also, if it is not a scribal error, then what is equally probable is that the daah of Leviticus 11 is represented by the third bird, the dayyah, or kite, and only having a variant spelling. If not, then it is only mentioned here and in Isaiah 34:15. It is a completely different bird than the ayyah, or falcon seen in Leviticus 11:14.

As you can see the names are so closely spelled that it is very hard to know what is actually being conveyed. I broke my brain on trying to give you a reasonable analysis of these things.

¹⁴ every raven after its kind;

v'et kal orev l'mino – “And all raven to its kind.” The only difference between this verse and Leviticus 11:15 is the addition of the word “and.”

¹⁵ the ostrich, the short-eared owl, the sea gull, and the hawk after their kinds;

The words are identical, word for word and letter for letter, to Leviticus 11:16.

¹⁶ the little owl, the screech owl, the white owl,

Here the first two birds are mentioned in Leviticus 11:17. However, the third bird, the tinshemeth, or “white owl” is mentioned in Leviticus 11:18 and is also translated in Leviticus 11:30 as a “chameleon.”

¹⁷ the jackdaw, the carrion vulture, the fisher owl,

The first two are mentioned in Leviticus 11:18. The only difference there in them is that the carrion vulture is pronounced ha'rakham in Leviticus and ha'rakhamah in Deuteronomy. The third was mentioned in Leviticus 11:17, coming out of order now.

¹⁸ the stork, the heron after its kind, and the hoopoe and the bat.

The same birds are mentioned here as in Leviticus 11:19, but the structure of the sentence is a bit different. In all, they both convey the same thoughts.

¹⁹ “Also every creeping thing that flies is unclean for you; they shall not be eaten.

The words are similar to Leviticus 11:20 –

“All flying insects that creep on all fours shall be an abomination to you.”

The major difference here from Leviticus 11 is that there it goes on to describe those creeping things in much more detail, including the exemptions to this law – meaning the various locusts, crickets, and grasshoppers.

Because of the lack of exceptions here, the Pulpit Commentary seems to suggest a contradiction in the text, saying, “Winged insects are forbidden without exception in Deuteronomy; in Leviticus, the locust and certain other insects of the same kind are excepted.”

This is not correct. The words of this verse say: v'kol sherets ha'oph tame hu lakem – “And every swarming thing the flyer unclean it for you.” However, the next verse says...

²⁰ “You may eat all clean birds.

Kal oph tahor tokelu – “All flyer clean you may eat.” In other words, the clean exemptions from Leviticus 11 are considered under these words here. This was perfectly understood by the Hebrew society. We know this because of what it says about John the Baptist, it says he “ate locusts and wild honey.”

*Unclean until evening, what will I do?
Nobody saw me touch that thing, and yet this is right
To myself and to my God, I must be true
And it's only 10 more hours until comes the night*

*It's kind of hard for me to understand this
If I had touched it at 5pm, I would only be unclean an hour
What am I not getting, or from the law what did I miss?
That being unclean would carry such a varying power*

*What is it about the ending of the day?
What is it about the turning of that one hour?
That will my debt of uncleanness pay
What is it about that certain time, that carries cleansing power?*

*I know that in Messiah, all of this will be made known
And the revealing of every mystery will be shown*

IV. A Holy People to the Lord Your God

²¹ “You shall not eat anything that dies of itself; you may give it to the alien who is within your gates, that he may eat it, or you may sell it to a foreigner; for you are a holy people to the LORD your God.

The words here are a lot of clauses that would normally be taken one by one. But the precepts overlap with quite a few other passages. Three of them are –

“And you shall be holy men to Me: you shall not eat meat torn by beasts in the field; you shall throw it to the dogs. Exodus 22:31

“And every person who eats what died naturally or what was torn by beasts, whether he is a native of your own country or a stranger, he shall both wash his clothes and bathe in water, and be unclean until evening. Then he shall be clean. ¹⁶ But if he does not wash them or bathe his body, then he shall bear his guilt.” Leviticus 17:15, 16

Whatever dies naturally or is torn by beasts he shall not eat, to defile himself with it: I am the LORD. Leviticus 22:8

First is the immediate verse which pertains to eating something that died of itself. The people were not to eat that. Of the three references, the first from Exodus 22 referred to meat torn by beasts.

That was forbidden for two reasons. The first is that it had not been properly bled, making it unclean. Secondly, the beast which tore the animal would have been an unclean animal and thus passed on ceremonial defilement. Hence, there was defilement in both ways.

The second reference speaks in the same verse of that which died naturally and that which was torn, showing that this was not allowed, but if it did happen, there was a remedy for the sin. This clearly shows that the prohibitions are spiritual in nature, and this for several reasons.

An animal that died by itself, or one which was killed by other beasts, did not have the blood drained out of it. The animal is dead because its lifeblood has stopped flowing. To eat this animal cannot be compared to eating blood itself, because the soul had departed.

And yet, it is still true that the blood remained in the animal. Such meat was forbidden to be eaten, but if it were, the person was merely considered unclean. Because he ate something forbidden, it shows the spiritual nature of the mandate.

And then, secondly, comes the means of purification from defilement. The first is washing the clothes, and the second is bathing. Both of these are external acts. They have absolutely nothing to do with what went into the man. And yet, they are required in order to be considered purified.

And finally, the last part of the purification was to wait until sundown, at which time he would be clean again. If he ate his meal at 6:55 pm, and the day started at 6pm, then he would be defiled for 23 hours and 5 minutes.

If he ate and then washed at 5:45pm, then he would only be defiled for 15 minutes. This shows us that the defilement is spiritual. Further, it pertained to an Israelite and stranger alike. In order to be considered clean, the command stands for both.

As was seen in Leviticus, the washing of the garments pointed to trampling out sin in one's life. The bathing points to the purification of one's life by Christ. And the evening time points to the time that Christ died and was placed in the tomb. With His death and burial, all defilement of man is truly washed away. This ceremonial period of defilement simply looked forward to the cleansing from all defilement provided by the Lord.

The third reference from Leviticus 22 was a prohibition for the priests. They were never to eat such an animal because they, in their work, anticipated the coming mediatorial role of Christ. Thus, they were specifically prohibited from this.

For the rest of this verse in Deuteronomy, it speaks of the alien or the foreigner. That is clearly showing a distinction between those in Christ, and that who are not in Christ.

The key thought is always Christ. It is either looking forward to Him in typology by Israel, or looking back on what He did for us, and which now includes us in Him. As it says, "for you are a holy people to the LORD your God." The church is, like Israel was intended to be (and will be someday), a holy people to the Lord.

21 (fin) "You shall not boil a young goat in its mother's milk.

This is the third and final time this is stated. The first was in Exodus 23:19 –

“The first of the firstfruits of your land you shall bring into the house of the LORD your God. You shall not boil a young goat in its mother’s milk.”

-Exodus 23:19

The second time was in Exodus 34:26 in a verbatim repeat of Exodus 23:19. Now, it is repeated, but without the note concerning the Firstfruits.

Both of the first two mentions of this were in relation to the three annual pilgrim feasts. This particular prohibition is logically tied to the third such feast, the Feast of Ingathering. The boiling of a young goat in its mother’s milk was a pagan practice.

After it was boiled, and along with magic rites, the milk was used to sprinkle plantations, fields, and gardens in hopes of them being more productive the next year. This then reflects those who refuse to give up magic practices right through the entire dispensation of grace, and even through the tribulation period. Thus, it speaks of what is stated in Revelation 9 –

“The rest of mankind who were not killed by these plagues still did not repent of the work of their hands; they did not stop worshiping demons, and idols of gold, silver, bronze, stone and wood—idols that cannot see or hear or walk.²¹ Nor did they repent of their murders, their magic arts, their sexual immorality or their thefts.” Revelation 9:20, 21 (NIV)

This is a prohibition that speaks of what the people of God are not to do, just as was the case with the first two verses of this chapter that were looked at last week. The positive and negative precepts laid down here are all given in anticipation of Christ and in our relationship to Him. As it says in both verse 2 and then again here in verse 21, “For you are a holy people to the Lord your God.”

The marvel of these dietary laws given first in Leviticus 11, and then repeated here in our passage today, is that they convey this truth to Israel in typology. They were really to do these things, but the reason for doing them wasn’t because it brought them any closer to God. Instead, it is because what they picture does.

An observant Jew can stick to every single dietary precept given here today, and indeed many do, and yet he can be as far from God as the greatest pagan. However, for those who live out what these laws typologically anticipate, they will come closer to the Lord.

God is not looking for our externals, but He is carefully evaluating our internals. What is our heart condition before the Lord? And above all, that heart condition must first be set and fixed through trusting in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Without that, nothing else matters.

One is either apart from Christ and tainted with sin that blocks his fellowship with God, or he is in Christ and has fellowship with God. From that point on the fellowship that we experience is based on how we respond to what we have been instructed under the New Covenant which is outlined in the New Testament epistles.

Let us not fail in our wholehearted devotion to applying this wonderful word to our every step. In this, God will certainly be pleased with our actions. As a reminder, if you have forgotten the details of what each of these animals signifies from the Leviticus sermons, go back and brush up on them.

Finally, please make sure that you truly are in Christ. Without that, all of the head knowledge on the planet won't do you a bit of good. In case you forgot it, the typology of the swine will reveal that to you. Make your head knowledge a heart knowledge today. Call on Christ and be reconciled to God through Him.

Closing Verse: "For every creature of God is good, and nothing is to be refused if it is received with thanksgiving; ⁵ for it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer."

-1 Timothy 4:4, 5

Next Week: Deuteronomy 14:22-29 Are you supposed to give 10%? Is that what the Bible does tell...? (The Tithes of Israel) (46th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

A Holy People to the Lord

"You shall not eat any detestable thing

These are the animals which you may eat:

The ox, the sheep, the goat, the deer, the gazelle, the roe deer

The wild goat, the mountain goat, the antelope, and the mountain

-----sheep; such are to be your meat

And you may eat every animal with cloven hooves
Having the hoof split into two parts
And that chews the cud as well
Among the animals, that's where your clean animal list starts

Nevertheless, of those that chew the cud or have cloven hooves
You shall not eat, such as these, such you shall not do:
The camel, the hare, and the rock hyrax
For they chew the cud but do not have cloven hooves
-----they are unclean for you

Also the swine is unclean for you
Because it has cloven hooves, yet does not chew the cud
You shall not eat their flesh or touch their dead carcasses
Not even in a soup containing the spud

"These you may eat of all that are in the waters:
You may eat all that have fins and scales
And whatever does not have fins and scales you shall not eat
It is unclean for you, both for your ladies and your males

"All clean birds you may eat
But these you shall not eat: the eagle, the vulture, the buzzard too
The red kite, the falcon, and the kite after their kinds
Every raven after its kind shall be unclean for you

The ostrich, the short-eared owl, the sea gull, and the hawk
-----after their kinds
The little owl, the screech owl, the white owl
----- (you shall not eat that)
The jackdaw, the carrion vulture, the fisher owl
The stork, the heron after its kind, and the hoopoe and the bat

"Also every creeping thing that flies is unclean for you
They shall not be eaten; such you shall not do

"You may eat all clean birds
"You shall not eat anything that dies of itself
You may give it to the alien who is within your gates

That he may eat it, or you may sell it to a foreigner
-----but keep it off your pantry shelf

For you are a holy people to the LORD your God
-----so be ye pure like silk
“You shall not boil a young goat in its mother’s milk

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 14:22-29 (The Tithes of Israel)

In the past, in Genesis 28, Leviticus 27, and Numbers 18, I have done sermons on tithing in relation to the precepts laid down in those passages. The fullest one to refer to, and which I will exhort you to refer to again, is from Numbers 18.

However, to understand the concept of tithing properly, it is necessary to follow the narrative from each of those passages. In the end, tithing is an Old Testament concept and a Mosaic Covenant standard. It is not a New Covenant precept.

The only time it is mentioned in the New Testament is by Jesus while speaking about issues related to the law, or by the author of Hebrews while making a point about genealogies. Nowhere else is tithing prescribed or even alluded to apart from that. And, in fact, to preach tithing would then set up a direct contradiction to Paul's words of 2 Corinthians 9:6, 7.

Text Verse: "Will a man rob God?

Yet you have robbed Me!

But you say,

'In what way have we robbed You?'

In tithes and offerings.

⁹ You are cursed with a curse,

For you have robbed Me,

Even this whole nation.

¹⁰ Bring all the tithes into the storehouse,

That there may be food in My house,

And try Me now in this,"

Says the LORD of hosts,

"If I will not open for you the windows of heaven

And pour out for you such blessing

That there will not be room enough to receive it." Malachi 3:8-10

Q's: Where is Malachi recorded? Who was Malachi speaking to? Under what dispensation was he prophesying? A's: Old Testament. Israel. The law.

A few points: 1) We are not under law, but even if we were, 2) though tithing was prescribed for every year under the law, it was only given away by the one tithing every third year. So, when your preacher tells you to tithe, tell him you are not under law. And if he comes up with another reason to tithe, tell him, “Then I will give as they did in the Law of Moses, every third year.”

See how he shifts in his shoes at that. For those preachers that say the tithe predates the law because Abraham gave a tithe to Melchizedek, and it therefore falls under what they call “the law of first mention,” remind them that there is no such law.

If he insists on this, then ask him if he makes sure that all believing women whose husbands die before they have children marry the dead husband’s brother. That predates the law too. So does the Sabbath and circumcision. Does he insist on them?

Lots of things mentioned in the Bible predate the law that you can be sure he doesn’t do or tell others to do. It is a hypocritical and devious way of handle one’s theology. In fact, it is shameful. The tithes of Israel had several main purposes that we will review.

The reason Genesis mentions Abraham tithing to Melchizedek wasn’t because it was being prescribed for believers. Rather, it was setting up a theological point that the author of Hebrews would later explain to us concerning the greatness of Christ. The passage in Genesis was descriptive. It prescribes nothing.

In the end, the main purpose of the tithe was the same as countless other precepts found in the law. It was to anticipate and typologically prefigure the work of Christ. As this is so, and as Christ has come and fulfilled the law, tithing – like circumcision, Sabbath observance, and numerous other precepts – are done away with. They were mere shadow, but we have the Substance.

Such truths as these are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today, and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Whatever Your Soul Lusteth After (verses 22-26)

²² “You shall truly tithe

aser t’aser – “tithing, you shall tithe.” The whole section, from verse 22 until the end of the chapter, is in the second person singular. The collective body of people are to accomplish this mandate. They are Israel.

At times, however, Moses will certainly use the singular here as if speaking of any single person. Rather than, “you all,” he will speak as if directly to an individual – “You, Sir, shall do this.”

Moses is now reaffirming something that had been vowed hundreds of years earlier. He is using the same phrase their forefather Jacob used before he departed Canaan to go to Padan Aram in Genesis 28 –

“Then Jacob made a vow, saying, ‘If God will be with me, and keep me in this way that I am going, and give me bread to eat and clothing to put on, ²¹so that I come back to my father’s house in peace, then the LORD shall be my God. ²²And this stone which I have set as a pillar shall be God’s house, and of all that You give me I will surely give a tenth to You.’” Genesis 28:20-22

There he said aser aaserenu, “tithing, I will tithe.” Understanding that, Israel is being reminded of the obligation first laid upon them there, and then as it was later defined in Leviticus 27 –

“And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD’s. It is holy to the LORD. ³¹If a man wants at all to redeem any of his tithes, he shall add one-fifth to it. ³²And concerning the tithe of the herd or the flock, of whatever passes under the rod, the tenth one shall be holy to the LORD.” Leviticus 27:30-32

Those words there conveyed that a tithe was required, but they did not tell what to do with the tithe. After that, what to do with it is more fully – but not completely – defined in Numbers 18:21-32. To understand that section, one must watch the sermon on those verses. It is vital to know concerning what will be presented now. The key part of the passage is first found in verse 24 –

“For the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer up as a heave offering to the LORD, I have given to the Levites as an inheritance; therefore I have said to them, ‘Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.’”

-Numbers 18:24

The translation is incorrect and misleading. There is no article before “tithes. Rather, it says, “For tithes children of Israel, which they offer up as a heave offering to Yehovah.” In other words, it is not speaking of the entire tithe, but a portion of the tithes. That particular portion is offered as a heave offering to the Lord. It is that portion that is then given to the Levites. This is confirmed in what is then done with the tithes of the Levites. Of this, it says –

“When you take from the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them as your inheritance, then you shall offer up a heave offering of it to the LORD, a tenth of the tithe.” Numbers 18:26

Again, the translation is incorrect and misleading. It first rightly says, “the tithes which I have given you,” speaking of everything they had received. However, it then says while leaving off the article, terumat Yehovah maaser min ha’maaser – “heave offering Yehovah, tithe from the tithe.”

The part they offer is Yehovah’s heave offering. Unlike in verse 18:24 that was just cited, it is not “to the Lord,” but the Hebrew says, “heave offering Yehovah.”

It is a tithe of the heave offering tithe. That this is again called a heave offering, in and of itself, shows that only that which is presented to the Lord is considered in these verses. Any other uses for the annual tithes, not presented as heave offerings, are dealt with separately.

It is that part of the tithes which are not offered as a heave offering that are now to be detailed in Deuteronomy. Again, to fully understand what is conveyed in Numbers 18, and the almost universally faulty translations of those verses, please be sure to watch that sermon.

Thus far, Moses has confirmed the previous words concerning tithing. Israel is to, in fact, tithe. They are to take one tenth of..

^{22 (con’t)} all the increase of your grain that the field produces

The translation is incorrect. Rather than “grain,” it should read “seed.” It says: kal tevuat zarekha ha’yotse ha’sadeh – “all increase your seed the coming the field.” This isn’t just speaking of grain, but of everything that the field produces, including olives, grapes, and even animals. Everything that springs up from the field is to be tithed.

The Lord has already given instruction for the Lord’s offering of that, meaning “tithe sons Israel which they offer up to Yehovah” from Numbers 18:24. That no longer needs to be addressed in such a specific manner. However, not all of the tithe is offered up as a heave offering and then given to the Levites. That which is not is what is detailed in these verses.

Before going on, and as will be explained later in more detail, nowhere in Scripture is a “second tithe” referred to. It has not been mentioned up until this point, and what is stated here has nothing to do with the fabled “second tithe” that scholars, preachers, and teachers alike speak about. Here is what Charles Ellicott states –

“The Talmud and Jewish interpreters in general are agreed in the view that the tithe mentioned in this passage, both here and in Deuteronomy 14:28, and also the tithe described in Deuteronomy 26:12-15, are all one thing—“the second tithe;” and entirely distinct from the ordinary tithe assigned to the Levites for their subsistence in Numbers 18:21, and by them tithed again for the priests (Numbers 18:26).” Charles Ellicott

He then goes on to say, “The tithe described in Numbers was called ‘the first tithe,’ and was not considered sacred. The second tithe, on the contrary, was always regarded as a holy thing.”

That is absolute poppycock. Moses is referring to the tithes of Israel that were introduced into the law in Leviticus 27, but which were obligated by Jacob’s promise all the way back in Genesis 28.

It is to be noted that what Jacob promised to the Lord there was never mentioned again in any manner at all, right up until Leviticus 27. But the very fact that Jacob promised to tithe to the Lord, and that Israel had continued to do so, indicates that this tithe – this one and only tithe – is, in fact, “a holy thing” and sacred to the Lord.

Based on Moses’ words here, which are taken as an axiom that this was the customary habit of the people even since the time of Jacob (as will be seen), he is placing into law how to properly fulfill that obligation that their forefather promised. With that in mind, Moses now codifies what was once only custom.

This is no different than circumcision and the Sabbath. Both predate the Law of Moses, and yet both are then incorporated into the law in order to ensure the people observed the rites, observed them in a unified manner, and observed them to the Lord. This is why Moses is further defining the one and only tithe levied upon Israel which is explicitly stated to be...

22 (con’t) year by year.

shanah shanah – “year year.” This defines the regular interval by which the Israelites were to tithe. As theirs was a largely agrarian society, the natural interval to tithe any particular product was annually.

What this probably involved was to bring the tithes as they were ready. At the end of the barley harvest, a tithe would be brought. At the end of the wheat harvest, a tithe would be brought. This would continue on as the things were ready to be brought to where they were then dispensed with. Of this directive, Moses says...

²³ And you shall eat before the LORD your God,

Here, Moses states this as a customary thing. Before verse 12:7, nothing had ever been said about it before, either as something the people did, or as a command from the Lord, and yet, he says it as if the people would already understand what is being presented.

In other words, what did Jacob do in order to give the Lord a tenth of what he had been given? He ate it in a meal of gratitude. This is then what his progeny continued to do, and this is what is now being codified into law. Apart from that which was to be set aside for the Levites as a terumah, or heave offering to the Lord, this is what is being detailed here.

How do you materially give to the Lord that which He already possesses? He has no need of anything, but we can give of ourselves in gratitude and praise. This is obviously what Jacob did with the tenth of what he had been given. However, to ensure uniformity of worship, Moses now adds on a stipulation to the ancient custom, making it a law. They are to eat it...

²³ (con't) in the place where He chooses to make His name abide, ba'maqom asher yivkhar l'shaken shemo sham – “in the place which He chooses to make dwell His name there.” In other words, at the place of the tabernacle and later the temple.

This was originally at Shiloh, but eventually the location found its way to Jerusalem, at which time, the pilgrim feasts were conducted there. Likewise, the tithes were to be brought there as stipulated in these various tithing passages.

²³ (con't) the tithe

The Hebrew reads: maesar – “tithe.” There is no article before the word – “You shall eat before the Lord your God...tithe.” Like in Numbers 18, this is defining a portion of what the entire tithe signifies. There, it was limiting to that which was for the priests. Here, it is limiting to that which is for the people. And this tithe is further defined by Moses, saying...

^{23 (con't)} of your grain and your new wine and your oil,

These things are representative of all of the produce of the ground. It would include both wheat and barley as well as olive oil or whatever other products they raised. For example, in Matthew 23, Jesus includes herbs as well –

“Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law: justice and mercy and faith. These you ought to have done, without leaving the others undone.” Matthew 23:23

Such was to be understood. The three categories – grain, new wine, and oil – stand representative of all other products of the ground. Also, they were to eat the tithe...

^{23 (con't)} of the firstborn of your herds and your flocks,

These words explain the use of the term zera, or seed, mentioned in verse 22. The word signifies both seed, as in grain, but also offspring, as in animals and even humans. Israel was to eat these animals before the Lord at the place where He chose for His name to dwell. And the reason given is exactly the same reason why Jacob made the promise...

^{23 (con't)} that you may learn to fear the LORD your God always.

l'maan tilmad l'yirah eth Yehovah elohekha kal ha'yamim – “to end purpose you may learn to fear Yehovah your God all the days.” Here, Moses says that they are to do this in order to learn to fear the Lord.

The word is lamad that was introduced in verse 4:1. It signifies “to goad.” The people are to be taught as if being prodded with a rod, year by year, to fear the Lord. It is the lesson Jacob learned at the beginning –

“Then Jacob awoke from his sleep and said, ‘Surely the LORD is in this place, and I did not know it.’ ¹⁷ And he was afraid and said, ‘How awesome is this place! This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven!’”

-Genesis 28:16, 17

Moses uses the same word that described Jacob’s reaction, yirah, or fear. His words are more literally translated, “And he feared, and he said, ‘What fearful place this.’” He then went on to say it was the house of God.

Moses is directing the people to go to the place where the Lord chose for His name to dwell, meaning the house of God, to eat the tithes with the end purpose of them being goaded into fearing the Lord – just as their forefather, of whose name they bore – feared before the Lord at the beth Elohim, or house of God – and at which place he vowed to give the tithe back to Him.

When Jacob made his vow, it was a vow that was to continue on into the subsequent generations as a mark of their acknowledgement of the care of the Lord for them.

Jacob’s promise of the tenth was an anticipatory picture of the coming Messiah. The number ten in Scripture signifies the perfection of Divine order. The tenth, or tithe represents the whole of what is due from man to God, it is a mark of His claim on the whole. In this, the tithes anticipate the Messiah who would mark His claim on the whole of His redeemed.

This is one of several reasons why the church is not required to tithe. It is because the type, tithing, is fulfilled in the Antitype, Messiah. Tithing was a shadow of the Substance to be found in Him. The fact that tithing was a part of the law is, in itself, a second reason why we no longer tithe. We are not under law, but under grace. The law is annulled in Christ.

If we can keep our theological boxes straight, we will be much sounder in our doctrine, and much less susceptible to being duped and deceived, and even demanded into doing something that was never intended for the New Testament church.

For now, and with that understood, Moses gives a provision of relief from what could otherwise be a very burdensome trip to the place where the name of the Lord dwelt...

²⁴ But if the journey is too long for you,

This is one main reason for having the provision of relief – distance. There is the fact that there was not a church on every corner. Rather, there was only one place of the dwelling of the name of the Lord in the entire land.

Israel is a bit larger in size, and quite a bit longer, than the state of New Jersey. And there were no planes, trains, or automobiles back then. Taking one's tithes such a long distance would be problematic at times. As Moses says...

²⁴ (con't) so that you are not able to carry the tithe,

This is the second main reason for the relief – abundance. The implication is that not only is the journey too long, but the amount of the tithe is simply too great, and it cannot be easily carried. If such is the case, Moses will provide relief. But before he does, he restates the two main precepts again...

²⁴ (con't) or if the place where the LORD your God chooses to put His name is too far from you,

The translation here is lacking. This second half of the verse is a form of parallelism provided by Moses. Young's translation gives the proper sense –

[a]'And when the way is too much for thee, [b]that thou art not able to carry it –
[a]when the place is too far off from thee which Jehovah thy God doth choose to put His name there, [b]when Jehovah thy God doth bless thee; -- YLT

In other words, the words, “But if the journey is too long for you,” are then reworded and repeated with the words, “if the place where the LORD your God chooses to put His name is too far from you.” After that, the words, “so that you are not able to carry the tithe,” are reworded and restated by saying...

²⁴ (con't) when the LORD your God has blessed you,

As you can see, the words, “the Lord your God,” are added into both of the repeated clauses. The trek which is too far is to the place of the Lord your God, and it is the Lord your God who has blessed you. The aim is to be with the Lord God, but the blessing of the Lord God could actually inhibit going to be with the Lord God! Such a conundrum is quite possible, and something must be done about it. And so, Moses provides the form of relief...

²⁵ then you shall exchange it for money, v'natathah ba'keseph – “and you shall give in the silver.” In other words, and simply stated, sell the tithe or replace the tithe with silver money of equal value that you have personally stored up. The idea is to take what is overly burdensome and turn it into something that would not be.

And more, there is the problem that even if the tithe could be carried, it may be that it is simply too much to eat as previously instructed. The tithe is holy, and it is to be consumed, but it would just not be possible to do so in the form it is in. Then it is to be converted into money, and they were to...

²⁵ take the money in your hand, v'tsarta ha'keseph b'yadekha – “And bind up the silver in your hand.” It shows intentional care and purpose. “This is holy money to be used for a sacred purpose. Bind it up in your hand.”

The words here are so close to those of Proverbs 7, and yet distinct enough from them, that the parallel and the divergence should probably be noted. In that passage, Solomon speaks of the adulterous woman who is looking for someone to snare. In her words, she says –

“Come, let’s drink our fill of love until morning;

Let’s delight ourselves with caresses.

¹⁹ For my husband is not at home;

He has gone on a long journey.

²⁰ He has taken a bag of money with him.

At the full moon he will come home.” Proverbs 7:18-20 (NASB)

The husband had a bag of money and was going on a long journey. The Hebrew wording is close enough in both passages to give us the impression that he may be going to do exactly what is prescribed here in Deuteronomy. If this is what he is doing, the divergence of the passage will follow in a moment. For now...

²⁵ (con’t) and go to the place which the LORD your God chooses.

Whether tithe of the seed of the field, or tithe of silver which was exchanged for the seed of the field, it was to be taken to where the tabernacle was located. If silver, then it was to be used for a very specific purpose...

²⁶ And you shall spend that money for whatever your heart desires:

v'nathatah ha'keseph b'kol asher taaveh naphshekha – “And you shall give the silver in all which desires your soul.” The word in this clause is avah. It means to incline towards or desire. The KJV quaintly translates this as “whatever thy soul lusteth after.”

The meaning is that the silver is to be used to buy anything that will make the person happy. As Adam Clarke says, “This one verse sufficiently shows that the Mosaic law made ample provision for the comfort and happiness of the people.”

It is a clear and obvious indication that the abuse of the doctrine of the mandating of tithing by New Testament churches is wholly inappropriate. Not only is tithing not a New Testament precept, the way it is handled by such churches completely destroys the intent and spirit of what was given to Israel.

Moses not only says that Israel can buy whatever they want with the tithe money, but he even gives some hearty recommendations for the people. He becomes the seller in a store full of good things for a moment, recommending some of the delights it offers...

²⁶ (con't) for oxen or sheep, ba'baqar u-ba'tson – “In the oxen and in the sheep.” The idea is “from the herd or from the flock.” The oxen and sheep are given to represent either category. Whatever meat they wanted, they were to pull out the bag of silver and they were to enjoy themselves. But what good is a meal without something to wash it down with? And so, Moses says...

²⁶ (con't) for wine or similar drink, u-ba'yayin u-ba-shekar – “and in the wine and in the blinko drink.” The word yayin signifies fermented (meaning alcohol) wine. The word shekar goes beyond wine, and it is inclusive of any strong intoxicating drink. You might think of bourbon or whiskey.

The odd thing about many preachers is that they love to reinsert precepts of the law when it is convenient, such as tithing. But then, in the very next sermon, they both deny and forbid precepts of the law, found in the exact same context – such as drinking.

It is a very inept way of handling Scripture and it results in poorly educated believers who are filled with all kinds of legalistic ideas that only harm the faith of others while fomenting arrogant and judgmental attitudes. Let us take the word of God in context, and let us accept what it says without inserting our own presuppositions into it.

Moses, now having recommended several tasty delights in two distinct categories, says...

²⁶ (con't) for whatever your heart desires;

u-b'kol asher tishalekha napshekha – “and in whatever inquires after your soul.” It is a completely different word than the first clause, shaal. It means to inquire or ask for. In essence, one might paraphrase this as, “Whatever your soul is curious about,” or maybe, “Whatever your soul asks for.” And when the desires are met with the exchange of the silver...

²⁶ (con't) you shall eat there before the LORD your God, v'akalta sham liphne Yehovah elohekha – “and you shall eat there to face Yehovah your God.” In other words, this is how one remembers to fear the Lord. The God who gave the abundance is the same God who can withhold it. In eating before the Lord, there is to be the sense of gratitude and humility, not arrogant boasting. In such a state, Moses says...

²⁶ (con't) and you shall rejoice,

The word is samakh. It signifies “to brighten up,” and thus to be happy, even gleesome. The tithe was first and foremost to be a joyful thing. This is exactly what Jacob anticipated, and it is thus what Moses determined for the people to carry on with. And it wasn't just for the worker. As Moses says...

²⁶ (con't) you and your household.

It is supposition, but if the passage in Proverbs 7 is referring to a man going to enjoy his tithes, it would explain why he had the kind of wife presented there. A man who loved his wife would have complied with these words and would have brought her along too.

But in his lack of care for her, it demonstrates that he didn't care about the precept of the law, he didn't care about her, and he didn't care about who he had married in the first place because he didn't bother to determine her character – that she would be the kind of woman who would do exactly what she was doing while he was neglecting her.

Rather than such an attitude, the one bringing his tithes before the Lord was to not only rejoice, but he was to do it with all who were under his authority – allowing them to also be blessed in the Lord while they were blessing the Lord.

*Give that tithe and the Lord will bless you Give that tithe and He will open up the windows of heaven
Send me your money and this He will do
I promise you abundance... times seven*

*Don't you realize that a tithe you must give?
That's what the word says, trust me on this
If you want abundantly to live
You will send it in, and not a percent shall you miss*

*How can you receive God's grace if you don't give?
You must not understand what grace means at all
My goodness! Is it by grace that you think you live?
If that's what you think, you're headed for a fall*

*Give until it hurts and then give a little more
This is what you must do, even if you are poor*

II. That the Lord Your God May Bless You (verses 27-29)

In one of the sermons from Deuteronomy 12, I cited the scholar Keil and talked about the supposed “second tithe” of Israel. We will go over that again now that we are in Chapter 14, repeating a significant portion of what I said there. The scholar Keil says –

“In the laws contained in the earlier books, nothing is said about the appropriation of any portion of the tithes to sacrificial meals. Yet in Deuteronomy this is simply assumed as a customary thing, and not introduced as a new commandment, when the law is laid down..., that they were not to eat the tithe of corn, new wine, and oil within their gates (in the towns of the land), any more than the first-born of oxen and sheep, but only at the place of the sanctuary chosen by the Lord; and that if the distance was too great for the whole to be transported thither, they were to sell the tithes and firstlings at home, and then purchase at the sanctuary whatever might be required for the sacrificial meals.

From these instructions it is very apparent that sacrificial meals were associated with the delivery of the tithes and firstlings to the Lord, to which a tenth part of the corn, must, and oil was applied, as well as the flesh of the first-born of edible cattle.” Keil 12:7

The Bible does not agree with this. It says, quite clearly, that the people were to eat their tithes. Everything that he is referring to, along with countless other scholars, preachers, and teachers, is a complete twisting or manipulation of what the text clearly says.

After his words there, Keil then went on to speak of what he just inserted into Scripture as referring to the “second tithe,” of which the Law says nothing. And then, instead of citing Scripture to justify his “second tithe,” he punted, referring rather to an apocryphal book, Tobit, in order to justify a “second tithe.”

As we saw, and as we will again review, what is recorded in Tobit doesn’t match – even closely – with what is stated in the Law of Moses. As Tobit 1:6-8 says –

6

But I alone used to go often to Jerusalem for the festivals, as was prescribed for all Israel by longstanding decree.* Bringing with me the first fruits of crops, the firstlings of the flock, the tithes of livestock, and the first shearings of sheep, I used to hasten to Jerusalem and present them to the priests, Aaron’s sons, at the altar. To the Levites ministering in Jerusalem I used to give the tithe of grain, wine, olive oil, pomegranates, figs, and other fruits. Six years in a row, I used to give a second tithe in money, which each year I would go to pay in Jerusalem.

7

8

The third-year tithe I gave to orphans, widows, and converts who had joined the Israelites. Every third year I would bring them this offering, and we ate it in keeping with the decree laid down in the Mosaic law concerning it, and according to the commands of Deborah, the mother of my father Tobiel; for my father had died and left me an orphan.

First, the very fact that Keil said that the practice of eating the tithes was “assumed as a customary thing,” demonstrates that what Moses says in Deuteronomy is referring not to a “second tithe,” but to the one and only tithe that was levied upon Israel.

This is what is known as “progressive revelation.” A precept is introduced, and then it is later explained and expanded upon. Moses now anticipates that expansion.

Secondly, Tobit's practice of tithing a second tithe is clearly his own voluntary act because the law says nothing about a six-year period. He then refers to the third-year tithe, which will be evaluated in just a minute from our verses today.

In his comments concerning how he handles the third-year tithe, he clearly diverts from what the Law of Moses says, demonstrating that the book of Tobit is both not in accord with Scripture (it is not Canon), and it is not to be used as either doctrine or for instruction of what the law says.

This is also true with the rabbinical writings found in the Talmud. To defer to them to justify a second tithe is as appropriate as it is to defer to them to demonstrate that Jesus is not the Messiah. It is very poor biblical scholarship. Scripture alone defines the tithes, and Scripture defines one tithe for Israel.

Thirdly, the eating of the tithes was stated in Deuteronomy 12:7 without any qualifiers at all, meaning that it was speaking of the one and only tithe that Israel made from year to year. The next words fully substantiate this...

²⁷ You shall not forsake the Levite who is within your gates, for he has no part nor inheritance with you.

If Israel had two tithes, Moses would not have said this. There are already provisions for the Levites recorded in Numbers 18, as we have already seen today. If a second tithe was speaking of what the people eat, then the first tithe would have already taken care of the Levites. Rather, Moses says this for an exacting and specific reason which is found in the next verse...

²⁸ "At the end of every third year miqseh shalosh shanim – end three years. This does not mean "after three years," but "the third of three years." It is a rotating three-year period as is explained in Deuteronomy 26.

The tithe is one-tenth each year. Moses has just told Israel what to do with that one-tenth. The people were to eat it. However, they were also instructed to take some of that tithe and give it to the Levites. No amount is stated. In fact, it is intentionally left out.

The implicit reason for leaving it out was provided in verse 23. It was because they were to fear the Lord their God. They sat there eating the abundance given them by the Lord, and He told them that in this time of rejoicing, they were to remember the Levite.

It is as much for the sake of caring for the Levite as it is a word of warning for the Israelite – “These people tend to you in your spiritual needs; you are to tend to them in your abundance.” It is the exact same precept that Paul refers to in Galatians 6 –

“Let him who is taught the word share in all good things with him who teaches.”
-Galatians 6:6

Paul doesn’t give an amount, he simply says “in all good things.” The precept is true with Israel toward the Levites. The law has already provided for them, now Moses is directing Israel to go beyond the law, but without stating any particular amount. And why is he doing this? It is because something different happens every third year with the annual tithe...

²⁸ (con’t) you shall bring out the tithe of your produce of that year and store it up within your gates.

It says kal maesar – “all tithe.” There is, again, no definite article. It is a portion of the tithe, being one-third of it. The tithe is ten percent per year. Of that, one-third of it – that of the third year – is to be handled differently. That part was defined in Numbers 18 using the exact same words as are used now, kal maesar, all tithe.

If “all tithe” meant what scholars claim, then the second tithe would belong to the Levites as well. Or what Moses is defining in this chapter would be a violation of the previous ordinance. Either way, by inserting a “second tithe” into Scripture a contradiction is the result.

Rather, this third-year tithe is the heave offering to the Lord that is then presented to the Levites. This is exactly why Moses just said in the previous verse to not forsake the Levite in the first two years of the tithe.

Israel was having one party after another as their crops, flocks, and herds were coming to seed. On the other hand, the Levites were toiling away as normal. The obvious thing to do is to invite them to participate in the first two years of blessing as well. Then, on the third year, the heave offering to the Levites was to be stored up in the gates. Moses then reminds them of why it was to be so...

²⁹ And the Levite, because he has no portion nor inheritance with you, and the stranger and the fatherless and the widow who are within your gates, may come and eat and be satisfied,

What is implied here is that the heave offering to the Lord, through the Levites, was to then be disbursed by the Levites not only among them, but among the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow. It is the very thing that would be expected of the ministry.

Just as the people were to tend to the ministers during the first two years, the ministers were to tend to the disadvantaged of the people with the abundance that they were provided during the third year.

How do we know this is correct? We simply go forward in Scripture to see more of the progressively revealed word of the Lord. First, to Deuteronomy 26 –

“When you have finished laying aside all the tithe of your increase in the third year—the year of tithing—and have given it to the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, so that they may eat within your gates and be filled, ¹³ then you shall say before the LORD your God: ‘I have removed the holy tithe from my house, and also have given them to the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, according to all Your commandments which You have commanded me; I have not transgressed Your commandments, nor have I forgotten them. ¹⁴ I have not eaten any of it when in mourning, nor have I removed any of it for an unclean use, nor given any of it for the dead. I have obeyed the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that You have commanded me. ¹⁵ Look down from Your holy habitation, from heaven, and bless Your people Israel and the land which You have given us, just as You swore to our fathers, “a land flowing with milk and honey.”’” Deuteronomy 26:12-15

Moses calls all of the tithe, ha’qodesh, or “the holy.” This includes the third year, but it also speaks of the first two years as verses 13 and 14 clearly indicate and just as Leviticus 27 states, where it says the tithe of the land and of the herd and flock is “holy to the Lord.”

With that understood, the tithe is mentioned in this particular context one more time, in a negative sense, in Amos 4:4 (LSV) –

“Enter Beth-El, and transgress,” “At Gilgal multiply transgression,” “And bring in your sacrifices every morning,” “Your tithes every third year.”

Depending on your translation, it may say “third day” instead of “third year,” but the context is “every third year.” The Lord was rebuking the people for doing the things of the law as a pretense of holiness while multiplying transgressions at the same time.

They were bringing their tithes every third year according to the law, but just a few verses earlier it noted that they oppressed the poor and crushed the needy. But the point is made quite clear, the third year is the year of tithing in the sense of giving away the tithe. The other two years, the tithe was also holy, but it was to be a reminder to the people to fear Him. It is with that attitude in mind that Moses completes the thought for the day...

29 (fin) that the LORD your God may bless you in all the work of your hand which you do.

The implication is that in doing what they were instructed to do, they would have within them the fear of the Lord. In this state, they would be blessed in the work of their hands. This was the hope and the anticipation for the people of Israel. But like all things that involve law, it just doesn't work that way.

The same is true now. When a preacher stands in the pulpit and preaches adherence to the law, he will certainly have a number of people who will line up in order to cross every t and dot every i. They are doing their best to work their way to heaven, and the preacher is there to spur them along.

But most of the people will lose heart in what is presented and either tithe while multiplying transgressions like those mentioned in Amos, or they will not tithe and be under the assumption that they are in violation of the law.

This is the sad and futile state of those who have simply failed to understand the context of what is being given, and who have also failed to see the fulfilled typology in Jesus Christ. If we are in Christ, then we are to live as those who are in Christ.

And the place to get that instruction is not from the Law of Moses. Rather, it is to come from the body of instruction that tells us we are in Christ in the first place – the New Testament epistles. I would hope that you would be sound in your theology and reject anyone who tries to put you back under the yoke of bondage.

Instead, you are to understand your freedom in Christ while not using that freedom to fulfill the lust of the flesh. Live for Christ, live in Christ, and walk in the Spirit granted to you through the finished work of Jesus Christ – to the glory of God.

Closing Verse: “So let each one give as he purposes in his heart, not grudgingly or of necessity; for God loves a cheerful giver. ⁸ And God is able to make all grace abound toward you, that you, always having all sufficiency in all things, may have an abundance for every good work.” 2 Corinthians 9:7, 8

After giving the sermon, I received some insightful thoughts from a friend, Chris Smith. Please enjoy his thoughts -

The sermon mentions, “The stranger the fatherless and the widow.” Christ was offered in the third year of his ministry, so I see a parallel to the 3rd year tithe. The stranger reflects the state of the gentiles (Ephesians 2:12). The orphan, those cut off from the Father. And the widow, those that need a kinsman-redeemer. I find the term “a third referenced as interesting in that Jesus is a third of the Godhead offered for the poor. The first two years they (Israel) consumed their portion or tithe for themselves, as Christ stated that He came for the lost children of Israel, but after that, the blessing was to go to everyone else who needed it. In essence, Jesus is our tithe! The abundance God gave us. Also, for those that were far away, they can change their blessing which had become a burden for money. In Hebrew, “silver.” Silver represents redemption and blood. Jesus said, “come to me you who are heavy laden and I will give you rest for my burden is light.” Judas was paid the price of a Female slave....you could Also say Christ paid for us with 30 pieces of silver and his blood to make our burden light taking on our sin debt so that we can be in the presence of God and rejoice in the Lord.

Next Week: Deuteronomy 15:1-11 Big relief for those who can't pay, you can bet... (The Remission of Debt) (47th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Tithes of Israel

“You shall truly tithe – these words carefully hear
All the increase of your grain that the field produces year by year

And you shall eat before the LORD your God
In the place where He chooses to make His name abide
The tithe of your grain and your new wine and your oil

Of the firstborn of your herds and your flocks
----- your bounty on every side

That you may learn to fear the LORD your God always Yes, fear Him for length of days

But if the journey is too long for you
So that you are not able to carry the tithe, such you cannot do
Or if the place where the LORD your God chooses to put His name
-----is too far from you
When the LORD your God has blessed you

Then you shall exchange it for money
Take the money in your hand
And go to the place which the LORD your God chooses
That fair and pleasant land

And you shall spend that money for whatever your heart desires:
For oxen or sheep, for wine or similar drink
For whatever your heart desires
You shall eat there before the LORD your God and in your mind
-----thus, shall you think...

And you shall rejoice, you and your household
You shall rejoice, just as you have now been told

You shall not forsake the Levite who is within your gates
-----such you shall not do
For he has no part nor inheritance with you

“At the end of every third year
You shall bring out, as this law states
The tithe of your produce of that year
And store it up within your gates

And the Levite, because he has no portion nor inheritance with you
And the stranger and the fatherless and the widow too
Who are within your gates, may come and eat and be satisfied
That the LORD your God may bless you in all the work of your -----hand which you do

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 15:1-11 (Ha'Shemitah - The Remission)

The passage today deals with a precept known as the shemitah. It is a precept that is a part of the Law of Moses. Before we get too far along, there are a few questions for me to see how theologically sound you are:

- 1) Who was the Law of Moses given to?
- 2) Does the Law of Moses pertain to anyone else?
- 3) Through Christ's work, what is the state of the Law of Moses?

Because the shemitah is a part of the law of Moses, because the law of Moses only applied to Israel under the law, and because the law of Moses is annulled in Christ – for any who come to Christ, the shemitah has nothing to do with anything in our world today – nothing. That is, except as it is typologically fulfilled for us when we come to Christ.

In other words, and as an example: The Day of Atonement was for Israel alone, for Israel under the law, and it is fulfilled in Christ. The only thing about the Day of Atonement relevant to us now is how it is fulfilled for us in Christ. He is our propitiation. He is our Atoning Sacrifice.

The shemitah is no different. I bring this up, because there is a gigantically popular teaching, by a Jewish guy, that says that those nations who fail to follow the precepts of the shemitah will be judged by God for not doing so.

In particular, he focuses heavily on America, claiming that our national calamities are based on a rotating cycle of the shemitah. This is not just extremely unsound theology, it is heresy. The problem with him is that he has no idea what he is talking about, on this, or on a host of other issues that he claims spiritual insights into.

And the next problem is that because he is Jewish, people immediately associate him with being a specialist on all things Bible-related. That is a logical fallacy known as a genetic fallacy.

A genetic fallacy occurs when a claim is accepted as true or false based on the origin of the claim. "My parents told me that God exists; therefore, God exists." In this case "Jonathan Cahn is a Jew; therefore, his biblical insights are valid."

It is a scary place to be for those who hold to this, it is unprofitable (except for the one who makes stuff up in this capacity), and it results in misinformed people who have no idea about what something – such as the shemita – is in the Bible for. I will give you a hint: Think Jesus.

Text Verse: “And Moses commanded them, saying: “At the end of every seven years, at the appointed time in the year of release, at the Feast of Tabernacles, ¹¹ when all Israel comes to appear before the LORD your God in the place which He chooses, you shall read this law before all Israel in their hearing.” Deuteronomy 31:10, 11

I chose this for our text verse because the shemita is mentioned only five times in Scripture. Four of those times are in the passage we are looking at today, and the final time is in the passage from Deuteronomy 31. That is all of the information that we have on it. Anything brought up, or claimed, apart from those verses has nothing to do with what Scripture teaches.

As we will see today, the year of release was at the same time as the seventh-year sabbath. If you remember from Leviticus 25, the Year of Jubilee occurred after seven of these cycles, in the fiftieth year. It’s important to understand that there is no biblical record of the year of Jubilee ever being observed, nor of which year it was started, even if it was ever observed.

Further, it could not have been observed during times of exile. And more, the shemita year does not correspond to the year of Jubilee. Rather, it precedes it. And more, there is no biblical record of the shemita being observed, nor is it known if anyone ever observed it while in exile. And more, if it was observed, nobody knows the first year that it was observed.

In other words, based on Scripture alone, nobody knows when any of these mandates were observed, or even if they were ever observed even once. This should clue people into the fact that the mandates given in the law are typical of Christ. That is the reason they are included. Nothing else about them is relevant to the biblical narrative. If you bought the book, you wasted your money.

Stick with the Bible and you will be far better off. Great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. A Release to the Lord (verses 1-6)

The transition from Chapter 14 to 15 is interesting. Chapter 14 ended with the thought of the third year of tithing which especially is intended for the care of the poor, even though the tithe is designated for Levi, it extends to the poor of the land. Now, Chapter 15 begins with a seven-year period, also pertaining to the care of the poor.

The number ten, as in the tithe, signifies the perfection of Divine order. The number three, as in the year of the tithe, signifies that which is solid, real, substantial, complete, and entire. The number seven, as in this year of release, is the number of spiritual perfection.

There is a harmonious working together of the various concepts in order to reveal how these things anticipate the work of Christ in redemptive history. The words of the law find their fulfillment in what He has accomplished. Understanding that, we begin...

¹“At the end of every seven years you shall grant a release of debts.

miqets sheva shanim taaseh shemitah – “From end seven years you shall make remission.” The meaning of “end” is not “after seven years,” but “the end of the seven-year cycle,” meaning the seventh year is what is being discussed.

This was seen already in Leviticus. It is not “seven and then,” but “six and then.” Each six-year period is followed by a special one-year time of remission. This is the same as the year of tithe of the previous chapter. It was not “three and then,” but “two and then.”

Here is introduced the word, shemitah, or “remission.” This is the first of five times it will be used, all in Deuteronomy, and with four of them in this chapter. It means, “a letting drop,” and thus a remitting. The word comes from shamat, signifying to let drop or even cast down. The precept here follows from Exodus 21:2 –

“If you buy a Hebrew servant, he shall serve six years; and in the seventh he shall go out free and pay nothing.” Exodus 21:2

However, and before continuing, the precept concerning Hebrew slaves being released in the seventh year is one that is debated over. Does this mean the year of remission now being looked at, or does it mean six years of service regardless of the year of release? That will be evaluated when we get to verse 12. The next reference is found in Exodus 23 –

“Six years you shall sow your land and gather in its produce, ¹¹ but the seventh year you shall let it rest and lie fallow, that the poor of your people may eat; and what they leave, the beasts of the field may eat. In like manner you shall do with your vineyard and your olive grove.” Exodus 23:10, 11

This allowance is the seventh year Sabbath of the land. It is not the same provision as the shemittah, but it surely is the same seven-year period. One is a Sabbath of the land, the other is a release from debts. The Sabbath of the land is then further detailed in Leviticus 25 –

“When you come into the land which I give you, then the land shall keep a sabbath to the LORD. ³ Six years you shall sow your field, and six years you shall prune your vineyard, and gather its fruit; ⁴ but in the seventh year there shall be a sabbath of solemn rest for the land, a sabbath to the LORD. You shall neither sow your field nor prune your vineyard. ⁵ What grows of its own accord of your harvest you shall not reap, nor gather the grapes of your untended vine, for it is a year of rest for the land. ⁶ And the sabbath produce of the land shall be food for you: for you, your male and female servants, your hired man, and the stranger who dwells with you, ⁷ for your livestock and the beasts that are in your land—all its produce shall be for food.” Leviticus 25:2-7

To understand all the details, it would be good to go back and review those particular sermons. Moses is now giving a new stipulation to be performed on this sacred seventh year.

One could look at this as an expansion of what has been thus far presented. A remission, or letting go, of all debts is to be made. As Moses next says...

² And this is the form of the release:

v'zeh debar ha'shemittah – “And this word the remission.” In other words, “What will now be stated is the principle set forth for the remission.” And that word is...

^{2 (con't)} Every creditor who has lent anything to his neighbor shall release it; shamot kal baal masheh yadow asher yasheh b'reehu – “shall let drop every master of the loan of his hand who has lent in his neighbor.” Here is a word found only this once in Scripture, masheh. It means a loan. It is from the verb nashah, also found in this verse, which means to lend.

The picture is made vibrant with the words. The owner of the loan is to open his hand and simply let it fall to the ground. From there, Moses says...

² (con't) he shall not require it of his neighbor or his brother, lo yigos eth reehu v'eth akhiv – “no exacting of his neighbor and of his brother.” The word nagas is used. It is from a root signifying to drive an animal. It was used of the harsh taskmasters over the people while in Egypt. It gives the sense of coming hard after the one with the debt.

This was not to be done to neighbor or brother, but the meaning of this has to be drawn from the surrounding context. A person may have a non-Hebrew neighbor. For him, this did not apply. Thus, “neighbor” is further defined as “brother.” In other words, this is referring to dealings solely between the Hebrew people.

² (con't) because it is called the LORD's release.

ki qara shemita l'Yehovah – “for called, ‘remission to Yehovah.’” In other words, one could paraphrase this as, “because proclamation has been made of the Lord's release” (Barnes). This is not a release in a general sense, but it is a release to the Lord.” This year of remission is, like the Sabbath year, to honor the Lord.

It was to be an acknowledgment of their position before the Lord, and they were to deal with their neighbor as the Lord would deal with them. In the end, they are the Lord's people, they were stewards of His land, and they were the recipients of His kindness.

To honor Him because of these things, they were to thus act accordingly with their fellow Hebrews. This continues to be seen in the next words...

³ Of a foreigner you may require it;

Here it speaks of the nokri, or stranger. It signifies a foreigner or alien, thus someone outside of the covenant people. This is not a mark of superiority over them, nor is it a mark of severity of treatment towards them.

The reason for this is because they were not bound to the same laws as Israel. While Israel was obligated to not sow, plow, or prune during the Sabbath year, the strangers were not under that obligation. Hence, they would have the usual income as during any other year. Thus, they were expected to pay their debts. Such was not the case with Israel. As this was so....

³ (con't) but you shall give up your claim to what is owed by your brother, v'asher yihyeh lekha eth akhikha tashmet yadekha – “and which become to you your brother you shall let drop your hand.” The greatest debate concerning this remission is whether it applies only during the seventh year, or if it is permanent. If during the seventh year, it means that the debt is let go of, or released, during that year, but it can then be picked up again in the next year.

This is the view that most scholars take. Keil uses Exodus 23:11 to justify this view. There, using the same word, it says –

“Six years you shall sow your land and gather in its produce, ¹¹ but the seventh year you shall let it rest and lie fallow, that the poor of your people may eat; and what they leave, the beasts of the field may eat. In like manner you shall do with your vineyard and your olive grove.” Exodus 23:11

His analysis says, “it must be interpreted in the same manner here as there. And as it is not used there to denote the entire renunciation of a field or possession, so here it cannot mean the entire renunciation of what had been lent, but simply leaving it, i.e., not pressing for it during the seventh year.”

One does not logically follow after the other. How someone can see a precept that instructs someone to not plow a field for a year equate directly to canceling a debt for only one year is hard to follow. The point of releasing a debt is to restore a person to a debt-free, productive state. The point of not plowing one’s field was for the field to renourish itself and to provide for the poor.

It goes against everything that the Lord does for His people to say that the remission of the debt is only for a temporary period. Even Jesus spoke of this precept in Luke 7 –

“There was a certain creditor who had two debtors. One owed five hundred denarii, and the other fifty. ⁴² And when they had nothing with which to repay, he freely forgave them both. Tell Me, therefore, which of them will love him more?” Luke 7:41, 42

Jesus went on to equate the woman weeping at his feet with the one who knew she owed a great debt. When He went on to say to the woman in verse 48, “Your sins are forgiven,” He didn’t mean they were forgiven, but would be remembered again someday. He meant that they were forgiven forever.

⁴ except when there may be no poor among you;

ephes ki lo yihyeh b’kha evyon – “End: for no may become in you poor.” The words are widely translated, many simply passing over the word ephes, or end. It signifies a ceasing, an end, an uttermost part, and so on. What is surely being conveyed is not “except” as the NKJV says. Verse 11 clearly and unambiguously says there will always be poor among the people.

What is being conveyed is, “For the end purpose of there being no poor among you.” This was to be a remedy to alleviate the poor from the land. As more poor people cropped up in the next six years, they were to then be given the same relief.

The remission of this debt for those who had come into poverty was an act of the Lord’s mercy. It is His law, and it is His provision within the law. To not obey the precept then reflected a disobedience to His command as well as a lack of faith in the Lord. The lack of faith is because of what Moses next says...

^{4 (con’t)} for the LORD will greatly bless you in the land

It is a statement of surety: ki barekh yebarekha Yehovah ba’arets – “For blessing will bless you Yehovah in the land.” It is a precept that is found several times in the Proverbs, such as –

“He who has pity on the poor lends to the LORD,
And He will pay back what he has given.” Proverbs 19:17

What seems contradictory, but which is taken almost as an axiom in Scripture, is that the person who gives generously generally receives increase because of what he has given. In the case of Israel, the Lord – through Moses – indicates that in being obedient to the precept, He will bless them abundantly in the land...

^{4 (con’t)} which the LORD your God is giving you to possess as an inheritance—

They are the often-repeated words of Deuteronomy, something which forms its own emphasis. The Lord is the Giver of the land. Israel is the recipient of the land. As this is so, then Israel has a responsibility to act in accord with the precepts of law. In failing to pay heed, they can just as easily be dispossessed from what they possess. As Moses next conveys to them...

⁵ only if you carefully obey the voice of the LORD your God, raq im shamo'a tishma b'qol Yehovah elohekha – “ONLY if hearing you will hear the voice of Yehovah your God.” The word raq is used in a limiting sense. This is how things are, but only if certain conditions are met. If they are not, then the promise of blessing cannot be anticipated, nor will it be forthcoming.

Also, the words here once again reveal the doctrine of divine inspiration. Moses is the one speaking, and yet he explicitly states that what he is saying is the voice of Yehovah. That continues to be seen in his next words...

^{5 (con't)} to observe with care all these commandments which I command you today.

The translation is incorrect. It says lishmor laasot eth kal ha'mitsvah – “to watch to do all the commandment.” It is singular, not plural. It is one commandment even if it is made up of various precepts, statutes, and judgments. To neglect one part of the whole is to fail to observe the commandment.

Moses just spoke of hearing, meaning hearkening to, the Lord's voice. He now says that His voice is conveyed in “all the commandment which I command you.”

Moses is carefully relaying to Israel that what he is speaking out is, in fact, the voice of the Lord. What he says is to be considered as conveyed by Yehovah himself. Therefore, if the people are obedient to the commandment, they can expect the blessing that comes with the commandment. As he next says...

⁶ For the LORD your God will bless you just as He promised you;

The Hebrew is in the perfect form and is thus stronger: “For the Lord your God has blessed you.” The meaning is that His favor is on them, and it will continue on them if they are careful to keep the commandment. For this reason, there is no excuse to oppress one another.

They are blessed and that will continue, so why should dropping a loan in the seventh year even be considered an inconvenience? They were given grace, and they needed to be gracious and merciful as well. And because of the Lord's blessing...

⁶(con't) you shall lend to many nations, but you shall not borrow;

v'haavata goyim rabim v'atah lo taavot – “and you shall lend nations many, and you no shall borrow.” Here is a new and rather rare verb, avat. It comes from the noun avot which is an article that is pledged. Thus, it can mean to lend or to borrow depending on the form of the verb. Both meanings are used in this one clause.

This verb, avat, is closely related to the word eved, translated as “servant.” The connection is easily seen in the proverb –

“The rich rules over the poor,
And the borrower is servant to the lender.” Proverbs 22:7

In lending to the nations, they would become debtor nations of whom Israel would then rule...

⁶(con't) you shall reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over you.

This was certainly fulfilled during the reign of David and then Solomon, but it is also true that other nations reigned over Israel from the time of the Judges and on occasionally. Thus, it shows that Israel was not obedient to the commandment. If they were, such would not have been the case.

Nehemiah even explicitly states this during his lengthy prayer of confession to the Lord while using the same word that Moses now uses. Thus, admitting that they had failed to do as he instructed –

“Here we are, servants today!
And the land that You gave to our fathers,
To eat its fruit and its bounty,
Here we are, servants in it!
³⁷ And it yields much increase to the kings
You have set over us,
Because of our sins;
Also they have dominion over our bodies and our cattle

At their pleasure;
And we are in great distress.” Nehemiah 9:36, 37

*Obey the voice of the Lord your God
Observe that which He has spoken to you
Be careful to observe in this life you trod
This is what I am instructing you*

*You are to release all debts in the seventh year
You shall do this because I have so instructed you
Do not worry about the loss; you shall not fear
Just be obedient; to the precept remain true*

*And I will bless you with a blessing in all that you do Things will turn out fine, if you hearken to my word
Good things shall come upon you
If you just carefully observe all you have heard*

II. You Shall Open Your Hand Wide (verses 7-11)

Of the following 5 verses, there is a decidedly chiasmic structure –

Deuteronomy 15:7-11 The Seventh Year, the Year of Release
Taking care of the needy (1/25/21)

- a. you shall not harden your heart nor shut your hand from your poor brother
- b. but you shall open your hand wide
- c. lend him sufficient for his need, whatever he needs
- d. Beware lest there be a wicked thought in your heart
- x. The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand
- d. and your eye be evil against your poor brother and you give him nothing
- c. You shall surely give to him
- b. You shall open your hand wide
- a. to your brother, to your poor and your needy, in your land

⁷ “If there is among you a poor man of your brethren, ki yihyeh b'kha evyon me'akhad akhekha – “For become in you poor from one your brothers.” The Hebrew reads as it did in verse 4, b'kha – “in you.” Moses has been consistently speaking in the singular.

At times, such as now, it is surely speaking of the nation, “in you, Israel. At times, he is probably referring to each individual. You, Israelite, are to do this. The entire passage is being kept very personal. Here, when he speaks of a person in Israel, he says that person is “in you.” One of the people within the body becomes needy. Moses then further defines him saying...

^{7 (con't)} within any of the gates in your land which the LORD your God is giving you,

Being within the gates signifies closeness. It would also generally signify not just a Hebrew brother, but a person probably within the same tribe of Israel. But regardless of that, Moses again notes that it is in the land given to them by the Lord.

They did nothing to merit what they possessed, and yet they possessed the land. Further, they lived within the gate of the land, implying security. And yet, there is a brother who is not secure. He is, rather, in need. If so...

^{7 (con't)} you shall not harden your heart nor shut your hand from your poor brother,

To harden the heart is to be equated with searing one's conscience. The heart is the seat of reasoning and understanding. And yet, one can purposefully say, “I see no reason to help this person. He got himself into his pickle and so he can get himself out.” In this, he will then shut his hand.

It is a new word, qaphats, translated as “shut.” It comes from a primitive root meaning to draw together. One can think of walking by the poor guy, thinking his evil thoughts, and then clenching his hand so that no chance of money being passed on to him could occur. And yet, this person is in a land that was given to him, and he is living securely within the gates of a city of the land. Thus...

⁸ but you shall open your hand wide to him ki phatoakh tiphtakh eth yadekha lo – “for opening you shall open your hand to him.” Notice the contrast: Shutting hand, bad. Widely opening, good. The sense is just the opposite of the last thought. The miserly person will literally clench his fist as he encounters poverty Pete, but the people are to instead not just open the hand, but to open it generously.

Obviously, the hand is being used in place of what the hand possesses. Therefore, a wide-open hand signifies gracious and abundant giving. And more...

8 (con't) and willingly lend him sufficient for his need,

Moses uses the same word, avat, that was introduced in verse 6, and it is repeated for emphasis: v'haavet taavitenu dei makhsoro – “and lending, you shall lend sufficient his need.” In other words, this stress is said in contrast to the hardened heart. Thus, the paraphrase of “willingly” is well stated.

Also, there is another new word here, makhsor. It signifies a lack or a need. It is the noun form of the more common verb found in the next clause...

8 (con't) whatever he needs.

asher yekhsar lo – “whatever needs to him.” This is added to ensure that the idea of the stresses in the previous two clauses are perfectly understood. If he needs five dollars, you are to open your hand. If he needs five thousand dollars, you are to open your hand. He has a need. If you can meet the need, you are to do so. And this is especially to be considered at all times, excepting none...

9 Beware lest there be a wicked thought in your heart,

The Hebrew is very forceful: hishamer lekha pen yihyeh davar im l'vavekha veliyaal – “Watch to you! Lest become word in to your heart – worthless.”

The person knows that he is supposed to help out his fellow Hebrew. But then he suddenly realizes that if he does, he will lose his money in doing so. It is a worthless thought set in contrast to the high value of what this poor person needs. That thought is...

9 (con't) saying, 'The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand,' qarevah shenat ha'sheva ha'shemitah – “Is near year the seventh, the remission.” In other words, the person has to pay back any loans during the first six years, but in the seventh year, the loan is to be forgiven. But then he thinks, “Wait! This is the third month of the sixth year.” In less than a year, I will have to let the loan drop.”

It is a worthless thought to the Lord, and it is not to be considered. It is the Lord’s land, this guy belongs to His people, the law was given by Him, and there can be no excuse for withholding what he is supposed to willingly provide.

These words surely indicate that the remission of the debts is not a temporary, one year, remission to be taken up again after the shemittah. Rather, the year of remission means the debt is to be forgiven – wholly and entirely – forever. Otherwise, the importance of these words would be wholly without merit. The remission was to be forever. Thus, the wrong attitude creeps in...

^{9 (con’t)} and your eye be evil against your poor brother and you give him nothing,

Here it says, “and your eye be evil b’akhikha, or in your brother.” Again, the words of Moses are close and personal throughout the entire passage. Whether speaking of Israel in the singular, or speaking to the individual of Israel, the words demonstrate evident closeness in the matter at hand.

The evil eye is an eye of wickedness. It is uncaring, greedy, and so on. Jesus uses the term in the New Testament, first in a parable –

“Is it not lawful for me to do what I wish with my own things? Or is your eye evil because I am good?” ¹⁶ So the last will be first, and the first last. For many are called, but few chosen.” Matthew 20:15, 16

And again, in general discourse He says –

“For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, ²² thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lewdness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness. ²³ All these evil things come from within and defile a man.” Mark 7:21-23

If someone is to be this way, it will not go unnoticed...

^{9 (con’t)} and he cry out to the LORD against you, and it become sin among you.

Again, it is close and personal, “and become in you sin.” The shemita is “to Yehovah.” Thus, in neglecting the need of the needy, it is an attack against the precept of the Lord. And the precept of the Lord is to be considered as a representation of the character and moral nature of the Lord.

To treat this matter as such is to trample on the name of the Lord who designated the shemita in the first place. In such a situation, the imputation of sin is a given. To avoid such a thing...

¹⁰ You shall surely give to him,

The Hebrew is again emphatic, “Giving you shall give to him.” Despite the coming year of remission, there should be no consideration at all of that fact. Rather...

¹⁰ (con’t) and your heart should not be grieved when you give to him,

This is set in contrast to the words, “lest there be a wicked thought in your heart.” Instead of entertaining a worthless thought, there should be no evil in the heart, but rather a sense of joy. This is because it is in accord with the law, it is right towards a fellow Israelite, and it is pleasing in the sight of the Lord who gave the command in the first place. As Moses says...

¹⁰ (con’t) because for this thing the LORD your God will bless you

The word translated as “because” is galal. It is a noun coming from the verb galal which means “to roll.” In other words, in doing right, blessing will roll back upon the right-doer. And that will be...

¹⁰ (con’t) in all your works and in all to which you put your hand.

The words translated as “put your hand” signify an outstretching of the hand. This takes the reader right back to verses 7 and 8 where Moses said to not shut the hand, but to open it wide. In the act of the unclenched hand, blessing will come back upon the all works of that person’s outstretched hand.

¹¹ For the poor will never cease from the land;

The point of opening the hand wide is to alleviate the plight of the poor who arise in the land. Life is time and chance according to Solomon. In this, circumstances change, and difficult conditions arise for even the most industrious or talented soul. The Lord doesn't interfere in these things.

He allows people to make decisions and some of them will be poorly made. This is why the poor will never cease from the land. The shemitah was given to alleviate this and to restore such brothers through the remission of debt. In this, the poor will be restored. It is the Lord's land, they are His people, and these are His precepts. And so, Moses says...

11 (fin) therefore I command you, saying, 'You shall open your hand wide to your brother, to your poor and your needy, in your land.'

Moses repeats his words from verse 8, "opening you shall open," thus stressing the importance of the matter. The hand is to be extended and what comes to it is to be given away without consideration of the year of remission.

But Moses extends the thought now to close out the passage by adding in another word to describe his plight, ani. It signifies one who is humbled, lowly, or afflicted.

The idea for adding this in is surely to contrast the blessing that lies ahead for tending to his need. He is humbled; you will be blessed. He is lowly; you will be exalted. He is needy; you will be filled.

*The shemitah has come and I must let go of what you owe
And I know that it is the right thing to do
It would be great if I got it all back, but even so
The Lord has instructed that I provide remission to you*

*And who can argue with that? It is a small thing to do
When everything came from Him in the first place
And all along, He has been faithful and true
From Him has come goodness as a smile from His face*

*I know that from Him has come so much more Than anything that I could ever have returned from you
He has given more than I could ever ask for Certainly, this is a small thing he asks me to do*

III. The Shemitah. Fulfilled in Christ.

In Luke 6, Jesus said –

“And if you lend to those from whom you hope to receive back, what credit is that to you? For even sinners lend to sinners to receive as much back. ³⁵ But love your enemies, do good, and lend, hoping for nothing in return; and your reward will be great, and you will be sons of the Most High. For He is kind to the unthankful and evil. ³⁶ Therefore be merciful, just as your Father also is merciful.” Luke 6:34-36

The shemitah anticipates the state of all people who are the Lord’s. Through sin, we have become poor before God. In our poverty, we have a debt we cannot pay. The shemitah of Israel was given to anticipate this. It is a correction of our impoverished and needy state.

Jesus saw us in our poverty, and He has given to us freely, asking nothing in return. He extended His hand and paid the debt that we could not pay. And He brought us back to a right standing before God.

The word shemitah signifies a letting drop. One opens his hand and lets go of what it holds. Thus, it is a remission. In the New Testament, the noun translated as remission is aphesis. It is derived from the verb aphiémi, that carries essentially the same meaning, to let go. Thus, aphesis is a letting go, and thus forgiveness.

In Hebrews 9:22, the author tells us, “And according to the law almost all things are purified with blood, and without shedding of blood there is no remission.” The Lord, through Moses, told the people of Israel to “let go” of the paltry money they held in their hands in order to restore their fellow brother to a right standing, free from the impoverished state that he could not correct.

In Christ, the Lord let go of the most precious thing, His life, in order to restore us to a right standing before God, free from the impoverished state we were in and that we could not correct.

And the Lord, through Moses, told the people of Israel not to even take into consideration the wicked thought of the heart that would say, “The seventh year, the year of remission, is at hand.” The nearer the day of release, the more likely there would be loss, and the higher the loss was sure to be.

And the Lord, through Christ, was willing to provide us remission even up to the last moment of our existence, where not even a single work could be worked back in some attempt to repay the infinite debt that we owed. This is the lesson of the first recorded death after that of the Lord Himself –

“Then one of the criminals who were hanged blasphemed Him, saying, ‘If You are the Christ, save Yourself and us.’

⁴⁰ But the other, answering, rebuked him, saying, ‘Do you not even fear God, seeing you are under the same condemnation? ⁴¹ And we indeed justly, for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this Man has done nothing wrong.’ ⁴² Then he said to Jesus, ‘Lord, remember me when You come into Your kingdom.’

⁴³ And Jesus said to him, ‘Assuredly, I say to you, today you will be with Me in Paradise.’” Luke 23:39-43

The time of shemitah was coming, the criminal had no way of paying the debt he owed, he implored his Brother Israelite, and the letting go, the remission, was granted. To see the end of the account, but which is not the end of the story, one has to continue on to the Gospel of John –

“Therefore, because it was the Preparation Day, that the bodies should not remain on the cross on the Sabbath (for that Sabbath was a high day), the Jews asked Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. ³² Then the soldiers came and broke the legs of the first and of the other who was crucified with Him.” John 19:31, 32

As far as recorded history goes, these are the first two people who died after the death of the Lord. And what a difference between the two.

For the one, God was his Creditor, and Christ is the remission of his debt because he identified with Him. Though a debtor with a debt he could not pay, the Lord – through His shed blood – became the means of God’s letting go. And that, even though the time of remission was – literally – moments away.

God got nothing in repayment. Not a single tract handed out, not a single person to lead into the kingdom, not a single Sunday morning saying, “It’s the Lord’s Day again. Thank you, JESUS, for having saved me.” Nothing was repaid, and yet God, through Christ extended His hand out to him and forgave the debt.

The other criminal with Jesus did not identify with Him, and his debt to God remained unpaid. For him, there is no remission, no letting go, no shemitah.

I once watched a History Channel program on what it means to be saved. During the program, a Baptist minister was interviewed. He openly and boastfully proclaimed that he did not accept the premise that someone who had lived a bad life, right up until the end, could be saved.

He said, "There is no deathbed forgiveness." That person neither understood the premise of the shemita, nor does he understand how it points to Christ – meaning, he does not understand the meaning of the word "grace."

I find it probable that such a lifelong sinner on the deathbed with a heart that has called out to God through Christ is more likely to be saved than that ridiculous minister who has spent his life working for what he cannot earn and trying to pay a debt that he cannot pay.

The shemita was given to end the cycle of human debt and poverty that we find ourselves trapped in. But it is only open to those who are the Lord's. The provision was not granted to the foreigner. But God in Christ took care of that, calling all people near through the blood of Christ, if they will simply respond and identify with Him. In doing so, we are accepted, and in Him, the shemita, the letting go, the remission, is given.

The premise in this was that there would be no poor among the Lord's people, and indeed, He not only brought that about, but He made us rich in Christ in the process. Paul says –

"For you know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that you through His poverty might become rich."
-2 Corinthians 8:9

Imagine someone in Israel walking around finding every single person that needed help and giving to them all. In doing so, he would bring himself to a state of poverty. Who would do that? God in Christ would. And God in Christ did.

He offers to do so for you as well. Today is the day. Your time for needing remission is at hand, and the Lord already knows when you are going to die. It may be today, or it may be many long years from now. But He has graciously offered to help you out, even if you will never pay back a penny. He is a great God, a wonderful Lord, and a marvelous Savior. He is JESUS.

Closing Verse: "...in whom we have the redemption through his blood, the remission of the trespasses, according to the riches of His grace." Ephesians 1:7 (YLT)

After giving the sermon, I received some insightful thoughts from a friend, Chris Smith. Please enjoy his thoughts -

The sermon mentions, "The stranger the fatherless and the widow." Christ was offered in the third year of his ministry, so I see a parallel to the 3rd year tithe. The stranger reflects the state of the gentiles (Ephesians 2:12). The orphan, those cut off from the Father. And the widow, those that need a kinsman-redeemer. I find the term "a third" referenced as interesting in that Jesus is a third of the Godhead offered for the poor. The first two years they (Israel) consumed their portion or tithe for themselves, as Christ stated that He came for the lost children of Israel, but after that, the blessing was to go to everyone else who needed it. In essence, Jesus is our tithe! The abundance God gave us. Also, for those that were far away, they can change their blessing which had become a burden for money. In Hebrew, "silver." Silver represents redemption and blood. Jesus said, "come to me you who are heavy laden and I will give you rest for my burden is light." Judas was paid the price of a Female slave....you could Also say Christ paid for us with 30 pieces of silver and his blood to make our burden light taking on our sin debt so that we can be in the presence of God and rejoice in the Lord.

Next Week: Isaiah 26:19 What Power does the Resurrection Give?... (Your Dead Shall Live) (Resurrection Day Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Ha'Shemitah - The Remission

"At the end of every seven years you shall grant a release of debts
And this is the form of the release:
Every creditor who has lent anything to his neighbor
Shall release it; the obligation shall cease

He shall not require it of his neighbor or his brother
Because it is called the LORD's release, this name and not another
Of a foreigner you may require it

But you shall give up your claim to what is owed by your brother

Except when there may be no poor among you
For the LORD will greatly bless you in the land
Which the LORD your God is giving you
To possess as an inheritance, from His open hand

Only if you carefully obey the voice of the LORD your God
Pay heed, please, to what I say
To observe with care all these commandments
Which I command you today

For the LORD your God will bless you just as He promised you
You shall lend to many nations, but you shall not borrow
You shall reign over many nations
But they shall not reign over you – not today, and not tomorrow

“If there is among you a poor man of your brethren
Within any of the gates in your land which the LORD your God
-----is giving you
You shall not harden your heart
Nor shut your hand from your poor brother, such you shall not do

But you shall open your hand wide to him
-----such shall be your deeds
And willingly lend him sufficient for his need, whatever he needs

Beware lest there be a wicked thought in your heart, saying
‘The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand
And your eye be evil against your poor brother
And you give him nothing; such wickedness you have planned

And he cry out to the LORD against you
And it become sin among you
You shall surely give to him
And your heart should not be grieved when you give to him
-----as you are instructed to do

Because for this thing the LORD your God will bless you

In all your works and in all to which you put your hand
This shall certainly be the case
For the poor will never cease from the land

Therefore I command you, saying
'You shall open your hand wide to your brother
To your poor and your needy, in your land
Be sure to not simply pass it on to another

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 15:12-23 (The Lord Your God Redeemed You)

The verses today are broken into two separate concepts. The first is that of the Hebrew slave, which is followed by the law of the firstborn of the flock and herd.

As we saw from an example in the last passage (the Shemitah), it is fashionable to take portions of the Law of Moses and try to inject them into the modern world, as if God is still working out His precepts under the law in our lives today.

If this were so, there ostensibly should be such books dealing with the same things from all of the other passages as well. But curiously, nobody is writing books like that about Hebrew slaves or the disposition of the firstborn animals.

The reason for this is that these things do not find their substance in the world today. Rather, the reality of them is found solely in Jesus Christ and in our relationship to Him. The world at large has nothing to do with the Law of Moses. Our only connection to it at all is in our relationship to Him.

It is man's natural desire to place himself into the redemptive narrative in relation to his current time and place. Since Christ ascended, people have done this. They have inserted the Roman Empire into it, they have inserted England or America into it. And so on.

And one would be hard-pressed to find a single generation of scholars that did not write as if the book of Revelation or the coming of Christ was dealing with their specific timeframe. It is problematic but it is our human nature to want it to be so.

Instead, He has given us the overall picture of what is coming. However, He has reserved most of the details for Himself. Our futile attempts at filling in the blanks are counterproductive at best.

Text Verse: “And He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or seasons which the Father has put in His own authority. ⁸ But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be witnesses to Me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth.’” Acts 1:7, 8

It might seem like an odd text verse for a sermon from Deuteronomy, but it is used here to remind us that we have a job to do. That job will end when the Lord returns for us. In the meantime, we are to work on the conversion of others, make disciples, and be witnesses to what we know.

And the fact is that the more we know about the Law of Moses, the more we will understand God's workings in redemptive history and how it all points to the Person of Jesus Christ. That is absolutely certain. In the passage today are all kinds of things that will increase our knowledge, firm up our doctrine, and help us to better understand what God has done.

For example, it is often argued whether salvation is eternal or not. Verses are used, or misused, to justify one stand or another, but we have already seen – numerous times and right out of the law itself – which is correct. We will see that again today.

God provides typology so that we can be more assured in our doctrine because of what that typology presents. The two will always work harmoniously together. Let us be sure of this and let us be grounded in our faith.

Great things, such as the doctrine of eternal salvation are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. A Servant Forever (verses 12-18)

¹² "If your brother, a Hebrew man, or a Hebrew woman,

This law follows after what was given in Exodus 21:1-11. Due to its being placed immediately after the giving of the Ten Commandments and the law of the Earthen Altar, it is obviously an important point.

There are some differences between what is stated here and what was given in Exodus 21, especially the more detailed words concerning the rights of the female in that previous passage. Here in Deuteronomy, it uses the feminine form of the word "Hebrew," ha'ivriyah. This is found only here and in Jeremiah 34:9.

In Exodus, there are rights and protections for the female that was brought into a state of betrothal within the household. This passage here doesn't refer to that, but only speaks of a Hebrew man or woman who has been sold into bondage. That is seen in the next words...

12 (con't) is sold to you and serves you six years,

The repeating pattern of six leading to a seventh is seen again here. God created six days and then rested. The Sabbath called for six days of work and then rest. There were to be six years of harvesting and then a seventh year of having the ground lay fallow. There were to be six years where debts were acceptable, but they were to be released on the seventh. And so on. In this case, there is six years of servitude for the Hebrew or Hebrewess...

12 (con't) then in the seventh year you shall let him go free from you.

The cycle completes with the granting of freedom. God created and then was free from His labors, man worked, and then was freed from his labors, and so on. Here, there is a time of servitude, and then a mandated release from that state.

The word is khophshi. It was introduced in Exodus 21 and it has not been used since then. It is an adjective signifying free, or liberty. It is debated as to whether this means a full six years of work and then freedom, or if the person was to be freed in the Hebrew year of release which is a rotating seven-year period.

If the latter, it would mean they were to be released whether they had been slaves for any time up to six years. When the year of release came, release was to be granted. In other words, a Hebrew could serve no more than six years at the outside.

There is nothing specific to justify this interpretation. One must suppose this, but there is nothing to disprove it. And more, the year of release that we looked at last week specifically referred to the event. This does not. It states six followed by the seventh without any qualifiers. This is true each time the precept is mentioned.

Leviticus 25 is more detailed concerning slavery, such as noting that a slave can be redeemed from that state at any point. If not redeemed during that time, he was to be released at the seventh year.

However, Leviticus 25 also detailed what is known as the Year of Jubilee. Every Hebrew slave, with but one exception, was to be released in the fiftieth year regardless of how many years he had been a slave.

It would make no sense to mention that provision while not specifically speaking of the same during the seven-year cycle. Thus, the Hebrew slave was to work six and be freed on the seventh. The only exception is the Year of Jubilee. It is this exact provision, and the failure to abide by it, that brought about the Lord's wrath in Jeremiah –

Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, ¹³ “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: ‘I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, saying, ¹⁴ “At the end of seven years let every man set free his Hebrew brother, who has been sold to him; and when he has served you six years, you shall let him go free from you.” But your fathers did not obey Me nor incline their ear. ¹⁵ Then you recently turned and did what was right in My sight—every man proclaiming liberty to his neighbor; and you made a covenant before Me in the house which is called by My name. ¹⁶ Then you turned around and profaned My name, and every one of you brought back his male and female slaves, whom you had set at liberty, at their pleasure, and brought them back into subjection, to be your male and female slaves.’” Jeremiah 34:12-16

Because of their failure to uphold this provision of the law, the Lord promised He would judge them, saying –

“‘You have not obeyed Me in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother and every one to his neighbor. Behold, I proclaim liberty to you,’ says the LORD—‘to the sword, to pestilence, and to famine! And I will deliver you to trouble among all the kingdoms of the earth.’” Jeremiah 34:17

¹³ And when you send him away free from you, you shall not let him go away empty-handed;

It is obvious that after six years of slavery, if a person who had originally been sold into slavery because of poverty was set free with no provision, that person would immediately have to sell himself into bondage once again. This was not to occur.

The idea here follows after the Sabbath cycle. In the giving of the Ten Commandments, the Lord said, “Therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it” (Exodus 20:11). And more to the point, in the initial giving of the Sabbath, it said –

“And it shall be on the sixth day that they shall prepare what they bring in, and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily.” Exodus 16:5

In other words, the Lord did not just take care of the people for six days and then tell them to rest on the seventh without any provisions. Rather, He provided before the Sabbath so that in their time of release from work, they would be well supplied. The same is true with the seventh year Sabbath of the land –

“And if you say, ‘What shall we eat in the seventh year, since we shall not sow nor gather in our produce?’” ²¹ Then I will command My blessing on you in the sixth year, and it will bring forth produce enough for three years. ²² And you shall sow in the eighth year, and eat old produce until the ninth year; until its produce comes in, you shall eat of the old harvest.” Leviticus 25:20-22

This precept was seen in the previous sermon as well. Verses 9 and 10 presuppose that the people are to be gracious enough that the year of release will be a time of increase for the one who was given that release. Hence, Moses instructs for the released slave that...

¹⁴ you shall supply him liberally

There is a stress in the words: haaneq taaniq lo – “As a necklace, you shall necklace him.” It is a new verb in Scripture, anaq, meaning to serve as a necklace. It is found these two times and then once in the Psalms, where it says –

“Therefore pride serves as their necklace;
Violence covers them like a garment.” Psalm 73:6

The symbolism, then, is that of the owner heaping up all kinds of goods upon the person so that he will have a new start to life after his years of bondage. This is an addition to the law at Sinai. When the law was first given, it said, “If you buy a Hebrew servant, he shall serve six years; and in the seventh he shall go out free and pay nothing” (Exodus 21:2).

Instead of simply going out without paying for his freedom, exactly the opposite was to be the case. He was to go out necklaced with abundance. Moses says these goods are to be...

¹⁴ (con’t) from your flock, from your threshing floor, and from your winepress.

The words here follow after those of the previous chapter in the tithing verses –

“And you shall eat before the Lord your God, in the place where He chooses to make His name abide, the tithe of your grain and your new wine and your oil, of the firstborn of your herds and your flocks, that you may learn to fear the Lord your God always.” Deuteronomy 14:23

It is certain that if the man had a Hebrew slave, a part of that slave’s work would involve care of these things. Thus, the owner benefited from the labors of the slave. As this was the case, the slave should be cared for from those labors as well. This is certainly the case because Moses next says...

14 (con’t) From what the LORD your God has blessed you with, you shall give to him.

This follows from the next verse of Chapter 14 which said, “when the Lord your God has blessed you.” The Lord has blessed the owner through the slave. His work has brought increase, and so it is right that he should be weighed down with a portion of that after his six years of labor. And there is a specific reasoning behind this that Moses once again brings up...

15 You shall remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and the LORD your God redeemed you;

The idea of having been slaves in Egypt, and having been redeemed from there by the Lord, has been repeated numerous times already in Deuteronomy, but it is also poignantly stated elsewhere as well. In Leviticus 25, the underlying basis for the law of release from slavery is explicitly stated –

“For the children of Israel are servants to Me; they are My servants whom I brought out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.” Leviticus 25:55

A Hebrew slave is ultimately a servant of the Lord. Therefore, they were to be released to their rightful Master after their time of servitude. As Moses says...

15 (con’t) therefore I command you this thing today.

al ken anoki mesvekha eth ha’davar ha’zeh ha’yom – “upon thus I command you the word the this today.” In other words, the command rests upon the truth that they were once slaves and the Lord redeemed them.

Again, and again, everything comes back to the fact that they were slaves and that they were redeemed. Thus, the law is justified in mandating these things. However, there may be a slave that doesn't want his freedom...

¹⁶ And if it happens that he says to you, 'I will not go away from you,' because he loves you and your house, since he prospers with you,

In these words, Moses sums up the previous law which was more expansive. From Exodus 21 –

“If he comes in by himself, he shall go out by himself; if he comes in married, then his wife shall go out with him. ⁴ If his master has given him a wife, and she has borne him sons or daughters, the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself. ⁵ But if the servant plainly says, 'I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free,' Exodus 21:3-5

The slave is content, disposed towards both his life and those who he tends to, and his soul is prospering. If so...

¹⁷ then you shall take an awl and thrust it through his ear to the door,

An extra step is overlooked here from Exodus 21. It is a step which is presupposed based on the former command –

“then his master shall bring him to the judges. He shall also bring him to the door, or to the doorpost, and his master shall pierce his ear with an awl; and he shall serve him forever.” Exodus 21:6

Having him brought before the judges was a future protection for both the slave and the owner. There in Exodus, rather than “to the judges,” the Hebrew says to take him el ha'elohim, or “to the God.” The Greek translates that as pros to kriterion Theo, or “to the judgment of God.” In the end, it is God who will see the act and accept it. The wording is specific.

Once he was brought before God, the action was then to be performed. This is the second and last use of martsea, or awl, in Scripture. It comes from ratsa, meaning to bore or pierce. With this, it says v'nathathah b'azeno u-badelet – “and give in his ear and in the door.”

In this, the words “ear” and “door” are parallel. The two are tied together as if they have become one.

¹⁷ (con’t) and he shall be your servant forever.

v’hayah lekha eved olam – “and will be to you servant forever.” The change is made, and it is permanent. The mark is a witness to the permanent ownership. This rite, repeated from Exodus 21, is given to picture our position in Christ.

It is accepted that this boring through the ear is what is being referred to in Psalm 40. That is a messianic psalm which speaks of Christ’s work –

“Sacrifice and offering You did not desire;
My ears You have opened.
Burnt offering and sin offering You did not require.
⁷ Then I said, “Behold, I come;
In the scroll of the book it is written of me.
⁸ I delight to do Your will, O my God,
And Your law is within my heart.” Psalm 40:6-8

That is cited in Hebrews 10. However, Hebrews modifies the psalm just enough to show us that Christ’s work is what is being pictured. There, it says –

“Sacrifice and offering You did not desire,
But a body You have prepared for Me.” Hebrews 10:5

Instead of “My ears You have opened,” it says “a body You prepared for Me.” The ears are being used in parallel with the entire body. Thus, the opening of the ear in the psalm refers to Christ's crucifixion. Because of His work, He is the Door of salvation –

“Most assuredly, I say to you, I am the door of the sheep. ⁸ All who ever came before Me are thieves and robbers, but the sheep did not hear them. ⁹ I am the door. If anyone enters by Me, he will be saved, and will go in and out and find pasture.” John 10:7, 8

The slave wanting to stay with his owner, who is then united to him by uniting to the door, is a picture of our proclamation before God of receiving the work of Christ.

The slave willingly gave up his freedom and his rights in one economy and transferred them to another. When he was a free man of Israel, he was bound to the Law of Moses. As Paul shows in Galatians, the law is bondage. It is what shows us our sin and it is what condemns us. The law is not freedom; it is bondage, as both Paul and Peter say again and again in the New Testament –

“Stand fast therefore in the liberty by which Christ has made us free, and do not be entangled again with a yoke of bondage.” Galatians 5:1

The very thing that we think is freedom is, in fact, only another type of bondage. But for the slave of his master, it is his master who was bound to the law and the slave is bound to his master under the law. It is a picture of Christ fulfilling the law on our behalf. He is the Master, we are His slaves, and we are crucified with Him. As Paul says in Galatians 2:19-21 –

“For I through the law died to the law that I might live to God. ²⁰ I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me. ²¹ I do not set aside the grace of God; for if righteousness comes through the law, then Christ died in vain.”

But there was always the chance that the master might have forced his slave to remain in bondage against his will. Who could tell if no public affirmation of his intent was made known? This is why Exodus specifically said that he had to be taken el ha'elohim, or “to the God.”

The affirmation is one which is voluntarily made and openly witnessed. The ownership is not forced but willingly accepted. This is an obvious picture of the free-will of man in his voluntary surrender to the Lord in the presence of “the God.” The picture is clear – we who are in Christ are free from the law because He fulfilled it on our behalf. As Paul says-

“For he who is called in the Lord while a slave is the Lord’s freedman. Likewise he who is called while free is Christ’s slave. ²³ You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men.” 1 Corinthians 7:22

And this position we possess is, as this verse says, olam. Here in Deuteronomy, we have a picture of the doctrine of eternal salvation. The picture given to us in the law tells us all we need to know. We are His servants forever! And that means any who come to Him...

¹⁷ (con't) Also to your female servant you shall do likewise.

This is an obvious reference to Paul's words in Galatians –

“There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus.” Galatians 3:28

With the picture of Christ complete, Moses now continues with words concerning the Hebrew who has served his time...

¹⁸ It shall not seem hard to you when you send him away free from you;

lo yiqsheh b'enekha – “No hard in your eyes.” The master was not to view the matter as any burden at all in letting the slave have his freedom. And the reason goes in two directions at once. The first is backwards to what has been...

¹⁸ (con't) for he has been worth a double hired servant in serving you six years.

ki mishneh sekar sakir avadekha shes shanim – “For double the hire of the hireling serving you six years.” In other words, the owner saved the cost of paying a hired laborer. Because the slave wasn't paid, he was worth twice as much to him.

As a point of context, the words of Isaiah 16:14 are not what is being referred to here –

“Within three years, as the years of a hired man, the glory of Moab will be despised with all that great multitude, and the remnant will be very small and feeble.” Isaiah 16:14

Jewish interpretation of this is that a hired servant was to be for no longer than three years, and thus the Hebrew slave would be worth twice that. That is not at all what Isaiah is saying. He is referring to a hired man counting the days for his pay, and that no work would be done without proper wages.

In other words, Isaiah's prophecy was spoken and there would be no delay. The same thought is expressed again in Isaiah 21:16. The second direction of Moses' words concerns the future...

18 (con't) Then the LORD your God will bless you in all that you do.

Not only had the past been good to the master because of the free labor, but in being gracious to the slave upon his departure, the Lord would take note and bless him into the future.

As a point of theology, when viewing slavery as the consequences of sin (and sin coming through a violation of law), these words provide instruction. The people of God have been redeemed from that life. Thus, we are to then interact with others as redeemed sinners rather than righteous saints. It is why the master was to treat his Hebrew slave so generously.

And the limitation on the length of bondage, that of six years, certainly makes a picture of man's bondage to the devil. The Bible shows that all people are born under his power. Our sin is inherited. John says that "He who sins is of the devil" (1 John 3:8).

As all have sinned, then all are born under the devil's power and authority. But the good news is that Jesus came to correct this. When we call on Christ, we move from the bondage of the devil to being servants of a new Master.

The six years of slavery, followed by the seventh year of freedom, surely forms a double picture. First, it looks to our time before coming to Christ and then the freedom we have in Him. This follows in picture from the six days of work followed by the seventh day of Sabbath rest.

Secondly, it is a picture of the six thousand years of man, living in the world of sin from the time of the fall. That is to be followed by the final thousand years called the millennium. It is a time where Christ will rule over all the nations. It is a time of liberty from the yoke of the devil and rest in Christ.

*I was a slave to the law which only pointed out my sin
I couldn't meet its expectations though I tried and tried
But in my place the Lord Jesus, the victory did win
Now my yoke is light and easy because for my sin He died*

*And so, with Him I desire ever to stay
As His slave, may I forevermore remain
May the joy of serving Him begin right now, today
I give up my freedom to sin and receive heavenly gain*

*My Master is tender and caring; to Him I will cleave
For all of eternity in His presence I will stay
All that I was asked to do was just believe
And now, life under my Master gets sweeter each day*

II. The firstborn of the herd and flock (verses 19-23)

¹⁹ “All the firstborn males that come from your herd and your flock you shall sanctify to the LORD your God;

Of these firstborn, Exodus 22:30 says, “It shall be with its mother seven days; on the eighth day you shall give it to Me.” Deuteronomy 12:6 then instructed the people to eat the firstborn in the place the Lord chooses.

What this obviously means is that the animal was to be set apart as holy on the eighth day, regardless as to when it was actually eaten. From the eighth day they were sanctified and set apart for when they traveled to where the tabernacle resided. During that time, however long it might be...

^{19 (con’t)} you shall do no work with the firstborn of your herd, nor shear the firstborn of your flock.

The animal already belonged to the Lord because of His claim on all the firstborn of man and beast. This was first as a memorial of having spared the firstborn of Israel while taking the firstborn of Egypt – of both man and livestock.

Secondly, it typologically anticipates Christ and those in Him, as it says in Romans 8:29 that He is “the firstborn among many brethren.”

These animals were sanctified to Him, and they were therefore not to be used for ordinary purposes. Nor could they be dedicated in a vow to the Lord (Leviticus 27:26). One cannot dedicate something to the Lord that already belongs to Him. Of them, Moses now repeats the general thought already seen three times in Deuteronomy...

²⁰ You and your household shall eat it before the LORD your God year by year in the place which the LORD chooses.

This is perfectly in accord with the previous verses of 12:6, 12:17, and 14:23. At the time when the tithes were dedicated, so were the firstborn to be eaten.

The term “year by year” speaks of the pilgrim feasts which came around at the set times each year. But before eating them, they had to first be sacrificed and offered to the Lord—

“But the firstborn of a cow, the firstborn of a sheep, or the firstborn of a goat you shall not redeem; they are holy. You shall sprinkle their blood on the altar, and burn their fat as an offering made by fire for a sweet aroma to the Lord. ¹⁸ And their flesh shall be yours, just as the wave breast and the right thigh are yours.”

-Numbers 18:17, 18

The animal was not worked or sheared for personal gain. Instead, it was sacrificed to the Lord, a sacred portion belonging to the priest (and which both priest and portion picture Christ), and the rest was then eaten by the family in the presence of the Lord in joy and rejoicing. However, Moses next provides an exception...

²¹ But if there is a defect in it, if it is lame or blind or has any serious defect, you shall not sacrifice it to the LORD your God.

Though not stated, we can assume that the rule of the firstborn surely still applies in this situation. The animal was to be sanctified to the Lord and neither worked nor sheared. However, it was not to be sacrificed to Him if it had a defect. Offering any animal to the Lord that possessed a defect would destroy the typology of the pure and undefiled Christ who offered Himself to the Lord. Of such a defect...

²² You may eat it within your gates; the unclean and the clean person alike may eat it, as if it were a gazelle or a deer.

Saying, “You may” gives the impression that it could be otherwise. However, being a firstborn, and probably not to be worked or shorn, this is more likely a command, “You shall.” Either way, this refers back to Chapter 12 –

“However, you may slaughter and eat meat within all your gates, whatever your heart desires, according to the blessing of the Lord your God which He has given you; the unclean and the clean may eat of it, of the gazelle and the deer alike.”

-Deuteronomy 12:15

The firstborn that bore a defect was to be eaten as a common animal, within the gates and without first being presented to the Lord as a sacrifice. But, like all animals at all times...

23 (fin) Only you shall not eat its blood; you shall pour it on the ground like water.

raq, eth damo lo tokel, al ha'aretz tishpekenu kamayim – “Only! It’s blood no you shall eat; on the ground you shall pour it like water.” With minor exceptions, the words are almost identical to Deuteronomy 12:16.

As was then noted, to eat the blood is to assimilate into oneself something that belonged to the Lord alone because the life is in the blood. It is considered an act of idolatry to use it in any other way than designated by Him. If blood was not used in the rites of the tabernacle, it was to be poured out and covered with earth.

When it was used in the temple rites, it typologically anticipated Christ. When it was poured out and covered with the dust, as is explicitly stated elsewhere, that also typologically anticipated Christ. Either way, to eat the blood was to destroy the typology, and thus, like presenting a defective animal for sacrifice, was also forbidden.

Though not all of the details were explained in the passage today, because they have been explained several times in the recent past, everything about these twelve verses in this passage points to God’s workings for us in Jesus Christ.

Paul, as a Pharisee and one who was completely educated in the law, saw this perfectly. Hence, he calls the law a shadow of which Christ is the Substance. Paul lived out his life fulfilling this law as best he could. But when Christ came, He missed the fulfillment of the typology.

However, with the coming of a great light and a voice from heaven, it all started to come into focus. He was able to take all of that knowledge he had been endowed with, and he was able to then say, “I see how this is fulfilled in Him.”

As this is so, he then realized the purpose of it all. The countless details, the many years under the law, the call of the prophets, and the coming of Christ... It was all to show that God had kept His promises.

From the Lord’s words in Genesis 3 concerning the Seed of the woman, to His loving utterance on the Mount of Transfiguration – “This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear Him!” – right up to the words of the Lord on the cross, “It is finished,” everything was pointing to God’s work in Christ. And this includes all of the Law of Moses.

Paul saw that and he turned from his self-centered hopes for righteousness to the imputed righteousness of God in Christ. From that awakened standpoint, he spoke out concerning the law. It was a tool, a pointing arrow, a tutor, and a revealer of what God was doing and would do.

Paul and the other apostles never spoke against the law, although they were certainly accused of having done so. Rather, they confessed that the law had a purpose, and that purpose was now fulfilled. To speak against the law would be no different than to speak against the prophet Isaiah who was a prophet under the law.

However, these men learned to situate the law in its proper place, showing that it was only a steppingstone to a higher, richer, and more glorious place where we can sit at the feet of the Redeemer of mankind and revel in what He did with the law – living it out perfectly, fulfilling it, and then setting it aside through a better and surer covenant based upon a better and surer hope.

If you have not come to that realization yet, I pray that today will be the day. In your feeble attempts at meriting righteousness through the observance of the law, you are – exactly and nothing less – saying to God, “I will do it on my own. I don’t need Jesus. I’ve got this one.”

I pray that you will find proper perspective concerning this law – this marvelous treasure of wisdom and understanding – by finding in it the Person of Jesus Christ. And then, it is my prayer that you will set yourself aside, believe that God has done it all for you, and submit to that fact by simply trusting in Christ, and in Christ alone, for your salvation. In this, you will become an acceptable receptacle for the dwelling of God’s Holy Spirit.

May it be so, and may it be today. And may all of God’s people say, Amen.

Closing Verse: “To the law and to the testimony! If they do not speak according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.” Isaiah 8:20

Next Week: Deuteronomy 16:1-8 He is our Lamb, and to Him we do applaud... (A Passover to the Lord your God) (49th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Lord Your God Redeemed You

“If your brother, a Hebrew man, or a Hebrew woman
Is sold to you and serves you six years, such he may do
Then in the seventh year
You shall let him go free from you

And when you send him away free from you
You shall not let him go away empty-handed
You shall supply him liberally from your flock
From your threshing floor, and from your winepress
-----be sure this is clearly understood

From what the LORD your God has blessed you with You shall give to him; pay careful heed to what I say
You shall remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt
And the LORD your God redeemed you
-----therefore I command you this thing today

And if it happens that he says to you
‘I will not go away from you;’ such he does do
Because he loves you and your house
Since he prospers with you

Then you shall take an awl
And thrust it through his ear to the door – a bit ouchy I surmise
And he shall be your servant forever
Also to your female servant you shall do likewise

It shall not seem hard to you
When you send him away free from you
For he has been worth a double hired servant
-----in serving you six years
Then the LORD your God will bless you in all that you do

“All the firstborn males that come from your herd and your flock
You shall to the LORD your God sanctify
You shall do no work with the firstborn of your herd
Nor shear the firstborn of your flock; these rules you shall apply

You and your household shall eat it before the LORD your God
Year by year in the place which the LORD chooses; take it there
But if there is a defect in it, if it is lame or blind
-----or has any serious defect
You shall not sacrifice it to the LORD your God; of this beware

You may eat it within your gates
The unclean and the clean person alike may eat it, as if it were
-----a gazelle or a deer
Only you shall not eat its blood
You shall pour it on the ground like water; and so
-----the Lord Your God you shall fear

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 16:1-8 (A Passover to the Lord your God)

The opening words of the passage call out for the people of Israel to pay heed to at a certain time of year, keeping the Passover to the Lord. There is a reason for this that we will look at today. But for now, suffice it to say that if you don't pay attention to something you are supposed to see, you miss that thing will most certainly.

The entire Old Testament asks the people of Israel to pay attention. In fact, if they had really taken the stories, the commandments, the warnings, and the shadows laid down there to heart, there is no way they could have missed Christ when He came. Everything pointed to Him.

At the same time, if you read a book that said someone was coming and would actually be the Messiah, would you recognize Him when He came? I mean, there's that Guy. He doesn't act the same as everyone else, but we saw Him grow up in Nazareth. He doesn't look any different than we do. How can we be sure? Well, one way people believed in Him is found in our text verse –

Text Verse: “Now when He was in Jerusalem at the Passover, during the feast, many believed in His name when they saw the signs which He did.” John 7:23

Jesus did signs. Like the prophets of old, signs were given to confirm things. If there was a sign, it pointed to something else. The things Jesus did pointed to the fact that He was, in fact, Israel's Messiah. However, it might still be hard to accept that someone who can do amazing things is really the Messiah. How far does someone need to go to actually prove – beyond a shadow of a doubt – that He is that Person?

If the people of Israel didn't look at things like the Passover as being about them, they would not have missed who Christ is. But they took the Passover as a past act and a memorial of what occurred. Instead, they should have looked at it only as a steppingstone to the true Passover.

In seeing this, they would then see who He truly is. And from that, the Feast of Unleavened Bread would then make all the sense in the world to them as well. Someday, they will see Him for who He is, and they will realize it is all about Him, not all about them.

For now, we can see this if we are willing to acknowledge that we are in need of a Savior. When someone realizes that, the imagery of the Passover suddenly makes all the sense in the world. And the imagery of Unleavened Bread can then be understood in its proper context. This is why studying the law is so important. It is a marvel and a treasure box full of wonder.

Yes, great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Bread of Affliction (verses 1-8)

¹“Observe the month of Abib,

shamor eth khodesh ha'aviv – “Observe month the aviv.” The word shamar, translated as “observe,” signifies to keep, watch, preserve, and so on. It comes from a primitive root meaning “to hedge about” (as with thorns). Thus, one can think of guarding.

Moses tells them they are to guard this month, meaning not forget, and be sure to observe. One would think, “It’s the Passover, how could they forget that?” The answer is, “Because they failed to guard carefully what they had been given.”

It is often said that the Passover is the longest continuously held annual ceremony in the world, being observed for 3500 years. This is incorrect. The failure of Israel to observe the Passover is noted several times in Scripture, such as –

“Then the king commanded all the people, saying, ‘Keep the Passover to the Lord your God, as it is written in this Book of the Covenant.’”²² Such a Passover surely had never been held since the days of the judges who judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel and the kings of Judah.” 2 Kings 23:21, 22

One cannot observe what one is unaware of, and it is the words of Moses now that are intended to make them aware of this particular responsibility. But the Book of the Law given by Moses had been neglected to the point that Israel didn’t even know it existed.

Just one chapter earlier, King Josiah had the temple repaired. During the work, the high priest “found the Book of the Law in the house of the Lord” (2 Kings 22:8). How could Israel carefully guard the month of the aviv in order to observe the Passover if they didn’t even know they were supposed to do so?

Moses' words to guard the month were ignored until the Book of the Law was rediscovered. As far as the word aviv, it speaks of the March-April timeframe when the ears of grain are fresh. It was introduced into Scripture in Exodus 9:31, "Now the flax and the barley were struck, for the barley was in the head and the flax was in bud."

The redemptive calendar for Israel was then set by the Lord in Exodus 12:2, saying, "This month shall be your beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you." This was at the institution of the Passover. After that, designating the month as "the aviv" was first proclaimed in Exodus 13 while the Feast of Unleavened Bread was being described to the people –

"Remember this day in which you went out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage; for by strength of hand the Lord brought you out of this place. No leavened bread shall be eaten. ⁴On this day you are going out, in the month Abib." Exodus 13:3, 4

The word aviv is used only eight times. Six times it is used to describe the month and twice to describe fresh ears of grain. It means "greenness" or "fresh" and it indicates fresh young ears of barley grain which come forth at this time of year.

In Exodus, it is also called "the aviv." Thus, this is not technically the name of the month, but it is a designation. It is in this month, the first month of the fresh ears, that Moses says...

¹ (con't) and keep the Passover to the Lord your God, v'asita pesakh l'Yehovah elohekha – "and keep Passover to Yehovah your God." In this, Moses leaves off the article. Instead of "the Passover," he simply says, "Passover to Yehovah." He is making a general statement about what Israel is to do when they enter the land, even if it is about a specific event. The word pesakh, or Passover, comes from the verb pasakh that was introduced in Exodus 12. It signifies to pass or spring over –

"For I will pass through the land of Egypt on that night, and will strike all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the Lord. ¹³ Now the blood shall be a sign for you on the houses where you are. And when I see the blood, I will pass over you; and the plague shall not be on you to destroy you when I strike the land of Egypt. Exodus 12:12, 13

Because of this, it is called pesakh l'Yehovah, or “Passover to Yehovah.” The Passover is on the 14th of the month of Aviv, as was commanded in Exodus 12:6. The specific time of the day when the Passover was to be killed was first defined in that verse as well –

“Now you shall keep it until the fourteenth day of the same month. Then the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it at twilight.”

The translation as “twilight” is misleading. It does not mean “in the evening.” Rather, the Hebrew term, translated as “twilight,” is ben ha'arbayim, or “between the evenings.” It is a phrase that is based on biblical time. In the Bible, a day is divided into “evening” and “morning.” Thus, there are actually two evenings to be reckoned. The first began after 12pm and runs through until sunset.

The second evening begins at sunset and continues till night, meaning the whole time of twilight. This would, therefore, be between twelve o'clock and the termination of twilight. “Between the evenings,” then, speaks of the three o'clock sacrifices at the temple. They were considered as the evening sacrifices even though to us it would be deemed as an afternoon sacrifice. With that understood, Moses next says...

1 (con't) for in the month of Abib

Again, in this verse it says ha'aviv, or “the aviv.” In essence, “In the month of the fresh young ears, the Lord brought you out.” Also, this is the last time that the word aviv is found in Scripture. After this, the first month will be known by its proper name, Nisan, a name found in both Nehemiah and Esther. Or it will simply be called “the first month,” such as in Joshua 4:19.

1 (con't) the Lord your God brought you out of Egypt by night.

As the start of a new day in the Bible begins at sundown, this then refers to the 15th of the month, when the moon was full. The words here seem contradictory to those of Exodus 12:22 and Numbers 33:3. They state –

“And you shall take a bunch of hyssop, dip it in the blood that is in the basin, and strike the lintel and the two doorposts with the blood that is in the basin. And none of you shall go out of the door of his house until morning.” Exodus 12:22

“They departed from Rameses in the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month; on the day after the Passover the children of Israel went out with boldness in the sight of all the Egyptians.” Numbers 33:3

Moses saying in this verse that they were brought out by night is inclusive of the entire process of the Passover. The Lord accomplished the work of bringing them out by night, Pharaoh gave them permission to leave at night, and the people prepared for their departure at night. They then departed in the morning with the completion of the process.

² Therefore you shall sacrifice the Passover to the Lord your God, v'zabakhta pesakh l'Yehovah elohekha – “And you shall sacrifice Passover to Yehovah your God.” Again, no article precedes “Passover.” It is a general statement about the observance. It is a Passover to Yehovah and the statement encompasses not merely the Passover itself, but the entire feast adjoined to the Passover, meaning the Feast of Unleavened Bread. As it next says...

^{2 (con't)} from the flock and the herd, tson u-baqar “flock and herd.” The Passover sacrifice was of the flock, either a lamb or a kid of the goats. By saying “flock and herd” here, it is referring not only to all of the sacrifices mandated throughout the entire Feast of Unleavened Bread which are precisely detailed in Numbers 28:16-25, but also to any festival meals eaten during the week of feasting. This could include firstborn of the flocks, tithe animals, and so on.

In other words, “Passover” without the article, is being used to signify the entire Feast. This is seen in the New Testament, where Luke also leaves off the article before “Passover” –

“Now the Feast of Unleavened Bread drew near, which is called Passover.”

-Luke 22:1

This is next mandated to be...

^{2 (con't)} in the place where the Lord chooses to put His name.

The unity of worship called for in the previous chapters continues to be conveyed here as well. Referring to appearing at the place chosen by the Lord is stated in one way or another six times between now and verse 16. Thus, it is its own stress and is to be carefully heeded.

All of Israel was to appear before the Lord, without exception. Next, as a continued confirmation that the term “Passover” used here is inclusive of the entire feast, Moses says...

³ You shall eat no leavened bread with it;

lo tokal alav khamets – “No you shall eat with it leavened.” The word khamets used here speaks of that which is leavened. This was originally stated in Exodus 12:15 –

“Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread. On the first day you shall remove leaven from your houses. For whoever eats leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, that person shall be cut off from Israel.”

For the entire feast, known as Passover, nothing leavened was to be eaten by the people. As Moses next says...

^{3 (con't)} seven days you shall eat unleavened bread with it, shivat yamim tokal alav matsot – “seven days you shall eat with it unleavened bread.” As the Passover is a single day, and yet it says it is to be eaten for seven days with unleavened bread, then this absolutely confirms that Moses is using the term Passover to speak of the entire feast, which is made up of the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Moses next defines the matsot, or unleavened bread, saying...

^{3 (con't)} that is, the bread of affliction lekhem oni – “bread affliction.” The word oni comes from anah, signifying to be bowed down, or afflicted. The question concerning this bread is whether it is referring to the bread itself, being tasteless and thus afflicting to eat, or is it referring to the bread as a memorial of afflictions.

It is probably speaking of both. The bread is bland and tasteless, and thus afflicting, but that is to then remind the people of what they had been delivered from and what they had been delivered to, as well as the process by which it came about. With that understood, Moses says...

³ (con't) (for you came out of the land of Egypt in haste),

The word translated as “haste” is kipazon. It signifies haste, but it implies haste which is in a state of alarm. It comes from the verb khaphaz – to be in trepidation, hurry, or alarm. This must speak of the entire process.

The people were in bondage in Egypt and were thus afflicted. The destroyer passed through and only the blood would save them, but others would die. The people were brought out quickly and without time to prepare their bread. They had a hope of a new and better future in a fairer land, but they had to endure the trials of getting to that future on the march there. And so on.

Thus, the bread of affliction is that tasteless bread which speaks of everything the people had faced and would continue to face in the process of their redemption from Egypt.

³ (con't) that you may remember the day in which you came out of the land of Egypt all the days of your life.

Moses says: I'maan tizkor – “to end purpose you may remember.” The eating of the bread during this feast has a specific intent, it is to remind the people. Moses ties the day in which they were brought out into the reason for eating the bread of affliction. And that remembrance was to be for “all the days of your life.”

The idea here is, essentially, “You are not to forget where you came from, how you got here, and who got you here.” With that understood, Moses says...

⁴ And no leaven shall be seen among you in all your territory for seven days,

Here Moses uses the word seor, or leaven for the last time in Scripture. The word used earlier referred to that which is leavened. This word refers to the leaven itself. In other words, not only is there to be nothing leavened in the houses, but there was not to be any leaven at all. It is an absolute prohibition in all ways. This takes the reader back to Exodus 12 again where all three of the pertinent words are used in one verse –

“Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread [matsot]. On the first day you shall remove leaven [seor] from your houses. For whoever eats leavened bread [khamets] from the first day until the seventh day, that person shall be cut off from Israel.” Exodus 12:15

^{4 (con't)} nor shall any of the meat which you sacrifice the first day at twilight remain overnight until morning.

This is referring to the paschal lamb as was originally stated –

“And they shall take some of the blood and put it on the two doorposts and on the lintel of the houses where they eat it. ⁸ Then they shall eat the flesh on that night; roasted in fire, with unleavened bread and with bitter herbs they shall eat it. ⁹ Do not eat it raw, nor boiled at all with water, but roasted in fire—its head with its legs and its entrails. ¹⁰ You shall let none of it remain until morning, and what remains of it until morning you shall burn with fire.” Exodus 12:7-10

Again, the word “twilight” must be explained. In using the term ba’arev, or “in the evening,” it is referring to the 14th of the month when the lamb was slaughtered. However, the meal is eaten in the night, making it the 15th of the month.

Here, it reads: asher tizbakh ba’erev ba’yom ha’rishon la’boqer – “which you sacrifice in the evening in the day the first to the morning.” The lamb is slain on the 14th, Passover. The evening is then the transition, the folding over into the next day. And then the 15th begins the first day of Unleavened Bread. Nothing that was eaten from the start of that day was to be left at morning time.

⁵ “You may not sacrifice the Passover

Here the article is used, ha’pasakh, or “the Passover.” It is not speaking in general terms, but rather of the sacrificial lamb itself which stands as representative of the day.

^{5 (con't)} within any of your gates which the Lord your God gives you b’akhad shearekha – “in one of your gates.” The meaning is that they were not to sacrifice the Passover in one of their towns, symbolized by the gates of the town. Instead, Moses again speaks of the unity of worship, saying...

⁶ but at the place where the Lord your God chooses to make His name abide,

Again, as in verse 2, Moses refers to the place chosen by the Lord to make His name abide, which is thus referring to the location of the tabernacle/temple. It is to this place that...

6 (con't) there you shall sacrifice the Passover at twilight,

The phrase has to be taken in a general sense. Again, the word “twilight” is ba’arev, or “in the evening.” However, that has already been explained earlier as meaning, “between the evenings,” and thus, in the afternoon.

This is clearly understood from the rest of Scripture where the “evening sacrifice” refers to the afternoon, or 3pm, sacrifice – it occurs “between the evenings. It is at this time, and in the place the Lord chooses to make His name dwell, that this was to occur.

6 (con't) at the going down of the sun,

Again, the words have to be taken in a general sense and with other relevant passages. The sun starts going down at midday. In the afternoon, the Passover would be sacrificed, and in the next day, meaning at evening when the 14th passes into the 15th, the Passover was eaten. Moses then says...

6 (con't) at the time you came out of Egypt.

moed tsetekha mi-mitsrayim – “appointed time you came from Egypt.” This is not speaking of the time of day, but of the time appointed by the Lord for it to occur. It is a general statement of the entire process, all centered on the time of the sacrifice of the lamb. It happened during a particular month, on a particular day, at a particular time.

Everything is centered on that moment. From there, Moses then speaks of the events which occur at the outset of the next day, meaning the 15th of the month...

7 And you shall roast and eat it in the place which the Lord your God chooses,

Moses uses the word bashal which comes from the idea of growing ripe, as a harvest. At times, it means to boil or seethe, but the instructions for the original Passover explicitly said that the Passover was to be roasted over the fire and not boiled –

“Then they shall eat the flesh on that night; roasted in fire, with unleavened bread and with bitter herbs they shall eat it. ⁹ Do not eat it raw, nor boiled at all with water, but roasted in fire—its head with its legs and its entrails.”

-Exodus 12:8, 9

As this is now to be conducted in a large gathering, rather than in the homes of Egypt, it was probably cooked over a fire, but maybe with cookware or gratings designed to accommodate innumerable people. This is seen, for example in 2 Chronicles 35:13, where the same word is used twice in obviously different contexts –

“Also they roasted the Passover offerings with fire according to the ordinance; but the other holy offerings they boiled in pots, in caldrons, and in pans, and divided them quickly among all the lay people.”

And again, Moses notes that it was to be both roasted and eaten at the place the Lord chose for His name to dwell. With that understood, he then says...

⁷ (con't) and in the morning you shall turn and go to your tents.

As the entire feast goes on for more than a week, the obvious meaning of this is that after the people had gathered and collectively eaten the Passover and spent the night together, they then returned to the tents they brought, or to the places they stayed, during the entire week. This is again evidenced in 2 Chronicles –

“And the children of Israel who were present kept the Passover at that time, and the Feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days.” 2 Chronicles 35:17

The entire night of the Passover was probably spent in a large gathering with much celebration and enjoyment, followed by a long morning of sleeping. Moses next turns to the rules of the adjoining Feast of Unleavened Bread...

⁸ Six days you shall eat unleavened bread,

These words certainly do not mean “only,” as in, “This is the only thing you can eat.” Rather, any bread that was eaten was to be unleavened. Joshua 5:11 notes that on the first Passover in the land they ate both unleavened bread and the produce of the land, specifically parched grain.

This week of the feast would be spent at the place of the sanctuary, and it would certainly involve eating the tithes and offerings the people brought to the various pilgrim feasts. However, for this feast, only unleavened bread could accompany those things. Nothing with leaven was to be eaten during the entire feast.

Another point which must be clarified is that this is actually an eight-day event. It involves the Passover and then seven days. And so, when it says here, six days you shall eat unleavened bread, it means six days followed by one which is...

^{8 (con't)} and on the seventh day there shall be a sacred assembly to the Lord your God.

Here, a word previously only used in connection with the Feast of Tabernacles is seen, atsereth, or sacred assembly. It comes from atsar which signifies to shut, restrain, and so on. Thus, it is a completing ceremony which is dedicated to Yehovah. Although it does not say it here, unleavened bread was to be eaten on this day as well. That is clearly defined in Leviticus 23 (and elsewhere) –

“On the fourteenth day of the first month at twilight is the Lord’s Passover. ⁶ And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the Feast of Unleavened Bread to the Lord; seven days you must eat unleavened bread. ⁷ On the first day you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no customary work on it. ⁸ But you shall offer an offering made by fire to the Lord for seven days. The seventh day shall be a holy convocation; you shall do no customary work on it.” Leviticus 23:5-8

As a special convocation, but not as a Sabbath, it says...

^{*8 (fin)} You shall do no work *on it.

This is defined more precisely in Leviticus 23 where it said, “no customary work.” In other words, meals could be prepared, but no regular work was to be conducted. Thus, unless it fell on a Sabbath, it was not a Sabbath observance.

*A Lamb, spotless, and pure – without any defect
Will be sacrificed in my place
And looking at that Lamb, I can certainly detect
The greatest love and grace... this I see looking upon His face*

*Oh! That I could refrain and not see Him die
Oh! If there could be any other way
How could this Lamb go through with it for one such as I?
Oh God! This perfect Lamb alone my sin-debt can pay*

*Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!
Behold the sinless One, there on Calvary’s tree*

*He has prevailed and the path to heaven has been unfurled
The Lamb of God who died for sinners like you and me*

II. Pictures of Christ

To get a full picture of everything that Moses summarizes in these eight verses would mean going back and watching quite a few sermons from Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers. It's not possible to fit everything into a short summary.

However, a brief review of what Moses said will give an overall brushstroke of what is being pictured. First, Moses begins with the words "Observe the month of Abib."

He is telling the people, once and forever, to pay heed and keep watch during this month. That alone hints at the coming of Messiah. The Passover was conducted during this month and it was to be an annual memorial to the people. But the shadow would someday be replaced with the Substance.

If the people paid heed to the typology, it would be as clear as crystal to them what was occurring when the events coincided with the work of Christ. Without getting dogmatic about the significance of the word ha'aviv, or "the aviv," it may possibly be a reference to Jesus' words spoken on this exact day about fourteen hundred years later.

As He was going to be crucified, He said, "For if they do these things in the green wood, what will be done in the dry?" (Luke 23:31). Obviously, wood and grain are not the same thing, but the idea is. There is the fresh green ears and there is the moist green tree (as the Greek implies).

Of His words, Albert Barnes interprets the meaning as, "If they, the Romans, do these things to me, who am innocent and blameless; if they punish me in this manner in the face of justice, what will they not do in relation to this guilty nation?"

At the time of that which is fresh and green – meaning at the time of Christ's work, fire is resisted. But to reject that greenness would attract the fire, meaning judgment. As Jamieson-Fausset-Brown then says, "If such sufferings alight upon the innocent One, the very Lamb of God, what must be in store for those who are provoking the flames?"

The entire point of the Passover is the presentation of an innocent Lamb to redeem the people from their bondage, meaning sin. And so, Moses told them to watch at the time of the aviv, meaning the green, and at that time to observe "Passover to the Lord."

As noted, there was no article before Passover in verse 1. It speaks of the entire eight days of both Passover and Unleavened Bread. Thus, the term “flock and herd” speaks of all of the sacrifices of the feast, all of which speak of the work of Christ (see Numbers 28, and etc.). And that explains the constant repetition of the words, “the place where the Lord chooses to put His name.”

That is referring to Jesus, in whom is the Name of the Lord. He is the place where the people of God are to meet and share in those sacrifices which only prefigure the work He accomplished.

From there Moses noted that following the Passover the people were to eat unleavened bread for seven days. It is the Passover that leads into the Feast. As seen in previous sermons, it anticipates Christ’s cross, that leads into our sinless state before God. This is what the feast only pictured.

The people ate unleavened bread which pictures our positional state of sinlessness in Christ. Paul refers to it in 1 Corinthians 5 –

“Your glorying is not good. Do you not know that a little leaven leavens the whole lump? ⁷ Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us. ⁸ Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.”

-1 Corinthians 5:6-8

When Paul says, “let us keep the feast,” he is not referring to the Passover. That is Christ and His work for us. Rather, he is referring to what the feast that followed the Passover pictures.

Moses then called it lekhem oni, or “bread of affliction.” As I noted this is surely referring to the bread itself, being tasteless and thus afflicting to eat, and it is also referring to the bread as a memorial of afflictions. As we saw, oni comes from anah. It is a word used twice in Isaiah 53 when describing Christ –

“Surely He has borne our griefs
And carried our sorrows;
Yet we esteemed Him stricken,
Smitten by God, and afflicted.” Isaiah 53:4

“He was oppressed and He was afflicted,
Yet He opened not His mouth;
He was led as a lamb to the slaughter,
And as a sheep before its shearers is silent,
So He opened not His mouth.” Isaiah 53:7

That resolves the memorial of afflictions, but the bread itself is its own picture of affliction. As Israel was to eat the bread of affliction, it anticipates that we too will face our own afflictions –

“Therefore we do not lose heart. Even though our outward man is perishing, yet the inward man is being renewed day by day. ¹⁷ For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, ¹⁸ while we do not look at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporary, but the things which are not seen are eternal.” 2 Corinthians 4:16-18

Just as Christ suffered and then entered into His glory, we are left here for a season, rather than being taken home immediately. And during our stay, we will suffer our own afflictions during this time of hope in Christ and of the glory to come.

Moses then went on to explain the reason for the bread of affliction, saying that the people came out in haste, and thus they were to remember that day all the days of their lives. This is exactly what happens to believers.

As noted, he used the word kipazon. It signifies haste, but it implies haste which is in a state of alarm. It comes from the verb khaphaz – to be in trepidation, hurry, or alarm.

We aren't brought out of our bondage to sin gradually. Rather, we are brought out instantly, and certainly in a state of trepidation because of the sin we bore.

Those who understand the significance of the work of Christ in their lives know that the word “haste” hardly captures the sense. If we are wise, we will then remember that moment all the days of our lives. Never returning to the life we were saved from.

Moses then spoke again of not having any leaven among the people for the whole time of the feast. It is a picture of clearing it out of our lives – living for God and not with sin. It's why Paul said to “purge out the old leaven.” But Moses continued by reminding the people to not leave any of the meat of the sacrifice till morning.

The idea here is that the feast anticipates our sinless state before God. As Christ died for our sins and then went into the grave that same day, we are to leave our sins behind. On the first day of our walk with Him, we are to live as if it is so.

As Paul notes, “But God forbid that I should boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world has been crucified to me, and I to the world” (Galatians 6:14).

Israel was redeemed by the blood of the lamb. They had nothing to boast in except what God had done. The deed was finished. They were to live for the Lord, and not for the world, from that time on. This is what they were to remember each year, and it is what we must remember every day of our lives in Christ.

Moses next spoke to them about not sacrificing the Passover b’akhad shearekha – “in one of your gates,” but only at the place where the Lord chose to place His name. First, it is a note of exclusivity. There is one place, and one place alone where redemption can be made – and that is at the cross of Calvary and in the Person of Jesus Christ.

He is the place where the Lord has chosen to make His name abide. And secondly, Moses’ words tend to anticipate the statement made by the author of Hebrews, where he said –

“Therefore Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered outside the gate.” Hebrews 13:12

The context of Hebrews is speaking of the animal sacrifices that were burned outside the camp, thus picturing Christ who died outside of the walls of Jerusalem. But even the walls of Jerusalem which surrounded the temple had their own gates, within which people lived. Christ, who is the true spot where the name of the Lord is placed, died outside of any gates. This may stretch the typology a bit too much, but it may not as well.

Moses next mentioned the sacrifice being at twilight. That is less specific than what has been previously stated, but the point is made. Christ died at the same time as the Passover lamb was sacrificed – three o’clock in the afternoon.

The Passover lamb’s sacrifice coincided with the daily afternoon lamb offering at the tabernacle. Each day two lambs were offered, one in the morning and one in the evening. Together they are equated as a single day’s offering and thus are considered as one offering. The gospel of Mark provides the clarity of this –

“Now it was the third hour, and they crucified Him.” Mark 15:25

It then next says –

“Now when the sixth hour had come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour.³⁴ And at the ninth hour Jesus cried out with a loud voice, saying, ‘Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani?’ which is translated, ‘My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me?’

³⁵ Some of those who stood by, when they heard that, said, ‘Look, He is calling for Elijah!’ ³⁶ Then someone ran and filled a sponge full of sour wine, put it on a reed, and offered it to Him to drink, saying, ‘Let Him alone; let us see if Elijah will come to take Him down.’

³⁷ And Jesus cried out with a loud voice, and breathed His last.” Mark 15:33-37

Mark, who is in agreement with the other gospel writers, shows that Christ was crucified at the same time as when the morning offering was being made – 9am. He then says that Christ died at the same time that the evening offering was being made – 3pm.

Thus, the two lamb offerings encompass, and stand representative of, the sacrifice of Christ on the cross. The Passover lamb, which was slaughtered at this same time, is given as one aspect of Christ’s work while the daily lamb offerings were given as another.

Moses finishes up with the instructions concerning how and where to prepare the Passover which was followed with the note of returning to their tents. In other words, there is one gospel, one way to receive it, and one Lord who makes it possible. Nothing else will suffice. After receiving that, we are to live out our lives as is right.

Moses then repeated the thought that the people shall eat unleavened bread. It is to be taken as a positive command. It doesn’t say, “You may not eat bread with leaven for six days.” Instead, it says, “six days you shall eat unleavened bread.”

They were to eat unleavened bread during the entire feast. This goes in picture to what was just cited from Paul in 1 Corinthians, “let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.”

Not only are we to not partake of sin, but we are to actively live our lives in “sincerity and truth.” It is not that we can abstain from the whole if we abstain from one; it is that we are to abstain from one while partaking in the other.

Moses then finished up with the note concerning the atseret, or “sacred assembly.” It is a completing ceremony to the Lord. That surely refers to the ending of life and our meeting with the Lord where we are given what we now only possess in God’s eyes. He deems us as sinless, and we are no longer being imputed sin. But someday, we will be sinless, no longer even committing sin.

This passage today speaks of the marvel of what God has done for us in Jesus Christ, and of our responsibility when we are in Christ. He is our Passover Lamb, and we are His people. Every detail associated with this passage anticipates the Person and work of Jesus Christ for us and then our responsibilities toward Him.

As this is so, and as He was faithful to uphold His portion of these types and pictures, then let us, likewise, be faithful to live the lives we have been called to.

Let us live for Christ and be pleasing and faithful people, living out our lives pursuing His righteousness and sinlessness as our highest desire and goal for all of our days. May it be so to the glory of God. Amen.

Closing Verse: “A little leaven leavens the whole lump.” Galatians 5:9

Next Week: Deuteronomy 16:9-12 The final feast of the year for folks to tackle...
(Observe the Feast of Tabernacles) (50th Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

A Passover to the Lord your God

“Observe the month of Abib
And keep the Passover to the Lord your God, yes in His sight
For in the month of Abib
The Lord your God brought you out of Egypt by night

Therefore you shall sacrifice
The Passover to the Lord your God; exalting His fame
From the flock and the herd
In the place where the Lord chooses to put His name

You shall eat no leavened bread with it
Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread with it
-----of leaven not even a taste
That is, the bread of affliction
(For you came out of the land of Egypt in haste)

That you may remember the day
In which you came out of the land of Egypt
All the days of your life
To keep this memory from being from you stripped

And no leaven shall be seen among you
In all your territory for seven days, take this as a warning
Nor shall any of the meat which you sacrifice
-----the first day at twilight
Remain overnight until morning

“You may not sacrifice the Passover
Within any of your gates which the Lord your God gives you
But at the place where the Lord your God chooses
-----to make His name abide
There you shall sacrifice the Passover at twilight, so you shall do

At the going down of the sun
At the time you came out of Egypt in a march and not a run

And you shall roast and eat it
In the place which the Lord your God chooses it to be so
And in the morning
You shall turn and to your tents you shall go

Six days you shall eat unleavened bread
And on the seventh day there shall be
A sacred assembly to the Lord your God
You shall do no work on it, as instructed by me

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard

Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 16:9-12 (You Shall Keep the Feast of Weeks)

I'm always giddy about the thought of the rapture, except for one – and only one – reason. No, it's not about an upcoming wedding, scheduled cruise, retirement, or coming inheritance. It's not about my next anniversary (sorry, Hideko), or the thought of getting a new car (the old pickup suites me just fine).

There is, literally, nothing that I do from day to day, nor anything that is yet ahead of me that I can experience or possess that at all makes me think, "I really want to be here for that." But there is something that I have done that keeps me from wanting to be raptured.

Our friend Sergio has memorized pretty much every password I have. He can access my computer and my life at any given moment to bail me out of a crisis, to print something off with my printer without asking permission (how dare he!), or to pretend he is me in order to send himself an email that he then sends back to me with a response to something I never wrote.

We are kids like that. But from time to time I send him the same email that involves this ability of his to access my life – "Sergio, if something happens to me, please be sure the sermons are read to the church." He knows where they are, and it is his obligation to get them printed for either someone here, or for him personally, to read to the church.

That is, literally, the only thing I will wish had been presented before the rapture. But, as long as I keep typing new sermons, there will always be a time that a certain number of sermons will go unread – not heard by anyone. That is assuming, of course, that Sergio actually makes the rapture too.

It is for this reason that I wouldn't mind punching my ticket a couple months before the rapture – if it could be planned that way. It is the word of God, and apart from seeing the face of the Lord with my own two eyes, it is all that I care about in any measure.

Everything else is temporary and will come to an end, but the word of the Lord stands forever, and I just want my part of analyzing it available for those who are left behind. When I sit down to type on Monday morning, it is a point of rejoicing because it is a blessing from the Lord that I can do so.

Text Verse: “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ, ⁴ just as He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love, ⁵ having predestined us to adoption as sons by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will, ⁶ to the praise of the glory of His grace, by which He made us accepted in the Beloved.” Ephesians 1:3-6

The passage today tells the people to rejoice before the Lord, and that rejoicing is to be an acknowledgement of how the Lord God had blessed them. The temporal blessings of Israel are mere shadows and types of the spiritual blessings found in the church.

Where Israel celebrated the Passover with a lamb, we celebrate it with the Lamb. Where Israel celebrated Firstfruits with a sheaf of the first harvest of grain, we celebrate it in the resurrection of the Lord. Where Israel celebrated the Feast of Weeks with a new grain offering to the Lord, we celebrate it with...

Well, we will go through the verses and remind ourselves of some of the typology already seen in the past sermons concerning this feast. So, there is no need to spoil what lies ahead during the introduction.

But the fact is that every material blessing of these feasts for Israel is realized in spiritual blessings for the church. And so, how can we not rejoice? We were sinners and Christ died for our sins. We were in bondage, and Christ has set us free. We were without the Spirit, and we are now reconnected to God because of the Spirit.

What is there to not rejoice about when we consider where we stand in relation to where we were! Typing these sermons is a point of rejoicing because they analyze the word of the Lord from a perspective Israel had no idea about.

To them, they were words of law. To us, they are words of grace. To them, they spoke of condemnation. To us, they speak of salvation. When one sees Christ Jesus in what is presented, it goes from a temporal blessing to a spiritual blessing.

Yes, the law was a blessing to them because it unified them and kept them as a people, but it could not bring them life, except as it was finally fulfilled in Christ. To us, it is life because Jesus embodies what it presents. Let us consider this and rejoice before the Lord God all our days.

And if I die before the rapture, don't feel bad – even one bit. It will be its own blessing to me and a grace from God. But... the rapture is still the best deal of all. We'll leave such things in the Lord's hands and continue on awaiting whatever He determines for each of us.

Until then, great things are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Tribute of a Freewill Offering (verses 9 & 10)

The feast now to be described was first introduced in Exodus 23:14-17 with the introduction of the three annual pilgrim feasts –

“Three times you shall keep a feast to Me in the year: ¹⁵ You shall keep the Feast of Unleavened Bread (you shall eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded you, at the time appointed in the month of Abib, for in it you came out of Egypt; none shall appear before Me empty); ¹⁶ and the Feast of Harvest, the firstfruits of your labors which you have sown in the field; and the Feast of Ingathering at the end of the year, when you have gathered in the fruit of your labors from the field.

¹⁷ “Three times in the year all your males shall appear before the Lord God.”

This was repeated in Exodus 34:22 where it is called the Feast of Weeks. After that, it was detailed in the listing of the eight Feasts of the Lord. That will be cited in a few minutes. It was again referred to in Numbers 28 which provided details concerning the offerings to be made to the Lord during the feast.

Moses is repeating the requirement and he will build upon it in these few short verses. The main ideas to be conveyed here are in relation to the people's responsibilities during the feast. Remembering that Christ is the fulfillment of the typology found in these feasts, there is to be a connection to His people in what He has done.

That is the purpose of the symbolism of these three pilgrim feasts. They take what Christ has done and then deal with the responsibility of those who participate in what was fulfilled in Him. What Israel, the people, did under the law as is recorded in these verses is to be lived out by the people of the church because of our relationship to what Jesus did.

The first of these pilgrim feasts was recorded and looked over last week, meaning the Passover which is immediately followed by the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Christ is the Passover Lamb, and we are to live our lives in sinless holiness before God, represented by the seven days of having no leaven in the territory.

Obviously, none of us are sinless in our conduct, but because of the non-imputation of sin for those who have entered the New Covenant, we are deemed as sinless before God. When one is under law, the imputation of sin is the result.

However, Paul repeatedly conveys the thought that believers in Christ are not under law, but we are rather under grace. Without law, sin is not imputed. That is the idea which was typologically lived out by Israel when the yeast was purged from the land during that feast.

The next pilgrim feast, that of Weeks, will now present another typological anticipation. What Israel did under the law anticipates what we are to do under grace. What Christ did in fulfillment of the symbolism, we are now to participate in with the reality. Where the typology was only shadow, we now possess the Substance. With that, we begin with...

⁹“You shall count seven weeks for yourself;

The words here and in the next clause follow after Leviticus 23 where the Feast of Weeks is first described –

“And you shall count for yourselves from the day after the Sabbath, from the day that you brought the sheaf of the wave offering: seven Sabbaths shall be completed. ¹⁶Count fifty days to the day after the seventh Sabbath; then you shall offer a new grain offering to the LORD.” Leviticus 23:15, 16

It is “from the day that you brought the sheaf of the wave offering.” That was clearly identified in the Feasts of the Lord sermons to be a picture of the resurrection of Christ.

As was seen in the earlier Leviticus 23 verses dealing with the Feast of Firstfruits, Christ’s resurrection was on a Sunday (the first day of the week) after the Sabbath. The waving of the sheaf of the wave offering looked forward to the presentation of Christ Jesus alive and well before the Father.

It is from this starting point that a set counting was to take place. As it says here, “You shall count seven weeks for yourself.” That is in accord with the counting of Leviticus 23, of which Moses is now restating for the people who are about to cross over the Jordan and enter the land of promise. And so, he says...

^{9 (con't)} begin to count the seven weeks from the time you begin to put the sickle to the grain.

mehakhel khermesh baqamah takhel lispor shivah shavuoth – “from begin sickle in the standing, begin to count seven weeks.” Here, we have a new word, khermesh, meaning a sickle. It comes from kharam which is the act of devoting something to God through destruction, exterminating, and so on. This word will be found only here and in Deuteronomy 23:25.

It is interesting that the root signifies something devoted to God, and that is exactly what happens to the sheaf of the Firstfruits. Though the word is usually taken in a negative context, it can be positive as well, such as in Leviticus 27:28 –

“Nevertheless no devoted offering that a man may devote to the LORD of all that he has, both man and beast, or the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed; every devoted offering is most holy to the LORD.”

This sheaf was solely devoted as a presentation to the Lord, just as the work of Jesus in destroying sin and annulling the law is solely set apart and dedicated to the Lord.

The sickle, as a tool of devotion, anticipates what happens to that which is cut down. Christ was cut down for the utter destruction of sin, but He was raised as an acceptable offering before the Lord because He had no sin of His own. The idea here of the Firstfruits as an offering before the Lord was precisely detailed in Leviticus 23:10-14 –

“When you come into the land which I give to you, and reap its harvest, then you shall bring a sheaf of the firstfruits of your harvest to the priest. ¹¹ He shall wave the sheaf before the LORD, to be accepted on your behalf; on the day after the Sabbath the priest shall wave it. ¹² And you shall offer on that day, when you wave the sheaf, a male lamb of the first year, without blemish, as a burnt offering to the LORD. ¹³ Its grain offering shall be two-tenths of an ephah of fine flour mixed with oil, an offering made by fire to the LORD, for a sweet aroma; and its drink offering shall be of wine, one-fourth of a hin. ¹⁴ You shall eat neither bread nor parched grain nor fresh grain until the same day that you have brought an offering to your God; it shall be a statute forever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.”

As I just said, this sheaf of the firstfruits, which Moses is alluding to here again, is a picture of Christ in His resurrection. Though He was cut down, He was presented alive before the Father, symbolized by the waving of the sheaf before the Lord by the priest.

As was seen during that sermon, the word translated as “wave,” nuph, gives the sense of “to quiver,” because of the motion of it vibrating up and down or rocking to and fro. Elsewhere the word is translated as “to wave,” “to beckon,” “to sprinkle,” “to rub,” “to saw,” and so on. Each of these implies motion and vibrancy.

In this was seen a picture of Christ, the true High Priest causing this preeminent sheaf to be vibrant before the Lord, just as occurred in the resurrection. His life that was cut down was reanimated. The fulfillment of that symbolism is found in Paul’s words from 1 Corinthians 15 –

“But now Christ is risen from the dead, and has become the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep.” 1 Corinthians 15:20

The background information is necessary to understand the timeline of what Moses is now referring to in Deuteronomy. From that day, meaning the day of the presentation of this sheaf of the Firstfruits, seven weeks are counted off...

¹⁰ Then you shall keep the Feast of Weeks to the Lord your God

In this clause, the word khag, or pilgrim feast, is used. It comes from khagag which signifies to make a pilgrimage or a pilgrim feast. That, in turn, comes from a primitive root signifying to move in a circle. Thus, one thinks of being giddy and celebrating.

When this term is used, it signifies the people’s part of what the Lord has initiated. In other words, the Lord was the first of the resurrection and thus the first of the church. He is emblematic of all others in the church who follow after Him. This khag, or pilgrim feast, is given as an anticipatory type to the people of the Lord whose work made the feast possible.

As far as the dating, the seven weeks after the Feast of Firstfruits means one arrives at the fiftieth day. We just read that from Leviticus 23, but let us read it once again –

“And you shall count for yourselves from the day after the Sabbath, from the day that you brought the sheaf of the wave offering: seven Sabbaths shall be completed. ¹⁶Count fifty days to the day after the seventh Sabbath; then you shall offer a new grain offering to the LORD.” Leviticus 23:15, 16

The day after the Sabbath means a Sunday. It is the first day of the week. Fifty days after the Firstfruits of Israel equates to fifty days after the resurrection of Christ Jesus.

As a point of correction of doctrine which should always be remembered when discussing these things, is that these words of Leviticus 23, along with the words of Exodus (and elsewhere), and which form the basis for the timeline of the work of the Lord, clearly indicate that Christ, the Passover Lamb, was crucified on the 14th and raised on the 16th of the first month –

“Now you shall keep it until the fourteenth day of the same month. Then the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it at twilight.” Exodus 12:6

“And you shall count for yourselves from the day after the Sabbath [which would be the sixteenth], from the day that you brought the sheaf of the wave offering.”
-Leviticus 23:15

Christ was crucified on a Friday and resurrected on a Sunday. This is evidenced in the Old Testament typology, and it is clearly revealed in the New Testament. For reference, a detailed timeline of this will be included at the end of this sermon, as posted to the Superior Word website, to substantiate this.

For now, the period of fifty days after Firstfruits is directly equated to fifty days after the resurrection of Jesus. As it says in Acts 2 –

“When the Day of Pentecost had fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. ² And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled the whole house where they were sitting. ³ Then there appeared to them divided tongues, as of fire, and one sat upon each of them. ⁴ And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.” Acts 2:1-4

In other words, Pentecost, the day which the Holy Spirit was poured out on the believers – thus establishing the church – is the fulfillment of the presentation of the new grain offering to the Lord. The shadow is fulfilled in the Substance. The type is realized in the reality.

With the work of the Lord fulfilled in the giving of the Holy Spirit, the typology of Israel's pilgrim feast is then applied to the reality which is to be lived out by those in the church.

It should be noted, however, that of these three pilgrim feasts, this is the only one that does not give a timeframe for how long the feast was to be held. Passover is one plus seven, meaning Passover and then seven days of the feast. On the first and last days there were sacred assemblies. Tabernacles is seven plus one, meaning an eighth-day closing affixed to the feast.

In Numbers 28, the Feast of Weeks only records offerings for one day, the day of firstfruits. If the people were there longer, the Bible says nothing of that. The reason seems clear. The Holy Spirit is given to the believer only once.

Unlike Unleavened Bread, which looks to believers living sinlessly before the Lord, and like Tabernacles that looks to living our lives working in the harvest field before the Lord, Weeks looks to the time when the believer is sealed with the Spirit. It is a one-time and for-all-time event in the believer's life.

As a short insert to the thought of what occurred at Pentecost, the typology that anticipated the Lord's work for His people – and that of how the people are to live out their lives in the Lord – reveals the false teaching of hyperdispensationalism.

It is a heretical doctrine which says that there are two gospels and that the church did not start until Paul was commissioned as the apostle to the Gentiles. If the teachers of this false doctrine understood the typology presented in the Old Testament, they would not make this fundamental error in thinking.

Despite this, the presentation of these pilgrim feasts anticipates those who are truly of the church, meaning saved believers in Jesus Christ. For Israel, at the time of the feast, Moses continues the thought of keeping the feast to the Lord...

¹⁰ (con't) with the tribute of a freewill offering from your hand, misat nidbat yadekha – “tribute of free will offering your hand.” There is no article before the word tribute, as if it is understood what is being referred to. Further, the word misah, or tribute, is found only here in the Bible. It is from masas meaning to dissolve or melt. Thus, it speaks of abundance or giving liberally.

What is of note in this is that it does not say what is done with the tribute. One can assume that it is presented to the priests, but that is only an assumption. This is perplexing, because everything in the law is so precise and clearly defined.

As this is a freewill offering, it cannot be speaking of the mandatory offerings that are listed in Leviticus 23 and Numbers 28 that are prescribed for the feast.

The word nedevah, or freewill offering, generally speaks of an offering to the Lord, but one would think, like in such cases, it would then say, “to the Lord.” Again, it does not. The word is used elsewhere when speaking of the Lord loving freely (Hosea 14:4), making an offering of the mouth (Psalm 119:108), and so on.

Nothing concerning the offering (type or amount) is defined, and what is to be done with it is left undefined. All that is noted is...

¹⁰ (con't) which you shall give as the Lord your God blesses you.

The entire thought of this verse, and how it points in type to a New Testament truth, is surely summed up in these words. Unlike all of the other mandatory prescriptions of the law – each pointing to Christ in some way or another, this points to the blessing from the Lord and it is completely voluntary, without set limit, and without set type. It is what Paul lays out in several places in the New Testament, such as –

“On the first day of the week let each one of you lay something aside, storing up as he may prosper, that there be no collections when I come.” 1 Corinthians 16:2

“Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren to go to you ahead of time, and prepare your generous gift beforehand, which you had previously promised, that it may be ready as a matter of generosity and not as a grudging obligation. ⁶ But this I say: He who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and he who sows bountifully will also reap bountifully. ⁷ So let each one give as he purposes in his heart, not grudgingly or of necessity; for God loves a cheerful giver.” 2 Corinthians 9:5

“For the administration of this service not only supplies the needs of the saints, but also is abounding through many thanksgivings to God, ¹³ while, through the proof of this ministry, they glorify God for the obedience of your confession to the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal sharing with them and all men,¹⁴ and by their prayer for you, who long for you because of the exceeding grace of God in you.¹⁵ Thanks be to God for His indescribable gift!" 2 Corinthians 9:12-15

The Corinthians had made a freewill offering from their liberality. There was no condition set upon it. There was no amount prescribed, and there was no type mandated. Paul's only desire was to see that what had been vowed would, in fact, be prepared and presented accordingly.

This sets the pattern for all other giving within the church. It is to be voluntary, of whatever amount is decided upon solely by the giver, and in whatever manner and type the giver decides is right. And it is to be, just as Moses says to the individual Israelite now, "as the Lord your God blesses you."

The type in Israel is only a shadow of the substance for the church. It is the Lord who has blessed, and thus, each individual is to determine what that blessing means to him. Everything is to be in relation to the gratefulness of the believer for what the Lord has done in his life. With that in mind, and with that thought upon the heart, Moses will continue when we get to verse 11. For now...

*Rejoice before the Lord! Again, I say, "Rejoice!"
You have been redeemed, what could possibly rob your joy?
Rejoice before the Lord! Lift up your cheerful voice
Let it be that shouts of thanks and praise you willfully employ*

*The Lord has given you of His Spirit, and for that rejoice!
He has sealed you for the glorious coming day
To Himself He will gather His people, so lift up your voice
And, let all of the Lord's redeemed jubilantly say...*

*"We will rejoice in our God while we yet live!"
We will raise our hands and our voices to Him forevermore
To Him, eternal praises we shall give
When He carries us across to the other shore*

*O great and glorious Lord, in You we shall rejoice
To You, O mighty Savior, we shall forever raise our voice*

II. Be Careful to Observe These Statutes (verses 11 & 12)

¹¹ You shall rejoice before the Lord your God,

This is now the fifth of nine times the word “rejoice” is found in Deuteronomy. It is a positive command. The people are not to be unhappy or miserable. Rather, they are to actively rejoice before the Lord.

As the Feast of Weeks anticipates the giving of the Holy Spirit, and because it is also a pilgrim feast, it is typical of life in Christ, having been sealed with the Holy Spirit. Because of this, the imperative to “rejoice” is obvious, and it is abundantly stated in various ways in the New Testament.

Most especially, Paul says, “rejoice in the Lord” (Philippians 3:1), rejoice in Christ Jesus” (Philippians 3:3), “Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I will say, rejoice!” (Philippians 4:4), and “Rejoice always” (1 Thessalonians 5:16).

These, and other examples – found in abundance in the epistles – are given as prescriptions to those of the church because of the blessings of the Lord upon them, just as the people of Israel were to rejoice because of the blessings of the Lord upon them. The typology of the Old leads directly to the fulfillment of it in the New.

For those in the church, the words of our text verse today concerning every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ are meant for every saved believer. And the knowledge of them is to be shared with every person we can share them with. For Israel, rejoicing in the temporal blessings was not just for the men of the house, but for...

^{11 (con't)} you and your son and your daughter, your male servant and your female servant, the Levite who is within your gates, the stranger and the fatherless and the widow who are among you,

When I lived in Japan, I climbed Mt. Fuji one night. The goal for those who climbed was to leave at evening and make it to the top by sunrise. In this, you would see innumerable torches and lamps being carried up the various paths that crisscrossed the side of the mountain.

If you drove by it on a highway at night, the same sight could be seen for vast distances. Thousands upon thousands of individual lights zigzagging upwards toward the summit.

If one has seen the movie, “Field of dreams,” the very ending of the movie had something similar – a line of cars with their lights on stretching back for miles that were heading to the field at night.

The words of Moses in this verse are a matter of law. None were to be excluded. It is incorrect to say that only the men were required to attend the three annual pilgrim feasts. Rather, all the men were to go, and they were to be accompanied by all of these categories.

Like Mt. Fuji, Israel would have looked like an ant farm as every path, every road, and every highway was filled with people heading to the place where the Lord God resided. Some walked, some rode animals, some may have been carried, but all were heading to one specific location in order to feast and to rejoice.

It should be noted that the wife is noticeably missing from the list mentioned in this verse. Moses says you, your son, your daughter, your male servant, your female servant, the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless and the widow, but nothing is said of the wife.

What seems obvious is that this is not saying that the wives were to stay home and take care of the pets. Rather, it is a way of acknowledging her importance within the household. It takes us back to the very beginning of man’s time on earth –

“And Adam said:

‘This is now bone of my bones
And flesh of my flesh;
She shall be called Woman,
Because she was taken out of Man.’

²⁴ Therefore a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and they shall become one flesh.” Genesis 2:23, 24

Rather than being an oversight by Moses, it appears he is reiterating the fact that the man and his wife are one. In mentioning him, she is implicitly mentioned as well. Therefore, there is no reason to include her in the list. It would be unthinkable for him to observe the feast without her. Thus, all were to attend...

11 (con’t) at the place where the Lord your God chooses to make His name abide.

These words have been stated again and again. The people were to gather in the presence of the Lord, right where He resided, and they were to rejoice and have a feast, even to the point of being giddy. It speaks of unity of worship This is the type. The antitype is first seen in Jesus' words of John 4 –

“But the hour is coming, and now is, when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth; for the Father is seeking such to worship Him. ²⁴ God is Spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth.” John 4:23

What is supposed to be the case, in order to fulfill the typology, is that Christians are to rejoice wherever they are. As the nations saw Israel rejoicing before the Lord in Israel, so the nations should see the people of the church doing so before the Lord at any place they currently are standing.

What Israel experienced for a week at a time, the church is to experience in a fuller way from moment to moment. We have been redeemed. How can we do anything, but rejoice? As he next says...

¹² And you shall remember that you were a slave in Egypt,

As he has done time and time again in Deuteronomy, Moses again reminds the people of where they came from and what that meant while they were there. They were slaves, they are now the Lord's people. They were in Egypt, Double Distress, and now they are on the shores of the Jordan, free from Pharaoh and from their harsh taskmasters.

Because of this, the act of remembering as stated here is probably twofold. First, it is to spur the people on to generosity in the tribute offering mentioned earlier, and also toward those who came together with them on the pilgrim feast. They were once in bondage, and so now they were to remember those who currently had less than they did.

And, secondly, the purpose of the pilgrim feasts was to have them experience the joy of delighting in the abundance of the Lord. In Egypt, they suffered and had lack. In Canaan, they could expect prosperity and abundance. In Egypt they were slaves. In Canaan they were property owners.

Because of these truths, the contrast was to be remembered by them so that they would always be grateful for what they did have. They were never to focus on what they didn't have, but they were rather to be grateful for what they possessed.

And what they possessed and were blessed with was a result of the covenant that they agreed to. Therefore...

12 (fin) and you shall be careful to observe these statutes.

After all of the words of blessing, abundance, and rejoicing, these words serve as a reminder and even a warning. Israel had what they had because the Lord gave it to them. They had nothing substantial to speak of before He did.

Israel was where they were because the Lord had brought them out from where they previously were. They could not save themselves, and without His hand of intervention, they would still be where they were.

Israel had covenanted with the Lord, and in that covenant, they had agreed to the stipulations. What they possessed, and where they were to be in Canaan was a result of that agreement. If the agreement was made based on obedience, and it was, then disobedience to it would incur the opposite of the blessing.

That was previously laid out, and Moses was telling them now that they were to carefully observe the stipulations in order to remain in that state of abundance, blessing, and the ability to rejoice. Should they fail, they could expect it to end.

In this, one can see the contrast and the similarities between the type and the antitype. When Israel was obedient to the covenant they agreed to, they would receive the temporal blessings. When we receive the work of the Lord, we receive the spiritual blessings.

Israel was freed from physical bondage, but they were brought into a spiritual bondage being servants to the law. We are the Lord's freedmen from spiritual bondage, and we are brought in to being the Lord's slaves to righteousness.

When Israel was not obedient to the words of law, they received temporal judgments, but they were never cast off permanently from the Lord. When we fail to live out our lives in accord with the obligations expected of us, we too can expect temporal judgments, but the Lord has promised to never cast us off permanently.

Israel was promised earthly reward; we are promised heavenly reward. Israel is a nation and a culture set apart from the world. The church is a body taken out of the world.

There are differences and there are similarities, but both reflect the workings of God in Christ, leading all to anticipate Him and to glory in what God has done through Him for us. Let us remember this as we contemplate the Feast of Weeks and what it signifies in us.

We have been given the Holy Spirit, poured out upon us. In this, we have been sealed for the day of redemption as the Lord's purchased possession. It isn't a day that might come, it is a day that is coming. We weren't saved in order to fight our way until the end. Rather, Christ did the fighting and He prevailed.

There is no struggling to attain the promise. Rather, in Him, we are those who have prevailed; we have received the promise. And so, remember this. When life is beating you up, when it seems your prayers aren't being heard, when you are sick, in pain, agonizing over circumstances, or even facing the end of your physical existence – remember this.

We have every spiritual blessing in Christ Jesus. They are ours with a guarantee, and they will never be taken from us. Cling to this, and even in times of the greatest of distress – even in those times – rejoice in the Lord. Again, I say, “Rejoice in the Lord!”

Closing Verse: “For he who is called in the Lord while a slave is the Lord’s freedman. Likewise he who is called while free is Christ’s slave. ²³ You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men.” 1 Corinthians 7:22, 23

Next Week: Deuteronomy 16:13-22 Hey ma! Why is everyone building little shackles?... (Observe the Feast of Tabernacles) (51st Deuteronomy Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. But He also has expectations of you as He prepares you for entrance into His Land of Promise. So, follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Observe the Feast of Tabernacles

“You shall count seven weeks for yourself
Begin to count the seven weeks, as I explain
From the time you begin
To put the sickle to the grain

Then you shall keep the Feast of Weeks
To the Lord your God with the tribute, so you shall do
Of a freewill offering from your hand
Which you shall give as the Lord your God blesses you

You shall rejoice before the Lord your God
You and your son and your daughter, also
Your male servant and your female servant
The Levite who is within your gates shall also go

The stranger and the fatherless
And the widow who are among you, all side by side
At the place where the Lord your God chooses
To make His name abide

And you shall remember that you were a slave in Egypt
And you shall be careful to observe these statutes
-----none shall be skipped

Lord God, turn our hearts to be obedient to Your word
Give us wisdom to be ever faithful to You
May we carefully heed each thing we have heard
Yes, Lord God may our hearts be faithful and true

And we shall be content and satisfied in You alone
We will follow You as we sing our songs of praise
Hallelujah to You; to us Your path You have shown
Hallelujah we shall sing to You for all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

Deuteronomy 16:13-22 (Observe the Feast of Tabernacles)

The Passover and the first two khag, or pilgrim feasts, have been detailed. In our passage today, Moses turns to the third of these pilgrim feasts, Tabernacles. Of this feast, Charles Ellicott states –

“The Passover is His sacrifice and death. We keep the feast of unleavened bread by serving Him in ‘sincerity and truth.’ The Feast of Tabernacles has not yet been fulfilled by our Lord like the two other great feasts of the Jewish calendar. Unfulfilled prophecies regarding it may be pointed out, as in Zechariah 14.” Charles Ellicott

Ellicott is correct concerning the Passover. It anticipates Christ’s sacrifice and death. He is correct concerning the Feast of Unleavened Bread as well, citing Paul as a demonstration of it being worked out in our lives.

But... is it correct that the Feast of Tabernacles has not yet been fulfilled by our Lord? Anyone? For those of you who said, “No, that is a bunch of malarky,” you can give yourself a pat on the back. For those of you who went on to say, “That is actually heresy,” you get bonus points and accolades.

Is there anything else wrong with what he said? Well, yes. Yes, there is. He said, “like the two other great feasts of the Jewish calendar.” In stating it this way, he is implying that these are Jewish feasts. That is incorrect. They are feasts observed by the Jews, but they are feasts of the Lord in His redemptive calendar.

In matters such as this, it is important to be precise. As far as Zechariah 14, what he is referring to there, it forms our text verse –

Text Verse: “And it shall come to pass that everyone who is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the Feast of Tabernacles. ¹⁷ And it shall be that whichever of the families of the earth do not come up to Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, on them there will be no rain. ¹⁸ If the family of Egypt will not come up and enter in, they shall have no rain; they shall receive the plague with which the LORD strikes the nations who do not come up to keep the Feast of Tabernacles. ¹⁹ This shall be the punishment of Egypt and the punishment of all the nations that do not come up to keep the Feast of Tabernacles.” Zechariah 14:16-19

Has the prophecy of Zechariah 14 been fulfilled? We'll no. It never has. As this is the case, then how can Charles Ellicott be wrong? Anyone? Let's ask other questions from the Old Testament. Has Ezekiel 38 been fulfilled? How about Isaiah 65:22? How about Amos 9:15? No, no, and no.

And those are just a smattering of the as yet unfulfilled prophecies of the Old Testament, even some found in the law of Moses have yet to find their fulfillment. Unfulfilled prophecy does not equate to an unfulfilled law.

Unfulfilled prophecy means we have more to look forward to in the redemptive narrative. An unfulfilled law means we have nothing to look forward to – at all. Let us remember this and let us stand fast on the truth that the law is fulfilled. And, in its fulfillment, it is now set aside.

Keeping our categorial boxes straight in our theology is exceedingly important. In fact, when they get out of whack, the result can be eternity-changing for those who are so instructed. Let us handle this word with care and let us be sure to be precise in our words when it is called for.

This is what the Lord expects of us. Such truths as this are to be found in His superior word. And so, let us turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. You Shall Rejoice in Your Feast (verses 13-15)

¹³ “You shall observe the Feast of Tabernacles

khag ha'sukkoth taaseh lekha – “Feast the sukkot shall do to you.” The words now reintroduce the third of the three pilgrim feasts, here called ha'sukkoth, or “the tabernacles.” It was first noted in Exodus 23 where it was called ha'asiph, or “the ingathering” –

“Three times you shall keep a feast to Me in the year: ¹⁵You shall keep the Feast of Unleavened Bread (you shall eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded you, at the time appointed in the month of Abib, for in it you came out of Egypt; none shall appear before Me empty); ¹⁶and the Feast of Harvest, the firstfruits of your labors which you have sown in the field; and the Feast of Ingathering at the end of the year, when you have gathered in the fruit of your labors from the field.” Exodus 23:14-16

It was noted again a second time as the Feast of Ingathering in Exodus 34:22. It is these words that set the tone for the three pilgrim feasts and how they anticipate the believer's life in Christ. Unfortunately, Israel – and many ill-informed Christians – see this Feast of Ingathering as being about the end-times Jews.

In other words, it is common to hear people equate the ingathering of the Jews to the land of Israel as a fulfillment of this feast. This is not only incorrect, it is also terrible theology. The feasts have nothing to do with that. The Jews are being brought back to Israel as a fulfillment of the promises found in the law and the prophets. They have seven more years under the law in order to come to Christ.

During those seven years, the large majority of the Jewish people will die. If the Feast of Ingathering were about the Jewish people, it would be a rather sad event, not one to be rejoiced in. Further, if Ingathering were about the Jews, it would mean it was not about the Lord because the Jews have not yet come to the Lord. There is error from every angle in this failed typology.

The eight Feasts of the Lord are fulfilled in, or made possible by, Christ. The three pilgrim feasts anticipate the believer's life in Christ – whether Jew or Gentile – because of what He has done.

For example, Christ is the Passover that makes our sinless life in Christ possible – the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Christ is the first Sheaf cut down and presented before the Lord alive again. His work anticipates the believer's life in Christ, sealed with the Holy Spirit as the guarantee that we too will be raised again – the Feast of Harvest. And Christ is the One whose work then allows our works to bear fruit – the Feast of Ingathering.

These three pilgrim feasts of Israel were conducted in the presence of the Lord and they each anticipate us living our lives in the presence of the Lord. Israel was living out an annual series of feasts, based on the Lord's provision towards them which anticipated believer's lives in Christ based on what He has provided to us during this dispensation known as the Church Age.

What the Lord provided for Israel is what made their pilgrim feasts before Him possible. What the Lord has done for us is what makes our conduct before God possible.

The greatest detail concerning the feast is found in Leviticus 23. There, instead of Ingathering, it is called Tabernacles. It would be hard to understand the greater part of the workings of the feast without reading or watching the sermon from that passage. The feast is introduced there in verses 33-36 –

“Then the LORD spoke to Moses, saying, ³⁴ “Speak to the children of Israel, saying: ‘The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the Feast of Tabernacles for seven days to the LORD. ³⁵ On the first day there shall be a holy convocation. You shall do no customary work on it. ³⁶ For seven days you shall offer an offering made by fire to the LORD. On the eighth day you shall have a holy convocation, and you shall offer an offering made by fire to the LORD. It is a sacred assembly, and you shall do no customary work on it.” Leviticus 23:33-36

The feast is then more fully explained beginning in verse 39-43 –

“Also on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when you have gathered in the fruit of the land, you shall keep the feast of the LORD for seven days; on the first day there shall be a sabbath-rest, and on the eighth day a sabbath-rest. ⁴⁰ And you shall take for yourselves on the first day the fruit of beautiful trees, branches of palm trees, the boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook; and you shall rejoice before the LORD your God for seven days. ⁴¹ You shall keep it as a feast to the LORD for seven days in the year. It shall be a statute forever in your generations. You shall celebrate it in the seventh month. ⁴² You shall dwell in booths for seven days. All who are native Israelites shall dwell in booths, ⁴³ that your generations may know that I made the children of Israel dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.”

-Leviticus 23:39-43

The Lord gave the name, the Feast of Tabernacles, and then He gave the reason for the name, saying, “I made the children of Israel dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt.” There the Hebrew said, ki ba’sukkoth hovoshavti eth bene Yisrael b’hotsyi otam meerets mitsrayim – “for in the sukkoth I made dwell sons of Israel in bringing them out from land Egypt.” That is based on the words of Exodus 12:37 –

“Then the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand men on foot, besides children.” Exodus 12:37

The location, known as Succoth, was the first place Israel journeyed to after leaving Egypt. It may have been named Succoth at that time based on the fact that Israel dwelt in tents, or it may have already had that name, but either way, the point is that Israel had left Egypt, and that was based on the work of the Lord at the Passover – the slaying of the Lamb, the sprinkling of the blood, and the passing over of the people.

But one can only slay a lamb if there is a lamb to be slain. Of this feast, Jamieson-Fausset-Brown states –

“Various conjectures have been formed to account for the appointment of this feast at the conclusion of the whole harvest. Some imagine that it was designed to remind the Israelites of the time when they had no cornfields to reap but were daily supplied with manna; others think that it suited the convenience of the people better than any other period of the year for dwelling in booths; others that it was the time of Moses' second descent from the mount; while a fourth class are of opinion that this feast was fixed to the time of the year when the Word was made flesh and dwelt—literally, ‘tabernacled’—among us (Joh 1:14).” Jamieson-Fausset-Brown

Unless one sees Christ as the reason for these feasts, there can only be wild conjecture. And even in knowing that Christ is the reason for them, there is still often wild conjecture. What is correct and why? That will be seen as we continue.

^{13 (con't)} seven days,

Leviticus 23 said, “on the first day there shall be a sabbath-rest, and on the eighth day a sabbath-rest.” There is no contradiction here. The words are focusing on the seven-day feast itself because it is that which pictures the believer’s life in Christ, based on what Christ has done to make it possible. The seven days, like the seven days of Unleavened Bread (verse 3) refer to the period observed by the believer based on the work of the Lord. This feast was to be...

^{13 (con't)} when you have gathered from your threshing floor and from your winepress.

Some translations say “after” while others say “when.” Saying “after” is incorrect, and “when” can be misleading based on how you interpret it. The Hebrew reads, “in your gathering.” It is true that this occurred towards the end of the harvest season, but not everything was fully harvested at this time.

Olives, for example, will continue on into the next month. Other crops may still not be fully harvested by the time of this feast as well. The idea here is that the feast is observed, like the Feast of Weeks, in the time of the harvesting. It was to be a time of celebration at the bounty provided by the Lord. As it next says...

14 And you shall rejoice in your feast,

As in verse 11 with the Feast of Weeks, it is a positive command. Considering the symbolism of the feast, it is understandable why this is stated. For now, we are to simply read the words as they are given. The men of Israel, the heads of these agriculturally based households, are told that they are to rejoice. Along with them...

14 (con't) you and your son and your daughter,

As in verse 11, the wife is noticeably missing from the list. It goes straight from the man to the son and to the daughter. Like last week, this is a note by Moses that there is no need to mention the wife separately. The husband and wife are one flesh. As such, when the man goes, the wife was to go as well. Along with them, the children were to be brought along as is fitting. Further...

14 (con't) your male servant and your female servant

During the pilgrim feast, none in the household were to be left behind. Those in the household, but who were not a part of the family, were to go as well. Along with them...

14 (con't) and the Levite, the stranger and the fatherless and the widow, who are within your gates.

No person was to be left in the city. All who dwelt there were to go when the people loaded up and headed out. Once they had arrived at the place where the Lord resided, Moses again says...

15 Seven days you shall keep a sacred feast to the Lord your God

shivat yamim takhog l'Yehovah elohekha – “Seven days you shall keep a feast to Yehovah your God.” The word “sacred” isn’t in the Hebrew and it should be italicized. Like in Exodus 23:14, it simply says, “keep a feast.”

Like during the other pilgrim feasts, it would be at this time that the people would bring their tithes and offerings and eat them in the presence of the Lord. It would be a time of relaxing, vacation, parties, dancing, and getting to see old friends, and meeting new friends. And Moses again notes that it is to be...

15 (con't) in the place which the Lord chooses,

Again, as has been seen numerous times already, the unity of worship is what is being highlighted here. The people were to gather around one common sanctuary where the Lord dwelt. Thus, there is a note of exclusivity here.

If this is where the Lord dwells, and his people are gathered around Him, then those not gathered are not a part of what the Lord is doing. In other words, there are the redeemed of the Lord, and there are all others. For the redeemed, they were to keep the feast...

15 (con't) because the Lord your God will bless you in all your produce and in all the work of your hands,

Israel was to keep the feast because the Lord would bless them. The point was to remember that the blessings came from the Lord. In turn, they were to bless the Lord in their time of rejoicing before Him. What their hands had produced was only because the Lord provided that it would be so. Of this, Jamieson-Fausset-Brown says the following –

“According to Jewish tradition, no marriages were allowed to be celebrated during these great festivals, that no personal or private rejoicings might be mingled with the demonstrations of public and national gladness.” JFB

If this is so, it is an unfortunate and legalistic addition to the word of the Lord, and it explains much concerning why they have had so much trouble in their history. First, the law never speaks of such a thing, and so it is an unsanctioned addition to the law. Secondly, the most propitious time for someone to get married is when their minds and lives are set on honoring the Lord. Such traditions are harmful, not helpful, to a right relationship with the Lord.

15 (con't) so that you surely rejoice.

v'hayita akh sameakh – “and you will become only rejoicing.” It is a remarkable phrase. Again, and again, Moses has commanded the people to rejoice. Now, his words are less of a command and more of a statement of certainty.

The work throughout the year would be long, hard, and tiring. The people would be closed in at night, up early, and life would be good but maybe – as it often is – a bit boring. But to go out on a pilgrim feast would mean a different perspective, a time without work, a time of sharing in one another, and so on. In this, they would be nothing but rejoicing.

*We are here in Your presence, dwelling in temporary tabernacles
And we are rejoicing in all that You have done for us
A fire is inside to warm us as each ember burns and crackles
We are safely secure as we await the Lord Jesus*

*Oh, to dwell in our eternal home; for this we long
May that day be soon, but we will rejoice until then Hear our praises; hear our joyous song
Coming forth from the lips of Your redeemed among men*

*Thank You for our great hope, and the peace it does provide Thank You for the surety we have in Christ Jesus
In His hope, we now patiently abide Anticipating all that He has prepared for us*

II. Pictures of Christ

We saw earlier that one can only slay a lamb if there is a lamb to be slain. After that, we cited a commentary that gave various views on why the feast is placed at the end of the harvest season.

One view not given, but which is quite commonly taught is reflected in the words of Charles Ellicott that we cited in the opening comments. Meaning, that it is not yet fulfilled. That is not only poor theology; it is heresy. To say that the feast is not fulfilled by Christ is to say that the law is not yet fulfilled by Christ.

As we noted in our opening comments, just because there are prophecies that are yet to be fulfilled from the time of the law, it does not mean that the law itself is unfulfilled. That distinction is both important and it must be clearly articulated. The Feasts of the Lord are just that. They are not Jewish Feasts, and they are not Feasts of Israel.

They are given in the law to reveal the working of God in Christ. In review of these appointed times, only three are actually designated as khag, or pilgrim feasts. The order from Leviticus 23 is first the Sabbath. Through faith in Him, He is our Rest, and He is our place of Rest. *Appointed time fulfilled.

The next is the Passover. He is our Passover Lamb and through Him we are redeemed from the bondage of sin. *Appointed time fulfilled. After that is the first khag, or pilgrim feast, the Feast of Unleavened Bread. That is based on Christ's work as the Passover Lamb, and it is what makes the believer's life sinless before God.

As we are so deemed, so we are to conduct ourselves. *Feast being worked out in us because Christ made it possible.

After that was the Feast of Firstfruits. It is a picture of the Resurrection of Christ. *Appointed time fulfilled. From there is the counting of weeks until the fiftieth day. On that day, the Holy Spirit was poured out because of the finished work of Christ.

This is the second khag, or pilgrim feast, the Feast of Weeks. As noted in last week's sermon, it is the only feast that does not have a specific timeframe, such as "seven days." It is fulfilled in believers, once and for all time for each believer, as they come to Christ and receive the Holy Spirit of promise. *Feast realize in us because Christ made it possible.

The next is the Day of Acclamation (Yom Teruah). It corresponds to the birth of Christ. *Appointed time fulfilled. That is followed by the Day of Atonement. It looks to Christ's one-time atoning sacrifice for believers. *Appointed time fulfilled.

The events of the redemptive year finish with the third khag, or pilgrim feast, the Feast of Tabernacles. It is emblematic of our life in Christ before we are glorified. The final option suggested by Jamieson-Fausset-Brown is the correct one in the sense that Christ made it possible for us when He came and "tabernacled" among us. As it says in John 1:14 –

"And the Word became flesh, and did tabernacle among us, and we beheld his glory, glory as of an only begotten of a father, full of grace and truth."

-John 1:14 (YLT)

Christ "dwelt" or "tabernacled" among humanity. It is the same word that is used in the Greek translation of the Old Testament when speaking of this feast. In other words, the Lamb that was slain was only slain because He had a body. That body is His tent, His tabernacle.

He came and tabernacled among us in order to make our Exodus possible, just as the slaying of the Passover lamb made the Exodus of Israel from Egypt possible. The first location Israel stopped at after the Exodus, Succoth (meaning Tabernacles), was selected to show that the people had been brought out of Egypt. They tabernacled apart from the land of bondage.

Thus, the name of the feast was given – Tabernacles. Israel’s annual Feast of Tabernacles typologically anticipated the lives of believers dwelling in temporary tents, awaiting their final glorification.

The very fact that the Passover lamb is what made the Exodus possible, and that the Exodus resulted in stopping in Succoth, or Tabernacles, demonstrates that the Feast of Tabernacles finds its fulfillment in Christ’s work of the past and not at some point in the future. The types were given in the Old Testament to point to what Christ would do in the New.

We are redeemed, and yet we continue to tabernacle in our earthly body. It would make no sense at all for a person to believe and then to be taken immediately to glory. Who would continue to spread the message?

Rather, there is redemption (Passover) and being deemed sinless (Unleavened Bread). There is then the sealing of the Holy Spirit (Weeks). And then there is the tabernacling with the Holy Spirit residing in us (Tabernacles). These all occur immediately upon belief, but they are logically ordered.

The other acts of Christ within the Feasts of the Lord are interspersed throughout the redemptive year as they occurred in the actual life events of Christ. As far as the khag, or pilgrim feast of Tabernacles, Paul clearly shows that it is being worked out in us, just as the other two are –

“For we know that if our earthly house, this tent, is destroyed, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. ² For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed with our habitation which is from heaven, ³ if indeed, having been clothed, we shall not be found naked. ⁴ For we who are in this tent groan, being burdened, not because we want to be unclothed, but further clothed, that mortality may be swallowed up by life. ⁵ Now He who has prepared us for this very thing is God, who also has given us the Spirit as a guarantee.” 2 Corinthians 5:1-5

There, Paul twice uses the word skénos, or tent, when referring to us in this earthly body. This life in Christ is our pilgrim feast. That could not be any clearer when reading the last verse cited from Paul: ὁ καὶ δοὺς ἡμῖν τὸν ἀρραβῶνα τοῦ πνεύματος, – “the and having given to us pledge the Spirit.”

The second feast, Weeks, is conditioned upon the first, Unleavened Bread. And that is conditioned on the Passover. Christ redeems from sin and then the Holy Spirit can move in.

The third feast, Tabernacles is an outworking of the second feast, Weeks. The Holy Spirit is given and the person tabernacles with the Holy Spirit because of Christ. The arrabón, or earnest deposit is what assures the believer that the final redemption will (not maybe) come to pass.

The symbolic point of the feast is that we will stay and continue tabernacling in the harvest, bringing all that are the Lord’s with us. And it is inclusive of all who are the Lord’s. That is evidenced in the words of Paul –

“For you are all sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus. ²⁷ For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ. ²⁸ There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus.” Galatians 3:26-28

The work by Christ is done. The appointed times are fulfilled, and the Feast of Tabernacles is realized through His work. *Feast being worked out in us because Christ made it possible.

*Dwelling in these tents, we hope for our heavenly home
We await the day when we shall be taken there
But until that day, each place we roam
We do it knowing the Lord tends to us with care*

*He has filled us with His Spirit to carry us along
And with that, we shall remain content
We will praise the Lord in psalm and in song
Until our final day in this tent is spent*

*And then, we shall be taken to glory
A new dwelling – one to last for all eternity
Such is the marvel of the gospel story
Such is the wonder of what Christ has done for you and me*

III. Justice, Justice You Shall Do (verses 16-21)

¹⁶ “Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Lord your God

Because of the prominence of these words, the most common, and yet incorrect, comment concerning the pilgrim feasts is that only the males were required to go. Even more oddly, Joseph Benson goes further into the absurd, saying, “That is, from twenty to fifty years of age. The women were not obliged to be present at these solemnities; 1st, Because...”

Nothing like this is even hinted at anywhere in Scripture. There are no age limits at all on the men, all must go. This is simply stated because they represent the household. As has been seen half a dozen times, all people – without exception – were commanded to go up and be before the Lord. That is explicitly stated in Deuteronomy 31 concerning Tabernacles –

“And Moses commanded them, saying: ‘At the end of every seven years, at the appointed time in the year of release, at the Feast of Tabernacles, ¹¹ when all Israel comes to appear before the LORD your God in the place which He chooses, you shall read this law before all Israel in their hearing. ¹² Gather the people together, men and women and little ones, and the stranger who is within your gates, that they may hear and that they may learn to fear the LORD your God and carefully observe all the words of this law, ¹³ and that their children, who have not known it, may hear and learn to fear the LORD your God as long as you live in the land which you cross the Jordan to possess.’” Deuteronomy 31:10-13

All Israel was to go at each pilgrim feast year by year. And on the seventh year during Tabernacles, they were to hear the law read. The mandate to come was not just once every seven years, but every feast every year. It was to be...

¹⁶ (con’t) in the place which He chooses:

It is where the tabernacle was situated, or later where the temple was built. These three times are...

¹⁶ (con’t) at the Feast of Unleavened Bread, at the Feast of Weeks, and at the Feast of Tabernacles;

The three pilgrim feasts. They were the people's responsibility to the Lord for what the Lord had done for the people. Likewise, they anticipate our responsibility to the Lord for what He has done for us. We are to live out our lives in sincerity, we are not to grieve the Holy Spirit, and we are to continue to work out our lives, bearing fruit to God for what He has done for us in Christ.

¹⁶ (con't) and they shall not appear before the Lord empty-handed.

